AGENTS OF REFORM.

AS DEFINED BY BISHOP J. P. NEWMAN.

In the Methodist Church Yesterday Morning—A Large Congregation Greets the Eloquent Bishop—An Interesting Sermon in the Evening Also.

The pulpit of the Methodist church was occupied yesterday morning (the pastor being absent on his vacation) by Bishop Newman, assisted by Rev. James McGee and Dr. Carroll. After the usual services the Bishop said he would call his discourse, "Reform and Reformers." His text was from Mathew —"I am not come to call the righteous but sinners to repentance."

The Bishop said "all suffering and sorrow came from sin, either personal or hereditary, and if all the tears shed from the beginning of the world till now on account of sin were collected together they would make an ocean deeper than the Atlantic and wider than the Pacific. That if all the groans were put in one volume of sound it would be louder than the mightest storm.

Christ's teaching was for all to forsake sin, that his mission was not to do anything that men could do, but his miracles and all that he taught, even in his power over nature, as "when He commanded the winds and waves to be still," and "when the tree "the thou withered," was only to prove a credential for His divine philosophy.

In speaking of the agents of reform, the Bishop began with "Law." It governed the nations and the universes, but even to that there was a limit, and some of the finest minds the world had ever known existed under bad forms of government, while some of the worst and most vicious minds had existed under good government, so that law alone was not the agent needed for the reform of the world. There had to be the strong moral sentiment in the heart of the people. The miracle of this nineteenth century was sixty millions of people living safety without a standing army, yet was all Europe knew, the strong moral and patriotic feeling of the republic is such that if the tocsin of war were sounded a million Americans would start up as one man in defence of their liberty and their land.

The speaker then said, "If culture were the agent of reform, then the ancient Greeks should hold sway;" if power, "the Romans should rule; but they had all gone down.

If intellectual force was the power for good or evil there is an example in the portrait of a man to be seen in Washington, in the department of justice, whose personal beauty might equal Adonis, whose forensic power of mind outstripped all his classmates at college, who at his graduation demanded and received two degrees from his professors, and the same evening was married to his heart's choice, a young woman of great culture and beauty, that afterwards he was spoken of in terms of greatest praise by the attorney general for his powerful mind. But how did it end? He drowned his Christian intellect with drink and ended his days in delirium tremens, bringing sorrow and [illegible] nothing but sorrow [illegible].

Clearly intellect alone was not the agent needed. Next came Charity, sweet Charity! Who could say a word against Charity, and her noble works?

The visitor to Russia should go to Moscow and see the foundling hospital erected by Catharine II, in which are 12,000 foundlings, and to which all Russia points with pride as being such a splendid institution, but which the speaker said ought rather to be their shame, that they own so many "waifs" of society.

In our own country we had institutions for all kinds, poorhouses, prisons, inebriate asylums, and many other charitable plans, but they did not reform the world, so that even sweet noble charity was not the agent. Stand aside sweet charity, for Christ alone is the agent that can reform the world. His demand was that men give him their hearts. The heart swayed all other human powers—intellect, laws, appetites, affections, reaching up even to the eternal.

Women had much for which to thank Christ, for his doctrine had elevated them in every place where it was preached, and from being only a slave she was placed in her proper place as man's equal.

The preacher continuing said he had no doubt but that boys now living would see all the armaments of war done away with, and peaceful arbitration used all over the world.

Much more the bishop said in his quiet impressive way. A synopsis in cold type does not do justice to his eloquent sermon. The service closed with prayer.

The bishop preached also in the evening taking his text from Acts 9th, part of the fourth verse: "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me." The bishop preached with his usual eloquence. He spoke of the zeal and earnestness of Saul, even before his conversion. There was no hypocrisy in him. He was moral from birth, but his conversion sanctified his zeal, which was henceforth used for the service of God. He described youth as the probation of manhood, and life on earth as the probation for heaven. The heart was used at a "term" in the Bible, to denote the seat of the affections; of conscience, because it was the primary vital organ distributing the life blood to all parts of the body. It was the great nervous centre. He gave a vivid description of the difference between downrightness and Godliness. A man might be very devout and still not godly, as instanced in the defection from duty of some pastor, officer or church members, who before their defection apparently were all that could be required, but the heart was not right.

The speaker said he did not believe in total depravity in any one. There was a little of the Music of Eden still sounding in every soul, if it was only searched for and found out. He gave a vivid word picture of Saul's journey to Damascus and his conversion, and closed with an earnest exhortation to his hearers to seek Christ. As he did not expect to preach to them again he bid them farewell in a very impressive manner, which emphasized his exhortation.

The service closed with singing "Rock of Ages" and the benediction.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Adon Smith of Putnam avenue have gone to Belmar.

Mr. and Mrs. Ulrick of Sherman avenue have gone to the seashore.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry K. Depew of No. 16 Crescent avenue have gone to the seashore.

Dr. and Mrs. Seymour March of Putnam avenue have gone to Atlantic Highlands.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, now in Europe, is to start for home Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy F. Phillips of No. 135 Madison avenue have gone to Atlantic Highlands.

Mr. S. H. Totten of Newark, but formerly of this city, was in town yesterday visiting old acquaintances.

Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Green of East Front street started this morning for Bethlehem, N. H. They will be gone about a month.

Mr. Tunis J. Carey is having such a pleasant time at White House, N. J., that his one week's vacation has been extended to three.

There was a new arrival at the home Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Connett, on West Front street, yesterday morning, in the shape of a sturdy boy.

Miss Florence Kent of Brooklyn returned to her home this morning from a week's visit with Miss May McLaughlin of Somerset street.

Mr. Dorsey W. Hyde, the well-known pianist and composer, will resume his classes of instruction in piano and harmony in September.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Rankin of Sandford avenue have gone for a month's sojourn to Manchester-by-the Sea, Mass., and Kennebunkport, Maine.

Yesterday morning the home of Adam Beck, 51 West Front street, was made happy by the advent of a little one. Mother and child are doing well.

Mr. Charles S. Day of New Market and Messrs. Hurlich and Hammill of Dunellen started this morning on their wheels for Philadelphia, to remain several days.

The Fraternity Publishing Company of New York will commence publishing October 1st The College Fraternity, issued monthly in the interest of American college fraternities. Eugene H. L. Randolph, of Plainfield, will be editor, and Frederick M. Crossett, manager. Their experience in the management of the Delta Upsilon Quarterly and the Scroll of Phi Delta Theta has indicated to them the demand for a class of matter of more pronounced literary character than the journals of the individual Orders are able to produce for the reason that the major part of their space necessarily must be devoted to matters of a strictly local or personal nature, such as chapter letters, personals, etc. They intend to procure from the best of writers articles on subjects of general interest to fraternity men and to cover broadly the field of fraternity news in all its branches, reproducing such matter, chiefly editorial, in the issues of the regular journals on subjects of general fraternity interest. Such a magazine as this College Fraternity would bring fraternity men into closer touch with each other and into a better knowledge of affairs in the Greek world. The average fraternity man has not the knowledge of fraternity affairs that he should have. and too often only knows the standing of fraternities by the chapters at his own college. The cry is often heard for literary departments in our fraternity magazines, and as, for reasons given, space cannot be given for any quantity of such matter, the College Fraternity can cover a field distinct from that filled by the publications of the individual orders.

The City was not Ready.

Hackman Patrick Keeley appeared with counsel Wm. A. Coddington in the city court this morning before Judge Codington for trial on the charges of atrocious assault and battery and resisting an officer, brought by special officer Frisbie the door catcher.

Police Captain Grant asked that the case be postponed as the city desired time to hunt up witnesses.

Judge Codington gave him until Thursday at 10 a. m. to find them.

No Plainfield Wheelmen There.

No Plainfield cyclists took part in the contest at Elizabeth on Saturday between the Elizabeth Wheelmen and the Elizabeth Field Club for the Journal trophy.

The Elizabeth Wheelmen won, scoring 26 points against nine of their opponents.

Only three members of the Field presented themselves for the event, instead of the six who had been entered.

Frank L. C. Martin of the Plainfield Bicycle Club, was one of the judges.

LEAGUE BASE BALL.

SATURDAY FILLED WITH WOE FOR THE HOME TEAM.

Umpire Hopkins Discriminated in Favor of Somerville—Elizabeth Beat Westfield by a Score of Six to Five.

Saturday was filled with woe for the Plainfield team. The boys played in hard luck throughout, as is usually the case when they run foul of the West Ends.

It is claimed that they were discriminated against by an umpire whose incompetency was considered glaring, and although they hit the ball well there was a Somerville lad always around somewhere to receive it.

Both teams played well.

Hofford was robbed of a hit by a remarkable catch of Harkins back of first base.

Murphy of course pitched an excellent game from start to finish and was most ably supported. There was but little work for the outfield, and the infield was the usual stone wall.

Brady, the new right fielder, proved himself a jewel. His throwing out at first of Ryman on what was ordinarily a safe hit was pronounced a most brilliant bit of play.

Loud were the outcries of the Plainfielders when Umpire Hopkins made his extraordinary decision in the third inning. The runs were scored on what should have been a dead ball. The ball glanced from Field's bat struck Hofford's mask and bounded to the scorers stand.

Before the game was called Manager Keeler entered a formal protest against Field, who it is said has not yet procured his release from the Eastern League.

By Plainfield loosing, the two teams are tie for first place in the New Jersey Central Base Ball League race.

It is said that Manager Mack raised Hopkins' salary Saturday, which, it is considered, accounts for his odd behavior.

The Game at Elizabeth.

Westfield's team on the first inning made five runs, Earey's splendid pitching kept Elizabeth's score down to one run up to the sixth inning.

By plucky work in that inning, however, the Elizabeth team batted Clare all over the field, securing five more runs. Clare then left the box, and Sharrott was sent to take his place. He struck out six men out of nine.

The Westfield team was unable to secure another run, although the boys worked very hard. They were beaten by a score of 6 to 5.

NICHOLI ASKS FORGIVENESS.

The ex-Pastor Prays the Men He Swindled to be Merciful.

Elder Henry Pfarrar of the German Presbyterian church at Elizabeth was astonished Saturday night when Nicholas Nicholi, the deposed pastor of the church, appeared at his door and asked forgiveness for the wrong he did the elder in forging his name to the amount of $275. Pastor Nicholi fled from Elizabeth, May 27th, and that same day he had checks cashed, which it has since been learned were forgeries. Elder Pfarrar's name was forged to them. Pastor Nicholi was subsequently tried and found guilty of these offences by the Elizabeth Presbytery, was deposed from the ministry, and expelled from the Presbyterian church. He informed Elder Pfarrar that he had called on the men he had victimized and that they had forgiven him, and he had promised to pay them when he was able. He wanted the same leniency shown him by Elder Pfarrar, the man who had it in his power to send him to a convict's cell.

He informed the elder that he was guilty of all the forgeries and had made a confession in writing which he had forwarded to Rev. John T. Kerr, pastor of the Third Presbyterian church and secretary of the Presbytery. Nicholi said that wherever he went his crime seemed to confront him. His conscience could not rest, so he went to the Rev. B. Fay Mills, the evangelist, at Oakland, Cal., and confessed his sin to him. Mr. Mills, he said, advised him to return East and throw himself on the mercy of those he had wronged and ask the Presbytery's forgiveness.

Elder Pfarrar refused to condone his late pastor's offence until he has seen what sort of a confession he had made to the Presbytery. The elder said to Nicholi that he did not know whether the forger was telling the truth or not. He would first have to see the victims, and learn from them that they had pardoned Nicholi. His character had suffered, he said, from his intimacy with a criminal, and he must be fully vindicated by Nicholi before he would listen to any overtures for his reinstatement. He advised Nicholi to remain away from New Jersey if he wanted to keep out of prison.

Nicholi left the elder's house apparently very dejected. Mr. Pfarrar thinks he is stopping temporarily in Brooklyn with his mother and sisters. Nicholi informed him that he headed straight for California after his flight from Elizabeth and did not stop until he reached San Francisco.

These apples stuck—as apples often do—in a very unpleasant manner in the poor cow's throat, and had not a good-hearted neighbor removed them by thrusting his arm into the animal's open mouth, the lacteal juice would be minus to-day. Before the cow was relieved she suffered very much and caused much excitement. The neighbor who saved the cow was Mr. George Lewis of Mountain avenue. Later Mr. Frank Reid saw the cow in trouble, put his hand down her throat and drew forth another apple, after which the animal manifested relief. Mr. Bull's arm showed marks of the cow's teeth.

Teachers' Examination.

The next regular examination for second and third grade teachers' certificates for Union county will be held at Westfield on Friday and Saturday, August 5th and 6th.

EDITORIAL NOTES

How to Carry an Umbrella.

A learned lady advertises a treatise on how to carry an umbrella gracefully. This is an age of grace in America, one is glad to know, and why not grace in an umbrella? Meantime some practical suggestions drawn from studies in real life may help persons who, either late or early in life, are wrestling with the art of carrying an umbrella in a fascinating manner, but cannot take lessons from the lady. We don't charge anything for them, either.

If you are going up stairs ahead of other persons, do not forget to hold the umbrella under your arm and let it stick out straight behind you, point backward. If you are not quite sure it will put somebody's eye out in that way stop suddenly on your way up to recover breath. Then the metal tip will be sure to hit. If you are walking behind a fat man carry the thing in the same way, only in this case poke the sharp end well forward, so that you can give him a dig in the back. Dig good and strong. In any case, wherever you are, carry it square fore and aft under your arm. It cannot fail to do its deadly work.

If those who get their eyes punched out or are dug in the back growl and say bad words, you will know that your umbrella carrying is a success and graceful. If it has a hooked or curved handle, hold that so it will catch in the lace or drapery of a lady's gown as she passes you. This is good for the dry goods trade. Finally, if you are carrying it open in a rain, walk directly in the middle of the sidewalk so that every one who passes you will catch the dripping of it or get his nose punched with one of the steel prongs.

If you are a man carrying an umbrella over a lady, you need no instructions. No man ever yet held an umbrella over a woman, rain or shine, in any way but high over his own head and straight up in the air, so that if the sun was shining it beat in square upon her face and shoulders, and if the rain was pouring, the drippings from the prongs fell in a gentle, steady stream down the back of her neck and discolored and ruined her gown. Oh, yes! Men know enough about carrying an umbrella already.

National Indemnities.

The payment of $75,000 in gold by the Chilian government, through Minister Egan, to be distributed to the families of the two seamen who were killed and to the men who were injured in the riot at Valparaiso, ends that unfortunate affair with credit to both the republic of Chili and that of the United States. The riot occurred Oct. 16, 1891.

The United States government itself has always done the square thing by way of indemnity in case of injury to foreign citizens, thus setting a good example. We paid to Italy last year $25,000 damages for the Italians killed in the New Orleans mob, and there are people in New Orleans who believe this country got rid of some of them cheap at that. The indemnity paid amounted to $2,750 per head for the Italian citizens killed in the riot.

In 1887 four Japs were killed by some of our unconscionable naval target practice in which officers of the cruiser Omaha were engaged. For their peculiar style of target practice the government of their country paid $14,000. At Toulon, in 1884, some more of our extraordinary naval target practice resulted fatally to two French subjects and seriously to four others. Our navy this time was engaged in firing a salute. The United States paid France $9,600 to be distributed among the sufferers.

On the other hand, in November, 1873, the American ship Virginius was seized by a Spanish gunboat and taken to a Cuban port, where some of her crew and passengers were shot on the charge of being connected with a revolutionary plot. Some of those shot were British subjects, others American. For this outrage Spain paid to the United States government $2,500 for each person killed.

The late Thomas Cook, who died at his home in England, aged eighty-four, was the founder of the railway and steamboat excursion. He is another example of a man who caught one of the happy thoughts that float about mankind constantly and actualized till it brought fame and fortune and did good to the race. Only for him those admirable travelers who annually leave our shores as "Cook's tourists" never would have been thus known. Thousands of them would never have been able to go abroad at all only that his system brought travel within the means of the best class of people alive—persons of moderate means. Good rest to the soul of Thomas Cook!

Since the days of Benjamin Franklin the United States has had few distinguished linguists and men of all round knowledge to send abroad as foreign ministers, though of course no president ever makes a mistake when he appoints a good newspaper man to one of those posts. Since every foreign minister cannot be a newspaper man, however, we must all take pride in the fact that the important mission to Russia will be filled by that man of international, scientific, educational and literary reputation, Andrew D. White—one of the livest of Americans besides.

THE STRIKERS WEAKEN.

Indications That There May Be a Stampede at Homestead.

CARNEGIE'S OFFICIALS CONFIDENT.

It Is Claimed That All the Men Needed Will Be in the Works by the End of the Present Week—Frick Able to Walk About—Knoold and Bauer Refused Bail.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 1.—Fort Frick, the name given by the strikers to the big plant of the Carnegie Steel company, is from now on really a fort, garrisoned and armed, except for heavy artillery, as the forts are armed in this country. There are 1,000 men inside and there is a repeating rifle for every man. The rifles are stored in a convenient place where they can be got at in a moment.

Besides the 1,000 workmen who can be called in a moment to defend an attack, there are now fourteen coal and iron policemen trained to fight and 100 deputy sheriffs trained to fight. The deputies and coal and iron policemen are armed with both clubs and rifles. These facts were brought out in a talk with the superintendent of the mills. This question was asked of him:

"If you fill the mill with new men, how do you expect to prevent fights between them and the former men, especially after the troops go away?"

He replied emphatically:

"We have taken ample precautions to protect every man in our employ from the attacks of outsiders. We have now about 100 deputy sheriffs, and will increase that number to 300 as soon as practicable. There are guns enough inside the mill to arm every man in our employ the moment the occasion arises for such action. We do not propose to submit to any foolishness in this matter, and now that we know the men with whom we have to deal we have made every preparation to meet them with force if it should become necessary."

A STAMPEDE PROBABLE.

The Locked Out Men Are Weakening and May Flock to Work.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 1.—Information from the residence of Mr. H. C. Frick is that the victim of attempted assassination is now practically well of his injuries. Today Mr. Frick was out of his bed, dressed and moving about in his room, and was the recipient of the congratulations of many callers. Mr. Frick said that he expected to visit his office during the week.

The first important break in the ranks of the skilled laborers at Homestead is likely about to take place. Last night there was a meeting of twenty-five of the skilled men, several of them members of the Amalgamated association. The situation was discussed and it was decided that there was no hope of winning the strike. A committee was appointed to wait on Mr. Potter, the superintendent, and ask him on what terms they might come back.

The committee called and was cordially received by Mr. Potter, who told them of the rules that company had adopted as to the treatment of the strikers and that he meant to adhere to them. If they would abide by these rules he would find places for them. They expressed themselves favorably and said there would be another meeting, when they would make their report. The committee thinks that the terms would be accepted and that the twenty-five would go to work.

Mr. Potter, in an interview, said: "I think the strike is coming very soon. By the end of the week we will probably have as many men as we can provide places for. When the men propose to return as openly as the twenty-five skilled men whose committee called a general stampede is not far distant."

The Company's Object.

The Homestead trouble is the subject of considerable study by those who wish to ascertain the exact cause of the trouble and the grievous attitude of the Carnegie Steel company and the Amalgamated association, men of Homestead. The cause of the riot is well known to have been the introduction of an armed body of Pinkerton detectives, who are always so hated by workmen. But the original intentions of the company to the workmen have not heretofore been fully learned. The supposed cause of the disagreement was the inability of the representatives of the two parties to come to an agreement on the scale of wages affecting about 350 of the workmen. But all along it has been charged by the other side that the company has allowed this disagreement to continue only as a pretext.

"The Carnegie Steel company's intention," said a prominent labor man today, "is and has been all along to break up the union of their employees. Mr. Frick, in his testimony before the congressional investigating committee, stated that he made arrangements for the bringing of the Pinkertons men here about June 25. Capt. Rodgers, in his testimony, stated that Mr. Frick sent for him on June 25, and made arrangements for the transportation of these men to Homestead.

"These statements may be all very true, but they are not all the facts. One fact peculiarly noticeable in this connection is that Capt. Rodgers made application for a permit to change the character of his two steam vessels—the Tide and Little Bill—from tugs to passenger vessels on the 11th of June.

"This fact proves conclusively that it was the intelligent intention of the company to break the union of men, and that they had this plan in view for some time previous to the trouble. What time Mr. Frick intimated to Captain Rodgers his plans is not known."

Bail Refused for Knold and Bauer.

The police are still active in their efforts to bring the murderers of the company to the arm of the law, and Inspector McKelvey presented an attempt to secure the release through habeas corpus proceedings of Anarchists Knold and Bauer, alleged accomplices of Assassin Berkman.

Attorney Friedman had prepared a petition for a habeas corpus hearing and was on his way to the criminal court to present it to Judge Magee. Inspector McKelvey heard of this and acted immediately. He made information for conspiracy against the men, which, in addition to the charge of complicity in the shooting of Frick, was sufficient to hold them.

Judge Gripp held Knold and Bauer in $2,000 on the conspiracy charge and refused bail on the accessory to murder charge. The hearing of Mollick was not continued. He will be heard on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

"We do not care to start the mill yet, but could do so on very short notice were we so inclined."

This was the only reply received from the Carnegie mill office when the officials in charge were asked as to the situation of affairs at the Pittsburg Union mills.

CLAIM TO HAVE JUDGE MARR.

And If He Is Not Executed He Will Be Riddled With Bullets.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 1.—Chief of Police Gaster received a letter from what is supposed to be the Mafia. It was inclosed in an old envelope with a skull and crossbones on it. It was sent from the New Orleans postoffice. The writer is not known, but appears to live in this city. Following is the letter:

NEW ORLEANS, July 29.

To Chief of Police Gaster:

We have in our possession Judge Marr. Will deliver him in your hands for $500, or will release him for $100. We will send you his old clothes, etc., such as we found on his person, but bear in mind, for one had break unauthorized by you, his body will be riddled with shot, then sent you for a present. This money must reach us before twenty days, unless you will have his right ear for further information.

Address General Delivery, Postoffice, Chicago, St. Louis or New Orleans. Respectfully,

J. J. NUNEZ.

It will be remembered that Judge Marr, of the criminal district court in this city, mysteriously disappeared last April. He was old and feeble, and was last seen walking along the levee. The impression of his friends was that he had fallen into the river and was drowned, and that impression still prevails.

FASHIONS

THE ADVENT OF SUSPENDERS.

Will Women Avoid the Perplexities to Which Man Is Subjected?

Suspenders are becoming more and more in evidence on the shoulders of women. Even the stout women are wearing them. Leaving out of consideration the cost of material for a very fat woman's suspenders, it does seem to the thoughtful that they ought not to wear them, says the N. Y. World. Suppose they should become detached from their rear fastening, what would happen? Why, following some great emotion or some violent muscular effort, a pair of suspenders, like a runaway balloon, would rise from their moorings and rise to a point just below any woman's shoulder-blades, it is useless for her to try to seize them with her own hands. She can twist and wriggle and make faces and thrust her tongue in her cheek and distort herself into all the shapes of a marionette, but she cannot grasp those suspenders. Generations of men have tried to do it. Every since the first pair of trousers the stronger sex have purpled their faces and distorted their shoulders in the same mocking, useless, oath-forcing attempt. And shall woman succeed now in a day?

If a man's suspender buttons fly off when the rupture between his suspenders and his trousers comes he has a just resort that may be stated first as being the most discomforting—to a man. He can take off his suspenders and walk on the heels of his trousers. But a woman would hate to do that. That is, she would hate to take off her suspenders, for, strangely enough, she wears them for show, most ostentatiously, proudly, delightedly, with an air that says plainer than words: "If the kind young lady in front of me have taken another step towards the emancipation of the sex."

BISMARCK'S BOLD TALK.

He Proclaims His Antagonism to the Methods of the Kaiser.

AN IMPORTANT POLITICAL SPEECH.

His Words, "I Have Sworn to Found a Protestant Empire and It Is Useless to Try to Rule with a Catholic Party as the Chief Factor," Wildly Cheered.

JENA, Aug. 1.—Prince Bismarck, with his party, comprising Princess Bismarck and Count and Countess Bismarck, arrived here, the whole journey being a triumphal procession from the frontier. The streets through which his carriage passed were massed with enthusiastic crowds and the cheering was continuous.

When he had arrived at the hotel the large crowd which had gathered in front of the building was so persistent in their cheers and calls that he was twice obliged to appear on the balcony and express his thanks for the splendid reception which had been accorded him. He said that the knowledge that his services to the country were recognized by the German people had enabled him to bear many suspicions and shocks.

Today Prince Bismarck made a tour of the town in a carriage, the university students in full uniform forming a guard of honor and lining the whole route of his drive.

Bismarck's Reception.

There were many thousands of visitors in Jena and fervent enthusiasm prevailed everywhere. Early in the morning a choir assembled under Prince Bismarck's window and sang Luther's hymn, "Ein Feste Burg." Later Prince Bismarck drove to the Market Platz, where 10,000 persons had assembled, arranged in lines around the square. A corps of students guarded the platform in the center of the square, to which Prince and Princess Bismarck and Count Herbert Bismarck and his bride were escorted by Rector Brockhaus, Professor Haeckel and other chiefs of the university. The assemblage sang a number of patriotic songs as it received the visitors with enthusiastic cheers.

The burgomaster, in proposing the health of Prince Bismarck, contrasted the state of Germany at the beginning of the century with that of today, and alluded to the battle of Jena and the downfall of Prussia, closing with the words: "After Bismarck no second Jena defeat is possible." A student then addressed the prince, saying among other things that all the students of Germany would carry forward his work.

An Important Oration.

Prince Bismarck, in reply, delivered an important political oration. He said: "I have sworn to found a Protestant empire. It is therefore out of the question to try to rule with a Catholic party as the chief factor. We must take the present Catholic party as an example and must initiate them and form a united party against Catholic influence. I say nothing against the supremacy of the Catholic party or of Catholic influence in matters of faith.

"It would even be preferable to have a Papal Nuncio in Berlin, so that irresponsible party leaders should not as at present give colored and untrustworthy reports to the Pope."

Referring to what he called the false policy of the government, the ex-chancellor said: "The Kaiser has increased the Germanizing influence by courting Goethe's "Goetz von Berlichingen," who, although a faithful subject of the kaiser, refused to recognize the kaiser's commissioners, and when his sentence was the utterance to his opinions. He was today, he said, in the same position, a faithful servant of the kaiser, but he had the right to express the sharpest criticism on the kaiser's advisers.

He Will Continue to Speak.

The speech was received with enthusiastic cheers.

A kommers or beer drinking entertainment was then begun. Prince Bismarck lighted his long pipe and conversed without reserve to those around him. After the kommers he returned to his hotel.

The prince and party started for Schoenhausen at 2 p. m. They were accompanied to the railway station by large crowds, and there was tumultuous cheering in honor of the ex-chancellor.

In his address Prince Bismarck sketched the events attending the founding of the empire, and added that he had many difficulties to overcome with the late emperor—what he might call behind the scenes diplomacy, which was sometimes harder than foreign diplomacy.

The defeat of France, he said, was a necessity, because if she had not been humbled she would have hindered German unity. People said that the Bismarck policy had luck. He wished he could say that other ministers and chancellors were lucky.

He was hated by many men because of a strong parliamentary majority, so as to prevent absolutism or government by bureaucracy. Some found fault, he said, with his criticisms, but he would continue to speak his mind, whatever the consequences might be.

Somerby Turns Up.

DETROIT, Aug. 1.—F. D. Somerby, supreme trustee of the Order of the Iron Hall, arrived in the city late last night and registered at the Normandie. He was accompanied by his wife. Dr. J. T. It is said that Mr. Potter left the city for Indianapolis, it is thought.

THE WORK OF CONGRESS

Review of the Legislation Enacted at This Session.

EFFECTS OF THE HOUSE DEADLOCK.

It Practically Stops the Machinery of the Government, as the Sundry Civil Bill Has Expired and Expenditures Must Cease Until It Is Renewed.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The senate leaders are determined to attempt no more business that could possibly delay adjournment, and reliance is placed upon the magnitude and infinite variety of the interests involved in the sundry civil bill to bring about a speedy termination of the national "lockout" which stops those great workshops here in the capital—the government printing office and the bureau of engraving and printing—as well as the life saving stations and all the lighthouses, the quarantine stations, all the government hospitals and asylums, the mints and assay offices, the United States court, marshal and district attorney, the registers, receivers and surveyors of all public lands, the national parks, national cemeteries and military prisons. The bill takes in everything, down to the monthly pay bill at the White House and the feeding of the animals at the national zoo. Appropriations for all these purposes stopped at midnight Saturday, and stringent provisions of the revised statutes prohibit any obligation being incurred for any of these accounts in advance of an appropriation.

Predictions as to what may be done in the house are idle. Danger threatens the World's fair people in the event that their forces weaken and will not longer remain in a heat congested city to carry their point. Adjournment seems further off than it did a week ago, although many congressmen think and all hope that this week will be the last.

The Work of Congress.

After an eight months' session and the first session of the Fifty-second congress about to end a review of its work will prove interesting. The house devoted the first two months of the session to the discussion and adoption of a code of rules, after which the regular business was taken up. Bills to the number of 9,007 have been introduced in the house. Of this number 3,115 have been reported and placed on the calendar, about 450 of which have passed the house.

The most important measures considered by the house, excepting the general appropriation bills, were the silver bills, the tariff measures, the Chinese exclusion act, the immigration act and army nurse pension bills, the bills to enforce reciprocal commercial relations with Canada, the bill increasing the pay of life saving crews, the bill to establish final promotion in the army, the bill for the better control of national banks and the bill adding the name of the secretary of agriculture to the cabinet officers who may act as president in certain contingencies.

The Bland silver bill failed in the house, as did also the free coinage bill which passed the senate. The several tariff bills passed by the house failed in the senate, as did the bills providing for the admission of New Mexico and Arizona as states.

Of the 3,492 bills introduced in the senate 1,101 were reported and 700 passed. Among the most important measures passed by the senate and not acted upon by the house were the following: To facilitate the settlement of claims for arrears of pay and bounty; for the construction of revenue cutters (two each) for service on the great lakes and the Pacific coast; the "pure food bill;" to authorize the secretary of war to cause a survey to be had for a ship canal from Philadelphia across New Jersey to New York bay, and the better enforcement of the immigration laws.

Passed Both Houses.

Four hundred and three bills have passed both houses and been sent to the president for his signature. There are twenty of those bills still under consideration by the executive; one has been returned to the house by its request without signing; two have been vetoed—the bill to amend the law organizing the circuit courts of appeal so as to give them jurisdiction in certain Indian cases, and the bill referring the McGarrahan claim to the court of private land claims.

Among the more important bills which have become laws are the following: To encourage American shipbuilding; for the permanent preservation and custody of the records of the volunteer armies; to add the name of the secretary of agriculture to the cabinet officers who may become president in certain emergencies; to prohibit the coming of Chinese into the United States; the intermediate sugar and sugar bills; to enforce commercial reciprocal relations with Canada, and increasing the maximum pay of life saving crews.

Investigations.

Investigations were a feature of this congress, especially in the house, and committees devoted much time to them. The pension office and its management received the attention of a special committee, which reported mismanagement of the bureau generally under the administration of Commissioner Raum, and recommended to the house that the president be requested to dismiss that official.

The committee on public lands looked into the management of the Yellowstone park and reported a bill to rectify the condition of affairs there. The report also criticised Russell B. Harrison, the president's son, for his connection with securing leases there.

The Investigations.

A subcommittee of the committee on the judiciary looked into a matter called to its attention by the attorney general that marshals and clerks of the United States courts in Boston were obtaining illegal fees in naturalization cases. They reported several bills to remedy the evil. The committee on banking and currency were ordered to investigate the failure of the Keystone and Spring Garden National banks, of Philadelphia, and of the Maverick National bank, of Boston. The committee did not conclude their inquiry. The committee appointed to investigate the census office began taking evidence late in the session and finally postponed it until next session.

The committee on reform in the civil service investigated the Baltimore postoffice matter and filed a report severely criticising Postmaster General Wanamaker, stating that he knew employees were violating the law, yet he still kept them in office. The investigation into the so called "sweating system" of contract labor was conducted by a subcommittee of the house, but did not finish taking testimony, and will probably resume its sessions during the recess of congress.

Senator Chandler and Representative Stump, chairmen of the senate and house committees on immigration, rigorously investigated the expenditures of money at the Ellis island immigrant station and the construction of the buildings there. This investigation was attended by several exciting scenes between the two chairmen and Assistant Secretary Nettleton and the principal witness. Majority and minority reports were made to the house, but too late for action. No report was made to the senate, Chairman Chandler finding himself opposed by the other Republican members of the committee in his conclusions from the evidence, and not inclined to join the Democrats in their finding.

Contested Seats.

The house committee on elections had six contests, four of which were acted upon. Of the contests reported two received the action of the house—the Craig-Stewart, from the Twenty-fourth Pennsylvania district, and the Noyes-Rockwell, from the Twenty-eighth New York district—both being decided in favor of Democrats Craig and Rockwell. The former died at his home, Clayville, Pa., Friday.

The contests of Reynolds-Shonk, from the Twelfth Pennsylvania district, and of McDuffie-Turpin, from the Fourth Alabama, have been passed upon by the committee, but there is no necessity of calling them up, as the reports are in favor of the sitting members—Shonk (Rep.) and Turpin (Dem.). Two contests remain to be decided by the committee—Grosvy-Scull, from the Twenty-first Pennsylvania district, and Miller-Elliott, from the Seventh South Carolina district.

A number of important bills are on the house calendar and will retain their place in the second session. The calendar also contains fifty public building bills, while those for pensions and private claims number about 1,000.

Among the important bills and resolutions which will retain their places on the senate calendar are the following: The antioption bill of Senator Washburne; to provide for fortifications and other sea coast defenses; to amend the laws in regard to national banking associations, to retire their circulation and for other purposes; to transfer the revenue marine service from the treasury department to the navy department; to subject to state taxation national bank notes and United States treasury notes; to authorize the New York and New Jersey Bridge company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Hudson river between New York city and the state of New Jersey, and to provide for an 'international bimetallic conference.

Among the bills and resolutions ordered to lie upon the table are the following: To establish postal savings banks; to develop and facilitate the interstate commerce of the whole country; to change the day of meeting of congress to Jan. 1; to amend the constitution so that the president shall hold his office for six years and be ineligible for re-election; providing for the election of senators by a direct vote of the people, and to authorize the establishment of a postal telegraph service.

Infernal Machines in Japan.

YOKOHAMA, Aug. 1.—An unsuccessful attempt to murder Count Okuma, leader of the Progressists, and Viscount Kono Tokana, minister of justice, is thought to have been made by persons opposed to the present policy of welcoming foreigners and modeling the government after European plans. The attempt was made by means of packages of dynamite which were mailed to each. The spring attachments which were intended to snap when the packages were undone got out of order during transportation and failed to work.

The Annual Canoe Meet.

ALBANY, Aug. 1.—The American Canoe association will begin its annual meet at Willsboro Point, Lake Champlain, next Friday. Neither the Atlantic nor the eastern division of the American Canoe association will hold a division meet this year, so that but one division meet—that of the northern—will take place.

A New Steamship Line.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 1.—The establishment of a line of steamships between Philadelphia and Mediterranean ports is assured, although the arrangements have not been perfected. It is known that the ships will be supplied by James Knott, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, who is the largest ship owner on the east coast of England.

Thoroughbreds Burned Up.

NEW CASTLE, Ind., Aug. 1.—The extensive barns of Thomas Wilbert, the famous breeder of thoroughbred shorthorn cattle, burned, together with many of the choicest of his cattle. Among those burned were the finest shorthorns in the world, which were being carefully prepared for exhibition at the World's fair.

An Outcast Daughter-in-Law.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 1.—Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Anido applied to the police to prevent Mrs. Gerard Anido, daughter-in-law, from visiting their residence. They claim that she is a blackmailer and an adventuress. Her husband has gone west to get a divorce.

The Arions Are Famous.

COLOGNE, Aug. 1.—The trip of the Arion singers from Bingen to Cologne was one continued ovation. The roofs of houses on both banks were crowded with people waving German and American flags and cheering as the boat passed.

Orvis for Governor.

BOSTON, Aug. 1.—The Socialist-Labor party has selected a full state ticket, John Orvis, who was a co-worker with Wendell Phillips and William Lloyd Garrison in the antislavery movement, is the candidate for governor.

Yankee Duel in New York.

A Woman Burned to Death.

WHEATLAND, Ia., Aug. 1.—Fire destroyed four of the best business blocks in the town. Mrs. John Snyder was burned to death. Other members of her family escaped by leaping from the windows.

—Fliegende Blatter.

Aeronaut Hobe's Frightful Fall.

ST. PAUL, Aug. 1.—Five thousand people at Inver grove, just south of this city, were the horrified spectators of a terrible fall to death of Professor Hobe, the aeronaut. When the balloon reached the usual altitude Hobe could be seen tugging at the valve cord, which would not work. Before he could manipulate it the balloon was at least 2,000 feet above the earth. In the regular way he cut loose the parachute and was rapidly whirled, feet to the horror of the crowd the parachute did not expand, and the unfortunate aeronaut fell like a shot toward the ground. So great was the force of the fall that he was driven in the soft ground to a depth of ten feet and instantly killed. It required the work of an hour to reach the body.

The Soldiers Want Their Pay.

HOMESTEAD, Aug. 1.—Some of the militia still have been clamoring for their pay. They have been away and kept from business so long that they require to send home remittances to their families. Adjutant General Greenland arrived here in company with Colonel Louis Reid, Surgeon General and Lieutenant Colonel Wilbur, of Governor Pattison's staff. The adjutant general ordered that the pay rolls be made out at once and sent to the capital for revision. Salaries will probably be paid the men in camp by the end of the week. Some of the men who have only extra about $1.50 or $2 a day, and they badly need their money.

The Idaho Snthers.

BOISE CITY, Aug. 1.—Judge Beatty fined half the Idaho mission delegation of silver and the sixteen from Washoe, who are now in jail charged with contempt of the federal court, at $1,000 each, but execution has forbidden. The hearing of the contempt proceedings will be heard Tuesday. Twenty-eight men from the Gem and Burke mines, who were paroled a few days ago, have been rearrested and taken to the Wallace military prison.

A Train Derailed.

MARQUETTE, Mich., Aug. 1.—By the derailment of a passenger train Mrs. William Miller was fatally injured; Frank Miller, her ten-year-old son, fatally injured; William Orr, general freight agent of the road, seriously injured; J. B. Lincoln, of Saginaw, badly cut; James Wilson, injured internally, and Frank Simpson, cut about the head.

The Champion Wing Shot.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 1.—Jim Elliott and James A. Bolch shot for The American Field championship cup, given by the champion of America, at Olathe. Elliott won by a score of 49 to 40 out of a possible 50. This makes the cup the individual property of Mr. Elliott, he having won it twice in succession.

For a New Long Branch Hotel.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Aug. 1.—Walter Hildreth, owner of the West End hotel, is arranging for the formation of a stock company with a capital of $1,000,000, half of which is to be used in the erection of a new hotel on the site of the present building.

SHE MUST MARRY THE JUDGE.

A Remarkable Method of Choosing a Wife by Making Her Apply for Office.

Among the many remarkable proposals of marriage which have been published from time to time in the newspapers, the most unique is the following, which appears in our advertising columns:

Wanted—A young lady for the benefit of the county court of Elbert county. Is will be necessary for her to marry the county judge. Address County Judge, Elberton, Ga.

Coming as it does in the dawn of leap year, this advertisement by Judge J. A. Roebuck has special force and significance. Application for the position of clerk under the terms of the above advertisement would be equivalent, of course, to a proposal of marriage to Judge Roebuck. This, in any other year, might not be considered just the proper thing for a young lady to do, but in leap year who shall question her right to such a course?

But see the cleverness of the judge. By simply mustering up the audacity to announce in the advertising columns of the two leading papers in Georgia that he is anxious for a wife, which is an entirely praiseworthy aspiration, and which is the plain English of his clever advertisement, he has at a single bound left the embarrassing position of suitor and taken the vantage ground of the one to be wooed.

And, too, the easy avenue of escape from undesirable applicants which is left to him and the embarrassment which is saved the young ladies. While it might be a trying ordeal for a young lady to propose marriage to the man she loves, in this day of female stenographers, typewriters and bookkeepers there need be no embarrassment on a lady's part in applying for any respectable clerkship. Therefore, when a young lady has become acquainted with Judge Roebuck, of the Elbert county court, and feels that she is willing to share the honors and emoluments of his office, she has only to apply for the position of clerk in his court.

If the judge fancies the applicant the bargain can be closed at once, and the clerk's salary remains in the family. If, on the contrary, the applicant would not be acceptable as Mrs. Roebuck, the judge has only to appoint the duties of the office as being such that she could not fill them, and regret that he cannot give her the position. Both parties thus escape all reference to the embarrassing part of the business. In the language of the sporting gentry, the judge is "on velvet."

Girls, the case is before you.—Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle.

Co-operation in English Housekeeping.

The English housekeeper, without intending to do so, has really taken two long steps in the direction of co-operative housekeeping. For in most small establishments, where perhaps only three or four servants are kept, no breadmaking is done at home and the washing is all put out. The bread purchased is not, however, what is technically known to us as "bakers' bread."

The huge loaves are firm and light, and closely resemble what the best home cook could produce. The various kinds of hot bread dear to an American's heart are neither desired nor found on an Englishman's table, and although an American housekeeper might consider it bad management to buy her bread, to the English housekeeper the plan seems the best in the world.

As the English housekeeper is nothing if not thrifty, without further discussion it may be taken for granted that co-operation between her and the baker must mean a saving of pocket for her, as well as a simplifying of her household arrangements. In the same way, the fact that no washing is done at home, means a saving both of fuel and of friction in the kitchen. Furthermore, no unsightly lines with their burden of clothes ever disfigure the back yard of an English house. The yard is instead a thing of beauty, with its central grass plot, its little flagged walk, and with its bushes and vines neatly trained against the surrounding walls.—Our Homemaker.

Braised Turkey.

We will suppose that the turkey has to be cooked in an ordinary saucepan. Pluck and singe the bird, cut off the neck and legs and empty it, reserving the liver, heart and gizzard. Cover the bird all over with slices of bacon cut very thin; then bind it securely with twine. The shape of the turkey must be preserved as correctly as possible.

Put a few slices of fat bacon at the bottom of the saucepan; lay the bird upon these, with the giblets and trimmings; a calf's foot split in two, two or three onions stuck with cloves, two carrots, a bunch of parsley and a sprig of thyme, with salt and pepper to taste. Put some slices of bacon on the top of the turkey, and nearly cover it with good stock. Put the lid on the pan and gently simmer the contents from four to six hours, according to the size of the bird.

If this dish is to be eaten hot, place the turkey on a dish, surround it with the best of the vegetables and pour over it part of the liquor in which it has been stewed, freed from fat, and thickened with a little browning.—Aunt Chloe in Country Gentleman.

Heavily in Favor of Woman Suffrage.

A vote was taken at a business house in Boston where 500 young men are employed to see how many were for woman's suffrage and out of the number only twelve were unqualified enough to declare against it. If a similar vote were taken among an equal number of women on the same question it is doubtful if an equal number would be found in favor of it.—Boston Letter.

The Stereopticon in a Woman's Club.

When it is possible to have one, a stereopticon adds greatly to the pleasure of a tourists' club. Even its occasional use is better than not having it at all. A club of women who are amateur photographers are wisely beginning their travels about home and illustrating their papers with pictures of their own taking.—New York Post.

Pretty Favors.

Some pretty favors that may be made at home for a dinner, dance or luncheon have as their foundation the flat circular boxes used by confectioners. The boxes should not be more than an inch or an inch and a half high. Their circumference is a matter of taste, though a box of about twelve inches is perhaps the best. Make as many bags of surah or China silk, in bright colors, as you have boxes, and leave the bags open across the bottom. Sew the bottom of the bag around the box on the outside, and over the stitches put a band of satin ribbon the width of the rim of the box. Turn the top of the bag in a hem sufficiently wide to allow of a shirring string. Sometimes the band of ribbon around the box is powdered with tiny painted flowers. If for a color luncheon, these bags should be of one color. If for cotillon favors, rainbow hues have the best effect. One box can be used for two bags, as both the bottom and the cover are of the same size.—New York Post.

Terms That Seem High.

I notice in the newspapers the very interesting advertisement of a lady who "has carefully studied the best existing authorities" upon the subject of English pronunciation, "and is able to correct mispronounced words that are frequently heard in pulpit, lecture room, theater or in daily conversation."

Her terms are $100 a month, which is not too high if she has mastered the subject. I suppose that an instructress in pronunciation must get her main clientage from ladies whose vocation at the washtub in early life prevented them from having that command of English or choppy which seems desirable to them, now that their husbands have got rich. There must be plenty of such pupils to be had, but the task of instructing them must be a little difficult. Moreover, the subject of English pronunciation is so vast and difficult that it must be almost as hard to teach as to learn.—New York Truth.

Choosing Hams.

Choose freshly cured hams. Formerly the year's supply was packed in the winter, and after smoking must needs be canvased to preserve it against the ravages of flies, and in this shape carried to meet the demand through the summer and fall. This necessarily resulted in a considerable loss of the juices of the meat by evaporation, while the surface of the flesh gradually became densely covered with mildew, which often gave a moldly flavor to the entire ham. This has now been entirely obviated by such improvements in curing by ice that hams of the very finest quality are prepared even in the hottest weather.—New York Grocer.

All Married Within Five Years.

Five years ago a chapter of ten King's Daughters, consisting of eight confirmed spinsters, one girl of sixteen, and a heartbroken widow, all vowed to deny any aspiration toward matrimonial joys or hazards, and give their lives over to the doing of good works. The widow married within six months, the spinsters followed her example in rapid succession, and only a month ago nine happily married women attended the wedding of the youngest member of the organization.—Good Housekeeping.

A Female Lamplighter.

Richard Salters, a colored man, who has for years lighted the lamps in the Belleville section of Newark, N. J., died some time ago. He had been failing for a year, and during all that time his wife has gone upon the grounds, cleaned the lamps by day and lighted them at dusk. She is said to be the only female lamplighter in the country.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Miss Grace Dodge dresses more plainly than many of the members of the working girls' clubs over which she presides. At her regular receptions during the past examination she has worn the same gown—a simple and inexpensive cashmere, dark green in color, with a little white vest in the velvet trimmed waist.

Belle Newport, a young American pupil of Scharwenka, has passed the regular examination she has made for entrance to the Imperial Academy of Berlin. Out of the sixty-four students only ten passed, and Miss Newport ranked first of these.

The tallest woman in the world is the giantess Rosita, who was born in Vienna twenty-six years ago, and is now on exhibition in Berlin. Her height is 8 feet 3 inches, and she weighs 851 pounds.

Novelties in thimbles are of china in royal Worcester, Dresden and Trenton manufacture. These thimbles are white with a garland of colored flowers on the border.

The woman who attempts to do everything, every hour of whose time is filled up with duties of amusement, becomes wearied and old before her time.

Alcohol or benzine is a good thing to clean glass, and clean paper is better than cast cloth, sponge or towel. Dry paper leaves an excellent polish.

In the Gloaming.

They had been married fourteen weeks.

"Frank, dear," she said one evening in the gloaming, "would you miss me very much if I should die?"

"Don't ask me such grewsome questions, darling," he protested.

"But would you, dear?" she insisted.

"More than words can express," he said, clutching her hands as if he were losing her every hour.

"And, Frank, dear, do you think you could ever find any one to take my place?"

The whippoorwill's mournful threnody came up from the old fence overgrown with thickets, and a bat circled about in the starlit shadows of the night.

"No, darling," he murmured, "but I could try."

And a cloud came slowly up from the still haggled horizon.—Detroit Free Press.

THE CHILDREN.

Some Bright Youngsters and Their Quaint Remarks.

In the mental arithmetic class the teacher had a good deal of trouble in making Johnny Jones understand the simplest mathematical ideas, though he seemed to be a boy of much natural good sense.

"Six from six leaves how many?" asked the teacher.

"Hain't!" asked Johnny, apparently astonished at the question.

"If you have six cents in your pocket, and you lose them all, how many do you have left?"

Johnny put on a scornful look at this and answered, "One, I suppose."

"Johnny Jones, how could you have one of your six cents left when you had lost them all?"

"I didn't mean that I'd have one cent left."

"One what, then?"

"One hole, I guess," said Johnny, "there's got to be sumthin'."—Youth's Companion.

He Had Grown.

A father was very much annoyed by the foolish questions of his little son.

"Johnny, you are a great source of annoyance to me."

"What's the matter, pa?"

"You ask so many foolish questions. I wasn't a big donkey when I was of your age."

"No, pa, but you've growed a heap since."—Texas Siftings.

The Other.

Mary had a very sore eye, and the physician forbid her to sew, and at that she began to cry. Her friend Katy said:

"Don't cry, your eye will be all the more inflamed."

"Oh! I am not crying with that eye," she replied.—Sunny Hour.

Afraid.

A good story was told not long ago of a lad lost overboard while sailing in Boston harbor, who was saved by his own presence of mind by floating until rescue could reach him. But he was a very little boy, and when actually safe began to cry. "You were frightened, weren't you, dear?" asked a tender relative. "You were afraid of going down?" "No, indeed," returned he scornfully, between his sobs, "but I was afraid the fishes would bite me."—Youth's Companion.

Youthful Logic.

Mrs. Burns has two boys and loves both tenderly. John, the younger, said:

"Mamma, I love you more than you do me."

"I think not, my dear. But why do you think so?"

"Because you have two children and I have only one mother."—Sunny Hour.

Go It Slow, Destiny.

It was in the early days of river navigation that a merry party steamed up the Mississippi on the Mary Annie. Prominent among them was a loud voiced, overbearing, opinionated man who took supreme delight in engaging his fellow passengers in long winded religious arguments.

Predestination was his hobby, and all opposition to his views was overborne by sheer aggressiveness and lung power. From dawn till bedtime he rung the changes on "Whatever will be will be," until he became the terror of all.

One night there came a shock which brought the boat to a sudden standstill. She had struck a snag. There was really no danger, but for a short time the wildest confusion prevailed among the panic stricken crowd.

In the midst of it all our argumentative friend was seen running to and fro in a frenzy of fear, begging and praying for a life preserver.

"My dear sir," said the captain soothingly, "why this needless alarm? Remember that whatever has been foreordained will be in spite of our efforts to prevent it."

"Oh, I know it," he said, wringing his hands in agony. "I know it. But what is the use to hurry matters?"—Detroit Free Press.

Almost a Native.

"Are you a native of this parish?" asked a Scotch sheriff of a witness who was summoned to testify in a case of illicit distilling.

"Maistly, yer honor," was the reply.

"I mean were you born in this parish?"

"Na, yer honor. I wasna born in this parish, but I'm maist a native for a' that."

"You came here when you were a child, I suppose, mostly?" said the sheriff.

"Then how do you come to be nearly a native of this parish?"

"Weel, ye see, when I cam' here, sax year sin', I jist weighed eight stane, and I'm seventeen stane noo, soo ye see that about nine stane o' me belongs to this parish an the ither eight comes frae Cam lachie."—Pearson's Weekly.

A Welcome Guest.

Mother—How did you happen to take dinner with Tommy Traddles?

Young Heir—Mrs. Traddles invited me.

"Didn't you ask her to?"

"No'm."

"Did Tommy ask her?"

"No, ma'am; he only told her it would be a good thing for her to keep me, 'cause as long as I was there you wouldn't have anybody to send over to borrow things."—Good News.

Figures Don't Lie.

Mrs. Wickwire—You always have so many smart remarks to make about women being talkative; what do you think of that Georgia woman who has spoken to but three persons in sixteen years?

Mr. Wickwire—Sixteen years. That makes an average of 5½ years for her to have her say out with each person.—Indianapolis Journal.

He Had Been Tried.

"Is he honest and reliable?"

"I should say so. He is tried and trusty. He has been tried four times for stealing horses and has got clear every time," was the reply.—Texas Siftings.

Cheap Housekeeping.

As a time when Rosambeau, the late actor at the Odeon theater, could not afford to give a supper to his children, this is how he persuaded them to go to bed without having anything to eat:

"Here's a penny for each of you that will do without his supper," he would say to them. They all accepted the bargain. Next morning they were as hungry as wolves. Their father then called out, "Those that want their breakfast must pay a penny."

He thus recovered his expenses and saved a meal.—Artequin.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

REGULAR MEETING FOR AUGUST HELD LAST EVENING.

Petitions to Have Madison Avenue Extended.—A W. C. T. U. Drinking Fountain. — Election Officers. — Streets to be Macadamized.—Richmond Street Renamed Norwood Avenue. — Peace Street Commissioners, etc.

A regular meeting of the City Council was held last night.

There were present President Ginna, Councilmen Bird, Case, Johnston, Marsh and See.

Contrary to expectation the street railway matter was not taken up. President Thomas Nevins and John B. Brown, vice-president of the railway company, were on hand, but their skillful lobbying was not productive of results.

After the calling of the roll, the minutes of the last four meetings were read and approved.

A petition presented by George H. Babcock and William M. Stillman to have Madison avenue open so as to connect Duer street was then read by the clerk and referred to the Committee on Streets.

A petition was received from Schepflin, Baldwin, Tweedy & Co., Tunis J. Carey, G. W. Moore and others, asking that the house of Engine Company, No. 2, on Front street, be removed so as to make room for the proposed street, and also one from the Methodist Episcopal church, opposite the engine house, requesting the removal of the house on the ground that it was a nuisance. These were also referred to the Street Committee.

Mrs. Tomlinson, President of the Women Christian Temperance Union, petitioned the Council on behalf of the Union, to be allowed to place a drinking fountain on Peace street opposite the Friends' meeting house. Referred to Street Committee.

Mr. Marsh submitted the list of names of election officers. Councilman Frazee's name was on the list, and his having to present his own name and vote upon it created considerable amusement.

First Ward—Republican, George W. Moore, and Richard E. Coriell. Democratic, Geo. H. Carpenter and John J. Keaney.

Second Ward—Republicans, Wm. Messerschmidt and John H. Doane. Democrats, Herbert Stover and Lewis H. Brown.

Third Ward—Republican, B. Frank Coriell and M. Marvin Dunham. Democrats, William Wright and F. M. Bacon.

Fourth Ward, First District—Republican, Abraham Angleman and Wm. Newman. Democrats, Michael R. Flynn and Vincent L. Frazee.

Fourth Ward, Second District—Republican, Franklin B. Millington and James B. Martin. Democrats, Jacob Krinsey and Timothy A. McCarthy.

The ordinance for macadamizing Sixth street from Franklin place to Richmond street, was passed on second reading, all the Councilmen voting for it.

The ordinance for macadamizing West Third street from New street to Plainfield avenue was passed on second reading, all voting aye except Councilman Frazee, who seemed to think the ordinance discriminated against his constituency. The matter was explained to him, but he voted no when the roll was called.

Councilman See moved to change the name of Richmond street to Norwood avenue. Carried.

The ordinance for macadamizing Hillside Avenue from Putnam avenue to Prospect place was passed on second reading, all voting for the measure.

The bicycle ordinance was ordered to a third reading, passed and ordered engrossed and duly advertised.

On the matter of widening Peace street, the following committee was reappointed, Messrs. Ayers, Manning and Sanford.

The Auditing Committee reported correct a long list of bills, introduced earlier in the meeting, and which, after having been read, were ordered paid.

Councilman Marsh motioned to adjourn, and suggested Aug. 15 as the date of the next meeting. Carried.

About Storage Battery Electrical Cars.

The Electrical World, in its issue of July 30, says: "Since the fight against the overhead trolley wire in our large cities has stimulated the development of the storage battery and the conduit systems great progress has recently been made in both these directions. Of these two the storage battery system has repeatedly been called the 'ideal' system by impartial and expert engineers; but such remarks have always been followed by the modifying clause that at that time there was no satisfactory battery. Progress in storage batteries is therefore, watched with interest and the lucky inventor who succeeds will reap a rich harvest."

It continues for two columns to explain the workings of several successful storage battery systems of recent invention, which overcome all the former objections to storage batteries.

A car has been running on the Woodland avenue and West Side and Cleveland street lines in Cleveland, O., for some time, and its success appears to be assured.

—The North Plainfield Township Committee will meet in Spencer's Hall tomorrow evening to consider the extension of Peace and Duer streets.

PERSONAL.

Ex-Councilman E. B. Clark and Mrs. Clark are at Belmar.

Mr. S. Hoffman has gone to Califon, Hunterdon county, N. J.

Mrs. E. C. Mulford and her two youngest daughters are at Asbury Park.

Mrs. J. F. Sheppard and Miss Sheppard of Orchard place are at Ocean Grove.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Baker of 10 West Seventh street, are at Sharon Springs, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Howard of Ninth street left town for the Summer this afternoon.

Mrs. L. M. French of Craig place, North Plainfield, left town yesterday for Chautauqua, N. Y.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of the Trinity Reformed church, at Bailey's Island, Maine.

Miss Florence Racey of Orange is visiting her aunt, Mrs. William Brock, of Mountain avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Dunn of East Seventh street are at Newfoundland, N. J., for an indefinite period.

Miss Hattie French of Craig place, North Plainfield, returned yesterday from a visit to Riverhead, L. I.

Mrs. Frederick Haberli and Miss Ida Lorton of West Fifth street are at the Wave Crest House, Ocean Grove.

Mr. E. B Day of No. 171 Central avenue started yesterday for South Hingham, Mass. He will remain until Aug. 14.

Mrs. A. M. Gillem and Miss Gillem, of Duer street, will be at Locust Farm, Bedminster, during the month of August.

Rev. Dr. Carlos Martyn, pastor of the First Reformed church, Newark, will preach in Trinity church here next Sunday.

Captain George Lalbie, "the midget" of Dunellen on his return from a visit to Rockaway Beach stopped over in this city for a few hours.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hodges of 76 New street have started for the cool seclusion of the Adirondacks, where they will spend part of August.

City Clerk Runyon is about to leave town for a two weeks' vacation in Sullivan county, New York. He expects to get away Thursday or Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Howard Leggett returned from their wedding trip last evening, and have taken possession of their new home at 104 West Front street.

Policeman Giese starts to-night for Washington, D. C., where he intends to spend the vacation. Each Summer one of the police force gets a vacation of eight days.

Maude Whitehead, infant daughter of James and Elizabeth Stanfield of No. 324 West Third street, died yesterday. The funeral services will take place on Wednesday at 2 p. m.

Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll of North Plainfield, the talented editor of The Independent, and a prominent figure in religious circles in this city, with his wife and family will enjoy the month of August at Pine Hill, New York.

A sermon delivered by Rev. Dr. William Patterson in the Crescent avenue Presbyterian church, on July 10, 1892, has been printed in pamphlet form for general distribution among the congregation. It is well worthy of preservation, a fact which might be said of about every sermon of this gifted preacher.

Mr. T. William Moore, jr., formerly of this city, who has been living in the West for the past five years is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Moore, of Fifth street and Broadway. Mr. Moore spent two years in California and the past three years in Fairhaven, Washington, one of the boom towns, where he is in the stationery business. Mr. Moore says when he first "struck" Fairhaven it was inhabited by just 399 persons. For this reason he claims to be one of the original 400.

BREVITIES

—There will be a regular meeting of the Plainfield Camera Club this evening at eight o'clock.

—The News would like to publish the list of bills ordered paid at each meeting of the Common Council, but permission to copy the bills reporters say, is denied them by City Clerk Runyon, who claims that he cannot have such list so that it can be published with the proceedings and attend to his newspaper work. The city pays him $700 salary, and reporters think that in this case amount to probably as much more. That ought surely to be enough to entitle the city to the undivided attention of the person occupying the office. The public ought to know to whom their bills are paid, and, if possible, for what purpose. If Council exercises wisdom in the payments, as it undoubtedly aims to do, it ought to have the credit, and in any event there should be every facility afforded that the fullest publicity might be given through the newspapers. The opposite course suggests a motive that is not to be found for the public interests. Prior to the days of "the combine" The News was able to get this record each month as a part of the account of the Council proceedings. Days were low. As soon as "the combine" settled into power, The News—endeavoring still to faithfully serve the best public interests—was constructed, and, as if by arrangement with "the combine" the other papers did not publish the proceedings. Efforts at each meeting, except in a misleading way. Public money was expended lavishly by Council with the favored few. Later, it required a considerable increase in taxes to pay for the "combine's" prodigality with the public funds. Then the new order of things we sought to resume publishing the list of bills ordered paid at each meeting, yet of the dozen or more meetings held this year we have been unable to obtain the list only two or three or twice to even make a list, and then only by persistent effort the following day. This Council—as in fact every one working for the public good—is intensely hating the fullest publicity given to its doings. We would gladly cooperate, but if the Council's clerk is interested in having the fullest publicity given to its doings. We would gladly cooperate, but if the Council's clerk is interested in having the fullest publicity complained of as so indistinct that it is impossible to avoid errors.

GARWOOD.

THE NEW STATION FOR A NEW TOWN IN THIS COUNTY.

Over $180,000 to be Expended Within the Next Six Months for Buildings and Machinery, and 800 Men to be Employed—The Enterprise Inaugurated by a Wide-Awake Plainfielder.

Men are busy making a clearing at Garwood, the new station between Cranford and Westfield, which is soon to be a busy hive of industry as a result of the enterprise of a popular Plainfield gentleman, Major J. C. Paul of East Fifth street, who as the President of the American Steel Wheel Co. of Boston, Mass., some months ago purchased three hundred and more acres in the place referred to, giving it the name Garwood, in honor of the treasurer of the company.

The contracts for the new buildings and machinery will aggregate about $100,000, and the buildings are to be completed within ninety days from July 1st. In view of the fact that the clearing is only now under way, this might seem considerable work in so short a time, but the buildings are to be principally of iron and steel, now being manufactured.

The wheels of this company, which are of solid steel, manufactured by a new process, have been adopted by the Reading system, the elevated roads of New York, and a number of other railroads throughout the country, and find a ready market as rapidly as they can be turned out.

The Hall Signal Company have also purchased a tract of land adjourning the Steel Company's land, and will spend about $80,000 for their plant.

Both concerns will give employment to about 800 persons, and be a valuable addition to the industries of Union county.

The Pond Machine Tool Co. of this city are supplying some of the machinery to be used.

The company have reserved twenty-five acres for another manufacturing company, which will come along later, and help increase the importance of Garwood as a manufacturing town.

The Steel Company's works when completed will have a capacity of fifty wheels per day, besides making other steel castings for railroads.

Ordered Out of Town.

Marshal Pangborn arrested James Sullivan and Annie Mason in North Plainfield at 11 o'clock last night, and they were brought up before Justice Crossley at noon to-day, each charged with indecent conduct.

Upon the woman agreeing to leave town she was released. Sullivan, however, was fined $7.50, which he paid.

The woman has been boarding with a Mrs. Wilson on Third street for several weeks.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

A Correspondent's Objections to the Trolley.

To the Editor of The News:—Will you please give the following extract from the New York Evening Post of July 29th, a place in your popular paper?

It would not be necessary to go into particulars as to the dangers of the trolley. There is nothing experimental about the system, so far as its working actually goes to life and public safety are concerned. These have been demonstrated in every instance in which the system has been used for a thickly settled community. In New York city, with its crowded streets, these perils would be greater than in any other city in the land. In Winter, with frost and sleet, the city would simply be made impassable and unbelievable shortage the lines were stretched. We have tried the experiment of overhead electric-lighting wires, and have been so unanimously convinced of their deadly character that we have forced the placing of them under ground. All these wires were stretched on poles upon the sides of the streets mainly, crossing them only at intervals. The trolley system involves the erection of poles upon both sides of the street, the stringing of transverse wires between them, and the stringing of other wires longitudinally upon the transverse wires, making a complete network of wires above the street through which the road passes. No ladder can be raised in the street without hitting them, and in case of sleet the whole network may break down and fall into the roadway, carrying death to every person and animal that touches it, and possible conflagration to the buildings along the line.

One wonders that property owners should should submit to the destruction of fine thoroughfares, which were made at so much expense, notably, Front street and Grant avenue.

Apart from the dangers of the trolley, the car tracks now stand too high above the roadway, which if left rough on both sides, are a menace to any wheels, and even bicyclists may expect their share of accidents. A Resident.

THE FIRST LEGISLATURE.

Last Winter the Legislature appointed Senator Fred C Marsh, of Elizabeth, Senator Michael Barrett, of Newark, Assemblymen Ketchum, of Newark, Wright, of Bergen county and Wilson, of Warren, to proceed to Atlantic Highlands during the year and take testimony as to where the last legislative body met during the colonial times.

It appears that old documents which have laid dormant some two hundred years have been discovered in an old box in the secretary's office at Freehold, where are found most of the laws passed by the legislative body under the Royal Governors. Their sessions were held in 1667 at Portland Poynt and Portland Rights, these now being none other than where stands Atlantic Highland and the Highlands of Navesink.

Mayor Leonard, who was born near the Highlands has taken a deep interest in this movement, having caused many researches to be made at Albany, Trenton, Amboy, Elizabeth and at the Historical Society rooms of both New York and New Jersey. He is a man of broad views and of advanced ideas, and proposes, if the Legislative Committee decide that the evidence produced is convincing, that the first legislative body met at Atlantic Highlands to cause a monument to be erected on the top of the Highlands which will be visible to the naked eye miles at sea. In fact, it will be the first thing seen by passengers entering the port of New York, and the last seen on the outgoing steamers. He is supported here by leading citizens, among whom are Judge Edward Hooper, Postmaster James B. Leonard, S. B. Thorp, Chancellor John E. Foster, Col. Stewart and others.

Ex-Gov. Joel Parker (deceased) as far back as 1873, delivered an address before the Historical Society of the State of New Jersey on the subject. It was on May 10, at Newark, he said:

"In June 1667 a legislative body, composed of the deputies from Middleton, Shrewsbury and Portland Poynt now called the Highlands of Navesink. This was the first legislative body that assembled in New Jersey. They met a year before the Governor and Council, the representatives of the other towns of the province assembled at Elizabethtown. It was organized under the broad authority of the Nicholls patent, and continued to meet at Portland Poynt as a body distinct from and independent of the proprietary government for many years.

The records of this Legislature have been preserved. It appears to have been a law-making body, a court and a Board of Land Proprietors combined, and was designated in its proceedings as the "The General Assembly of the Patentees and Deputies."

For years Elizabeth has been considered the place where the first legislative body met, while Amboy has held claim to the same under Carteret's time. The Legislative Committee will now do, to an opportunity to settle the disputed question.

Some of the laws passed by this Legislative body at Portland Poynt in 1668 was as follows:

General Assembly held at Portland Poynt, Nov. 13, 1668, enacted that, in consideration of the inconveniences that do arise for the want of an ordinary in every town within this providence, it is ordered that every town shall provide an ordinary for the relief and entertainment of strangers, provided that the inhabitants refuse to have it, then upon the secretary, and oblige himself to make sufficient provision of meat, drink and lodging for strangers. And for neglect hereof in any of the towns that they shall forfeit 40 shillings for every month, and that none shall retail drinks of what sort soever, under the quantity of two gallons, under the penalty of 10 shillings fine for every such default.

All the old books and documents found by Mr. Stanfield will be brought before the committee, together with several of the historians of Monmouth county, and the time and the proceedings will therefore be of a most important and interesting nature. It will be read throughout the State with deep interest by the public. The first settlers went from Gravesend, L. I., having purchased the bay in a small sloop commanded by one Captain Elsworth. They were driven by storms and perhaps by their lands from three tribes of Indians, viz., the Newersunks and the Navertunks and the Porterpecks.

MESSENGER BOYS STRIKE.

One Hundred and Fifteen go Out and Take Possession of New Street.

New York, Aug. 2d. (Special.)—Intense excitement prevailed this morning in New street, between Wall street and Exchange place, in front of the entrance to the New York Stock Exchange. One hundred and fifteen messenger boys of the American District Telegraph Company were on strike. This comprises practically the entire force of the office located in the basement of 9 New street.

The striking boys for several hours ran New street as they pleased.

They posted pickets and appointed advisory committees.

A big crowd of brokers gathered on the steps of the Stock Exchange and enjoyed the fun.

The manager of the office at 9 New street, late in the morning, somehow succeeded in getting a few substitutes and sent out some messages.

One of these scabs, as the strikers at once termed them, started with half a dozen messengers.

A picket who had been watching pounced upon him, and a pitched battle ensued. The so-called scab was a pinky little fellow and fought hard.

A policeman heard the row and came upon the fighters just in time. He arrested the picket, amid the jeers of the strikers.

BAUER AND KNOLD BAILED.

They Were Held in $5,000 Each by Judge Ewing This Morning.

Paterson, Aug. 2. (Special.)—Anarchists Bauer and Knold were to-day held to bail in $5,000 each by Judge Ewing in the Criminal Court. The men are charged with being accessories before and after the attempted assassination of H. C. Frick.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Catch on, hold fast and hustle.

The peach crop is reported short this summer, but there is no manner of doubt that the dealers will make the most out of it.

"Death before work!" cried Hermann Pfannenstiel, a Russian Jew, when his wife refused to support him any longer, and he took paris green; but a doctor came quick and pumped him out and saved his life. What a pity Pfannenstiel was pumped out!

It is now certain that the Cramps at their Philadelphia shipyard, are soon to begin the construction of four ocean steamers of the first class, to be American built in every particular and of a style like that of the City of Paris and City of New York.

A clockmaker of Warsaw has been six years working on a clock which he intends to exhibit at the World's fair in Chicago. It is as wonderful as the clock in the cathedral at Strasburg. It represents a complete railway station, with moving trains, telegraphers, porters, passengers and a ticket office. Every quarter hour all these wake to life. A bell rings, the engine whistles and the train moves off after the passengers have gone aboard, and all subsides into stillness until the next quarter hour.

Don't Talk Personalities.

If you are in the company of a cultivated, intellectual person and cannot talk of anything but mere personalities, go and drum on the window with your fingers, twirl your thumbs, or excuse yourself and get away, but keep your mouth shut. Don't under any consideration give it away that you are a shallow, ignorant fool. For if you undertake to talk with this person about how late such an individual sits up at night, how nearly of an age the Jobson babies are, how Susan Jones sleeps on a folding bed in the parlor, how Miss Snifkin dyes her hair, how Bodkin and his wife quarrel, how many meals a day you eat and what you like, how Tom Smith's pug dog killed Wash. Brown's cat, how they do say that Widower Hodge is going to marry the schoolmistress and his wife not dead a year yet—if you undertake to pour out this unspeakable rubbish on the cultivated, intellectual person, he will vote you the most frightful bore he ever met in his life, as well as the most ill bred bore. He will get away from you as he would from a begging book agent and never come near you again.

If you cannot talk of poetry, of literature, of music or art; if you know nothing at all of the mighty social, economic and political questions with which our generation wrestles, or of the wonderful scientific and psychological discoveries of the time, or of anything else than the age of Sally Jones' first child, go and learn something of them, or if you can't do that, go and drown yourself.

The Parreligious Congress.

One of the most important and impressive of all the international conventions to be held at Chicago during the World's fair will be the congress of all religions. One hundred of the most eminent preachers of Europe and America constitute its advisory council. Leading scholars and representatives of the world's great modern historic faiths will be there to expound their own special theology. The Christian divine, Protestant and Catholic, will shake hands with the follower of Confucius, with Buddhist, Brahman, Parsee and Mohammedan. The Jew will meet the heathen, the Turk with the priests of the Greek church who persecute him, and will have as fair a show as they in this universal debating ground. How they all will argue, to be sure! It is not stated that consecutors and agnostics, like Colonel Ingersoll and ex-Senator Ingalls, will be welcomed, or that invitations will be extended to the followers of the late Madame Blavatsky, but it may be that pan religion is broad enough to cover even these.

At any rate, all non-Christians except these are already invited. Each learned representative of other religions than ours will be asked to lay before the convention the leading tenets of faith that constitute his theology. Especially will he be asked to say what universal truth and idea of the heart of his religion, and what contribution it has brought to the progress of mankind.

The comparative study of religions is now a main object of attention to the most eminent students of theology the world over. They are bringing these faiths together, examining them critically and searching to find how much agreement there is between them. This will be the universal truth, dwelling in the hearts of mankind in all ages and nations be reached. It is beginning to be more and more believed by the most learned Christian scholars that each great historic faith, as it came and went, had its own message to deliver to the people to whom it was sent. And in turn did its work and passed, or is passing.

Christianity overtops them all when it is lived up to, because it is the religion of love and good will among mankind. But is it lived up to?

TO POSTPONE THE VOTE

A Democratic Caucus on the Appropriation for the Fair

DECIDES TO PUT IT OFF TILL FALL

The Minority Threatens to Rote and Continue the Deadlock—The Sundry Civil Appropriations Extended After a Hot Wrangle in the House.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—The scenes in the house were less monotonous than for a week past, the debate on the resolution extending the appropriations until Aug. 4 for certain branches of the public service being at times quite personal. Mr. Hopkins, of Illinois, who is an ardent advocate of the fair appropriation, in fact is for a large share of it, and for objecting to the resolution on Saturday, which closed the government printing office and other branches of the public service. Mr. Holman, of Indiana; Mr. McCreary, of Kentucky; Mr. Cummings, of New York, and Mr. McMillan, of Tennessee, said the World's fair advocates had blocked the wheels of legislation because $5,000,000 was refused them.

Mr. Cummings said: "Mr. Speaker, the wheels of the government were stopped by the objection of the Republican member from Illinois (Mr. Hopkins). It is well that the employees of the government now in the galleries should understand that that objection, and that alone, has stopped the wheels of the government and the provisions of the last sundry civil bill have been extended once. Why did not the gentleman object to it then? He objects to it now because he has the Chicago exposure in the public treasury and wants to rake $5,000,000 from it. The object is to force this house to allow this money to be taken under pressure. (Applause on the Democratic side.)

"And the gentleman from Maine (Mr. Reed) is the lieutenant of the gentleman from Illinois. With the ferocity of a Marat we have seen him kick the bones of a dead colleague from his path for the purpose of trying to secure—I will not say steal—this appropriation (applause on the Democratic side), and these are the men that have the impudence to turn to a party which in this house has given thirty-three majority against the bill of the treasury, and charge it with blocking the wheels of the government."

Mr. Reed, of Maine; Mr. Bingham, of Pennsylvania, and Mr. Hopkins, of Illinois, denied the impeachment. The Democratic majority were responsible for the situation and they had should maintain a quorum here for that purpose.

Reed Attacks Holman.

Mr. Reed said: "Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Holman) has afforded us an example of natural unconsciousness of age which enables him to face unflinchingly a situation of this kind. With a Democratic majority of more than 100 of which he is the titular leader, the house of representatives has stopped the business of this government, and now he is endeavoring to put it upon somebody else. (Laughter.) He himself has led, if not overtly, covertly, this rebellion against this good government to prevent the legislation of the country from taking place. Now let us see what that legislation is.

"It is legislation which has not only received the sanction of the senate of the United States, but so far as the point complained of is concerned it has received its unanimous sanction; for if it be true, as the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Holman) says, that this provision is on the bill against the rules of the senate, it must be there because every Democratic senator on the floor consented to that transaction. It therefore comes here not only with the sanction of the senate, but with the sanction of every Democrat in it.

"Farther than that, it has the sanction of a Democratic house of representatives with 140 majority, and there is nothing urged against it except the miserable technicality that some of these gentlemen think it ought not to be on an appropriation bill. And the gentleman from Indiana was the leader in breaking down the admission into appropriation bills of items which repealed existing legislation. And yet he has the courage to stand up before this house and before the country and charge his own action to other men—charge in a house with 140 Democratic majority the stopping of the public business to a member of the minority.

"I do not wonder he has a long career. Courage like that would carry a man through a dozen lives. [Laughter and applause.] One hundred and forty Democratic majority—three to one—and the bill having the sanction of both houses—of every Democrat in the senate and of Democrats enough in the house to make a majority here and now. And yet the business of the country is to be stopped and somebody else is charged with the crime." [Applause on the Republican side.]

The Sundry Civil Bill Extended.

The resolution was passed and also the following measures: Resolutions granting the use of the rotunda of the Capitol to the ladies of Washington for a reception to the G. A. R.; changing the time for dedicating the World's fair buildings from Oct. 12 to Oct. 21; to authorize the secretary of war to convey to School District No. 12, Kittery, Me., a portion of the Fort McClary military reservation in exchange for other lands.

Mr. Holman, of Indiana, moved to pass a resolution appropriating $50,000 for the sufferers from the overflow of the Ouachita and Black rivers, Louisiana, but after several roll calls, with no quorum appearing, the house resumed its normal inactivity and finally adjourned.

The senate did practically nothing but await the action of the house on the sundry civil bill. It assented readily to the house proposition to continue existing appropriations for four days longer, and Mr. Hawley, of Connecticut, and Mr. Hiscock, of New York, spoke on the question of the tariff.

A CAUCUS ON THE FAIR GRANT.

A Motion to Postpone the Vote Till December Carried.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—A Democratic caucus was held in the house to endeavor to effect an agreement by which the present deadlock on the World's fair appropriation clause in the sundry civil bill could be broken and a speedy adjournment be brought about. There were about 160 members present, with Representative Holman in the chair.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Montcher, of Pennsylvania, which in effect was that there should be a vote on a separate World's fair bill making an appropriation of $5,000,000 in aid of the World's fair on the first Wednesday in December next, after six hours' debate, and that only three amendments thereto shall be in order. The resolution further provided that the house should insist on its disagreement to the senate amendment to the sundry civil bill and also that the Dockery subcommittee of the committee on appropriations should be continued during the recess, with power to visit Chicago, investigate the financial condition of the fair and report at the opening of the next session of congress as to the necessity for government aid.

A vote upon the Montcher resolution resulted in its favor by a vote of 69 to 31.

Representative McCann, of Illinois, said after the caucus had adjourned that the supporters of the World's fair appropriation would continue to press their cause until congress expired by limitation of law on March 4 next. They would continue to insist on carrying out the will of the majority. Representative Durborrow agreed with the sentiments expressed by his colleague.

If this programme be carried out the caucus will have accomplished nothing beyond substituting the friends of the World's fair appropriation in the place of its opponents as filibusterers.

Watson's Charges.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—Before the special investigating committee of the house half a dozen witnesses, including Representatives Patterson, of Tennessee; Bryant, of Indiana, and Meyer, of Louisiana; Clark Peyton Wise, of Virginia, of the house commerce committee; Delegate Smith, of Arizona, and Solicitor Maynard, of the treasury, identified that Representative Cobb, of Alabama, was sober at the time he spoke in the Noyes-Rockwell contest, on which occasion, it is alleged by Representative Watson, of Georgia, Mr. Cobb was intoxicated.

Other members had previously testified before the committee that they saw Judge Cobb drink whisky at a stop on the occasion referred to and that they considered him under the influence of liquor.

Mr. Watson made a statement to the effect that he was satisfied with the investigation, as it had proved that his charges were true, and that he did not intend to make the charge of drunkenness generally against the house, but only against individuals.

Approved by the President.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—The president approved the joint resolution of congress extending four days the provision of last year's sundry civil appropriation; also the bill making eight hours a legal day's work on all public works.

FASHIONS

Styles in Stationery.

Highly-colored stationery, with ragged edges and of huge dimensions is very bad form. Gilt-edged paper, or that which is stamped with birds or flowers in one corner, is hopelessly vulgar. The most correct note paper is that which folds once and slips in a square envelope. Milk, cream and faint shades of blue are the only tints allowed by fashion and refinement. Chocolate, pink, green and yellow are decidedly tabooed. The square correspondence card is no longer in usage, and nothing is more vulgar than to use a calling card for a note. Unruled paper is always selected, and the texture may be as thick as your purse permits. Monogrames are passable, but of crests one should be wary, as they are prone to provoke smiles whenever one's grandfather is remembered. If you seal your letters use scarlet, dark blue or green wax in preference to the lighter colors.—Roseleaf.

Toilet Hints.

Lanoline is one of the best skin softeners; in its crude state it was known to the ancient Egyptians, and Cleopatra, who was an adept in the arts of toilet, is said to have anointed her face with an unguent made of lanoline or sheep's wool fat, the fat nearest the skin being used for this purpose.

A quart of milk in which the juice of three mandarin oranges has been squeezed is said to be a refreshing lotion for the complexion.

Eating quantities of oranges is an excellent means of ensuring a muddy skin before breakfast is the best time, and one may indulge in as many as is agreeable.

IAMS BEGINS HIS SUITS.

SIXTY STRIKERS RETURN TO WORK.

Superintendent Potter Says He Is Getting More Men Than He Wants—It Begins to Look as Though the Backbone of the Strike Was Broken.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 2.—H. C. Frick is still improving. He is able to do considerable walking now.

Berner and Knold, the anarchists, will appear before the court today and ask for bail. Mollick, brought here from Long Branch, N. J., will be heard afterward. Everything points to his release, the police having detened nothing on him except the remittance of money to Berkman, and this, he claims, was in payment of a debt. Chief Murphy, of Allegheny, has set his police to watch every anarchist's house in his city and more arrests are promised. Murphy has captured the books of Group No. 8, of Allegheny, which gives a list of members, the secretaries and amount of money on hand. It is intended to fix upon Bauer the guilt of pointing out Frick's office to Berkman.

Iams Begins His Suits.

Ex-Private Iams has begun the various suits against those whom he claims wronged him and injured his good name, and has made informations before Alderman Riley upon General Sewell Hawkins, Lieutenant Colonel Streator and Assistant Surgeon W. D. Grim and officers unknown, charging them with assault and battery and assault and battery. Warrants were issued and placed in the hands of constables. A civil suit will also be brought for damages, and Iams' attorneys feel confident of securing heavy damages for their client and also of convicting the defendants.

COLONEL STREATOR.

The Strike Looks Like a Failure.

Homestead striking steel workers are considerably agitated. They have satisfied themselves of the correctness of Superintendent Potter's statement that a number of former employees have returned to work. This evidence of weakening on the part of men who have loudly proclaimed their loyalty to the Amalgamated association worries the members of that organization, and the strikers are discussing the situation with much animation. Provost Marshal Mechling, fearing the break in the ranks of the strikers would lead to trouble, doubled the guard around the mill and in the streets adjacent thereto.

That the backbone of the strike has been broken is acknowledged by every one save the members of the advisory committee and the more rabid anarchists. Superintendent Potter said to a United Press reporter: "Altogether sixty of our former employees have returned to work, and we have been informed that many more will make application for their old places. Twenty-seven of our old men came in the last batch. Everything runs as it has been found their places still open, but the others, I am sorry to say, were disappointed, but while they cannot step into their positions they gave up a month ago, these men will be given work.

The Old Hands Wanted Back.

"I feel sorry for the majority of the strikers, who were led into this trouble by those in whom they had such implicit confidence, but when we announced that none of our new men would be discharged to make room for the old hands who refused to return to work within the time specified we meant exactly what we said. The strikers who have come in these days will not be asked to eat at sleep in the mill.

"They will continue to occupy their Homestead residences and will be given ample protection. Many of the recent arrivals from the east have applied for houses and will bring their families here soon. We got in over 100 cots today and nearly as many men arrived from distant points.

"I sent word to the Pittsburg office today that we were getting in too many men by rail and water. We have in the neighborhood of 1,200 here now, many of whom are skilled mechanics. We will after tomorrow relax our efforts to secure workmen in order to give our former employees who were led into this trouble the opportunity of coming to get back. Naturally we prefer them to green hands.

"There is no longer any doubt about it—the Amalgamated association has lost the fight, and from this time on the Carnegie Steel company will operate its Homestead plant with nonunion men."

What the Men Say.

The advisory board of the strikers gave the following official statement to the United Press: But two Homestead men went to work today. One was Edward Lyon, brother of United States District Attorney Lyon, of Pittsburg. The other was Charles Geotel, a member of the Homestead school board, who will be deposed. There are less than 300 men in the mill. One hundred are tramps.

Hugh O'Donnell is expected back this week.

MARS NEAR OLD EARTH.

The Planet Is Now Only 35,000,000 Miles Away.

ASTRONOMERS ON THE LOOKOUT.

The Big Lick Telescope Trained on the Brilliant Beauty in Search of New Facts—The Planet May Be Inhabited and Indications of Life May Be Found.

LICK OBSERVATORY, Aug. 2.—The astronomers here are eagerly waiting for Wednesday night, when Mars will be in opposition to the sun, in order to confirm their observations made during the last month. The planet is closer to us now than at any time since August fifteen years ago, when Professor Hall, of Washington, first discovered the satellites, and it will not furnish as good opportunities for observation again till 1909.

During July the Mount Hamilton astronomers have been observing Mars two hours each night, when the planet is on the meridian, and they will continue these observations throughout August. The highest magnifying power practicable has been 700 diameters, the equivalent distance of the planet being 50,000 miles. Mars is now very low in the sky, and when on the meridian is only 31 degs. above the horizon. For this reason the markings are very difficult to see, the atmospheric disturbances being so great.

With the low altitude, the planet's unsteadiness, due to the atmosphere, causes all the markings at times to disappear. The two satellites, the two smallest objects known in the solar system, are just visible to an observer with the 36-inch telescope, when he knows exactly where to look for them.

They are conspicuous objects in the 36-inch telescope, and have been seen by all astronomers to believe that they are composed of snow and ice. The south polar cap diminishes accordingly as summer in that hemisphere comes on, and increases with the advent of winter. At the present time there are numerous dark markings within this polar cap, as if there were large areas from which the snow had disappeared. These markings have not been seen before at any observatory.

The region on the surface known as the Lacus Solis is now seen nearly as it appeared through the 36-inch telescope during the opposition of 1890, and very different from its appearance as shown in the drawings of Schiaparelli. The Fons Juventatis (fountain of youth), a large, dark region heretofore seen single, now appears double through the large refractor.

But most remarkable of all the observed phenomena are three or more very prominent bright projections on the southwest limb of Mars, visible for several nights for a short time each evening about three weeks ago. They will probably be visible on the southwest limb in about two or three weeks, when it is hoped to determine more fully their character.

Apparently these projections arise from very bright regions on the planet. Whether they are real mountains or are due to some other phenomena it is now impossible to say. Up to the present time Schiaparelli's canals have not been seen double. Drawing of the planet are made on each clear evening. These drawings will finally be converted into a single map at the close of the summer observations.

Is the Planet Inhabited?

Last night on the south polar cap very complex and numerous dark markings were visible. The unique spectacle of markings on the snowcaps has been noted not only with the large telescope, but also with the 12-inch by. Barnard, who some time ago observed that on one night a dark streak would appear across the polar cap, and then would follow a separation, and then the disappearance of a large portion of the polar cap, leaving two white spots.

Among astronomers there was great curiosity to know what the big Lick telescope would accompish in the observation of Mars' diminutive satellites. Nothing had been added to the world's knowledge of them for fifteen years until now, when the great telescope has made clear their phases and defined their dimensions, an achievement which marks an epoch in astronomy. Just before Hall's discovery the great equatorial telescope of the Washington observatory had been completed, and it was through this that the discovery was made. Since then the Lick telescope, greater than all, has been erected, and is having its first chance at Mars under the most favorable conditions.

Schiaparelli's romantic theory of gemitated canals has already been disproved, but any sight may bring into view objects even more indicative of the belief that the planet is inhabited. It is this possibility of great discoveries that keeps the thoughts of astronomers the world around turned toward Mount Hamilton.

A SENSATIONAL ELOPEMENT.

Miss Tinley's Mother Hastened What She Sought to Prevent.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 2.—The guests of the prominent hotels here have been greatly excited over the sensational elopement of Miss Mabel Tinley, the belle of the Hotel Brunswick, with Richard W. Roelofs, who was until lately a night clerk in the Philadelphia general postoffice. Miss Tinley is the daughter of the late J. W. Tinley, who was for many years a partner of W. B. Kempter in a large drygoods house in Philadelphia. The residence of the Tinley family is at 226 South Broad street.

Roelofs has been paying attention to Mabel for nearly a year, and followed her here in spite of the objections of her mother, who was strongly opposed to the attachment between them. On Saturday evening, while a ball was in progress at the Hotel Brunswick, Miss Tinley went out on the balcony with her partner, a Mr. Boose. Roelofs came up to them and had some angry words with the girl. The misunderstanding was soon cleared up, however, when Roelofs learned that the girl's mother had secured possession of and thrown into the street a bouquet he had sent Mabel to wear at the ball.

Mrs. Tinley learned of this meeting on the balcony, and at the dinner table yesterday she reproved her daughter, saying: "I do not want you ever to see that man again."

Mabel indignantly answered: "If you talk to me in that way in the presence of all these people I shall marry him before 6 o'clock."

Then she burst into tears and hurried out of the room. She sent word to Roelofs to meet her, and between 2 and 3 o'clock Mabel came down stairs, said goodby, met Roelofs outside, and the couple went with Miss Sophie Oldmixon to Rev. Dr. Frank Chandler's residence, where they were married. They took the first train to Point Pleasant and registered at the Resort House. Mabel at once wrote her mother imploring forgiveness.

Mrs. Tinley wired back she would receive her daughter, but not with Roelofs, who could never enter her doors. No reply has been received from Mabel, and Mrs. Tinley keeps to her room, almost broken hearted and hoping for her daughter's return.

HARRISON'S ACCEPTANCE.

His Letter Will Be Ready About the Middle of the Month.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—President Harrison has not yet written a word of his letter accepting the nomination of the Republican national convention. He will not make even the first draft of the letter until congress has adjourned and he has gone to join Mrs. Harrison at Loon Lake in the Adirondacks.

The president has talked confidentially with quite a number of prominent Republicans in the past month, and from these conversations and from careful reading of the Minneapolis platform his ideas have taken quite definite form, and it will not be difficult for him to give them expression when once he finds opportunity to write the letter.

The usual pressure of business which always attends the closing weeks of a session of congress has made it impossible for the president to write the letter here. He hopes to have the letter ready between Aug. 15 and 20.

Michigan's Special Session.

Surrendering at Discretion.

"Tommy, how did you get the back of your neck all sunburned?"

"Pullin weeds in the garden."

"Bust your hair is all wet, my son."

"That's jiberal pullon."

"Your vest is on wrong side out too."

"Put it on that way a-purpose."

"And how come it happen, Tommy dear, that you're got Jakey Du Bois' trousers on?"

(After a long pause.) "Mother, I cannot tell a lie. I've been a-swimmin."—Chicago Tribune.

So Nice of Her!

Captain Muffet—May I venture to hope that you will give me a waltz or quadrille?

Lady Sparker—Oh, I'm so sorry! I'm engaged for every dance. I'm engaged also for supper twice, but I promise you faithfully you shall have my third glass of lemonade!—Du Maurier in Punch.

ALICE WEEPS ON FREDA'S GRAVE.

Then Miss Mitchell Is Taken to Her Insane Asylum Home.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 2.—Alice Mitchell was taken to the insane asylum at Bolivar, Tenn., at 5 o'clock. Previous to her departure she expressed a desire to visit Elmwood cemetery and view the grave of her victim, Freda Ward. Her request was granted, and in company with her father and mother, under guard of the sheriff, she was driven to the cemetery. She displayed great emotion, and as she gazed upon the little mound of earth tears flowed in profusion.

Before leaving she gathered a handful of flowers from the grave, which she seemed to treasure and which she pressed to her bosom and carried them with her to her secluded home at the asylum. Her father and mother were her companions to Bolivar, where she was conveyed under escort of a deputy sheriff.

SOME ODD STORIES.

INTERESTING INCIDENTS RELATED BY MAJOR ALFRED R. CALHOUN.

A Story of the Horrors of Solitary Confinement at Cherry Hill Penitentiary. Silas Harding Lived for Fifty Years in the Halls of Silence.

Silas Harding, known for a generation as "the oldest prisoner in the Cherry Hill penitentiary," died recently "under peculiar circumstances," the Philadelphia papers said.

But to begin at the beginning.

Forty years ago Silas Harding was one of the most skillful machinists in the land, and those who knew him best prophesied that one day he would own shops of his own and be a leading figure in the world of invention and mechanics.

At the age of twenty-five he became engaged to a girl, whom, loverlike, he believed to be the most perfect being under the sun, but those who had known her longer than he thought her as shallow and heartless as she was beautiful, and that was saying much. Her father was a mechanical draftsman, who was well content that his daughter should make a marriage that was so full of promise.

THEY SAW SILAS HARDING DEAD.

Naturally Silas Harding was not inclined to be jealous. His mind was too busy and too full to be too strong for that. But as in the summer lands of the south destructive storms suddenly form and sweep down on a smiling landscape from a sky which one hour before was cloudless, so the young mechanic's peace was broken into by a storm that in one day wrecked his whole life.

That the woman loved him or was capable of loving any one but her own shallow and selfish self, was very doubtful. On the streets it was said that she courted attention, but Silas Harding, busy through all the working hours in his shop, did not know it. But he was not destined to remain in ignorance.

Long before the young man discovered for himself her perfidy all his friends were aware of it, and pitied him or laughed at him for his blindness. They knew that the woman was and had been receiving the attentions of one of the most noted gamblers and politicians in the city.

As length this came to Silas Harding's ears. He was told that on a night when it was expected that he would be in Baltimore—it was the night before the day fixed for their wedding—the woman to whom he was betrothed would be found supping with the other men and women of the gambler's stamp in that person's back parlor apartments.

Silas Harding did not go to Baltimore. He called at the girl's home that night and found her out—where her parents did not know. Suspicion now became certainty. The young man was insane. He went back to his own room, for the first time in his life put a pistol in his pocket and hurried from the place.

The friends who had informed him of his betrothed's infidelity guided him to the quarters of the gambler. There were lights burning in the splendid apartments, for the gambler was rich, and as Silas Harding stood on the pavement looking up he heard the sound of music and laughter, and he thought he recognized her voice.

Maddened by jealousy and a righteous indignation, he bounded up the stairs. A dance was in progress. He saw the woman who was to have been his wife on the mercow whirling about the room in the arms of the bediamonded ruffian.

Accounts varied as to what followed, but all are agreed that the woman was dead, killed by her betrothed, the owner's jury said; and Silas Harding and the man who had blasted his life were seriously wounded.

When Harding fired, the gambler fired also, and the lawyer who defended the mechanic sought to prove, and many claimed did prove, that it was the gambler's pistol that killed the woman, who had thrown herself on Harding's arm that the other might escape.

Silas Harding was tried, found guilty of murder and sentenced to be hanged. Subsequently the sentence was commuted to imprisonment for life. And so while the man who had ruined him and got well was prospering on the turf and in politics, the young mechanic was taken to the Halls of Silence in the Cherry Hill penitentiary, and the law and justice were satisfied.

The gallows would have been a mercy compared with the life that Silas Harding now led in his solitary cell. Except the preacher's and the keeper's he never heard the sound of a human voice. Now and then he caught a glimpse of a fellow mute, but beyond that each day was a living death.

The light came and went, and it told him of the flight of unnamed and unnumbered days. It grew cold, and they threw him in heavier clothing and blankets. It grew hot, and he got lighter clothing, and he marked the flight of the seasons by his change of clothes.

At times he caught a glimpse of the blue sky overhead, and one day a butterfly flew into his cell, but beyond that he saw neither bird nor flower nor living thing outside the persons named.

His mother came to him regularly on the days when visitors were admitted, and he noted that her hair grew whiter and her form more bowed, till the visits ceased and he knew she was dead, and he prayed to be beside her.

His brother came to see him, and as the years rolled on, unmarked by incident or event, save the awful routine in the Halls of Silence, Silas Harding saw his brother changing from sturdy middle age to tottering senility, till his visits ceased and then the prisoner knew that he was alone and that his name had passed from the memory of the busy outside world.

Fifty years! Merciful heaven, what years they were! And the man whose deeds had blasted Silas Harding's life and whose perjury had sent him to the penitentiary died, and the lawyer who had charge of his papers found a codicil to his will by which he acknowledged that it was his shot, intended for Harding, that killed the woman.

Then some good men looked into the case and presented it to the board of pardons—an institution peculiar to Pennsylvania—and after due deliberation the governor signed their report, and the gates of the Halls of Silence swung open, and Silas Harding, aged seventy-six, passed out and again stood "a free man" under God's sun.

A free man? No, not he—was not free nor a man! The shadow of the prison kept with him. It had become his home and he could not live outside it, not even in a palace. But they did not offer him a palace. Weak, bowed, gray haired, dim eyed, almost imbecile, what use had he for the world or the world for him? That pardon was powerless to roll back the fifty years of wrong and restore him to his manhood.

He was arrested as a homeless, friend less vagrant and consigned to the machine charity of the county almshouse. And the keepers—think of it, good Christians all—punished him for rallenness, because he refused to speak!

One day he stole from the almshouse and made his way over the river, and he pounded with his stick on the gates of the penitentiary and prayed to be taken back to the cell in which he had spent all of the life that he could recall.

They turned him away, but he stole back again that night and lay down before the gates. And when the keepers looked out in the morning they saw Silas Harding dead at the entrance to the Halls of Silence. He had taken his case to a higher court, and stood in the presence of him who has said, "Vengeance is mine. I will repay!"

A Druggist's Story.

I deliberately chose my calling and studied for it, so that I have nothing against the profession to which my life must henceforth be devoted. But, sir, I believe that my clerks, particularly in the large cities, are the hardest worked, poorest paid and least appreciated people in the community.

In our keeping even more than in that of the doctors who prescribe is the public health. We must keep our brains clear and be ready to fill a prescription when called from our beds at 2 o'clock in the morning as accurately as at high noon.

Some time ago I was myself under the weather. The hard work was telling on me and I was threatened with insomnia and fever. One midnight, while I was in this condition, I was rung up, and with tottering steps and a reeling brain I made my way down to the store.

I found a boy awaiting me, from a house near by, with a prescription calling for a number of half grain morphine powders. The doctor who wrote the prescription was a friend of mine and a very careful man. The powders were for an old gentleman who had been ailing for some time, and I knew they were intended to induce sleep. I filled the prescription, properly as I thought, and when the boy left I returned to bed. As I could not rest, I was up early and down stairs.

Talk of dream I recalled the morphine prescription. I read it over; yes, the powders were to be one-half grain each, taken as directed.

I looked at the scales; they had not been touched since I handled them, but I was frozen with horror when I saw that there was a ten grain weight on one side. I had given the man enough morphine to kill a dozen men, for there were four powders.

It is impossible to describe the tortures that followed. I felt that I had committed an unpremeditated murder. I shrank at the sound of every footstep, and shuddered when any one entered the store.

About 9 o'clock my friend, Dr. Rupert, came in with a very sad face, and in answer to my inquiry as to the health of Mr. Wheeler, the man for whom the medicine had been prescribed, he said:

"The man died."

"My God!" I gasped.

"Oh," said the doctor, "I fully expected it. The morphine was simply intended to ease him off."

"But did he take it?"

"No, by the time the boy got back with the medicine the old man was dead."

Language is all too weak to picture my joy on learning this.

I kept my secret to myself and secured the powders as soon as possible. From that day to this I never make up a prescription when my hand is not steady, and my brain clear.

Tears and Valor.

As is well known, the late General Sherman was a man of the strictest, and even during the war, whenever he was in a position to see a play, good, bad or indifferent, he availed himself of it.

While he was in command at Memphis in the winter of 1862-3, a theatrical company from the north applied for permission to play in the town between Cairo and Memphis, and it was granted.

This company was above the average, and it was well patronized while in Memphis, the general being present nearly every night, and laughing and applauding in that hearty, wholesome way that was so peculiar to him.

One night the company played Kotzebue's "Stranger," and during one of the most pathetic scenes a staff officer, seated by General Sherman, touched him and whispered:

"Well, what of him?" asked the general. "He is crying," chuckled the officer.

"Crying, eh?"

"Yes, sir; blubbering like a boy." laughed the officer.

General Sherman looked the man full in the eye and said, with an oath that did not sound like profanity:

"There are times, sir, when tears become the honest man, and I think this is one of them. Hereafter I shall watch Captain L——, for I am now sure that he is a kind hearted man, and such a man will show himself to be the most fearless soldier when the time comes."

And, as usual, the general was right.

Interesting Superstitions.

Children in the south have some very interesting superstitions.

For instance, in making a wish which they are anxious to have come true they pick up a stone that is imbedded in the ground, spit on the underside and replace it, being careful to fit it in just as it was. By so doing they think they will "get their wish."

The same method is used for curing toothache, but first the gum around the tooth is pricked until it bleeds. Warts also are cured in this way.

They believe that a tooth that is extracted should always be buried, otherwise the coming one will be a dog's tooth.

MATTER FOR HOME-LOVERS.

PRACTICAL INFORMATION AND WELL TRIED RECIPES.

Experiences of Other Women Carefully Gathered—You can Learn from This Column How to Make Home Happy, Though Married.

"Cook your water as you do your food," is the advice of a well-known physician. This is really not difficult to manage if the affair is systematized, and when properly filtered and aerated boiled water is as bright, sparkling and agreeable to the taste as any other. There are filters that come especially for aerating water as well as filtering it, and if accustomed to fill the filter regularly the daily purification of water in this way becomes as much a part of the household machinery as the cooking, and one has always the satisfactory knowledge that water prepared in this way is perfectly safe. It must be borne in mind, however, that the temperature of water just brought to a boil is not sufficient to destroy bacteria; thirty minutes steady boiling is the rule.

COOKING DRIED FRUITS.

If this Advice is Followed, Delicious Conserves will Result.

A common mistake made in cooking dried fruits, which has rendered them justly unpopular, is to soak them a few hours and boil them up rapidly and consider them ready for the table when they are cooked. As a matter of fact the preparation of dried fruit for the table is one of the slowest of processes. The fruit should be washed and soaked in clear, cold water for at least twenty-four hours. It should then be put on the stove in the same water it is soaked in and heated very slowly to the boiling point. Most fruits should simmer at least three or four hours without any sugar being added to it. The sugar should be added just about twenty minutes before the fruit is ready to be taken up.

Apricots, peaches, prunes, and almost any other dried fruit cooked in this fashion become a delicious conserve, rich with the flavor of fresh fruit. The liquid around the fruit in such a case will be almost jellied when it is cold. Serve it with cream. Prunes cooked by the ordinary method of soaking them over night in water, and stewing them up for twenty minutes are flavorless and insipid. Apricots and peaches cooked by this same rapid process always have a certain rank flavor and often partake of a leathery consistency which is far from palatable. Dried apples should not be cooked quite so long as some other fruits, but they are also better for soaking them a longer time than is usual, and cooking them until they are thoroughly tender.

Dried apricots and peaches cooked in this way make an excellent pie. Bake them without any top crust, covering the pie with a tin pan if the fruit shows any signs of baking too hard. When the pie is done spread a thick meringue over it, made by beating the whites of three eggs to a stiff froth and adding three tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Spread this meringue over the pie and put it in a slow oven for ten minutes. Dredge a little sugar over the meringue before you put the pie in the oven. See that the meringue cooks very slowly. At the end of ten minutes it should be thoroughly risen and done through, but colored only a very light brown. If the oven is too hot it is better to leave the door open a little than run the risk of its rising too rapidly, in which case it will certainly fall.—N. Y. Tribune.

Allow Fresh Air in Your Sleeping Room.

One of the bugbears of old-time people is night air, and there is little exaggeration in saying that the superstition against night air has killed more people than the free circulation of it has ever injured. There is an abundance of proof that night air is injurious to no one. On the contrary, people who sleep outdoors under the mere protection of a tent are the healthiest of all people, and the practice has largely gained in popularity of late years, under wider knowledge of hygiene, for people in delicate health to go in camping parties and breathe the balsam of the night air.

Unless there is abundance of air in a sleeping room at night the health of the occupants is sure to suffer. Unless there is a current of air flowing through a room, the atmosphere soon becomes poisonous, and the individual who breathes it is in a condition to invite colds, influenzas and kindred diseases of the thorax or lungs.

A Milk Test.

A method of testing whether milk has been adulterated with water is to place the milk in a deep pan and, taking a bright knitting needle, to insert it vertically in the fluid. The needle should then be steadily withdrawn, and if a drop remains at the end the milk is pure. If, on the other hand, the drop is not found, it may be safely concluded that the milk has been adulterated. Another very simple test is to place a drop of milk on the thumb-nail. If it remains as a drop, without running over the nail, the milk is pure.

Cream Salmon.

Take one can of salmon; mince it fine, drain off the liquor in a colander and throw it away. Boil one pint of milk, two tablespoonfuls butter, salt and pepper to taste. Have ready a pint of fine bread crumbs, which place in a layer in the bottom of a dish. Upon this lay a layer of the minced salmon, then a layer of the dressing made of the milk, butter, pepper and salt, more bread crumbs and so on, having crumbs for the last layer. Bake until brown.

How to Wash Baby's Head.

If the baby's head is well lathered with soap every morning, using a soft cloth, dandruff will never form. An inexperienced nurse is sure to neglect this point, because she cannot realize that the clean, pink scalp should require such thorough attention, and perhaps for several mornings the little head is simply wiped off with a damp cloth. After the dandruff forms it is sometimes very difficult to remove.

To Clean Jewelry.

One teaspoonful of ammonia to a teaspoonful of water will clean gold or silver jewelry. A couple of drops of aqua ammonia poured on the under side of diamonds will clean them immediately, making them very brilliant.

It is said that clinkers may be removed from stove or furnace by throwing a handful of salt into the fire when very hot; when cold the clinkers may be easily taken out.

Musical Item.

"I desire," said Miss Esmeralda Longcoffin, entering a music store on Madison avenue, "to purchase a piece of music for my little brother, who plays on the piano."

"Here, miss, is precisely what you want."

"What is the name of it?"

"The Maiden's Prayer,' for fifty cents."

"Only fifty cents! Why, he's further advanced than that, for last month he played a piece worth seventy-five cents. Haven't you something for a dollar?"—Texas Siftings.

The Cause.

Strawber—I suppose you will be surprised to hear that my engagement is broken off.

Singerly—Really! Why, great Scott, old man, it was only yesterday that I saw you out together with your fiancee.

Strawber (sadly)—I know it, that's what broke it off.—Cloak Review.

Too Red.

Lady (helping to lobster salad)—I suppose, Mr. O'Finnigan, that you are not accustomed to this dish in your country.

Mr. O'F. (concealing his ignorance)—Lobsthers is it, madam? Faith, ma'am, the shores of Ofreland is red wid 'em.—Crypt.

A Great Service.

—Alert Hose Company has asked the city Council to get them another horse.

—The monthly statement of the City Collector shows a total collection during July of $1,748.50.

—The camp meeting will be continued next Sunday as usual. It will take place in Hyer's woods.

—A devotional meeting will be held in the W. C. T. U. rooms, to-morrow afternoon at 3.30 o'clock.

—F. A. Pope has petitioned the city Council for permission to erect a one story frame building at No. 6 East Front street.

—The city, in anticipation of the collection of taxes, will borrow $3,000 for the Fire Department, and $2,800 for the general fund.

—Mr. John Nessler of this city has purchased a farm at New Market and intends to reside thereon. He proposes to cultivate cabbage only.

—A $200 piano will go to the winner of the five mile race at the meeting of the Asbury Park Wheelmen on August 5 and 6. The race will be open to all and there will be no handicaps.

—On Monday night next, August 8th, Music Hall will open for the season, with the grand production and melodramatic success entitled "Hands Across the Sea," with the same original caste as when last seen in this city. Manager Reeves of the company, it is said, has spared no expense in this season, refitting the play with entire new scenery, costumes and mechanical effects, at a cost of over $5,000.

—In reply to our criticisms in yesterday's News respecting the difficulties we have met with in securing from the present city clerk for publication and for the public interest a list of bills ordered paid by Common Council, Mr. Runyon telephoned us that it is impossible for him to give the list of bills or to enable the reporters to get them before or after the meetings, so as to include them in their accounts of the Council proceedings. We could see that ex-City Clerk Leonard managed to do it without difficulty, by having the bills in such shape that they could be copied in a few minutes before the meeting was called to order. Mr. Runyon said he did not get at the meeting soon enough, and did not care to remain afterward; that the next day the bills were given to an assistant to make out warrants for the Mayor to sign the same evening to have them ready for payment the following day; that other cities paid their clerks for such work, and the papers for publishing the minutes, and finally, that he did not think the list of bills of any public interest anyhow. In the latter opinion we differ somewhat. We considered that any matter effecting the public pocketbook ought to be of public interest, and a public official so extravagantly paid—averaging about $40 per meeting, each calling for about four hours' work, including drafting the minutes, $10 an hour, to say nothing of about $1,000 more as unqualified as could afford the very slight inconvenience mentioned, when it is entirely for public information, especially as we need not delay the payment of the bills a moment. As to paying the papers for publishing the Council proceedings we are not aware of any instance except in the case referred to where payment has been asked. The only thing asked is that there shall be a city official conscientiously and willing to see the public has a right to know something about the doings of public servants, including the public is expected to pay for it, in one case at least to the tune of $20 per hour, of actual necessary service, including requisites. We are sure there is nothing unreasonable in that. We intimated at the time the appointment was made that it seemed a mistake to have the city erect an annex to any newspaper office, so as to run right out of any other business that would in any manner interfere with it. Since then a business friend has tried to spread himself over too much ground. Less greed would make better friends and more business all around. We would like to see a city clerk who would afford the newspapers every reasonable facility of getting information for the public. We regret to be compelled to say that Mr. Runyon has not in our judgment proved himself to be such a person.

Held a Secret Meeting.

The Central New Jersey Base Ball League met at the V. C. L. A. rooms at Elizabeth last night and after a session, lasting until nearly eleven o'clock, adjourned to meet on Tuesday evening of next week. It was agreed that the proceedings should be kept secret.

On Saturday, Hudson will umpire the game at Plainfield and Hopkins will officiate at Westfield.

The batting order of the Brighton Athletic team which are playing the Crescents this afternoon is as follows: Schafer, 3b; Abercumbie, l. f.; Giles, c. f.; T. Donaldson, 1b.; Livingston, s. s.; Donaldson, c.; Alfonsin, 2b.; Gerrety, p.; Evers, extra.

Judgment on an Escaped Bicycle.

About two months ago Huff purchased a bicycle of Phillips for $110. He offered Phillips a $100 bill in payment, but as the latter did not have the necessary change Phillips allowed him to have the bicycle on the payment of two dollars on account. The balance was never paid.

Phillips brought suit for the recovery of the remaining eight dollars owing him, and obtained the judgment.

The Reading Railroad Litigation.

The counsel concerned in the suit of Matthias Arnot of Elmira, N. Y., to break the validity of the leases of the Lehigh Valley and New Jersey Central Railroads to the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, met at 331 Walnut street, Philadelphia, yesterday, to agree on a statement of facts before the Master, H. W. Hart of Williamsport. At the former meeting President A. A. McLeod and other Reading officials were examined, and W. W. Schoppenhorst of the Reading Company was to have been questioned relative to lines of traffic and coal statistics. Instead, Lawyer Henry C. McCormick of Williamsport, the plaintiff's counsel, called for the production of statements as to the amount of coal shipped by the Reading and the other roads to various points during 1890 and 1891 for local consumption and sales for reshipment. With the production of these facts Mr. McCormick announced that the testimony for the plaintiff would close. It was decided to Mourn until Aug. 15, when Mr. Schoppenkotter will produce the statistics.

DEMOCRATS ENTHUSE.

Successful Meeting Last Night 'Mid Cheers for "Cleve and Steve."

The Fourth Ward Democratic Club held a mass meeting last night in St. Mary's T. A. B. Hall.

There were about two hundred members of the party on hand, who whooped and yelled for "Cleve and Steve," and did other things to show their enthusiasm.

Mayor W. L. Saunders of North Plainfield, made a speech and was frequently interrupted by applause.

The subject of his discourse was "Tariff Reform." He read a statement from a man named Hutchins who was ex-Mayor of a small town in New South Wales.

Mr. Hutchin's said that several of the Australian provinces had a protective tariff. New South Wales didn't. Therefore the people of New South Wales were ever so much happier that the people in the protected provinces, lived upon the fat of the land and had a good time generally.

The statement of Mr. Hutchins created a perfect whirlwind of enthusiasm which was followed by more cheers for "Cleve and Steve."

James E. Martine of this city also delivered an address. He splintered the tariff, ripped the Force bill up the back, and loudly decounced the Republican Billion - Dollar Congress.

After the meeting the names of several new members were added to the roll.

Councilman Frazee said this morning that the meeting had been a "howling success."

STATE NEWS

Lakewood is overrun with homeless cats.

Gloucester county Prohibitionists have nominated Theodore T. Crane for Assembly, and Edward A. Gardner for County Clerk.

A farmer near Deal Lake, Monmouth county, has a buffalo grazing on his pasture land in company with a Texas steer. The animals had escaped from a Wild West show.

The South Bound Brook Democrats have organized a glee club and will erect a commodious wigwam. The officers are: President, Charles W. Thomas; vice-president, L. E. Latourette; treasurer, Frank Wheeland; corresponding secretary, A. D. Thomas; recording secretary, R. F. Power.

An interesting tennis tournament took place Saturday between teams of the Bound Brook and the Lambertville tennis clubs. The play was close and exciting, and finally narrowed down to finals between Messrs. Wagner and De Mott, of Bound Brook, and Messrs. Norton and Prall, of Lambertville. The Lambertville players won the silver trophy.

A FARMER'S DEATH.

Louis Couche, a farmer at Myersville, a mountain hamlet in Morris county, took with a horrible death on Monday. He was mowing hay when the knives of the machine became clogged. He dismounted to clean the guards, and his team balked, tripping him and throwing him in front of the moving knives. He dropped on the cutting and the horses started forward. The sharp guards struck the prostrate man in the head and penetrated the skull. The knives then cut the skull completely open and removed the top of the head, leaving the brain exposed. Death was instantaneous. A young son witnessed the shocking spectacle.

MR. PARKER'S GO-BETWEEN.

James Burns, eight years old, was a prisoner in the Third Criminal Court of Newark yesterday on complaint of his mother, who charged him with theft.

It appeared through the examination held in the case by Judge Pennington that the boy's father left the mother a short time ago and went to live by himself. Sometimes the boy lived with him, and sometimes with her. The father, it is charged, induced him to steal money from Mrs. Burns on commission, and she employed him, also on commission, to do a similar service for her. The boy, besides making considerable profit in commission, kept part of the money that he stole.

Because he kept some of the money stolen for her his mother caused his arrest. The Judge now will probably be sent to the City House.

How the Price of Coal Varies.

To residents in towns and cities along the Central Railroad of New Jersey it seems that the coal barons increase the price of coal to the towns near the mines and lower the price of that necessity to the towns farther away. In Flemington, Hunterdon county, coal cost $5.75 per ton. At Somerville the ruling price is $5.50. Bound Brook is still farther away from the mines, but coal costs only $5.40 there. Plainfield people are even more distant from the coal fields, but they buy their coal for $5.25 per ton. These prices are said to be subject to another increase made August 1st.

—The New Brunswick Home News of yesterday, in its report of Monday night's meeting of the Common Council of that city, published a quarter of a column of bills ordered paid.

EXCITEMENT IN OCEAN GROVE.

Over the Words of the Rev. Mr. Osborne.

Rev. William B. Osborne, who founded Ocean Grove, and who is one of the members of the Ocean Grove Camp meeting Association, caused much ex*citement at the regular meeting of the* Bible class in Ocean Grove yesterday by his attack on the Masonic fraternity and Masonry in general.

It is one of the customs of the Rev. Dr. Hanley, who conducts the Bible class, to have a box passed around before the close of each day's service. In it the audience are permitted to put questions on timely topics, which Dr. Hanley answers. Among the questions in the box at yesterday's meeting was one asking if a true Christian could belong to a secret society.

The Doctor, after reading the question aloud, answered it in the affirmative. The Doctor had hardly answered the question when up jumped Mr. Osborne, and said:

"How about Masonry?"

The Doctor answered that it made no difference what sort of a secret society a man belonged to he could be a Christian.

Founder Osborne contended that such was not the case. That if a man was a Mason it was impossible for him to be a Christian, and challenged Dr. Hanley to show him a Mason who was a true Christian. This led to a heated discus*sion in which personalities were resorted* to. The founder of Ocean Grove said that he had been made a Mason when he knew no better, but that after being converted to the work of God he saw the folly of the society and left the lodge disgusted with the work.

Dr. Hanley became angered at this and said that he was a Mason, but that he had taken a demit some thirty-five years ago because he could not give it the attention that he felt was due it.

Many in the audience jumped up and took part in the heated discussion, which assumed such a serious aspect that Dr. Hanley abruptly closed the day's services, forgetting to pronounce the benediction.

No sooner had the disputants reached the sidewalk, however, than they gathered about Mr. Osborne and requested him to take back what he had said. He refused to do so. The discussion at*tracted a crowd of several hundred.*

The Rev. Dr. E. R. Stokes, the president of the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association, was also attracted by the crowd and forced the people to disperse as soon as he found out the nature of the trouble. Dr. Stokes is a Mason. Little action of the Board was taken by the old minister was talked of at Ocean Grove, yesterday, and several people called upon Dr. Stokes and requested that Mr. Osborne be not allowed to again address an audience in the Grove. Some of the Masons were much angered at the attack and called at the minister's house to see him, but he had left for Pittman Grove, where he was to conduct a meeting.

Originality Pays.

Originality is one of the pillars of success. The man who propounded the following emphatic conundrum in the waste column of a newspaper "can a man, a good square man, get anything to do on God's green earth?" was original. His originality brought him success by a large majority. A clergyman wanted a boy. He advertised in the want columns of his local newspapers. One of the answers read as follows:

* * * "I seen your advertise for a boy. I am one. I can do things as you want him, and can bustle. Most folks ain't got no use for a boy, being that boy how hard times is. I want the job. JOE WHITE."

This rather shocked the minister, but it made an impression. Of many letters this one held his attention. It pulled on both his curiosity and sympathy, and he took to the boy's frank and original way of putting it. "Joe" got the job.

But does newspaper cut some figure in the calculation of results; both the minister's and the "good square man's" advertisement would have fallen flat in any other than a want medium; a paper read by the people. THE NEWS is such a paper. Try it.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The test of intellectual power is ability to talk of something else than personalities.

Of negroes and persons with negro blood in their veins there are at present in the United States 7,500,000. They constitute in the southern states over 30 per cent. of the population, in the northern not quite 1½ per cent. But the proportion of colored persons in the northern states is increasing, because many of the southern blacks are migrating northward.

Some people ought, they really ought, to take a vacation this summer. One is the person who is always grumbling and growling, another is he who predicts that this republic is going to ruin. The Boston Globe cartoonist adds another to the list. He recommends the fashionable summer girl to take a little summer outing at the washtub, just for variety. There, too, are the writers who attempt to make us keep up with the fashions this hot weather. Give us a rest, do! Yet another from whom all the world would like a rest is the person who tells women through the newspapers what to do for their complexions—the one who advises them to rub themselves with cod liver oil every night, for instance. Women have been using these beautifiers now for twenty years, and their complexions are just the same as they always were. Let up, and go on a vacation.

A Chicagoan on New York.

The New York Herald prints an amusing screed on New York city, purporting to give a Chicago citizen's views of the metropolis by the sea as compared with the metropolis by the lake. First, the alleged Chicagoan instances the ignorance of the New Yorker about other cities of the Union. The New Yorker is charged with knowing no more than a pig knows about Sunday of such places as Los Angeles, Spokane and Chilliwothe, and the Herald compositor partly bears out this charge by spelling the name of the last named place "Chillicotta."

To the New Yorker his city is his country. New Yorkers never travel at all, but when they do travel they go to London, not through their own grand land. All there is that is nice about New York anyhow is the river and harbor steamboat trips, the opera, the good horses and carriages and the "promenade" who float western people's money getting schemes. For the rest, there is no public spirit—not a "spir."—and no respect for historical associations or relics, not even of the Revolution. "We are too big to care for ourselves," says the New Yorker, and he actually thinks this is something to be proud of. But western people need not complain of public lethargy in New York, while she repeats in this Dutch Rip Van Winkle sleep Chicago steals away her honors and her commerce, says the Chicagoan.

The reason there is no Americanism in New York is because New York is not American. Her aristocracy are slow old Dutch; the rest are foreigners outright. "Nineteen in every twenty New Yorkers are landlord ridden rent payers." More than a million and a half of people pay 5,000 other people for the privilege of living, and that is life in New York. Then the writer speaks of the murderous brutality and crowding on the elevated trains and at the mouth of Brooklyn bridge, the frightfully packed offices and tenements and the bad air and light in which even well-to-do men spend their business days.

In New York the leading citizens are having their energy and vitality sapped and dried away in offices that are filled with [illegible] hand air and lighted artificially, it amazes every visitor to New York to see men worth millions in Wall street and lawyers of national fame cooking their brains under gas and electric jets at high noon, with bad and stagnant air about them and no chance to die unless the toilet stands and closets leak and let in sewer gas.

The best known men—the national figures of New York—nearly all look dried up, wrinkled and aged beyond their years to us who work in sensible office buildings.

After giving a lashing to the architects who build houses with dark rooms in them and office structures with dark inner offices, where men and boys must sit all day like rats in a hole, this howling villain proceeds to scathe the city authorities who gave away for nothing a number of the principal streets to the disfiguring elevated roads. Then he gives this picture of the people that really make up the population of New York:

> If the New Yorker has not read or heard or seen these things that concern the masses of his fellow citizens, he certainly has seen the pavements of the crowded regions—those dwarfed and stunted, ferret eyed, shrunken children and young men and girls who roam the streets, and every now and then break into Broadway or emerge upon the central avenues and then shrink back again into the congested districts of the lower wards. These are districts, by the way, which the street cleaners cannot attend to, since their money must be spent on the wide and lighted stones in front of the brownstone houses on the upper squares.

The average visitor fancies that New York is that promenade on Broadway between the Union square and the Metropolitan opera house, past the hotels and Delmonico's. But to one New York, go east or west of Broadway, only a few blocks, and where the atmosphere is fetid, the air is full of the wind blown, sun dried droppings in the streets, where the streets are all littered with rotten fruit, waste paper and ashes, where the tenements are ranged along the flagging like never ending factories, of where the children swarm and pullor like Arab bands, where the young men hang about the saloon doors in sullen crews, where the mothers loll in the windows upon dirty pillows, and the men come and go at night and morning with dinner pails or shoulder crushed down beneath piles of ready made clothing. That is where and how as many persons as compose Chicago are living in New York.

BLAINE TO LEND HIS AID.

He Will Be an Active Factor in the Republican Campaign.

MAINE TO HEAR HIS VOICE FIRST

Manley Arranging with the Ex-Secretary the Details of His Stumping Tour—McKinley Talks Tariff to a Vast Audience in Nebraska.

AUGUSTA, Me., Aug. 3.—Ex-Secretary Blaine will take the stump for the Republican national ticket. No definite statement can yet be made as to the number of speeches Mr. Blaine will make nor the places at which they will be delivered. These matters of detail are, however, being arranged.

Mr. Manley left here for Bar Harbor in obedience to a summons from the ex-secretary of state. Before he left he announced that the object of his mission was to consult with Mr. Blaine with a view to arranging dates where the speeches will be made.

It is expected that Mr. Blaine's voice in advocacy of the claims of the Republican national candidate will first be heard in this state. The campaign in Maine will be opened Aug 17. It will be a very vigorous one, Chairman Manley having arranged for meetings to be held in every section and corner of the state. He hopes to get many matters that Mr. Blaine will appear all along the line.

While Mr. Manley is absent he will call on Mr. Blaine. The congressman will also take the field. The Hon. Henry B. Cleves, candidate for governor, will also take the stump.

The corps of speakers from abroad will be as able a one as ever entered the state and will include Major McKinley, of Ohio; Mr. Burrows, of Michigan; Hon. J. P. Dolliver, of Iowa; Hon. George Hawley, of Connecticut; Senator Wolcott, of Colorado, and General George Sheridan of Washington.

McKINLEY'S BIG AUDIENCE.

He Talks Tariff to Fifteen Thousand Persons in Nebraska.

BEATRICE, Neb., Aug. 3.—The largest audience ever gathered in Nebraska to hear a political speech assembled at the Beatrice Chautauqua grounds to hear Governor McKinley. An audience of 15,000 people listened to the governor's speech, which was heartily applauded at all points. When the governor appeared on the platform the applause was tremendous and lasted fully fifteen minutes. Governor McKinley's speech was a eulogy and defense of protection and a denunciation of Democratic methods. In closing the speaker said:

"Tried by any test measured by any standard, we lead all the rest of the world. Protection has vindicated itself. It cannot be helped by enlarged or hurt by defamation. Our own experience shows that it is best for our citizenship and our civilization, and opens up a higher and better destiny for our people.

Justice Daniels' Opinion.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—In a letter to Senator Hiscock retired Justice Daniels renders an opinion in which he holds that the late extra session of the state legislature had no authority even to attempt to reapportion the senate and assembly districts and pronouncing the legislation unconstitutional. The opinion is a lengthy one, and in it Judge Daniels says that the courts have full power to restrain elections by the new districts, the reapportionment being unconstitutional.

All in Favor of Belden.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 3.—Caucuses for the election of delegates to the congressional convention on Aug. 24 were held here, and all the delegates elected favor the nomination of J. J. Belden.

Instructed for Williams.

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Aug. 3.—At the Democratic congressional district caucuses throughout the county the delegates were instructed for Aaron Williams.

Durborrow Renominated.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—Congressman Allen C. Durborrow has been renominated by the Third district Democrats by acclamation.

The Horrors of Cholera.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 3.—A Russian newspaper correspondent who has just returned from the Samara Caucasus says that the deaths from cholera in that region in the last thirty days number 50,000. In the villages the people are unable to bury their dead, and the bodies lie in the houses for days, polluting the air and spreading the disease. Whole families die without care of any kind, and the first knowledge of their illness is often communicated to their neighbors by the odors from the decomposed corpses.

Delivered Up by Quebec.

MONTREAL, Aug. 3.—The alleged murderers Rosenzweig and Blank were delivered to the chief of police of Towanda, Pa., who arrived here with extradition papers.

De Moves to Be Tried.

PARIS, Aug. 3.—The Marquis de Moves was committed for trial for manslaughter, and the four seconds concerned in his duel with Captain Mayer were held.

Dentists in Session.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Aug. 3.—Dentists from all parts of the country are here at the thirty-second annual convention of the American Dental association.

Sousa's Successor.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Among the candidates for the leadership of the Marine band to succeed Sousa is Professor Fanciulli, of New York.

Died of His Injuries.

HARTFORD, Aug. 3.—William A. Miner, the engineer of the train which was derailed at South Lyme on July 25, has died of his injuries.

The Paris Irish Fund.

PARIS, Aug. 3.—The hearing of the proceedings in connection with the Paris fund of the Irish Nationalists has been adjourned until October.

Said Him Paste Diamonds.

TROY, N.Y., Aug. 3.—Diamond swindlers defrauded John Josepha, a jeweler of this city, by selling him a large amount of paste diamonds.

To Dine Cleveland.

BOSTON, Aug. 3.—The Old Colony club will give a dinner to ex-President Cleveland at Falmouth, Mass., on Saturday, Aug. 13.

Firebugs at Work.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Aug. 3.—Hollister Bros.' barn was fired by incendiaries and two valuable horses were burned to death.

CONSUL RYDER'S FRAUDS.

BERLINGS, Aug. 3.—The frauds perpetrated by Mr. Henry B. Ryder, the United States consul at Copenhagen, who is now under arrest there, will amount to 200,000 kroner. The relations existing between Consul Ryder and O. R. Carr, the American minister to Denmark, have long been strained, and the latter has frequently requested his government to recall Mr. Ryder. The latter's friends in the state department at Washington have, however, always succeeded in averting this action.

In response to a telegram from the Danish government the United States authorities have telegraphed by cable to the officials at Copenhagen to proceed with the case and prove the allegations against the consul and render judgment in the case in accordance with the Danish laws.

The affair continues to be the sensation of the day in Copenhagen. Consul Ryder and his wife, who was taken into custody soon after the arrest of her husband, remain in jail. It is said that their mode of life while in Copenhagen has been extravagant.

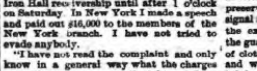
THE ORDER OF THE IRON HALL.

Somerby Says That the Concern Is Solid in Every Way.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 3.—Supreme Justice Freeman Somerby, of the Iron Hall, in answer to a reporter's question said: "The order is solid in every way and will be victorious in the courts. I did not hear of the Iron Hall receivership until after 1 o'clock on Saturday. In New York I made a speech and paid out $16,000 to the members of the New York council. I have not tried to evade anybody.

"I have not read the complaint and only know in a general way what the charges are. My course is right and I am not afraid to have a thorough investigation of them. The Philadelphia matter is an important feature in the fund. I believe that the assets of the Keystone bank are more than enough to take care of any funds that the Iron Hall may have on deposit there."

Mr. Somerby intimated that after a consultation with his attorneys he might have a statement to make.



HER ONE FROCK.

Mrs. Langtry's Black Evening Dress That "Went It Alone" for a Season.

The experience of a professional beauty, Mrs. Langtry, in regard to black gowns is worth recording, says the Philadelphia Times. The first season that the Jersey Lily spent in London found her the possessor of one evening gown, and that a very simple black. Immediately after her picture appeared she became the rage, and duchesses themselves did not hesitate to stand on chairs to get a glimpse of her as she passed. Everywhere she wore the black gown. One night it was turned in so that her beautiful throat showed; another night it was drawn up close to her neck and a bunch of white lilies against it brought out its blackness and her fairness. It was mended, it was pressed, but at reception or ball all that season the beautiful woman wore the black gown. Later on, when evening dresses were very ordinary things to her, she said most positively: "Never tell me that a woman can't dress well who has a single frock. I don't think she could only look well, but always be distinguished; and I know it through the best teacher of all—experience." And so it is that the black evening gown is commended, not only to the woman who has a great deal of money but to her who, though she may be bent on pleasure, yet has a frugal mind.

THREE SHOCKS ENOUGH.

Murderer Wood's Death Was Instantaneous and Painless.

HE DIES WITH A PRAYER ON HIS LIPS

From the Time He Was Summoned to the Death Chamber Till Life Was Extinct Only Four Minutes and Seven Seconds Had Elapsed.

DANNEMORA, N. Y., Aug. 3.—The first infliction of the death penalty at Clinton prison by electricity was on Joseph, better known as Cal Wood. Wood, who is a man of about thirty-eight years of age and physically a good specimen of manhood, passed his last night on earth as quietly as he had previous ones, and aside from a slight nervousness, apparent more particularly in the face, met his death calmly and without any evident interest in the method of execution. Chaplain Cheeseman visited him as usual, and he went through his devotions a trifle more fervently than on former occasions and he ate quite heartily.

Warden Walter G. Thayer announced to the group of witnesses gathered in his office that he was ready to execute the sentence and conducted them to the death chamber. The same arrangement of apparatus noted in former executions in other prisons was preserved here. Warden Thayer gave the signal and Wood appeared at the door of the execution chamber in charge of two of the guards. He was dressed in a dark suit of clothes, with white collar and black tie, and walked without any assistance. The left leg of the trousers had been slit so as to allow the affixing of the electrode. Wood paused as he reached the chair and said, "I have to say something." Warden Thayer said, "All right; go ahead." Wood then said in a clear voice:

I would like to say a few words—a few words to Mr. Whitman. I would say more, but my time is not long enough to express the thoughts I feel toward him. I cannot express it. He has been nearer than a brother to me. I hope he will have a long life and a happy one. May heaven be with him and give him a long life and give me the courage of two men and that I may meet him in heaven. Pass them art and to dust thou shall return to that land from which no man shall return. I prayed God to forgive me, and he said the utmost sinner might, and God has returned. God forgive me. I hope he will be merciful. I hope that my friends will be happy. I wish all my friends good luck.

Three Shocks Given.

Warden Thayer then said, "Sit down, Wood," and he walked over to the chair, taking his seat and placing his arms on the rest provided for them. His face was colorless and his lips twitched slightly. The guards affixed the straps very expeditiously, the wires were screwed into the electrodes, salt water was turned on and Wood was ready for the fatal stroke. While being strapped he kept repeating, "God forgive me, God help me." Exact time.

Guard Wells, of Auburn, then gave the signal. There was a slight click as Electrician Davis pushed down the switch, and the body of Wood shot up against the straps as 1,700 volts were driven through the body. For fifteen seconds the contact was kept on and then it was released. The body sank almost imperceptibly back into place. For three seconds the current remained off and during this time there was no apparent animation, not a muscle twitching, and the motion which was visible through the face straps, remaining just as before the shock was administered. There was no contraction of the legs, and the fingers stretched out on the chair arm never moved.

The second signal was given, and the body strained against the straps as the current entered it. Fifteen seconds it wasn't on, and when it was released for five seconds there was still no indication of either life or muscular contraction.

Then it was turned on for a few more seconds and finally released for good. The attending physicians examined the pulse and heart and declared that the man was dead. The time of the execution was one minute and seven seconds, while the time which expired between the summons from the cell and the announcement of death was just four minutes and seven seconds.

Wood Accuses His Victim.

When the straps were removed it was shown that the body was in the same position and the face preserved the same appearance as when the man sat down. The lips were not drawn, the eyes and mouth closed pastorally, and the only indication of the current was a blister on the left leg caused by the overheated water flowing from the sponge in the electrode.

During the execution Mrs. Wood and her brother-in-law sat in the hotel parlor across from the prison entrance, and when the witnesses came out she burst into tears and buried her face in her hands. After the autopsy was finished they took possession of the body.

The chaplain and warden are both in possession of a statement of Wood in which he says that the murdered man was guilty of incest with his daughter, Wood's wife, and that was the cause of the beating of that. Mrs. Wood was asked by a United Press reporter if this was so. She said Cal was a good man and always told the truth. Just here Wood's brother Charles interfered and told her she must not talk. Judge Whitman, who was counsel for Wood, said, however: Mrs. Wood confirms in every particular Wood's story and says that her father was immorally intimate with her.

Riggin's Body to Lie in State.

BOTH SIDES OBDURATE.

No Agreement Reached on the World's Fair Appropriation.

A CONFERENCE WITH NO RESULTS.

The Burden of Responsibility for the Deadlock In the House is Now Placed at the Shoulders of Speaker Crisp—The Investigation Into Watson's Charges.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—In the absence of any other business the senate discussed the Homestead affair with some warmth and personality, Mr. Hawley, of Connecticut, in the course of the debate taking occasion to remark that Mr. Palmer, of Illinois, "needed a guardian." At the close of the discussion a much modified resolution of investigation was adopted providing for a special committee of seven to investigate the "employment for private purposes of armed bodies of men in connection with differences between workmen and employers"—the resolution not mentioning either Homestead or the Pinkertons by name.

The situation in the house has not changed. All absentees have been notified by Speaker Crisp to return and all leaves of absence are revoked. If any absent members shall fail to return or notify the speaker that they are en routs to the Capitol within the ensuing two days the sergeant at arms is to enforce their attendance.

Three recesses were taken for the purpose of effecting some satisfactory solution of the question, but nothing was accomplished, although a conference was held, attended by about seventy members, Mr. Dockery, of Missouri, presiding.

Several propositions were submitted but not entertained, and a committee of five was appointed, two for and five against the World's fair appropriation, to consider the matter and report at a future meeting. The committee is composed of Messrs. Bankhead, of Alabama; McMillin, of Tennessee; McCreary, of Kentucky; Cummings, of New York, and Culberson, of Texas, who are opposed to the appropriation, and Messrs. Durborow and Williams, of Illinois; Fellows, of New York; Reilly, of Pennsylvania, and Shively, of Indiana, who favor it. No quorum voting on Mr. Bailey's (of Texas) motion to adjourn until Friday, a call of the house ensued, after which the house adjourned.

BOTH SIDES OBSTINATE.

The Committee Fails to Agree and Now Speaker Crisp Must Act.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—A failure to agree was the result of the meeting of the ten Democratic members appointed as a committee to draft some proposition looking to a harmonious settlement of the World's fair matter. The antiappropriation men on the committee took the initiative in proposing schemes looking to an agreement, but they were met by the stimatum from the fair advocates that they were willing only to accept a proposition for a direct vote. They were serious, it was stated, to have the matter go before the house that it might be settled immediately.

The antis made several propositions, but not one of them was voted on. One of these was to cut down the appropriation to one-half—or $2,500,000—and this was vigorously opposed by the other side and even found some opposition on the part of some of the antis. Another proposition was that a vote be postponed until the meeting of congress in December next, but this, too, met even more vigorous opposition from the advocates of the appropriation. They contended for $5,000,000 and not a cent less. Other propositions also failed of agreement, and the committee in their desperation adjourned.

The evident anxiety of the World's fair advocates to bring the appropriation immediately to a direct vote is proof of their belief in their expressed assurance that the proposition has a clear majority in the house.

Crisp Must End It.

They contend that they are willing to have this vote at any time, and express a determination to prevent an adjournment unless they have such an opportunity of ascertaining how the house stands on the matter. They are inclined to hold Speaker Crisp responsible for the present position of affairs, and a strong effort is now being made to induce him to have the committee on rules bring in a special order providing for a direct vote.

This special order, they contend, would be justified by the evident desire of a majority of the members to vote for the measure, and they cite as a precedent Mr. Crisp's own action in bringing in a rule for a vote on the free coinage bill because a majority of his own party expressed such a desire.

With the appropriation advocates in the majority and seemingly solidly in favor of keeping congress from adjourning until some disposition is made of the appropriation clause, and the antis quite as determined to pursue their filibustering tactics so long as the appropriation is kept before the house, there is practically no prospect for a conclusion of the session.

The failure of the caucus committee of ten to agree to any conclusion places the speaker in a position where he must act, and it is contended that his only action can be a special order for a direct vote. He must then take some decisive action, and it is conceded that until he does the World's fair appropriation must hang in the balance and keep the scale from tipping in the direction of adjournment.

WATSON BACKS DOWN.

He Says His Book Was Written Only for Campaign Purposes.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—The special committee on "jags" has finished its investigation. The event of the day was the tilt between Mr. Boatner, the chairman of the special investigating committee, and Mr. Watson. At one time it looked as though these members would come to blows. They certainly were on the ragged edge of a personal encounter.

Mr. Watson took the stand and said:

"This paragraph in my book which has caused so much discussion of late can soon be understood thoroughly unless the whole chapter is taken into consideration. So far as Mr. Cobb is concerned, there is no pain in the house that I respect more, and I was certainly not my intention when I wrote this particular paragraph to bring him into the difficulty, nor did I aim at him individually when I spoke of 'gambling and fraudlin drunkards on the floor.' I wrote the book solely for campaign purposes, and never intended that it should apply to members of the house."

It Got Exciting.

Mr. Boatner endeavored by close cross questioning to draw from Mr. Watson a statement that his paragraph referred personally to Mr. Cobb or to the house in general. Frequent and persistent efforts on Boatner's part failed to bring out a definite answer from the witness. Both gentlemen had become considerably excited and finally Mr. Watson, losing control of his temper, stamped out:

"Instead of being chairman of this committee and sitting in a judicial capacity, it appears to me that you are acting as the prosecutor."

"I don't think I exactly catch the drift of your remarks," said Mr. Boatner, and there was a noticeable tightening of his lips, which made the Louisiana representative look dangerous.

"If do not believe you have," said Mr. Watson, and he fairly bristled with excitement. "And what is more, I don't think you want to, and I don't think you will."

There was an ominous silence, during which the chairman endeavored to control his temper. Finally he said in a low tone that was remarkable in its contrast to the shrill notes of the Alliance man: "Mr. Watson, I wish you to understand that I am responsible for everything I say. I hope you know my address."

There was a moment's pause, every one anticipating trouble, and every one apparently in doubt as to what was the best thing to do. Mr. Boatner, however, was apparently relieved by the chairman himself, who, finding that Mr. Watson did not intend to reply, put another question to him as though nothing had happened.

Cobb Defends Himself.

Mr. Cobb then took the stand and said: "Only those members who were present at the time in question can possibly have any appreciation of the frequency and unnecessary character of the interruptions to which I was subjected by members of the house. With regard to this matter of drinking I want to say that I do not ask any indulgence because I may look like a weakling, for I am not. For several days before the night in question I worked very late gathering material and preparing for my argument. As a result when I commenced my speech on the floor I was not in my usual physical condition. My throat was particularly weak, and as a matter of relief I asked an employee of the house to bring me a cup of beef tea. Beef tea is certainly a mild and nonintoxicating liquid.

"From time to time I had the cup sent back and replenished. I sipped from it almost constantly. That was all I said for, and the charge made by Mr. Watson that I called a page and asked him to bring me some whisky is absolutely and totally false.

"Some whisky was brought me, but I did not ask for it, and I am confident it was not the page. There was not much of it, but what there was I drank. If it affected me in any way I was not conscious of it. I can truthfully say that so far as my judgment goes I was as sober then as I am at this moment. That is all I have to say, and I am willing to stand or fall by it."

CYRUS W. FIELD'S WILL.

The Estate and Life Insurance Will Amount to About $650,000.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Aug. 3.—A petition was filed in the surrogate's office asking leave to file the will of the late Cyrus W. Field.

The will acts aside $50,000 in trust for the dead man's insane daughter, Alice D. Field, of Pleasantville, N. Y., and directs the remainder to be divided in five equal parts, one to become the property of Grace B. Lindley, the second to go to Isabel Judson, the third to Fannie F. Andrews. The fourth part is to be invested by the executors for the benefit of Edward M. Field, the insane son. The fifth part is to be invested for Cyrus W. Field.

The estate is estimated to be worth $350,000, and the life insurance policies for about $300,000 will make the total estate to be divided about $650,000. The writ is returnable Oct. 3 and a contest is not probable.

Chicago Banks Robbed.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—The discharge of George Bartels, paying teller of the Central Trust and Savings bank, and his subsequent flight with $3,000 of the firm's cash, has unearthed a gigantic conspiracy to defraud five Chicago banks. The scheme was partly successful, and over $50,000 was secured from Bartels' former employers, but was made good by reputable men who had vouched for the integrity and business ability of the young men who had engaged in the deal. Another bank is said to have lost $20,000, which amount was also made good by the same security.

Soldier Chapman Pardoned.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—The president has pardoned J. J. Chapman, a United States soldier, who five years ago in a drunken brawl killed by accident another soldier and was sentenced for life.

HEALING VIRTUE OF MUSIC.

Modern physicians attest to the power possessed by soft music, when skillfully applied, of inducing contentment, alleviation of pain and sleep. The idea is, however, by no means a new one. In his "Natural History, Century VIII," Bacon writes as follows: "Some noises help sleep, as the blowing of the wind, the trickling of water, humming of bees, soft singing, reading, etc." Tones (whereby we may understand loud and distinct sounds) are not so apt to procure sleep as sounds less distinct, such as the purling of water, humming of bees, a sweet voice of one that readeth, etc., the reason being that distinct tones "strike and erect the sense more than the other; and overmuch attention hindereth sleep."

In Shakespeare's plays we find several references made to the virtue of music as producing sleep, alleviating pain and restoring a disordered mind to healthy condition. In "Midsummer Night's Dream," act 4, scene 1:

Oberon:
Titania, music call, and strike more dead
Than common sleep of all these five the sense.
Titania:
Music, hol music, such as charmeth sleep.

In "King Henry IV," act 4, scene 4:

King Henry:
I pray you take me up and bear me hence
Into some other chamber; softly, pray.
Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends,
Unless some dull and favorable hand
Will whisper music to my weary spirit.
Warwick:
Call for the music in the other room.

In sweet music is such art.
Killing care and grief of heart
Fall asleep, or, hearing, die.

Burton, in his "Anatomy of Melancholy," has dwelt upon the curative power of music.

Three Young Men and Their Quest.

The wise old Hassan sat in his door, when three young men passed eagerly by.

"Are ye following after any one, my sons?" he said.

"I follow after Pleasure," said the eldest.

"And I after Riches," said the second.

"Pleasure is only to be found with Riches."

"And you, my little one!" he asked of the third.

"I follow after Duty," he modestly said.

And each went his way.

The aged Hassan in his journey came upon three men.

"My son," he said to the eldest, "methinks thou wert the youth who was following after Pleasure. Didst thou overtake her?"

"No, father," answered the man, "Pleasure is but a phantom that flies as one approaches."

"Then didst not follow the right way, my son."

"How didst thou fare?" he asked of the second.

"Pleasure is not with Riches," he answered.

"And thou," continued Hassan, addressing the youngest.

"As I walked with Duty," he replied, "Pleasure walked ever by my side."

"It is always thus," said the old man. "Pleasure pursued is not overtaken. Only her shadow he caught in him who pursueth. She herself goes hand in hand with Duty, and they who make Duty their companion have also the companionship of Pleasure."

Mind Your P's and Q's.

This expression is generally believed to have arisen from the former barroom usage of scoring up against customers the amount of beer for which they had been trusted—p standing for pint and q for quart. Scores of this sort were settled weekly, and the application of the saying is self evident. But Charles Knight suggests the more plausible explanation that the expression arose in the printing office, where many other terse and quaint phrases have had their origin. The forms of the small p and q in Roman type have always proved puzzling to the printer's apprentice. In the one the downward stroke is on the left of the loop or oval and in the other on the right. Now when types are reversed, as they are in process of distribution, the young printer is often puzzled to distinguish the p from the q. Especially in assorting pi—a mixed heap of types—where the p and the q have not the form of any word for a guide, it is well nigh impossible for an inexperienced person to distinguish one from the other at first sight. If this be true, the letters should be written in lower case and not in capitals, thus, "Mind your p's and q's."

Laws of the Medes and Persians.

Several references are to be found in the Scriptures relating to the laws of the Medes and Persians. The phrases which have become so familiar to Bible and other readers regarding the unchangeableness of these laws are taken from the books of Esther and Daniel. When the enemies of Daniel were afraid of his popularity they formed a conspiracy against him, obtaining an idolatrous decree which Daniel was accused of breaking. They pressed the king to sign the decree, saying, "Know, O king, that the law of the Medes and Persians is that no decree nor statute which the king establisheth may be changed." It is not to be understood by this, however, that a royal decree was in every sense irrevocable or beyond the possibility of modification or repeal, but rather that edicts could not be capriciously altered, and that a despot was bound and regulated by past decisions and precedents. How a decree could be neutralized, even though it could not be reversed, is shown in the Book of Esther.

Pot Pourri.

Pot pourri, a French term, which, when applied to music, signifies a selection of favorite pieces strung together without much arrangement so as to form a sort of medley. It is also the name of a mixture of sweet scented materials, chiefly flowers, dried and usually placed in a vase with a perforated lid, in order that their perfume may be diffused through rooms in which it is placed. It also signifies a dish of different sorts of viands, and corresponds in this sense to the hotch potch of Scotland and the olla podrida of Spain.

Barrenness.

According to Muthall, one woman in twenty and one man in thirty are barren—that is, 4 per cent. of population. It is found that one marriage in twenty is childless, say 5 per cent. Among the nobility of England, 21 per cent. have no children, owing to intermarriage of cousins, no less than 4½ per cent. of the present nobility being married to cousins.

THE FIRST VANILLA.

The old man in an alpaca coat and a palmleaf fan, at the third table in a Grand street ice cream dispensary, showed evidences of great excitement.

His supply of vanilla cream was only half gone, but he seemed to have lost interest in the other half, and was slipping ice water and foaming himself violently.

"Feel faint?" asked the proprietor, stepping over to the third table.

"Het your life I don't."

"I kinder thought you looked flustered," suggested the other soothingly.

"Flustered, hey? What did I order?"

"Vanilla cream."

"Plain, wasn't it?"

"Certainly."

"You don't remember my asking for a wooden leg?"

"No."

"I didn't mention a gutta percha arm nor a piece of false ears, did I?"

"Certainly not," admitted the proprietor, vaguely wondering whether he could get the police station on the telephone without leaving the other customers.

"Well, see what I dredged up in your durned old cream." And the agitated customer in question glared over a glass eye.

The proprietor looked horrified.

"It's Jake's," he said briefly, inspecting the discovery. "Mary," he added, calling to a passing waitress, "you tell Jake that vanilla at the third table found it. Tell him if it happens again I'll discharge him. You see," he continued apologetically to the agitated customer, "I've got a man down stairs to make cream. He makes the finest ice cream in the state of Michigan, but he's got a false eye, and he's always leavin that eye around and losin it. It's got to stop now, though, or that sort of thing will break up the ice cream business."

"Do you mean to say," faltered the old man, "that other people have found that same—same—article in their cream?"

"Oh, well," admitted the proprietor diplomatically, "you're the first vanilla."—Detroit Free Press.

Natural Distrust.

It is an old story of the man who said, when he was offered tea during his visit to an army encampment, "If my last cup was tea, I'll take coffee; if it was coffee, I'll take tea," but it may still serve to illustrate proper, best wishes as well as injudicious. Another learner from experience figures in the following anecdote:

Two amateur sportsmen had gone out together for a day's shooting and began operations by attempting to load their guns.

"See here," said one of them, pausing in the act, "which do you put in first, powder or shot?"

"Why, powder, of course," returned his friend.

"Oh, do you?" was the reply. "Then I don't!"—Youth's Companion.

And Lindley Murray Wept.

To a Park row waiter belongs the proud distinction of uttering what is probably the most ungrammatical sentence ever evolved from the brain of illiterate man.

"Waiter," he piped, as the dishes were slammed down before him, "this beef isn't sufficiently rarebroiled."

With a smile of contempt the servitor bore the viands back to the kitchen window and restored a moment later without having touched them.

Had Done His Part.

Some years ago there lived in the western part of Pennsylvania an old circuit preacher known as Father West. His good humor and genial kindheartedness had made him a special favorite with the young people of his district and his services in "tying the knot" were in request.

On one occasion, so the story goes, upon his arrival at a certain town after a long journey he found several couples awaiting his blessing. The poor old man was tired and wished to have the ceremony as short as possible; so he said, with the prompt-ness for which he was noted, "Stand up and join hands!"

This request having been complied with, he went rapidly through a marriage service which was the product of his own originality and had at least the advantage of brevity.

"There," he said, when he had finished the ceremony, "ye can go now; ye're man and wife, and may the Lord—"

Two of the couples did not once avail themselves of this permission, and presently it came out that the sudden command in fact had confused them and they had taken the hands of the wrong persons.

The old preacher's eyes twinkled with amusement as he took in the situation. But he recollected himself and dispersed the company with a gracious wave of his hands.

"I married ye all," said he reassuringly; "now sort yourselves."—Youth's Companion.

Proved an Alibi.

It was a case of chicken stealing and the police had been sent for to find the man around the henhouse. The lawyer for the prosecution was one who, if he had been Napoleon Bonaparte, never would have crossed the Alps; he would simply have pulled them up by the roots and thrown them over the fence. The prisoner was an unknown tramp and lame at that.

"You say you don't know anything about this thief?" queried the lawyer fiercely.

"That's what I swore to, sir," replied the tramp meekly.

"You were in the back yard of Slamtipp's house about supper time?"

"Yes, sir."

"You know the location of the henhouse?"

"Yes, sir."

"You were seen on the road in front of the house some time after dark?"

"I was there, sir."

"You were in the yard after dark?"

"Yes, sir, and after supper also, sir," replied the prisoner, with a wan smile at his innocent little joke in such a place.

"And you were seen by the cook sitting on the doorstep with your shoe off?"

"Yes, sir, there was a pebble in it that was too big to get out of the hole it got in at."

"Now, sir, I purpose to prove that you made those tracks with your bare feet while you were stealing the chickens of the plaintiff."

"You can't do it, sir," said the prisoner mildly, but firmly.

"And why not, pray?" asked the prosecutor, with fine sarcasm.

"Because, sir, I've got one wooden leg, sir," and he gave a kick that sent it clean across the courtroom and almost knocked a constable senseless.—Detroit Free Press.

CONCERNING MOVABLE DECORATIONS.

Why Broken Lines Should be Used to their Arrangement.

The principles governing the arrangement of movable decorations on a mantelpiece is interestingly set forth in the Decorator and Furnisher from which we take the illustrations:

FIG. 1.

The broken line, in consequence of the angles produced and of the multiplication of faces, creates an impression of motion and life, while the straight line, as well as the uniformly curved line, the circular line, conveys an idea of solidity, durability, of strength and support. The latter, therefore, find universal application in our architectural decoration. Entablatures, cornices, lintels of doors and windows, chimney pieces, etc., are, therefore, always constructed on straight or curved lines since it is essential, above all things, that they should convey an impression of stability, of endurance, of rest and safety. Our furniture also must be built in accordance with these principles, and requires the exclusive use of the straight and the curved line.

FIG. 3.

It is entirely different, however, with movable decorations. Here the broken line, with its suggestion of motion and life, must be awarded its due. It would be an unpreachable to finish off the top of a mantel with an elegant curve as it would be objectionable to arrange the movable decorations on the mantel so that their tips would form a regular curve, or would form a straight line parallel with the mantel-shelf or table. See Figs. 1 and 2.

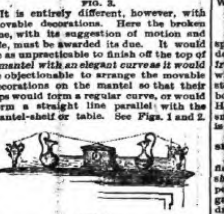

FIG. 4.

From these observations we may draw a practical conclusion and apply it to

DANDELION SALAD.

One of the Best Spring Medicines and Blood Purifiers.

Dandelion is without doubt one of the best tonics we have, as old wives discover at this season. The nauseating bleak stews they made of the roots, however, possessed no more tonic value than do the soup white bleached leaves served in a delicious salad dressing. Wash a quart of the bleached leaves thoroughly, as they are quite likely to be sandy. Reject all stale leaves. Wipe carefully with a cloth, so as to absorb the moisture. Mix a scant half teaspoonful of salt with half a saltspoonful of pepper. Stir them into two tablespoonfuls of sweet oil. Break the leaves of the dandelion a little if necessary. Toss them about in the salad-bowl in the oil and seasoning. Then sprinkle over all a tablespoonful of the very best vinegar. Toss them all and serve the salad at once.

Cranberry Meringue Pie.

A very good pie is made of cranberries, decorated with a meringue, exactly like a lemon pie. Stew a quart of cranberries with a cup of water for twenty minutes; then add a cup of sugar, or, if you do not like an acid pie, a cup and a half of sugar. Line a pie-plate and fill it with this mixture. Cover it with a meringue, made of the beaten whites of three eggs, three tablespoonfuls of sugar and a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Spread it over the pie and bake ten minutes longer.

Preserved Oranges.

Boil the orange peel till tender enough to mash, separating the pulp from skin and seeds very carefully. When the peels are very tender drain them and pound them thoroughly and pass them through a colander. Put pulp and juice and pounded peels together and to each pint allow one pound of fine granulated sugar. Boil together from twenty-five to thirty minutes; or until clear and thick. With very juicy oranges it takes longer.

Apple Snow.

Peel and grate one large sour apple, sprinkling over it a small cupful of powdered sugar as you grate it, to keep it from turning dark. Break into this the whites of two eggs and beat it all constantly for half an hour. Use a large bowl, as it beats up very stiff and light. Heap this into a glass dish, pour a fine, smooth custard around it and serve. This is a very delicate dessert.

Shine from Black Silks and Diagonals.

Lay the garment on a table and with a flannel wet with cider vinegar rub the shiny places well until they have disappeared. It does not matter how wet the garment gets. Hang it up in the shade to dry, and the shiny glass that made a new garment look old will have disappeared, leaving it as fresh and crisp as if just from the store.

SANTA MARIA.

1492—Four hundred years ago today, on a Friday, Columbus sailed from Palos, Spain, with three ships and 120 men. His main vessel was the Santa Maria. Sept. 25 Martin Pinson declared that he saw land, but it was Oct. 12 before real land was seen by Rodrigo Triana first.

1735—Oliver Hazard Perry, naval hero, born in South Kingston, R. I., died 1819.

1823—Thomas Francis Meagher, soldier and Irish patriot, born in Waterford, Ireland; drowned in Montana, July 1, 1867, while governor of the territory.

1842—Christine Nilsson, singer, born in Sweden; last sang in the United States April 16, 1888.

1850—Commodore Jacob Jones, who commanded the American brig Wasp when it captured the British brig Frolic, died at Philadelphia, aged 82.

BREVITIES

—The borough new fire whistle has proved unsatisfactory and will be sent back.

—Erastus Day, who was prostrated by the heat last Friday while at work in an oat field near Westfield, is slowly recovering. He has been confined to his bed at his home in that place.

—The New York National League team desires to play with the Crescents here on Friday, August 12. If sufficient enthusiasm can be worked up in the meanwhile to warrant the extra expense, the game will probably play here on that date.

—Complaints are being made at Westfield that all the jobs done there are given to Plainfield workmen, brought down for that purpose. The reason given by a Westfield employer is that he can get better service out of the Plainfielders.

—Messrs. Ayers, Mulford and Manning, the committee appointed by the Council regarding the Peace street opening, will meet all property owners, who have suggestions or complaints, at a meeting the latter part of August which will be duly advertised.

—A good-looking young man and a very pretty girl called upon Justice Nash at his residence on Prospect avenue, yesterday afternoon, and requested him to marry them. He did so with becoming alacrity and the couple departed, it is presumed, in a highly blissful state of mind. The bride and groom hailed from Somerset county. Justice Nash refused to give their names.

—The petition to change the name of North Richmond street to Norwood avenue, which was taken from the table and passed on its second reading at the Council meeting Monday evening, will soon become a law. Norwood avenue will then run from East Front street to Mountain avenue, as Mr. Hyde, who owns the property North of the brook, says he will call the street cut through his land by that name.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Van Arsdale, are at Spring Lake.

Mr. Joseph Gilban of East Sixth street is sojourning in Vermont.

Mr. James G. Pope and Mr. William Pope, are at Asbury Park.

Mr. A. H. Mulford, of Sandford avenue, is at Silver Bay, Lake George.

Mrs. Arthur Stryker of Peace street has returned from Ocean Grove.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murray are at the Marion House, Lake George, N. Y.

Miss Julia E. Bulkley sailed yesterday for Europe by steamship Friesland of the Red Star line.

Mr. A. W. Waldron of Central avenue left town yesterday for Moscow, Pa., to join his wife and son.

Mr. John W. Murray and family, of Central avenue and Eighth street, are at the Marion House, Lake George, N. Y.

Miss Kiernan, of the North Plainfield public school, is spending two weeks at the Columbia House, Ocean Grove.

Mrs. G. D. Patten, Miss Lulu Patten, Miss Florence Abbott and Miss Delphine Bowers, of this city, are at Asbury Park.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Wentworth, of New York City, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Constantine P. Ralli, of Belvidere avenue.

Mrs. John P. Emmons and family are summering at Avon, N. J. Mr. Emmons is kept too busy in Plainfield at his business, to get off for a longer period than over Sundays.

Mr. and Mrs. Constantine P. Ralli will give a children's party on the lawn at their place at Netherwood, on Monday, in honor of the birthday of their little daughter, Pauline.

Miss Hamie Jacob and Miss Lulu Jacob of this city have returned from a visit to their cousins, Miss May Rourke and Miss Mattie Rourke. The Misses Rourke returned with them.

Manager Thomas Keller of the Crescent League team left town to-day for Denver, Colorado, where he will attend the grand conclave of the Knights Templar, after which he will continue on a business trip through the western States in the interest of the United States Cartridge Co.

Past sturdy Republican, ex-Mayor Pine, of North Plainfield, deplores the present methods of conducting campaigns, which are not edifying, and longs for the good old times of joint debate where the voter could hear both sides discussed fairly by chosen champions face to face. Why not let us have something of that kind during the campaign.

IN THE SWEET BY AND BY

WE WILL HAVE THE PROPOSED NEW STREET.

The Township Committee Meeting—Arguments Pro and Con Regardless of Rules—A Petition to Open Duer Street to Madison Avenue.

In response to public notice a meeting of the Township Committee was held in Spencer's Hall, Somerset street, North Plainfield last evening, many property owners interested being present.

Chairman Allen called the meeting to order at 8.15 o'clock. Clerk Martin read the minutes of the last meeting, which were approved. He also read filed objections from the following:

Mr. Fred'k Hughes, lawyer, New York, who says his assessment is almost one-seventh of the value of the lots.

Mr. Gideon Allen.

Mrs. Ida W. Coddington.

Mr. Frank Wolfe.

Mr. Eugene Moore.

Mrs. Maria Smalley.

Mrs. J. D. Green and W. J. Hudson.

Mrs. C. A. Hudson.

Messrs. Coddington and Rider. The notice of their assessment was made out to Mr. A. D. Thompson.

Mr. Wm. Boe.

Mr. Firman A. Long.

The chairman then gave the citizens the privilege of the floor.

Mr. Henry B. Lounsbury was the first speaker. He said, "I do not wish it understood that I am against the opening of the new street. I am not. I am in favor of it, and if my assessment is anyway near what I consider just I shall promptly pay it. I have no personal feeling against anyone in this matter, but I would like to have it explained how Mr. Messerschmidt is assessed damages to his property to the amount of $3,000, when with the new street cut through he would still have his house and a valuable strip of ground. To my certain knowledge he would have before the opening of the new street was proposed have sold his property gladly for $4,000.

Borough Counsel Reed explained under what laws the committee appointed to assess proceeded. That although the statute stated the limit of time for receiving appeals, if one appeal was sustained an entire readjustment of the amounts assessed on all properties would be necessary. This he had to re-explain several times. The following gentlemen also made objections or asked for information from Mr. Reed: Messrs. W. L. Brock, J. Goodwin, L. Horton, W. Smith, L. B. Codington, Geo. Fairchild and W. Pangborn.

A petition was read from Messrs. Babcock and Stillman asking for the opening of Duer street to Madison avenue. The two signers and Evalyn P. Dyer, another interested party, in conjunction owned more than half the property in question. It is the necessary consent of owners was there represented. The petition was filed.

WANTED TO KNOW WHERE HIS LOT WAS.

A laugh was caused when the clerk read the following brief note:

GENTS—Please find my lot before you assess it. I am at a loss to know what you have assessed me with any land. I have no knowledge of ever buying anything. Surely you must have struck the wrong man. Yours truly,

J. D. REYNOLDS.

The lot in question is on Mountain avenue and is assessed $40.80.

The Township Committee adjourned at about 11.30 o'clock. The property owners present went home at about 9.30. As far as could be ascertained the majority favored the opening Peace street.

No Change in Mr. Smalley's Condition.

Up to 8.30 o'clock this afternoon, there was no change in the condition of Daniel I. Smalley, the well-known North avenue merchant. Doctors Hedges, Ziglio and Carmen have been almost constantly with him. Mr. Smalley was taken suddenly with convulsions at one o'clock yesterday morning, followed with an attack of paralysis. He has not recovered consciousness since the attack, and the doctors say there is no hope of his recovery.

The Zimmerman Reception.

The reception to Arthur A. Zimmerman, champion bicyclist of the world, will be held at the Athletic Grounds, Asbury Park, to-morrow. Wheelmen desiring to attend can go with the Presbyterian and Congregational Sunday-school excursion at less cost than by the usual way.

Will Lay the Corner-Stone on Sunday.

The corner-stone of the First Church of Christ which is to be erected on Grove street will be laid on Sunday. The ceremonies will begin at half-past four o'clock in the afternoon. Rev. Mr. Clearer will officiate.

Stopped Work on Account of the Heat.

The workmen employed on the new buildings being erected by Messrs. Cook Bros., at Westfield, N. J., quit work last week on account of the excessive heat, and only commenced again yesterday.

—Van Emburgh & White call special attention to a fine storm serge suit that they are offering at what they say is an exceptionally low price of $4.39.

A LEAP SAVED HER LIFE.

AN OLD WOMAN, AGED SEVENTY YEARS, IN DEATH'S SHADOW.

An Engineer's Whistle "Down Brakes" Causes old Mrs. Hayflicks to Spring from the Track as the Train Rushed by—The Sad Story of Desertion the Accident Brought Out.

At about nine o'clock yesterday morning a long freight train rolled by Plainfield. There were 65 cars in the train, and a Plainfielder was in the caboose at the end.

The train was under full headway as it entered "Fanwood Cut," a narrow ravine just beyond Fanwood, and the sudden shrill shriek of the whistle meaning "down brakes" caused the men in the caboose to spring to their feet with celerity.

The flagman stationed high in the air at the "cut," from his perch on the hillside knew the cause of the shrill signal, and, as the caboose rolled by, brought one clenched hand horizontally against the palm of the other, and then the occupants of the caboose knew the locomotive had struck some one—for that is the railroad men's signal.

They looked back and saw a rumpled heap of humanity lying in the ditch. Several of them ran back, when the train stopped. In the ditch lay an old woman, gray-haired and poorly clad. One of her shoes lay on the track and a basket she carried had been flung rods away.

She proved to be uninjured, but was dazed by the fall.

Her escape from death was almost miraculous. The engineer saw her walking on the track, but thought she would get off in time. This she did not do and his whistle of warning was immediately followed by the signal "down brakes." When the locomotive was within a few rods of her the old woman, startled as last, turned her head, and the convulsive spring she instinctively gave, fortunately carried her off the track, and the impetus rolled her into the ditch.

Her basket, in which she had been putting coal, was struck by the locomotive and tossed one side. An old brogan, several sizes too large, fell from her foot as she sprung from the track, and was found there later.

In answer to inquiries, the woman, whose advanced age, 70 years, has rendered her rather childish, only bewailed the fact that "Tommy, the villain, ran away and left us, and Katie was the finest girl in the country."

The woman's shoe was replaced on her foot, her basket secured, and she was put on the train, which so nearly ran over her, and sent to Westfield, where the flagman said she lived.

In speaking of her, the flagman said: "I have seen her on the track dozens of times, and my heart has been in my mouth at some of her escapes. I thought the good old lady was done for this time sure."

The Plainfielder aboard the caboose went with the old woman to her home, for which act of kindness she showered him with blessings, one of which, however, was decidedly dubious. It was: "God bless you, you'll never be an old man." He has not any particular desire to die young, but he thanked her just the same.

Upon arriving at the house, situated in what is known as the "West End," at Westfield, a sad state of affairs was disclosed.

There the old woman's daughter, named Mrs. Thomas Hayflicks, came out. She said, "Mother has been brooding because Tommy (Mrs. Hayflick's husband) had run off some time ago and left us with three children, one only three weeks old. We have managed to get along, although sometimes it has been hard work."

Old Mrs. Hayflick had contracted the habit, believing it would help her daughter and family of little ones, of slipping off quietly and picking up coal on the tracks, in spite of the daughter's objections. She will be watched closer hereafter.

It might be said that if, upon examination, the proves as worthy a case for aid as if now seems, paying work would be an acceptable help to the poor family.

"Mrs. Hayflicks," said the Plainfielder, "is too spunky a woman to accept charity, even if she is ill."

PEN SKETCHES FROM LIFE.

Between Fanwood and Westfield is a saloon known as the "Half-way House." It is well patronized.

Tuesday afternoon a genuine "bum" and a tough specimen at that, lounged in, and ordered a beer. He got it. He kept on ordering and drinking until seven mugs of the Hops and Barley appeared through the hair-covered hole in his face which he abused as a mouth.

When the eighth glass was put before him, in response to his order, and just as the smiling bartender was gaily counting on his fingers the cost of so much fluid, a carriage drove up, and within a few minutes, in response to "Watch the glass, I'll be back in a wink, I must see dat man," the tough put back the eighth glass of beer and hurried from the door. It was down very slick. The bartender kept one eye on the glass of beer for fully five minutes before the fact that he had "been done" dawned on him.

Then—Oh! my!

He says he will know the man again if he sees him. The little "if" is the point the tough will watch out for.

—Dr. E. A. Estabrook, whose ability to pull teeth without pain, brought him fame here last year, is at the City Hotel for a few days.

ATTACKED BY A MAD DOG

A CHILD BADLY TORN AND HIS LIFE ENDANGERED.

The Father, a Westfield Butcher, Knocks the Dog Down with a Gun and Then Shoots It.—A Terrible Exciting Scene.

Patrick Traynor, a grocery man and butcher, at Westfield, is the owner of a large mongrel dog, which he keeps chained in his yard.

Yesterday the dog broke its chain and savagely attacked Mr. Traynor's two small sons, Johnnie and Willie, aged seven and nine years respectively, who were playing nearby. The animal bit Johnnie three times in the arm—twice near the shoulder and once in the wrist. The other boy escaped injury by springing into a wagon.

The dog, which was standing growling over Johnnie, who lay prostrate beneath it, left its victim, when Mr. Traynor, startled by the cries, rushed out with his gun and attacked it.

He struck it to the earth by a well-aimed blow with the butt of the gun as it sprang at him, and then shot it.

The range of the gun was against the dog's body when he fired, and the one shot was all that was necessary.

The wounds of the boy were cauterized and an examination will be made to ascertain if the dog was mad.

CONSOMME FOR THE BRIGHTONS.

A glance at the score of yesterday's game between the Crescents and the Brighton Athletics will indicate that it was a very much one-sided affair. The only event that made it a bit interesting was the presentation, previous to the calling of the game, of a richly-mounted gold jewel of the Order of Mystic Shrine to Manager Keller, who is a member of that body. Just before the ball rang, Col. C. E. Moore walked out from the shadow of the grand stand and advancing to the home-plate turned and faced the spectators. Then, in a very clever little speech on behalf of the members of the Crescent League, he presented Manager Keller with the jewel. Keller accepted it in appropriate language and a happy and expansive grin while the spectators cheered lustily. The jewel consists of a selected pair of tiger's claws, richly mounted in Roman gold. The claws are spread and supported from a Sphinx head cut in lava and surrounded by pearls, rubies and other precious stones. Insignia of other high degrees of Masonry are also represented, and all hung from a platinum bar miniature. After the cheering had subsided the ball sounded and the game began. The Crescents batted well and made four runs in the first inning, six in the fourth, two in the sixth, and two in the eighth. The Brightons batting.

At the beginning of the game, Turner and "Willie" Murphy made a bet as to who would make the largest number of hits and runs. In the ninth inning there were two men out. Murphy went to the bat and made a hit. In order to prevent Turner, who was to foller him at the bat, from making a hit he allowed himself to be put out between first and second base to the great amusement of the crowd, for this made them tie. Turner made a vigorous protest and declared that Umpire Halford should rule the "gentle Willie" $10 for his bad play. In the sixth inning Murphy took Sneeden's place in the box.

Brightons...	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0—0

KEELEY'S CASE POSTPONED.

Other Matters Before City Judge Codington this Morning.

The case of Patrick Keeley the hackman who is charged by Special Officer Frisbie, the dog catcher, with atrocious assault and battery, which was to have been tried this morning before City Judge Coddington and a jury was adjourned to the 10th inst., because of the difficulty in obtaining a jury.

John Dorrington and John Dorrington, Jr., were brought up on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct. They plead not guilty and were told to appear for trial next Thursday at one o'clock.

Arthur Max when arraigned for drunkenness and disorderly conduct promptly admitted his guilt, and, as it was his first offense, he was released upon the payment of a fine of $5.

Compelled to Pay His Poll Taxes.

Justice Nash accompanied by Constable Allaband hunted up Patrick Guinee of West Fourth street, yesterday afternoon, and compelled him to pay his poll taxes, which amounted to $3. Guinee was found on West Seventh street and placed under arrest. After an animated conversation with the officers and a walk of three quarters of a mile, Guinee concluded to make arrangements to pay up.

TRIED TO BLOW UP THE HOUSE

A Woman Interrapted in an Outrage in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Aug. 4th. (Special.)—An attempt was made last night to blow up the house of C. D. Irwin, a wealthy Board of Trade operator in Calumet avenue, and the police are searching for the would-be assassin, who is a woman.

The attempt would have been successful had not persons passing by frightened the woman, who left a large can half filled with a high explosive and ran toward the lake.

OUTRAGED MISS WOODS.

She is the Niece of Goschen and Released to Mrs. Burk-Roche.

LONDON, Aug. 4. (Special.)—A horrible outrage is reported from the neighborhood of Chiselhurst, Kent. The victim is Miss Woods, a niece of the Right Hon. George J. Goschen, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and therefore a connection by marriage of Mrs. Burke-Roche of New York.

Demoralized by Hail.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., August 4.—(Special.) The worst hailstorm that ever occurred in this section came down upon Kalamazoo and the surrounding country last evening causing about $50,000 damage to buildings and crops. Some of the hailstones measured three inches in length and eight inches in circumference.

Impaled on a Fence.

NEW YORK, August 4th. (Special.)—As a result of a quarrel Mrs. Mary Phillips a woman living in a tenement house on Cherry street was thrown from a window and impaled on an iron fence in the street below. The woman is still alive but it is thought she will die.

—As the result of observations of a midnight prowl around Asbury Park, Founder Bradley had five extra policemen put on for night duty.

—There was a large and fashionably apparelled audience to honor the inauguration of the season at the Walnut Street Theatre, which has been renovated and touched up so as to look almost as good as new. The play, "Hands Across the Sea," was a new one—a melodrama of the modern Anglican stamp, written by Henry Pettit, author of "The World" and part author of other successful pieces. Mr. Pettit, in "Hands Across the Sea," shows that his hand has not forgotten its cunning, for with nothing really novel except some of the stage effects, he has made a play that is very interesting and full of exciting scenes and situations, a stage story that catches on here and will so in London, because of the really human spirit that pervades the work, the carefully formulated sentiment, the contrast of humor and pathos, and the various unique and happy surprises presented. "Hands Across the Sea" was handsomely set and thoroughly well played, gave great satisfaction, and was generously applauded.—Taggart's Times, Philadelphia.

EDITORIAL NOTES

You love people as much when you talk to them about your family and relatives as when you talk about yourself.

The remarkable formation of Salton lake in the desert from a break in the Colorado river last year will be remembered by all newspaper readers. The lake gradually subsided, leaving mud and marsh, but where it was a change no less marvelous than the appearance of the lake itself has taken place. The ground, which before was a sheet of glistening sand and dust, is already covered with a luxurious growth of vegetation. There will be no more desert in that spot. The vegetation that has appeared shows the soil to be of great fertility. The break in the Colorado will be utilized to convey water to Salton lake, and there in a few years will spring up orchards, gardens and grain fields capable of maintaining thousands of people. The lake bed promises to become as productive as the fruit region of California.

The wheelmen of the country will finally make themselves heard to the betterment of the highways of this wretchedly roaded republic. They have already the senate interstate commerce commission to introduce a bill for the appointment of a national highway commission to take in hand the highways of the country and improve them. But we have already departments and commissions enough. If we keep on we shall presently have as many as Great Britain, that poor old commission ridden land.

No, we do not need any commission. The simplest way is always the best way; and the simplest way will be to put the country roads of the United States in charge of the agricultural department, and let it make examinations and recommend such measures as will be advisable. The machinery of office is already there, the authority in a general way is already there, and farmers are more interested in good roads than anybody else, except our bicycling friends.

Politics of the Labor Unions.

What will organized labor, as represented by trades unions, do in the fall political campaign? Practically nothing, answers in The North American Review Mr. Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor. Members of the trades unions will vote individually according to their political affiliations, Democratic or Republican. Some of them will vote with the new People's party, but even that does not represent labor's "views," because it is an organization mostly of employers—agricultural employers—not of agricultural laborers. There is an increasing disposition among workingmen to abandon the old parties and flock each his own way.

The trades unions, if we understand Mr. Gompers aright, are at present much in the go-it-alone-and-go-it-bear attitude as regards existing political parties. Absolute economic independence for the laborers of field, farm, workshop and factory is the goal Mr. Gompers sets for himself and associates first of all. With this complete economic independence will come everything else that labor calls for. Mr. Gompers is happy to believe that he perceives among the members of the labor organizations an increasing tendency to rely on themselves and their own efforts and less on the aid of other people.

How Often Can We Love?

How many times can a man or woman be in love, really, truly and intensely? In undertaking to answer this question one wise editor seems to take it for granted that while a man is capable of loving "really, truly and intensely" as often as a suitable object meets his eye, woman has only one real love—a man who she idealizes and worships for ever.

This fine theory does not seem to wear in real life. Both men and women may be in love over and again. A woman may adore a good looking youth when she is sixteen, or she may be attracted to a scapegrace and think she wants to save his soul, when she has only a sickly, sentimental fancy for his personality, which would quickly change to loathing if she should marry him. At one period of their lives both men and women love one kind of person, at another time another, the ideal ever changing as they themselves change. Some keep on falling in love with one after another, trying to find the right one, and they describe the search as a very agreeable one. But it is a good deal easier and pleasanter falling in love than falling out of it successfully.

With those who have been in love oftenest, however, this fact undoubtedly remains—though they have loved over and again there is always one whose memory in after years is dearer and sweeter than that of all the rest. In the strong, wise years, when mere magnetic attraction can no longer draw one to fresh faces, this seems to have been the only true love. And if this dearer than all the rest happens to be the one to whom the lover is married, happy indeed is he or she.

We change, all of us, and those who change most grow the most. Fortunate are they who married their ideals and whose ideals change as they change and grow as they grow. This comes the nearest being perfect wedded happiness.

CHARGED WITH MURDER

The Officials of the Homestead Mills Placed Under Bail.

HUGH ROSS LAYS THE INFORMATION

The Judge Inclined to Think That the Charges Against Frick, Leishman and Lovejoy Will Not Hold—The Prosecution Claims Potter Ordered the Shooting.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 4.—The threatened proceedings against the officers of the Carnegie company were taken. Warrants were issued for H. C. Frick, chairman; A. F. Lovejoy, secretary; H. M. Curry, treasurer; J. G. H. Leishman, vice chairman, and others, their authorities not known. Each of these appeared by counsel, pleaded not guilty to the charge of murder brought against them, and were liberated in $10,000 bail.

Constable Wood, of Homestead, arrived with four warrants on charges of murder. One was for Superintendent Potter, and the others for Messrs. Dovey, Covey and McConnell. The constable served the warrants on Messrs. Dovey and McConnell, who were at their work. Covey crossed the river and made his way down to Pittsburg.

By this time a rumor had spread through Homestead that all the entire executive heads of the Carnegie company would pass through the town under arrest. As a consequence the stations at Munhall City Farm and Homestead were crowded with locked out men. Dovey and McConnell were taken on to Munhall station. So great was the crowd that Major Crawford, of the Fifteenth regiment, sent down two companies to preserve order. The crowd gradually pressed their way to the train until the militia drove them back.

Lovejoy Was Smart.

Meantime a very interesting scene was transpiring in Pittsburg. Before it was thought Secretary Lovejoy and Mr. Leishman would be arrested. Secretary Lovejoy, as soon as he heard that a warrant had been issued, left his office by a back door, crossed two blocks on fire escapes and had his bail bond signed in the court before any one knew it.

The result was that Judge Ewing's court was nearly empty when the heads of the Carnegie company appeared. Judge Ewing stroked his whiskers as he waited for Alderman King, whose presence by the Pittsburg custom was necessary before the men could be admitted to bail.

When the alderman arrived the prisoners formally surrendered themselves. W. J. Brennan and John F. Cox were present for the prosecution and E. J. Breck and P. C. Knox for the defense.

The information sworn to by Hugh Ross charged that on July 6, 1892, H. C. Frick, T. F. Lovejoy, Robert G. A. Covey, J. G. A. Leishman, H. M. Curry, U. W. Bernell, Fred Primer, W. H. Burt, Nevin McConnell, James Dovey, John Cooper and Fred Kinnie did, of their malice aforethought, feloniously and riotously, with force and arms and deadly weapons, kill and murder, and did cause feloniously to be killed and murdered John E. Morris, George W. Hunter, Silas Wayne and Joseph Sotax, then and there being in the peace of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

This information was made upon the information received and believed to be the truth. This deponent, therefore, prays and desires that a warrant may issue against the aforesaid parties that they be arrested and held to answer the charge of murder, and further deponent saith not.

Counsel for the prosecution said that they would not resist application for bail in the cases of Messrs. Lovejoy, Leishman and Curry, but would resist in the case of Potter and all the Pinkertons. The latter mentioned at once gave bonds signed by R. W. Melon, and immediately left court and returned to the chief office of the company. All this time Superintendent Potter had occupied a back seat. When his turn came it was found that he was absent.

The Judge's Severe Remarks.

Somehow or other he had disappeared during the proceedings, and his counsel gave it to be understood that he would be present later on and give bail or stand trial. After application for the commitment of the other men Judge Ewing was especially severe. He remarked:

I think if the men in the newspapers is true none of the men charged in the information can be held for murder, and certainly not in the first degree. The men on shore were there illegally, and unless you can show me there was a malicious and deliberate killing there is no law reading upon them. The men on the barges were there legally, and the others were there illegally. There is no equality between these two parties. It is not a very material who began the shooting.

The men in the barges had the right to use all necessary force to maintain their rightful possession of this property. If there is a case here I will hear it, but you must show me some willful and uncalled for killing. One of the crowds was a mob, the other was there legally. You do not stand in the same position. I take your own statements and can see no parallel case. The people on the bank were in the wrong from the start. If this is a case of retaliation I would like to know it.

This information is made by a man who him self is charged with murder, and it now on bail. It would have been better had it been made by some other person. The district attorney should have been informed of this. It has a peculiar look and tastes of retaliation. Mr. Wyre, and that is what you would inform the district attorney what case you have against these other five, you have waived a hearing. You must have a good case or it smells to me.

The court then adjourned for the day. McConnell and Dovey were taken to jail. The prosecution makes the assertion that Mr. Potter was on the boat and gave orders to fire, and that Brennan pointed on the outskirts of the mob were specially picked out and killed. The remainder against whom charges were made are accused as accomplices.

BE KEEN EYES WATCH MARS.

But So Far Nothing New or Startling Has Been Developed.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 4.—Professor Holden, of Lick observatory, has not responded to the request for the result of his observations of Mars. It has, however, been learned that the night was clear and that the observations were successful.

No unusual appearances had been noticed on the disk of the planet up to midnight. The astronomers were measuring with a micrometer the distances of the two satellites from the planet, and expected to spend the night at the task.

Owing to the wide interest over the possible results of the observations, Professor Holden sent this dispatch here:

There is absolutely nothing to be said about our Mars observations from night to night, or about our observations of the whole year even, until after the work has been gone over with care and a map made of our results, which will take until October next at least."

All, or nearly all, the present excitement over Mars is exaggerated, and utterly useless to the people in general, as it is harmful to true science. Exaggerated and ignorant expectations, such as relate to communication with the inhabitants of a planet which we not only absolutely certain is habitable, will not be realized.

An Atmosphere Visible.

NORTHFIELD, Minn., Aug. 4.—Observations taken at Loovel's observatory have been unsatisfactory, as Mars has not yet reached its highest altitude. One of the moons has been visible for thirty hours, but the other eludes observation. No startling discoveries are expected, although an atmosphere is clearly visible.

Watching from Dartmouth.

HANOVER, N. H., Aug. 4.—Professor S. A. Young, astronomer of Princeton college, and Professor E. B. Frost, of Dartmouth, are closely watching the planet Mars from the Dartmouth observatory, but nothing worthy of note has been seen.

Tale Not Well Equipped.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 4.—Yale is not well enough equipped in its astronomical department to do very important work on Mars. Its 8-inch Grubb equatorial simply permits the astronomers to obtain a good general view of planetary detail.

Sleeves for Summer Gowns.

The most fashionable sleeves of the hour is formed of two puffs, the first one extending midway between the elbow and elbow, the second finishing at the elbow itself. Heretofore depends a deep flounce of gold lace, with finely and forming an exaggerated "sabot." Some dresses have a globe or empire puff sleeve still a tight-fitting under "manche," With this the lace flounce depends from the puff. Velvet sleeves, plain, beaded, glace or shaded, are also among the fads of the hour. They seem a trifle inappropriate with the gown of finely and crepon and the like, but that does not in the least hinder them from being worn

ADJOURNMENT IN SIGHT

A GIFT OF $2,500,000 IS SUGGESTED.

The Fair Item to Be Taken Out of the Civil Sundry Bill and Voted on Separately—The Scheme Will Probably Go Through and Chicago Is Disgusted.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—The second caucus of Democratic members of the house resulted in a harmonious adjustment of the differences which have divided the Democratic majority on the World's fair appropriation, and if the plan adopted be carried out (and there appears to be little difficulty in the way of this) congress will adjourn early next week with the chances in favor of Monday as the day.

The caucus was well attended. Three members of the Texas delegation—Messrs. Kilgore, Bailey and Anthony, who have been bitterly opposed to the World's fair appropriation clause in the sundry civil bill—withdrew from the hall of the house early in the caucus, refusing to place themselves in a position where they might be bound by its action. Mr. Holman presided and Mr. Reilly, of Pennsylvania, was secretary. Mr. Reilly, as chairman of the committee on adjustment of the difficulty, presented the report of the committee, and entered into an explanation of its details. The report of the committee is as follows:

The Propositions.

This committee has been to-day by Democrats of the house the following propositions, it being understood that it does not commit any member to support the same in the house or to against the World's fair appropriation:

First—Reconsider the vote by which the house has receded from its disagreement from the senate amendment, and send the sundry civil bill back into conference.

Second—Instruct the conference on the sundry civil bill amendment, appropriating $5,000,000, the Durborrow bill be taken up to reduce the amount to $2,500,000 appropriating this to aid in the success of the fair, and that a final vote upon it without interruption be taken on the last Saturday, the 6, at 5 p. m.

Third—That meantime, last year's sundry civil appropriations be extended and the power of the house be exerted to enforce the attendance of absent members.

Fourth—Should either the Durborrow bill as amended be carried or defeated, the vote thereon shall be regarded as a settlement of the question, and the sundry civil bill shall be considered as without the senate amendment.

Mr. Reilly told the caucus that the committee had labored long and earnestly to reach a satisfactory agreement, and that it could reach no better understanding than that shown by the report. He explained the necessity for the adoption, holding that the deadlock would be continued indefinitely if it were not agreed to. He outlined the mode of procedure planned and begged the caucus to sanction the agreement in the interest of peace.

When Mr. Reilly concluded his explanation there were loud cries of "Vote, vote." There was no attempt to oppose the report, and when Chairman Holman, yielding to the cries for the question, put the motion that the report be adopted there was a great chorus of "ayes," while not a member voted in the negative. Mr. Holman announced unanimous concurrence in the report, and the caucus adjourned after a session of less than an hour.

The New Programme.

According to the caucus action the house will now reconsider the vote by which it receded from its disagreement from the senate amendment appropriating $5,000,000, thus ridding the sundry civil bill of the World's fair feature, and the bill will be sent back to the senate. Then the Durborrow bill appropriating $5,000,000 for the fair and new on the calendar will be taken up and the senate amendment to the $2,500,000, the subscription feature eliminated and the bill so changed as to make the latter sum an absolute gift to the exposition.

Saturday afternoon a vote will be taken on the Durborrow bill. Some attempt at filibustering may be made to prevent the bill coming to a direct vote, but notwithstanding the assertion of Mr. Kilgore, of Texas, and some others that they will fight the gift of any sum if they keep congress in session continuously till March 4 next, the day the Fifty-second congress expires, it is almost certain that the action of the caucus will be carried out to the letter.

A strong feature in the report of the committee is the section providing that whether the Durborrow bill be carried or defeated, the vote on it shall be regarded as a settlement of the whole question. This means that congress can adjourn immediately after the programme agreed upon is carried, no matter whether the World's fair is provided for or not.

In Senate and House.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—The senate, in the course of an hour and a half's session, cleared the only three unopposed house bills remaining on the calendar and then resolved for some sign of agreement from the house on the sundry civil bill. A proposition by Mr. Call, of Florida, to send a special joint committee to investigate Cuba and other West India islands was shelved. Without doing anything further of interest the senate adjourned.

The house was in session but two hours and nothing was accomplished. Several votes were taken on dilatory motions, but no quorum appeared at any time.

Chicago Disappointed.

CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—General disappointment was expressed by directors of the fair at the delay with which friends of the exposition seem to have been led into what they term a trap by the filibusterers. The scheme to detach the $5,000,000 clause from the sundry civil bill and vote upon the proposition to appropriate $2,500,000 for the fair was regarded as a complete backdown. Director Ayer declared that if the Chicago delegation were urged to stand for the $5,000,000 bill in spite of the caucus decision.

THE WHIRL OF POLITICS

West Virginia Republicans Go Wild Over Elkins' Name.

THEY WANTED HIM FOR GOVERNOR.

But He Refused the Nomination and T. E. Davis Was Named—McKinley Still Talking Tariff in Nebraska—The Third Party Badly Beaten in Alabama.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Aug. 4.—The Republican state convention was called to order and Hon. Stephen B. Elkins was announced as permanent chairman and B. S. Jones, of Monongahela, secretary. The committee on resolutions reported a platform that contained no departure from the established creed. Nominations for governor were then made. Senator P. M. Morris, Ex-Attorney-General I. H. Duval, of Ritchie; Senator T. E. Davis, of Taylor, and James A. Menager, of Mason, were presented.

At this point some one mentioned the name of Elkins. The effect resembled that of a spark in a barrel of powder. The convention went wild, and though Chairman Elkins made numerous efforts to bring the delegates to order all failed. The outburst of enthusiasm lasted for half an hour. When enough order was secured for a recess Mr. Elkins said that he would consider the matter of his nomination and give his decision at the reassembling. After thoroughly considering the matter Secretary Elkins decided that under the circumstances he could not accept the nomination, and so notified the convention.

After the disposal of the Elkins boom, the enthusiasm of the convention seemed to vent itself on ex-Congressman Atkinson's candidacy. A ballot was proceeded with and resulted in no selection. Atkinson led closely followed by Davis. At this point Mr. Atkinson arose and asked that his name be taken from the candidates voted for, and a motion was made that the nomination of T. E. Davis be made by acclamation, which was carried with a rush. G. S. Hyer, of Braxton, was nominated for auditor on the second ballot after a lot of struggle, and the convention took another recess.

M'KINLEY ON THE STUMP.

He Again Addresses Nebraska Republicans on the Tariff.

LINCOLN, Aug. 4.—Governor McKinley addressed an enthusiastic audience of several thousand people on the state capitol grounds. Republican clubs from York, Otoe, Lancaster and other counties in the state were in attendance. The delegates to the Republican state convention attended in a body.

The distinguished guest was received with enthusiastic cheers upon his appearance. The speaker said:

"This magnificent assemblage is a magnificent tribute to a magnificent cause. Whenever anything has to be done in this country the Republican party has to do it. The Republican party occupies the most advanced position of any political party in the world.

"That no evil has come to the country by reason of the accidental Democratic occupying of the legislative and executive branches of the government was become a Democratic boast, and the president could not even throw the laws established by Republicans.

"There is not a page in the history of the Republican party that we would want blotted out. The Democratic party is a party of opposition, and a party of critics and grumblers. The Democratic party has constructed nothing in thirty years.

"The great question is, how shall we raise more than a million dollars every day that is necessary to carry on the government? There are two ways. One is by direct taxation. You can raise it by Henry George's idea, taking the land, or you can raise it by tariff taxation. You can raise it by taking yourself or taxing other people, who have products to sell in this country. This is the Republican idea. We do not believe in taxing ourselves while there are other people whom we can tax."

Alabama Democratic.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 4.—The new legislature of Alabama is overwhelmingly straight Democratic. In the senate 32 of 33 are supporters of Governor Jones and the regular state ticket, and in the house 61 out of 100 members are of the same faith. Returns from all but ten counties show that Governor Jones has a safe majority of 25,000. The other counties will not materially change the result.

McKinley's Next Talk.

OMAHA, Aug. 4.—Governor McKinley will speak at the Coliseum Friday afternoon. Excursion trains will be run from every direction, and the Republican campaign managers will make it the campaign open ing.

Justice O'Brien Resigns.

LAS VEGAS, N. M., Aug. 4.—Chief Justice James O'Brien, of the New Mexico supreme court, has resigned. He expected to receive the nomination for judge in his district in Minnesota, but was disappointed.

Wouldn't Indorse Harrity.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 4.—The Democratic county committee fixed Aug. 27 as the date for holding the primaries. A resolution indorsing National Chairman Harrity was defeated.

Minnesota's Alliance.

ST PAUL, Aug. 4.—The state executive committee of the Farmer's Alliance has withdrawn its state electoral ticket from the political contest.

Pendleton Again Named.

NEW MARTINSVILLE, W. Va., Aug. 4.—Congressman John A. Pendleton was renominated by the Democrats of the First West Virginia district.

Lester Renominated.

Lawler for Governor.

Hawkins and Grimm Surrender.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 4.—Colonel Hawkins and Surgeon Grimm, for whom warrants were issued in the lane case, surrendered to Alderman Riley, who fixed the amount of their bail at $1,000 each. Colonel W. S. Duffy attached his name to their bond.

Defrauded His Firm.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Aug. 4.—William H. Cone, of the firm of McGarrigle & Sweeney, was arrested, charged with grand larceny in taking moneys belonging to the firm.

PUBLIC SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

CITY OF PLAINFIELD.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a warrant issued by William R. Codington, Esq., City Judge of the City of Plainfield, in the County of Union, to make the several taxes assessed on lands, tenements, hereditaments and real estate in the city of Plainfield in the year eighteen hundred and ninety, the undersigned, the officer nominated and appointed by the Common Council for that purpose, will on Thursday, the twenty-second day of September next, at the hour of two o'clock in the afternoon, at his office, 34 Park avenue, in the city of Plainfield, sell so much thereof as, hereditaments and real estate hereunder described, at public vendue, for the shortest time for which any person or persons will agree to take the same and pay such taxes, together with the interests thereon, and costs, fees charges and expenses.

WOMAN'S WORLD

It is in little things that those subtle differences between the woman of the world and the novice are most marked. Important trifles are an essential part of beauty's environment. One may possess all of the virtues of splendid character and yet fail to strike the keynote of popular success in any given direction because of certain crudities of manner, dress, looks and general environment. It is therefore of the utmost importance to every one who aspires to popular recognition to remember that it is not only a duty to enhance personal charms to the utmost, but to add the refining and irresistible attractions of unselfishness, thoughtfulness, delicacy and regard for minor details of the toilet, dress, speech and bearing to natural advantages.

When woman says of dress or society, "I do not care for either; I regard both as a bore and waste of time; I do not believe in giving my precious hours to frivolities and useless pastime," she says something of more importance to think about," she stultifies herself with a crude kind of self satisfaction which excludes the higher ideas and, however fine her natural mental endowments, at once proclaims herself ignorant of the most powerful laws of differentiation in the ascending scale of complex human development.

Jennes Miller acknowledges that crude conditions of life will always exist, but there is no reason why any one who has the leisure, opportunity and means for harmonious development of taste should cling to the old neetic notion of the unworthiness of the body, and allow it to neglect the functions which are devoted to pleasure pure and simple.

It is a duty to seek society, not only for mental improvement, but for the stimulus afforded to the blood and general health by pleasurable relaxation from serious duties, and culture of manner, which is quite as much a factor in the development of the mind. To all properly constituted people society—that is, association with one's fellows for the mere delight of companionship—should afford genuine satisfaction, and healthfully constituted people have a perfect right to resist the pessimism which inveighs against those important trifles that are quite as necessary to well rounded character as are the serious interests which come from profound study and participation in philanthropic and moral reform. Variety is needed for harmonious growth. —Chicago Herald.

Degrees of Mourning.

Dress is a curiously impressionable, not to say meditinistic, material. It can be made to express grief and severity, coquetry and prudishness, pride and humility, good taste and every degree of tastelessness, but to try to make it express unmitigated sad, it is to be presumed, unultimatable woe is pushing its capacities entirely too far. Because no matter how perpetual your real anguish may be, after a certain time has elapsed fashion ordains that the blackness of darkness shall be "lightened," and that after a certain additional period it shall be renounced altogether, so that those who supposed by your dress a year or two ago that you were inconsolable now give your altered clothing a startled glance and mentally exclaim, "So she is not so inconsolable after all!" The very possibility of such a remark being made outrages a sensitive nature.

If "deep mourning" symbolizes a broken heart, then "half mourning" signifies that the two pieces are in process of reuniting, and left-off mourning means that the crack is no longer visible. If one would avoid the cold blooded conclusion one must not give bereavement a blacker hue by draping it in funereal tawdriness purchased at the "mourning counter." To wear mourning after a death is no more needful than to "wear rejoicing," if such a thing were possible, after a birth. There needs no other symbol of your joy in the latter case—nor of your grief in the former.

If our clothes must express our extremest emotions, the garment of praise is to be preferred to the spirit of heaviness.—Wives and Daughters.

A "Bad Day" for Children.

About once a month I noticed that my two strong, active children grew what was called "cross." I determined to watch for the cause, and discovered that even the infant boy can only stand a certain amount of exercise without becoming "worn out." When therefore at night I found one or the other particularly "cranky," I would say to myself: "It is time this child was rested. Tomorrow must be a 'bad day.'"

The children understood that this was no novelse punishment, but a simple sanitary measure. Playthings there were in plenty, but no getting out of bed. How that room did look, sometimes! Cut papers, toys, everything in every direction, but I knew that the little legs and body were obtaining a much needed rest and what did a little clutter more or less amount to?

The next day they would be as bright and "chipper" as young robins. I firmly believe that by this plan I have warded off many a little attack of actual illness by building on the physical strength so that sickness could not take a hold. This plan I believe to be original with me, but I am not only willing to give it away to all mothers, but to send as well hearty good wishes with it.—A Mother in Housekeepers' Weekly.

Scott's Heroines Generally Young.

Out of thirty of Sir Walter Scott's heroines sixteen are described as under twenty. Of the other fourteen six are undated. This leaves us eight, three of whom are set down as over twenty; two start at one side of the line and are carried over to the other; two are by implication rather than by the intention of the author taken out of their "teens," and one, Amy Robsart, is a heroine "of an uncertain age," since she is historically a middle aged matron and fictitiously a youthful bride. Of the six undated, the presumption is altogether in favor of the earlier age. A member once entertained a club with the statement that nearly all Scott's heroines are motherless.

They are girls who have grown up in the companionship of uncles or fathers, older men, and with an early responsibility of thought and action. They have had to plan their own wardrobes and decide upon their own conduct toward their lovers. Some of them have been behind the scenes of stirring political events. Nearly all have been thrown into situations where they had to think for themselves, to act with decision and in general to fulfill the whole duties of heroines. The heroines of Scott are, some of them, only lay figures, but at least so far as they have character they are women, and they justify the deeds which are done to win them.—San Francisco Report.

Women and Parliamentary Law.

A point upon which women must improve themselves is in mastering the difficulties of parliamentary law. The amount of knowledge required to conduct an ordinary meeting is not very exacting.

It is painfully embarrassing for a woman to attempt to conduct a meeting who does not comprehend the simplest routine of business; who does not know the difference between a motion and a resolution and cannot determine whether or no a point of order be well taken. It is embarrassing to the chairman, and it is quite as embarrassing to her friends, who somehow always feel as if they were personally responsible for her blunders and ignorance.

But it is cheering to note how rapidly women are learning. This is strikingly shown to any one who has attended an annual convention several years in succession. At each there is a marked advance in correct methods, in the smoothness and promptness with which business is transacted. In ten years or five it is not unsafe to prophecy that women in general will know as much about speaking and the proper manner in which meetings should be conducted as they now know about cooking and sewing. They have many more opportunities to learn than they have ever had before. The club, the society, political, benevolent and religious, are omnipresent, and the woman's national convention is an established institution. The schools and universities are doing a great deal for the coming generation. Girls now have their debating clubs and societies.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Discontented Woman.

As I write, a neighbor comes in and commences to worry and fret for fear her boys will not do right, and she chafes constantly because they live on a farm instead of in town. She lives in the shadow and makes all around her unhappy. She has not learned to see the silver lining to the clouds that flit across the path of all.

Last summer we were on a picnic. Dinner was late a half hour, and this neighbor kept grumbling and said there would be nothing fit to eat. I pitied the husband, for his wife deserved to have him and we all knew it. After a splendid dinner was served we climbed a cliff and sat watching the ducks tilting on the rippling waters of the other side. A mother duck was teaching her ducklings how to swim. Some sang songs while we tossed pebbles into the water below, and I knew we were all thinking of the days of our childhood when we were gleeful, happy children.

While we were lost in memory the neighbor called out jeeringly: "Do look at them! They act as though they were half witted." The husband laughed and said, "Our folks over yonder don't know how to have good times; they'll never see 'sermons in stones, books in running brooks.'"

She was blind to the beauty everywhere revealed, for nature was in ecstacy.—Exchange.

City Girls in Country Homes.

One city girl can work more havoc in a quiet country home than a frost in August. Every daughter is fired with an ambition to wear her hair in some delightfully becoming manner, and thus spends hours before the tiny mirror in the room under the eaves when other duties are positively appealing with tears in their eyes for her presence. The neat gowns are torn apart and made simply hideous by the amateur dressmaker's attempts at remodeling on the city modiste's plans.

Let the city vision but burst upon the view of the country congregation and the following Sunday will see an array of headgear that would make the most violent nightmare turn green with envy, while the youths who form the beaux of the backwoods settlement literally bow down and worship at the shrine of this new type of woman, who, in contrast with the maidens whom they have always known, seems like some shining, flashing meteor among a host of pale and unchanging constellations.

Ah, the heartburnings, the jealousies, the broken romances and the unknown desires and longings that come to these peaceful dwellers through the distracting influence of these city girls.—Chicago Tribune.

Woman's Economies.

The most recklessly extravagant woman has a vein of economy somewhere in her composition. Economy is born in a woman. It may not develop in a manner to prove either beneficial to herself or her husband. Yet there will always be some point at which she will retrench, will look well to the pennies and think and calculate with the ablest financier. She may be willing to pay $100 for a gown, but will shop all over town to save ten cents a yard on the lining.

She may spend five dollars for a ride in the park, but she will begrudge five cents car fare when walking. She may stud the table at one time and be wildly extravagant at another. She may ruin a whole garment by the desire to finish it cheaply, which desire has remorsefully seized her at the last moment, but there is one thing in which she never economizes.

When she loves she loves with her whole heart. There is no stint—only a giving of all the wealth of her affections. Therefore do not laugh at her little economies; simply remember that a woman to be womanly must be just made up of those contradictions that seem so ridiculous to the average masculine mind.—Philadelphia Times.

Two Useful Things.

There are two things that I never travel a day's journey without. One is my toothbrush, which I need after every meal, for I don't want to go into the next world toothless, much less through this. I want my good, strong, white, even teeth, which cost me years of misery and led to innumerable howls, but never enriched a dentist. I want them to eat with, to laugh with, possibly I may even want to gnash them. But I shall have my brush to brush my fingers, for an instance, and then they must be firm rooted to stand the strain. So I keep them in good order as one of the duties I owe the House Beautiful, of which they are the ivory gates.

The next thing I must have is a lemon. It is easy to get as far as Gail Hamilton from a lemon, and I don't mind telling you that I use a half lemon for soap. That is, I just swash my face and hands with it before retiring, and it wipes out every freckle and keeps my skin as clear as wax. Some people like freckles. I don't. I tried for massage motions, but the freckles never budged. Now I haven't a single one, and it's all owing to the potency of a lemon.—Detroit Free Press.

Mrs. Cooper's Peculiar Line of Work.

Mrs. Sarah B. Cooper has taught an adult Bible class for more than thirty years. She now has the First Congregational church, of San Francisco, a class with a membership of over 300 intelligent men and women. Visitors from all over the country may be seen in this class from Sabbath to Sabbath. Her method of teaching is Socratic, and her power to draw out the thought of those present is said to be remarkable. She possesses great personal magnetism and is thoroughly versed in the Scriptures.

Mrs. Cooper often officiates at funerals, for which the friends of the deceased feel that her sympathetic and tender nature is peculiarly adapted. On several occasions she has filled the pulpit of different churches, to the great satisfaction of her hearers. For the past twelve years she has rarely been absent from her Bible class. The free kindergarten work of the Golden Gate association had its inspiration in this notable class. Over 10,000 little children have been trained in the kindergartens foundied by this association. This is practical, Christlike religion.—Boston Woman's Journal.

Two Things That Keep Women Back.

There is no dearth of women who are willing to stand in public places and make pretty speeches about helpfulness and charity and all that sort of thing. No doubt they mean it too. I do not charge them with hypocrisy. But this is one of the inconsistencies of human nature, particularly of feminine human nature. They believe in the broadest kind of charity to talk about. But very few of them seem to have faith in the application of their own theories. To write pathetic verses about their less fortunate sisters is a pleasing pastime for some women, but it is a little hard to see how the subjects of the poems are benefited.

This spirit of—what shall I call it? I'll call it conservatism; women like that word—is the first and great obstacle in a woman's path to society. The second is not less hard to overcome. Almost any man may own a suit of dress clothes, and this renders him presentable anywhere. But a woman in order to dress as swell as her neighbors must have money.—Margaret Manton in New York World.

Famous Women with Small Families.

Among famous women who were motheers of small families comes Elizabeth Barrett Browning, who had only one son. Mrs. Somerville, the mathematician, had two daughters and one son only, though she was twice married.

Mme. George Sand had two children, a son and a daughter, so had Lady Mary Montagu, whose "letters" are so admired in our own literature, and Mme. de Sevigne, writer of equally famous "letters" in French. Mme. de Staël had three children in her early married life; when forty eight years old she married a second time and then had another son.

George Eliot (Mrs. Cross) was childless, and so was Mrs. Craik, the author of "John Halifax." Mrs. Barbauld, whose prose and poetry were both much admired in the last century, had no children, and she became the case with her equally praised contemporary, Mrs. Opie.—London Tit-Bits.

Dishwashing as a Fine Art.

The woman who can find any way of making dishwashing, if not a pleasant task, at least a less disagreeable one than it is now, should be canonized by her grateful sisters. One woman who has spent much time in experiment in this branch of household labor makes the following suggestion:

Nothing is better for cleaning greasy dishes, especially cooking pans and kettles, than an old whisk broom. It removes the tenacious particles that have fastened in the kettles and spiders much better than a knife or an iron dishcloth. It is invaluable for cleaning graters. To keep the hands from getting hard and chapped after dishwashing rub them with cider vinegar. Clear lemon juice is also excellent.

Selecting Corsets.

Very corpulent ladies find a corset made to order, from actual measurement, more comfortable, also more expensive, than one selected indiscriminately. Indeed the habit of wearing any make of corsets regardless of fitness or comfort is a bad one. A better way is that of trying corsets from the different manufacturers until one is found which gives comfort and perfect satisfaction, and also, if possible, lends additional beauty to the form. A 200 or 500 boned corset can never be a comfortable article for a 300-pound woman to wear. Stout corsets are at variance with all hygienic principles, and the sensible woman, be she lean or corpulent, will do well to eschew them entirely.—Eliza Renan in Housekeeper.

The Secret of Stepping Lightly.

Anybody can have a light step who will be at the pains to set the foot down right. In that lies all the difference between a thumping, lumping gait and the light tread that makes people call you "velvet footed." The whole art and mystery lies in a single sentence: Put the ball of the foot down first, throwing the weight upon it, and letting the heel come to the floor the hundredth part of a second after. Treading flat footed—over all the sole at once—the weight comes with a jar that is about equally destructive to gaiter, to grace and to shoe leather. By stepping first on the ball, just back of the toes, its cushiony muscles act as a spring and make walking a double pleasure.—New York World.

To hasten the cure of a burn or scald there is nothing more soothing and effective than the white of an egg. It is contact with the air which makes a burn so painful. The egg acts as a varnish and excludes the air completely and also prevents inflammation.

A New York working woman who spent many years as an operative in a men's necktie factory now earns a much easier living by going from house to house in a certain quarter and teaching young women how to make scarfs in their own homes.

There is a good deal of sentiment in a gift which has the work of one's own hands in it. It means much more to the recipient than a purchase which represents only a given amount of money.

Woman everywhere seems to be putting the old occupations aside, and mothers relegate now to professional experts many duties of life which they learned from the women who gave them birth.

The well known writer says: "The appreciation of women in industry will become more generous and more general as they become a more stable and more general factor in labor."

For croup use flannel cloths wrung out of very hot water and applied to the throat and chest, cover with dry cloth and renew with hot as soon as the others commence to cool.

When a pudding is boiled in a mold, take it from the water and plunge it immediately into cold water, then turn it out quickly; this will prevent it from sticking.

Never allow people to kiss a child on its mouth. Disease is so easily carried in that way that you must take the points of precaution.

Doing Her Duty.

Mistress (to new housemaid)—Now see, Mary, this is the way to light the gas. You turn on this little tap, so, and then apply the match, so. You understand?

New Housemaid—Yes, ma'am; quite, ma'am.

Mistress (next morning)—Why, what a horrible smell of gas! Where can it come from? We shall all be suffocated!

New Housemaid (with much pride)—Please, ma'am, what shall I do next? I've made all the beds, and dusted the room, and turned on all the gases ready for the night, and——Boston Globe.

BREVITIES

—Enoign Edith Marshall conducted an interesting meeting at Salvation Hall last night.

—You save money by buying your groceries from the United Teaand Coffee Growers' Association, the proprietors say. See their new advertisement.

—Seven wheelmen left Newark at eight o'clock last night and reached this city at 9:25, remarkably good run. After refreshing themselves they started homeward at 10:30.

—Yesterday was pension day for this district, and many an old soldier and sailor donned his best G. A. R. togs and hied him to New York to interview Col. F. M. Loveland, chief of the U. S. Pension agency in Canal street.

—About 150 of the members and their families of the German Reformed church went to Boynton Beach in stages yesterday. They enjoyed themselves. There were no other excursions there so that the one from here pretty well lost its identity in a very short time.

—Dr. Charles Theirs owns a dog. So does a man named Seader. Yesterday morning the dog of Dr. Theirs and the dog of Mr. Seader had a misunderstanding in front of the doctor's residence. In separating the combatants the doctor's fourth finger was slightly torn by the tooth of the Seader dog. The wound is trifling.

—Belle Peterson of Somerville, colored, was arrested yesterday on West Second street, this city, by dog-catcher Frisbie, this time in the role of a constable, and taken to Somerville before Justice Sutphen on a charge brought against her by Jacob Cornell of Raritan, also colored, who swore the stole a dress and cloth from him which he values at $35. Justice Sutphen held her for the grand jury.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Edwin B. Hannigan of this city is at Ocean Grove.

Mr. Charles Fisher is ill at his home on East Second street.

Miss Mabel A. Maxson of this city is at Ocean Grove for two weeks.

Col. John H. Wilson and his daughter Miss Minnie Wilson, of North Plainfield, are at Cresson Springs, Pa.

Messrs. M. L. Clawson and H. L. Maxson, both of this city, have been the guests of Mr. R. C. Worden of Newburgh, N.Y.

Miss Palmer who has been visiting Dr. and Mrs. Carmen of Somerset street has returned to her home at Washington, D.C.

Miss Rhodes and Miss Herald of Brooklyn are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Blatz of Somerset street, North Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. L. Sanford and Miss May Sandford of East Front street, start soon for a week at Saratoga. From there they will go for a lengthy stay in the Adirondacks.

Mr. Elston Marsh French, of Somerset street, and Mr. George Worth, son of Thomas Worth of Grove street left last night for Nantasket Beach, Mass., to spend a week with the family of Gen. Eli Long.

Mr. Harry Brokaw of Duer street, North Plainfield, is one of the first bicycle riders in this city to ride a "Relay Columbia" safety. This newest pattern of the Columbia was made especially for use in carrying the military despatches from the West to New York a few months ago, attracting attention all over the world. The safety has pneumatic tires, ball bearings throughout, is very light in weight and is finished in two shades of blue and when seen from the machine is very "striking" appearance.

A FAST MAIL SYSTEM.

Ho! Plainfield Inventor, Here is Thy Chance.

Progressive Postmaster-General Wanamaker is investigating the New York papers for "proposals for the rapid dispatch of mails" by pneumatic tubes or other systems, and invites all inventors and others interested to show what they can do in a series of tests.

In Berlin recently, a large quantity of mail matter was sent more than one hundred miles by pneumatic tube, in about an hour.

Did Douglass Take the Money?

Maggie Wiernga, a servant employed by Mrs. Georgiana Smith of this city, kept $100 belonging to her mistress in the post office at noon to-day, and swore out a warrant later, before Justice Nash, charging Wm. Douglass of Peace street of having stolen it.

The woman says that there was no one but herself and Douglass in the post office at the time she missed her money. Douglass was arrested and stoutly denied his guilt.

The police believe that Maggie is mistaken or that there is some other reason for her charge.

There Were Many Sent Here Also.

The following letter sent to, and published by the New York Mail and Express explains itself:

Editor Mail and Express—It is a well known fact, that directly after the passage of the Tariff bill the alleged "tariff reformers" issued a circular, which was sent to each democratic shoepeger in the country, with the request that they raise the prices of their wares and blame the whole thing on the bill. It occurs to me that it would be good policy to have the enemy swallow this circular literally during the present campaign.

A REPUBLICAN.

CUT DOWN BY A TRAIN.

FRANK CALLAHAN KILLED LAST NIGHT AT THE NORTH AVE. DEPOT.

When Found by the Crew of a Freight Train Life was Extinct—One Leg Amputated—The Body Now at the Home of the Parents.

Frank Callahan, 28 years old, of No. 39 East Third street, was struck, it is supposed, by a Royal Blue line express train just below the North avenue depot last night and instantly killed.

The body was discovered by the crew of freight train, No. 111, lying in a heap beside the iron guard rail of the Peace street bridge, shortly after.

It was removed to the freight house and later taken to Casey's morgue.

County Physician Prickett was notified and arrived at 7.30 o'clock this morning. He withheld the burial permit and will make a further investigation to-morrow.

Undertaker Casey placed the body in a coffin this morning, and at the request of the father, Michael Callahan, it was removed from the morgue to the house.

It was Callahan's habit to hang about the depot in the evening and talk with his friends among the railroad people.

About ten o'clock he was seen by Policeman Kiely standing against the wall of the depot near the men's entrance. He was talking with Barney Tracy, the shoemaker. Young Tracy says that he left him there two or three minutes later and went home.

No one can be found who saw Callahan between this and the time the accident is supposed to have occurred and no one witnessed it.

The left leg had been severed from the body as if amputated by a surgeon's knife. There were no cuts upon the face or head and the face was but slightly bruised. It is supposed therefore that death was directly caused by the shock.

REGARDING FIRE ALARMS.

The Signals the Different Companies will Answer.

The engine, hose and hook and ladder companies will, on and after Aug. 6th, at 12 o'clock m., and until further orders answer all alarms as follows:

Engine Company No. 1, Hook and Ladder No. 1, Alert Hose Co. No. 1, boxes 12, 13, 15, 16, 24, 26, 27, 33 and 41.

Engine Company No. 2, Hook and Ladder No. 1, Alert Hose Co. No. 1, boxes 12, 13, 32, 34, 37, 41, 42, 43, 45 and 47.

Companies not answering first alarms will be dismissed and in readiness to respond to second alarms, which will be given by sending in one or more rounds of the box the second time.

Engine companies not answering first alarms, shall cover all ground left vacant by companies answering. This order does not change special signals.

By order of the Board of Engineers,

T. O. DOANE, Chief.

Facts About Protection and Free Trade.

Let the American laborer look at and carefully study the following standard of wages per week enjoyed by the toilers of this land of protection and then decide as between free trade and protection:

	England.	United States.
Forge rollers	$12 96	$25 50
Rail mill rollers	17 00	3 50
Sheet and plate rollers	25 00	5 00
Foreman	16 72	45 00
Machinists	12 96	21 00
Engineers	7 68	15 00
Carpenters	7 92	18 00
Blacksmiths	10 20	16 00
Bricklayers	10 20	24 00
Bookbinders	7 00	20 00
Coopers	7 00	16 00
Laborers	5 11	10 00

Contrast these figures with those representing the remuneration of labor in other lands and under other tariff systems, and the conviction cannot but be impressed that American protection affords the most favorable and desirable conditions for the development and security of the honest and industrious wage-earner.

A Tennis Match Saturday.

The Hillside Tennis Club has extended an invitation to the Bergen Point Tennis Club to play a match game of tennis in singles and doubles on Saturday afternoon of this week. Mr. Howard Beebe and Mr. F. M. Walz will defend the honors of the home club. Play will commence about three o'clock. An afternoon tea will also be held on this occasion, at which Mrs. V. B. Hart will receive, assisted by Mrs. Lewis Timpson, Mrs. Beebe, Miss Louise Dayey, Miss Lena Hart. Mrs. Wm. Palmer Smith and Mrs. Frank Raymond.

They All Paid Fines.

In the police court this morning Annie Cook, aged 40 years, and Mary Ramsbury, 45 years old, were charged with using indecent language. Annie was fined $6, and Mary $3.

Frank Shidline of Somerville was charged with drunkenness, plead guilty and was promptly fined $4. He paid it.

MARRIAGES

EXPOSING THE SHAM.

FROM THE STATE REPUBLICAN LEAGUE OF NEW JERSEY.

How the People Have Been Loaded With Taxes to Provide Offices for Political Loafers—Unanswerable Charges.

New Jersey is 122 miles in length and has over 8,000 square miles of area. There are over 400 cities, towns and villages in the State with 756 voting precincts. The largest cities in the country are located on its borders and naturally affect contiguous sections. The residents of Hudson and Essex counties have interests allied with New York, and the residents of Camden and its vicinage are more or less connected with Philadelphia. The Atlantic coast section has peculiar interests and the Northern and Southern sections are agricultural. In this way there is comparatively little communication between the people of the different sections. Political and local legislature in one section is practically unknown in another, especially of those which have distinct local points of connectivity such as the districts within the radius affected by the big cities beyond the State lines. The people outside of Hudson county learned in a general way that there had been a popular uprising, there against an oppressive ring and that a large majority of the people had combined irrespective of party affiliations to elect a mayor who was nominated by the Republicans. But the majority of the people in the State do not know that the Legislature had provided a cumbrous system of municipal commission to govern the city, not one of which was elective. The Mayor elected by the people found all the offices filled and the appointees of the odious ring were firmly intrenched in power although the action of the residents of the city wanted to escape from their burdensome control. The city of Newark has for generations rejoiced in a good local government, but the elective offices have been supplanted by commissions and Newark is rapidly falling to the level of ring-ridden Jersey City. Paterson, Trenton and Camden have been afflicted in a similar manner. Commissions have been created and men have been appointed to offices who could not have secured their positions by popular election. They have created more offices and largely increased the expenses of the municipal governments. There have been many sections similarly afflicted, but Monopoly being cited as notorious examples. At each State and National Democratic convention the party managers prepare and promulgate rules of political faith and practice known as platforms. These contain statements defining the party's position on popular issues. The Democratic workers and speakers use them as text during the campaign. Many of the statements made meet with and merit popular approval. Most of them are made with intent to deceive. The Democratic party managers make the statements as they favor and to catch votes. Their object is to secure the offices and they promise anything before election to get them by any false pretenses. After election they not only do not keep their promises, and do not try to keep them, but do exactly the reverse when it would take too much time to prove treachery to the platform and to the Democratic platforms and comparing them with the actions of the Democratic party.

The platform adopted at the June convention in Chicago contains these words: "We extend our earnest and sincere sympathy to those lovers of freedom who are struggling for home rule and the principle of local self-government in Ireland." "The Democratic party believes in home rule and the control of their own affairs by the people of the vicinage." These words have a familiar sound. They were published in a number of State platforms, for instance, in that adopted in Trenton on September 29, 1886, when this form was used: "We applaud the heroic work of Gladstone and Parnell in their struggle to obtain for the people of Ireland the natural right of self-government." All these statements were made to deceive the unthinking and by the power to deprive them in their heroic efforts to secure home rule.

We charge them with creating commissions over which the people have no control.

We charge them with creating a multitude of new places, each with a salary, to suit the ambitions of the people.

We charge them with falsely expressing sympathy with the Home Rule in Ireland while they are depriving our own people of home rule.

In the platform adopted at the Democratic Gubernatorial convention held in Trenton on September 28, 1886, these words were used: "We are in favor of the enactments that will remedy the evils of which labor justly complains." In the platform adopted in Trenton, September 10, 1889, these words were used: "We recognize the dignity of labor and the necessity of proper legislation to protect its interest."

We charge the Democratic party with falsely pretending to assist labor, as a bid for workingmen's votes.

We charge the Democratic party with refusing to pass fourteen out of sixteen bills presented by the confederated organizations at the last session of the Legislature.

We charge the last Legislature, which was Democratic in both branches, with passing one labor bill because it provided for the creation of a new salaried officer to be appointed by a board of which a member of strong commercial instincts.

We charge the Democratic party with making sham promises to the labor men and persistently refusing to fulfill them when they have power.

In the platform adopted by the convention held Sept. 10, 1889, this paragraph was inserted: "That the increase in number of combinations to control the necessities of life is a fruitful source of the evils complained of. The so-called "trusts" which are combinations to control prices without regard to the natural rules of trade, are indefensible and subject to the letter and spirit of our laws. They cannot be justified upon any fair plea of legitimate competition, but are the bane of a few trese combinations inflict crest burdens upon the many, and promote misery among those who are dependent upon the product of their daily toil." The national platform adopted at Chicago, June 22, Section 5, has these words: "We recognize in the trusts and combinations which are designed to enable capital to secure more than its just share of the joint products of capital and labor, the national banks and the prohibitive taxes which prevent the free competition which is the life of honest trade. We believe their worst evils can be abated by law, and we demand the rigid enforcement of the laws made to prevent and control them, together with such further legislation in restraint of their abuses as experience may show to be necessary."

We charge the Democrats in this State with enacting laws in direct violation of the principals announced in these platforms. We charge them with doing all in their power to encourage trusts and combinations of every name and kind.

We charge them with making this State the haven of trusts and attracting those that have been driven out of neighboring States by the action of the people, the courts or the Legislatures.

We charge them with now having the Standard Oil trust from Ohio, the sugar trust from New York, the fresh beef trust from Chicago, the cordage trust, the nail trust, the match trust, the gas trust, the leather trust, the lithographing trust, and others so numerous that they include nearly every trust known.

We charge the Democratic party with using its State Committee, its Governor and Legislature to enact laws to aid in the formation of the coal trust last Winter.

We charge that this odious trust had the active aid of the Democratic political machinery of the State.

The platform adopted at the Democratic Gubernational Convention of September 28, 1886, promised "that the taxation of property shall be regulated by value and not by ownership," "that the same rate of taxation should be imposed upon the property of corporations as is assessed upon the property of private citizens."

We charge the Democratic party with having had complete control of the Legislature and the Executive, yet no effort was made to fulfil this promise.

The Democratic platform of September 10, 1889, contains these words: "We demand reform in the matter of municipal expenditures throughout the State. By reason of the constantly-increasing cost of municipal government the growth of many of our cities and towns has been greatly retarded. We therefore insist upon the enactment of laws limiting taxation for municipal uses."

We charge the Democrats with introducing bills at the last session of the Legislature that would add 2,000 officials to the burdensome list in this State.

We charge them with introducing bills at the last Legislature that would add nearly $18,000,000 to the municipal debts of this State.

We charge the Democrats with adding $1,000,000 to the municipal taxes in this State by last Winter's legislation, besides the interest on the bonded debt.

The Democratic platform of September 10, 1889, solemnly warns the people against the evils which menace them from the practice of bribery at the polls.

We charge the Democratic party with their party machinery and all their political influence to protect convicted ballot-box stuffers and to keep them out of prison.

We charge the Democratic party with promising to enact an Australian election law and after election of enacting a substitute under whose provisions ballot-box stuffing became a recognized Democratic industry.

The Democratic platform adopted at the State Democratic convention of May 3, 1888, denounced as subversive of the principles of representative Government, caucus legislation. We charge the control of the legislators are massed, directed and controlled by the decision of a secret caucus.

We charge the Democratic party legislature with having been the meanest specimen of a caucus Legislature ever produced in New Jersey.

We charge the Democratic party managers with making false promises to deceive voters in order that they may secure for themselves offices and salaries at the public expense.

We charge the Democratic party managers with making these promises without any intention of fulfilling them either before or after election, or at any other time.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

HIS PREDICAMENT EXPLAINED.

How Mr. Whitely Came to be Between Two Trains.

To the Editor of The News:—In looking over the Press of last evening, I noticed a letter from a Mr. Whitely concerning a recent accident. It seems that I have given the railway employes great annoyance and the Plainfield Press representatives great pain in writing up carelessness on my part, as the North avenue station yesterday morning.

The Press pretends to insert in its columns, facts. As usual it has missed the facts. Had they asked me for facts they would have got them, but they thought it better to write up a sensational piece, in their own way, with scarcely a word of truth in the statement.

The facts are these:

I had been seeing my wife and family safely aboard the train, and it started as I thought good-by and was to get off. On the platform a brakeman in the way, unintentionally obstructed me, and when I got by him a belated passenger sprang on and further delayed me. I was not aware that an Express express was coming on the line, but if I had been I could have done nothing else. When I did get off, I waved my hand to my wife to let her know I had got off all right. Just then the engineer of the incoming Easton train blew his whistle as a warning of my danger. I realized it and crouched close to the ground. The two trains, running in opposite directions thundered by. I again waved my hand to my wife to reassure here and came home. I am neither a fool nor foolish and the predicament I was in, was, under the circumstances, unavoidable. The report that I was walking across the tracks, looking neither way, is a pure fake.

I met one of the proprietors of the "Press" that same evening and I asked him who wrote up such a statement. All the satisfaction I could get from him was that I could go and sit down on my knees and thank God I was alive.

I informed him in pretty plain words that that paper had thought I could afford to, but if I needed any help I would not apply to the praying half of the Plainfield Daily Press.

By inserting the above in your paper and thereby giving the public the side, for the press was false, you will greatly oblige me.

ARE THEY SPIES?

Two Women Refused Entrance to the Homestead Works.

Homestead, Pa., Aug. 5—(Special.) There is much indignation here to-day over an allegation made by members of the Advisory Commitee that Mrs. Nan and Miss Kate Peerly, residents of the borough, were prevented by the militia last night from leaving the train at the City Farm Station. The militiamen refuse to discuss the matter, but there is reason to believe that they thought the women were trying to get into the mill yard as spies for the Amalgamated Association.

STATE NEWS

ON ACCOUNT OF A DOG.

A special session of the City Council was held in Asbury city Wednesday night, at the solicitation of Mayor Wright, to settle a question of authority between him and the poundkeeper. Mayor Wright had ordered a dog, illegally impounded, to be released, and the poundkeeper had refused to obey him. The Mayor was sustained.

HIGHWAYMEN FOILED.

While Walter Corbin and wife of Montclair, N. were driving near Eagle Rock Wednesday night they were stopped by two highwaymen, who demanded money. Mr. Corbin brought the butt end of his whip down on one fellow's head, while the horse, a spirited one, started up suddenly, knocking the other highwayman sprawling in the dust.

PUGS RACE AT A CLAMBAKE.

Elizabeth's Pluck Hat association had a high old time yesterday at their annual clambake in the woods near Cranford. There were lively football matches, in which one player fell dead. The physicians give "over-exertion" as the cause of death.

IT WAS THE CAT.

Members of the First Baptist Church at Hackensack have been for months making complaints against an outhouse near the church cellar. Dr. Heath, the inspector of the Health Board, made an examination, but found that everything was in compliance with the law. The church people then hastened to Dr. Adams, a member of the church, who also made an examination and declared the outhouse a nuisance. The owner of the cat was ordered to have it disinfected, but the obnoxious smells in the church still remained. A few days ago a dead cat was discovered in the cold air box of the heater in the church cellar, and the church people and Dr. Adams are much chagrined over the discovery.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Columbus Anniversaries.

Just about this time of year, 400 years ago, Christopher Columbus began his wonderful work of destroying ancient superstitions and discovering a new world. He did it well, too, for he sailed on Friday, discovered land on Friday, did several other memorable things on the same day and proved for the second time that the land near the equator was habitable. He had proved it already in his famous discussion with the learned council of Salamanca.

He did not sail Aug. 3, however, or discover land Oct. 12, as all the school-books say, for it was in the Fifteenth century then, and they reckoned by old style, and so nine days must be added to every date to make it square with the simon pure "Jacob Townsend's Almanac" of today. President Harrison and the World's Columbian exposition managers have properly recognized this and we shall celebrate accordingly.

Let us say, then, combining the "styles," that Columbus sailed from the bar of Saltes, port of Palos, Spain, Aug. 3-12, 1492; saw the last Old World land (in the Canary isles) Sept. 9-18; observed the variation of the needle for the first time in history Sept. 13-22; was deceived by Martin Alonzo Pinzon's claim that he saw land on Sept. 25-Oct. 4; was 707 leagues west of the Canaries on Oct. 1-10; had to encounter a mutiny of the sailors on the night of Oct. 10-19 and first saw land at dawn of Oct. 12-21.

On the preceding evening he had seen a light which he judged to be carried by some one on shore, or rising and falling in a fisherman's boat. His companions on deck, Pedro Gutierrez and Rodrigo Sanchez, also saw it, but it was at 2 o'clock next morning that the signal of "Land in sight" was given from the Pinta. The first man to see it was a sailor named Rodrigo de Triana. After two days on the island Columbus started—Oct. 14-23—to explore the vicinity, reached the next island on the 16-25, and after various discoveries landed on the soil of Cuba Oct. 28-Nov. 6.

Incidentally it may be added that tobacco was discovered about Nov. 4-13; that is, says Columbus, "Certain natives came near carrying a firebrand, and with leaves of a plant which they rolled and putting one end of that, roll in the mouth fired the other and puffed a great cloud of strong smelling smoke." Election day will be about the right anniversary on which to celebrate this event. The same week potatoes were discovered, and in the same fields were maize, sweet pepper and cassava.

Dec. 6-15 Columbus discovered the present Hayti; Jan. 4-13, 1493, he sailed for Spain, leaving a small garrison at La Navidad; Feb. 15-24 he saw the first Old World land, and after many mishaps reached Palos once more March 15-24, having been absent seven months and twelve days. He left Cadiz on his second voyage Sept. 23-Oct. 4, 1493. His birth date is unknown, but he died in Valladolid, May 20-29, 1506, being about seventy years old.

The Nicknames of Great Men.

It is a privilege of agreat man to be called by a "nickname," or, to be more accurate, society loves to appropriate names to its conspicuous members either in ridicule or praise. There are characters which lend themselves easily to nicknames, and caricaturists in prose poetry or portraiture quickly seize upon peculiarities of great men and apply them names which become historic. Sir Walter Scott was commonly called "The Wizard of the North," for his magic powers of description. Benedict called Dr. Johnson "The Great Cham of Literature." Louis XIV was always "Le Grand Monarque" for obvious reasons and Henry VIII, "The Merry Monarch." Napoleon's soldiers called him the "Little Corporal" on account of his juvenile appearance and his never failing bravery.

The actual wearer of grandfather's hat was known as "Tippecanoe," "Stone wall" Jackson has gone to posterity, and but few of the children of this generation know that his real name was Thomas Jonathan Jackson. Colonel Thomas H Benton was known as "Old Bullion" for his advocacy of a gold and silver currency. General Andrew Jackson was given the name of "Old Hickory" by his soldiers. "Young Hickory" was considered high praise. Political leaders of today are familiarly, if not always affectionately, known as "Grover," "The Plumed Knight," "Benny," "Wanny" and "Uncle Jerry."

The phrase, "He died leaving a million dollars," tells its own story. What the man lived his life for, struggled for, stifled his conscience for and perhaps lost his soul for he has to leave on earth. The average man in the race for the "almighty dollar" forgets that there is an Almighty God who demands the homage of man. There are men, however, who use their millions in such a way that some of their treasure is where "moth and dust do not corrupt." They are the men who think of their fellow men and build hospitals, endow colleges and beautify cities. There are many investments of that kind for the millionaire.

The new passenger steamers that have been built by the principal ocean lines are declared to be unburnable and unsinkable.

DICKINSON IS CHAIRMAN

He Will Pilot the Democratic Campaign Committee.

GORMAN DECLINED THE POSITION.

William C. Whitney Unanimously Chosen a Member of the Committee—Stevenson and Watterson Talk Politics in Kentucky—Henry Is Satisfied.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—The chairman of the Democratic national campaign committee has been chosen, the honor falling upon the shoulders of Don M. Dickinson, after three hours' futile endeavors to persuade Arthur P. Gorman to accept the office. At the meeting all the members were present. Mr. Harrity was made temporary chairman, and Bradley B. Smalley, of Vermont, temporary secretary. Owing to Mr. Gorman's declining to accept the responsibility of the chairmanship no definite action was taken until after a reassembling after dinner, when Mr. Dickinson was unanimously chosen permanent chairman and Bradley Smalley permanent secretary.

William C. Whitney, who was present by courtesy, was, after considerable debate as to the right of the chairman to name nine committeemen, unanimously chosen a member. Mr. Harrity was authorized to appoint necessary subcommittees. They will be announced at a later date; also necessary assistants at national headquarters.

The selection of Mr. Dickinson was a surprise, because wholly unexpected. He is a warm friend and supporter of Mr. Cleveland. Senators Ransom and Gorman started for Washington immediately after adjournment.

STEVENSON IN KENTUCKY.

He and Henry Watterson Talk Politics from a Democratic Standpoint.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 5.—The opening and dedication of the new Watterson club house drew together all the leaders of the Democratic party in the state. The governor and his staff came down from Frankfort. The legislature was left without a quorum. The chief feature of the occasion was the presence of the Hon. Adlai E. Stevenson, Democratic nominee for vice president, who came at the invitation of the Watterson club and spoke to a great concourse of people. The Hon. John Young Brown, governor of Kentucky, presided over the great mass meeting and introduced General Stevenson to the audience. It was greeted with tumultuous enthusiasm. After referring to the civil and the distinguished Illinoisans who had been born in Kentucky and reviewing his acquaintance with Mr. Watterson, Mr. Stevenson said:

Stevenson's Speech.

We are now confronted by the startling fact that the party in power stands pledged to the repeal of the force bill. History will not repeat itself. The evils that would follow the evil now threatened would find their exact counterpart only in those which spoke up and put a part of the reconstruction period.

In view of the fact that with such powerful auxiliaries as northern enterprise and northern capital the south stands upon the threshold of a master development unknown to this generation, can it be possible that the American people will now consent that the hands of turmoil back upon the dial and the era of the rule of outrage and of violence again be inaugurated?

With the years will come new problems for solution—grave problems, the outgrowth of an advancing civilization; problems which appertain to social government and municipal administration; which pertain, it may be, to diplomacy and to war—yes, which take hold of the very foundation of the social fabric. Let us trust that in all the coming years from the darkness of these evil days will spring an inflow and a power ever for the right, ever for the defense of the unfortunate and the oppressed, ever for that which is noble and pure and of heartstone and in the council, ever for its maintenance, at whatever cost, of our Democratic institutions and the perpetuity of the American republic.

Watterson Doesn't Want the Earth.

Mr. Watterson then spoke and humorously acknowledged the honor done him by naming the club after him. Then he talked politics. He declared that, contrary to the general impression, he went to the national convention satisfied that nothing could prevent the nomination of Mr. Cleveland. "I reached Chicago," said he, "expecting nothing except Cleveland. I got Stevenson. My vice president and a ringing declaration in favor of a tariff for revenue only. What else do you suppose would have been required to satisfy me? The earth! No, no, gentlemen! We are Democrats dyed in the wool, and when the party speaks, the word with us is close ranks and move forward. Now that the convention has made the tickets and fixed the lines we are one and all for Cleveland and Stevenson, with no longings or regrets, with no backslidings or backsittings, but before us the robber heresy of the robber tariff and above us the broad ensign of the true faith."

McKINLEY IN IOWA.

He Denounces Free Coinage to an Audience of Ten Thousand.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Aug. 5.—Governor McKinley arrived here and spoke from a temporary platform erected on the new track facing the grand stand, which was filled by an assemblage of 10,000. He said in part:

The Democratic platforms of late years have declared in favor of free silver, but when at congress they had a majority they did not propose a free coinage bill against the opposition of a Republican minority and deserters from the Democratic ranks. What we want is a dollar worth a hundred cents here as well as everywhere. Is it silver, paper or gold, the Republican party insists, and has always insisted, that it shall be worth a hundred cents.

If there are two kinds of money in circulation of different values, every one knows that the cheaper money drives the good money out of circulation. Then one hundred cent dollar won't associate with the eighty-three cent dollar. [Laughter.]

During the war you did not see any gold in circulation at all. Now there are $370,000,000 in circulation as a result of the redemption act of 1875. Some will claim that the silver dollar will buy as much as the gold dollar, but it must be remembered that the silver dollar is now coined only to a limited extent.

If there were free coinage it would mean that every man having silver bullion could take it to the government mints and have it coined. Now the government retains the difference between the value of the silver coined in a dollar and the 100 cents' worth of silver, and thus makes the profit; whereas were there free coinage that profit then would get the rake off. We don't want any short dollars in this country.

The governor then made argument in favor of protection.

Republican League Clubs.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—The chairman of the national Republican committee has issued a call to chairmen of state and territorial committees urging active co-operation in perfecting league clubs.

New Jersey Democratic Convention.

TRENTON, Aug. 5.—The New Jersey Democratic state committee has selected October, 27, as the place and date of the state gubernatorial convention.

IN THE WORLD OF WOMAN.

PERTINENT POINTS ON PREVAILING AND COMING FASHIONS.

Suggestions About Summer Styles—What Is Worn Now and What Will Be Worn in the Autumn—Ornaments for the Hair.

Camel's hair and English serge will be largely used for autumn and winter costumes, and marine blue, silver blue and the rich shade of Neapolitan blue will be very popular; also the handsome dahlia dyes, the browns, both golden and in dead-leaf tones, the Vandyke and mahogany tints of reddish cast, and the genuine old rose that is one of the exact color of a slightly wilted jacqueminot. Two rich colors will frequently appear combined in very dressy costumes, but in more instances all trimming will be dispensed with, and a plain, stylish effect will be given by the straight rows of narrow soutache braid.

Sleeveless Jackets.

The latest Parisian novelty is the sleeveless jacket, which is not only sleeveless, but also lacks a portion of the back breadth. The jacket is three-quarter length. The front of the jacket, between the revers, shows the dainty frill of the silk blouse over which it is worn. The sleeves of the blouse are highly ornamental affairs, much puffed and bedribboned, and made of silk, fancy shading tints of violet and pale green, is used as the lining for the revers, while the blouse waist itself is of white silk striped with violet. The jacket is as cool as it is odd, which is saying a great deal.

Messenger Boys on Strike.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 5.—The American District and Postal Telegraph boys went on strike for an increase from fourteen to fifteen dollars per month and a reduction from eleven to ten hours per day.

THE RIOTING RENEWED.

Clubs and Stones Wielded by the Strikers at Duquesne.

THE TROOPS CHARGE ON THE MOB.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Aug. 5.—Clubs and stones took the place of moral suasion in the strike at Duquesne, and not until the militia was called upon was anything like order restored. The trouble began when thirty men employed in the mechanical department put in an appearance. These men were among those who, the day previous, signed an agreement to return to work at the company's terms. Superintendent Morrison informed them when the agreement was signed that no attempt would be made to start the mill until next Monday. He then ordered Foreman William Mislagle to put thirty men at work making repairs.

The men selected for the work were on hand promptly, but they did not go to work. Near the entrance to the mill they were met by a crowd of nearly 300 Duquesne and Homestead strikers, the latter having gone from this place during the night. Twelve deputy sheriffs endeavored to keep back the mob in order that the thirty mechanics might pass into the works, but they were soon overpowered and compelled to retreat. In the struggle some of the deputies had their canes taken from them. Seeing that to further resist the mob would result in bloodshed, the little band of workmen retired in good order.

The Strikers Encouraged.

This victory encouraged the strikers, and when Foreman Mislaugle came upon the scene a few minutes later and attempted to reach the mill gate he found himself surrounded by a howling mob, but the brave foreman, with club in hand, defied the strikers. Near the gate he found himself confronted by a dozen men. They told him that if he did not turn back he would be killed. Half a dozen deputies then ran to his rescue. They begged of Mislagle to return home. Reluctantly he consented and started for his residence, which stands on the edge of a hill back of the works. He was followed by three men, one of them a Homestead steel worker.

When he reached a narrow pathway running along the edge of a deep ravine the Homesteader ran up behind him and dealt him a terrible blow on the back of the head. Mislagle was rendered unconscious and rolled to the bottom of the ravine. He was picked up by friends and taken to his home, where he soon recovered.

The assault was witnessed by the mobbed strikers, who cheered when they saw Mislagle knocked down. While they were still gloating over the victory the strikers caught sight of Boss Carpenter Hugh Boyce hastening toward the mill gate. With a wild yell they started for him with uplifted clubs, but the deputy sheriffs promptly executed a flank movement, surrounded Boyce and succeeded in getting him in the mill uninjured. Boyce arrived just in time to get the gate, which they threated to break down if Boyce was not brought out.

The Militia Sweep Down.

Before they could carry out their threat the strikers caught sight of several companies of militia swooping down upon them in double quick time. The sight of the bloocoats and the glistening bayonets caused the mob to scatter in all directions. In a few moments the entire Sixteenth regiment, under command of Colonel Hulings, was in possession of the place, having reached Duquesne on a special train a few minutes after General Biley had been apprised of the serious situation of affairs.

Colonel Hulings ordered the captains of the respective companies to place men on all streets leading to the mill, with orders to allow no one to pass without written orders.

Details were also sent to Oliver and Carnegie stations, while a full company took possession of the Carnegie library, reading room and bath house.

Finding themselves at bay, the strikers gathered on the hills above the town, where they contented themselves with hurling rocks and stones on the heads of those below. Colonel Hulings' entire command will remain on guard.

In his report to General Wiley, Colonel Hulings says that he believes two companies of infantry will be sufficient to preserve order and protect those who wish to go to work in the mill. Sheriff McCleary will endeavor to double the number of deputies in Duquesne. Direct telegraphic communication will also be established between that point and General Wiley's headquarters in Homestead.

Carnegie's employees have lost the strike in Duquesne, as 500 of the men have signified a desire to return to work on Monday. Fully half this number are Amalgamated men, who, in order not to lose their places, have deserted the organization. This is a severe blow to the Homestead strikers, who have so confidently relied upon the Duquesne men to help them out.

Superintendent Potter, of the Homestead mill, said: "We have a full complement of experienced workmen now, and by next Monday we will have every department running full time, double turn. We will board our men free of cost as long as it is necessary—that may be for a month and it may be for ten years."

Released on Bail.

The hearing in Pittsburg on the application for release on bail of Messrs. Lovejoy, McConnell, Carey and Superintendent Potter, of the Carnegie Steel company, was held before Judge Ewing. No objection being offered Judge Ewing admitted them to bail in the sum of $10,000 each, R. B. and A. W. Mellon going on the bonds. All the members of the Carnegie company and the employees charged with murder by Block are now out on bail. The seven Pinkerton men charged with murder, however, have not yet been arrested.

AFFAIRS OF THE NATION.

The Gift to the Big Fair Under Consideration in the House.

ENGLAND SEIZES JOHNSON ISLAND.

Uncle Sam Will Probably Only Interfere to Protect the Commercial Rights of His Citizens There—Minister Carr Never Requested the Recall of Consul Ryder.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The storm clouds which have hovered over the house for nearly two weeks have lifted and there is sunlight ahead. Unless something unforeseen happens there is every reason now to believe that the fight over the World's fair item has ended, the sundry civil bill will pass, and also a separate bill making an appropriation (as a gift) of $2,500,000 for the fair and that congress will adjourn in a few days. A resolution was reported from the committee on rules and passed making the day suspension day. The resolution extending the appropriations under the sundry civil bill six days was also passed.

Mr. Holman, of Indiana, offered a resolution that the house should reconsider the vote by which the senate amendment to the World's fair bill were concurred in, insist upon a further disagreement and again send the bill to conference. This was adopted after some debate by a vote of 141 to 50. This release from the parliamentary entanglement.

Mr. Reilly, of Pennsylvania, who reported the recommendation of the advisory committee, then offered a resolution that the house should proceed to consider the substitute for the Durborrow bill appropriating $2,500,000 for the World's fair and vote upon it.

This was adopted under suspension of the rules—167 to 7—Mr. Bailey, of Texas, leading the small minority. The house then, in committee of the whole, devoted the day to the seventy various amendments being submitted thereto but not adopted, and the debate took a wide range, embracing the tariff, silver and prohibition generally. Finally the committee rose and the house adjourned.

The senate emphasized its position as a waiting body—waiting for the action of the house on the sundry civil bill and desirous of knowing exactly what action the house was disposed to take before committing itself in any way. It transacted no business of its own, but took a recess until it received a report from the co-ordinate branch. When that report was received, indicating that the house insisted on disagreeing to the World's fair amendment to the sundry civil bill, no action was suggested by the senate in the line of further conference, but an adjournment was immediately carried.

JOHNSON ISLAND SEIZED.

England Claims Jurisdiction Over the Desert Rock in the Pacific Ocean.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The statement is published that the British cruiser Champion has seized Johnson island in the Pacific ocean in the name of Great Britain. It is said at the state department that the United States has exercised jurisdictional rights over the island since 1858, when an American guano company landed a party thereon and occupied it.

Territorial jurisdiction has never been claimed by the United States and the island has never been annexed. The United States would assert its jurisdictional rights over the island to protect the guano company in the pursuit of their avocations on the island, but it is said there would be no conflict with the territorial jurisdiction set forward by any other government.

The island of Navarra, in the neighborhood of Hayti, does not belong to the United States, for the occupancy of which by an American guano company the United States asserts a jurisdictional power, and in the case of riot and murder thereon the criminals were tried in an American court.

The annexation of this island by a foreign power might be resented as an encroachment on the Monroe doctrine, but its use of the desert rock in the Pacific ocean, far from land and of no strategic value, this government would probably do no more than protect the commercial company in its rights to gather guano.

CONSUL RYDER'S CASE.

The Charges Against the Old Soldier Have Been Greatly Exaggerated.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—It was learned at the department of state that the cablegrams from Europe in connection with the arrest of Consul Ryder at Copenhagen are in many respects false.

The American minister, Mr. Carr, has never reported to the department that Mr. Ryder was guilty of the charge nor has he ever recommended his recall. He did report that the Danish government had made an ex parte investigation of the charge of the dismissal and suggested that if the government of the United States desired to transfer Mr. Ryder to some other post the prosecution would not be instituted in the courts.

The state department replied that the consul should be submitted to a legal trial and abide the judgment of the court. The charges against Mr. Ryder have been greatly exaggerated in the European press, and some of them are known to be unfounded. He has been for many years in the consular service of the United States, was a gallant soldier and is now suffering from a wound received in the civil war.

While the department did not feel warranted in withdrawing him from his post under the circumstances or evading the results of a legal investigation, his past record called for a suspension of public judgment till the pending trial was concluded.

HUSBAND AND WIFE BUTCHERED.

Hacked to Death with an Ax by Some Unknown Assassin.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 5.—Andrew J. Borden and wife, two of the oldest, wealthiest and most highly respected persons in the city, were brutally murdered with an ax in broad daylight in their home on Second street, during a few minutes' walk of the city hall and the central business section. The Borden family consisted of the father, mother, two daughters and a servant. The eldest daughter has been in Fairhaven, Conn., for some days. The rest of the family have been ill for three or four days, and Dr. Bowen, the attending physician, was suspecting an attempt at poisoning.

About 8 o'clock in the morning Mrs. Borden received a note asking her to go and visit a friend who was ill. She left the house and shortly afterward her husband walked to one of the banks. He returned about 10:30 o'clock and sat on the sofa. The servant, Bridget Sullivan, then went outside the house to wash windows. In the meantime Miss Lizzie Borden, a daughter, came from her room half way down stairs, seeing and speaking to her father as she passed through the room. She supposed her mother was out. She went into the yard and stepped into the barn.

While there she heard a cry of distress coming apparently from the house and she ran in. She went directly to a sitting room through a front hall half way in the house, and there saw her father lying back on a sofa covered with blood and lifeless.

She ran out again shrieking and her cries attracted the servant and a neighbor. They made a hasty search for the mother and found her up stairs in a spare bedroom lying dead, face downward, on the floor. Medical Examiner Dolan was summoned, and he found Mr. Borden's head hacked to pieces in a horrible manner, no less than seven long gashes being on his face and skull, some of them an inch and a half deep through flesh and bone. Mrs. Borden, too, had been frightfully butchered about the face and skull. It is supposed that the murderer was concealed about the house when Mr. Borden came in and went up stairs with the intention of murdering him. Before he could accomplish his purpose Mrs. Borden's attention was attracted.

The murderer probably followed her into a spare room and struck her from behind. After being sure of his work the murderer probably went down stairs, where Mr. Borden had fallen asleep on the sofa and there dealt him the awful blows that ended his life. Robbery was not the motive of the crime, as no valuables nor money was missing. Two or three suspects were arrested, but none of them is believed to know anything of the crime.

ARCHBISHOP IRELAND SILENT.

His Memorial Not Yet Ready for the Press—Archbishop Corrigan's Letter.

ST. PAUL, Aug. 5.—Archbishop Ireland was shown the dispatch stating that Archbishop Corrigan had made some statements in New York regarding Ireland's connection with the Faribault school plan, the dancer of culturkampf in America and the surprise at the vatican over the whole matter. The archbishop said he had seen all of the statements alleged to have come from the vatican and Archbishop Corrigan and has concluded too much had already been said, so that he would add nothing by way of denial or affirmation. He further said he was not yet ready to give his memorial to the press.

Archbishop Corrigan's Letter.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Archbishop Corrigan says he will stand by the letter sent by him and his fellow bishops to Pope Leo, which simply assured his holiness of their allegiance to the decrees of the vatican and explained the school situation in New York. The archbishop trusts that his friends will wait with patience until next November, when the whole matter will be settled at the propaganda in Rome.

Why Miss Kayser Killed Himself.

DAYTON, O., Aug. 5.—Frederick Kayser, an aged miser, worth $500,000, hanged himself because his only daughter, who returned recently after a five years' absence in Sweden, where she was studying music, urged him to stop gathering slops and rubbish.

In Financial Difficulties.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 5.—Mr. Albert M. Friend, of the commercial agency firm of Friend & Narr, gave notice to the board of governors of the Stock exchange that he will withdraw from the firm. Money difficulties are the alleged cause.

AN ORDINANCE

To reconstruct and repave West Third street from the southerly side of Madison avenue to the northeasterly side of Plainfield avenue.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the owners and occupants of the lands, tenements and real estate fronting on or adjoining West Third street in the city of Plainfield from the westerly side of Madison avenue to the northeasterly side of Plainfield avenue be and they are hereby ordered and directed within thirty days from and after the date upon which this ordinance shall take effect, to reconstruct said portion of West Third street in front of his, her or their said property with Belgian stone for a width of thirty feet, that is to say, for a width of fifteen feet on each side of the centre line of said street and for a depth of nine inches, and the Common Council do hereby appoint Robert A. Meeker, street commissioner of said city, as the person to superintend the said work and prescribe the manner in which the same shall be performed.

Section 2. That if any owner or owners shall refuse or neglect to comply with the first section of this ordinance within the time specified it shall be the duty of the superintendent of streets and the Common Council of the city of Plainfield and they are hereby authorized and empowered to advertise for proposals for the performance of such work to the end that the Common Council may contract for the same to be done under and in pursuance of the charter of the city and the general statutes in such case made and provided.

Section 3. That in case any of the said property owners shall refuse or neglect to comply with the provisions of this ordinance and it shall be necessary for the Common Council to cause said improvement to be accomplished, said Common Council shall assess the costs and expenses of said improvement upon the land and real estate benefited by the same to the benefits thereby received. And no lot or parcel shall be assessed for a greater sum than it is benefited and in case the total cost and expense shall exceed the aggregate amount of benefits conferred, then the amount of such cost and expense as exceeds the aggregate thereof of such benefits conferred shall be paid by the number of such cost and expense shall be borne by the city at large and paid in the manner provided by law.

Fees—$6.30.

AN ORDINANCE

WOMEN AS DENTISTS.

THE OPERATORS ARE SKILLFUL, DEFT AND DAINTY.

Women and Children Are Their Patients, but Men Are Less Troublesome—A Field That Seems to Promise Much for Ambitious Young Students.

There are perhaps a half dozen women now practicing dentistry in New York city. The list might be longer, but matrimony is a sad despoiler of the feminine professional career, and one fair practitioner after another, succumbing to the attractions of its more homely joys and cares, vanishes entirely from the public gaze. It is not that their professional pathway is beset with insurmountable obstacles, for they appear to learn to manipulate the army of little steel implements required by the dentist as readily as that essentially womanly implement, the needle.

In a large city such robust work as extracting teeth, giving gas, and so forth, can be referred to specialists. In a smaller place the work of the woman dentist is more general, as is illustrated in the case of a bright little woman in Peekskill. Dr. Emma C. Wygant was born into the profession, so to speak. With a grandfather who practiced dentistry for over forty years, and a father who has followed in the same footsteps for thirty years, it is not strange that her talents should have had a mechanical bent or that her first recollection should be of fussing with dental implements. It was second nature to her to assist in the office, "talk business" to the patients and win their confidence. A practical office experience makes a good foundation for a two years' college course, and Dr. Wygant was not a novice when she took up her practice regularly after a course at the Pennsylvania College of Dental Surgery.

All kinds of work fall to her share, filling, extracting, giving gas and the more mechanical part of dentistry, which latter work she turns over to her father, unless requested to give it her personal attention. When possible she limits her work at the chair to six hours a day. Exercise with dumbbells, rowing and bicycling give her good firm muscles and steady nerves, and men, women and children all come under her skillful hands. Little children are less afraid of a woman dentist than of a man, and Dr. Emma Wygant thinks they would be less difficult to treat if unwise elders would refrain from posing as martyrs and relating thrilling tales of tortures suffered in the dental chair. She does not agree with other dentists that men are not as courageous as women, finding both women and men the whole less troublesome.

One of the first women to take up dentistry in New York city is, after six years' experience, a very successful practitioner. Here is what is called a strictly private practice. Women, children and men come to her—the latter only on the recommendation of some patient or friend. Her little office looks very attractive on a warm summer day, with its artistic pictures and books, pretty desk, and sofa and chairs covered for the season with cool looking chintz. The mistress of the establishment looks equally pretty and cool. There is an appearance of health about her and a certain air of decision that must be a mountain of strength to a timid patient.

To the question asked her, "Doesn't the suffering of a patient affect the steadiness of your nerves?" the quick reply comes, "I am never nervous." And one may well believe it.

The course at a dental college comprises a regular medical course, including the dissecting room. It is not to believe that after two weeks at the college the student begins her practice, but so it is. During that time the instruments have been purchased and the use of them learned. The student has made the best use of her eyes and ears while the other operators have been at work, and when her turn comes she begins, not on an artificial tooth, as the uninitiated might imagine, but upon a genuine tooth in its proper location in the head of the patient. This first operation is of course a simple one, with the demonstrator standing by to oversee it. Two hours every morning is given to practical work with many demonstrators as the number of students working require for assistance and advice. This opportunity to have dental work done at a small cost is a great blessing to people who could not afford it were it more expensive; many shop girls and servants are very glad to come as patients, and even wearers of silk gowns and seal coats have been known to find their way into the dispensary. The expense is nominal, merely covering the cost of the material.

Some woman dentists limit their practice to women and children, beginning with friends and gradually widening into a broader circle. Extracting they do not like. But a more extensive field of work is that done by Dr. Carrie Wolsbruck, who obtained her education from practical experience and private instruction. She is very proud to say that she is the only woman graduate of the New York State Dental association, and carried off high honors, secured by practical work performed before the board. Her first steps in the profession were made in assisting for a number of years a well known dentist, who gave her an excellent reputation for extracting teeth, and there are no branches of dentistry which she does not understand.

Dr. Wolsbruck, who is all ready for business, unites to her excellent physique the recent of being able to extract thirty teeth in a minute and a half. Many men come within her range of practice, and among some of the noted people she has treated may be numbered a pugilist who at one time stood on the world down—before the great and only John L., and another who owes his training to Muldoon, the wrestler. "They sat down and had their teeth out like gentlemen," she says. In fact men always do better in the dental chair than women, she has found, for while a woman is saying, "Do you really think you can do it?" a man sits down and out comes his tooth in a jiffy.

"There is not one woman in 50,000 who is equal to the strain required in the dental profession." So says Dr. Carman, of Wall street, who thinks that the ordinary run of women have not the necessary qualifications to make them satisfactory practitioners. In dentistry the right thing must be done at just the right moment, and if sympathy or lack of nerve causes the operator to ease up in her work on a suffering patient, the result will be unsatisfactory. Yet it was through his influence that his daughter, Dr. Julia M. Carman, took up the profession which she has followed so successfully. Out of the many students he has lectured to in the course of thirty years' practice he considers his daughter the most expert.—New York Sun.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

THE COW.

The Reasons Why This Useful Animal Chews Her Cud.

Wo-ows much to the cow, and when she turns her great head and looks at us with her big, soft eyes as we go by, she seems to know that we will not hurt her. When the cow cries out we say she "lows." When the calf, or the sheep, or the lamb cries we say it "bleats." Cows will eat dried grass or hay and some sort of roots, and they seem to munch all day long in the fields.

COWS ON A SUMMER'S DAY.

Do you know how it is that they do so? The cow chews her cud; that is, she chews her food twice. The first time she eats it up at once and it goes down her throat to her pouch, where it stays till she has a good meal. Then she stands or lies quite still, and the food is brought back to her mouth that she may munch it and grind it with her teeth till it is fit to go down her throat once more. The cow has more than one pouch for her food. She has four, and as she eats grass and herbs, as well as roots and hay, it takes her a long time to munch and chew these things, and to make them so soft that they may keep her strong and in good health.

Night and morning the hired man or the milkmaid goes to the barnyard and milks the cow. When a pailful has been drawn it is taken to the house or dairy and set to cool. The cream by and by rises to the top of the milk and is skimmed off and put into a churn, whence it comes out butter. But milk, cream and butter are by no means the only benefits derived from the cow. We find many portions of its body of use. The hide is tanned and gives us leather; the flesh is cut into beefsteaks and roasts, which we buy at the butcher's, and the horns are made into knifehandles, buttons, etc.

July.

When the scarlet cardinal tells
Her dream to the dragonfly,
And the lazy breeze makes a nest in the trees,
And murmurs a lullaby,
It is July.

When the heat lifts a mist veil floats,
And poppies flame in the rye,
And the silver note in the streamlet's throat
Has softened almost to a sigh,
It is July.

When the tangled cobweb pulls
The cornflower's cape away,
And the lilies bell lean over the wall
To bow to the butterfly,
It is July.

When the hours are so still that time
Forgets them, and lets them lie
'Neath petals pink till the night stars wink
At the sunset in the sky,
It is July.

When each fingerpost by the way
Says that Slumbertown is nigh;
When the grass is tall and the roses fall
And nobody wonders why,
It is July.

—Susan Hartley Swett.

Evening Song.

Hushaby! the end of the day
Drops into dark, and the roses turn gray;
Bird songs are silent, and flutetops are flow
Night falls so softly for me and for you—
Sleep!

Hushaby! the lily buds white
Shut up their secrets in shadows of night;
Down in the meadow the flow'rs bine and red
Silent together, sweet head laid to head,
Sleep!

Hushaby! the brook as it goes
Whispers a story that nobody knows;
Out of the moonlight the sagels let fall
Beautiful dreamlets for little ones all—
Sleep!

If.

If the old woman who lived in a shoe
Had lived in a cottage instead,
Her children could have played at hide and seek
And needn't have been sent to bed.

Arrangement of Lace on Dresses.

Lace trimming on some day dresses is so placed as to form a sort of deep basqued coat at the sides and a point at the back, losing itself in the center seam. This has the effect of taking away that look of extreme plainness the tightly fitting skirts give and which is so unbecoming to all. A very pretty silver gray crepon, cashed with white spots, was trimmed in this style with white guipure; the skirt had an old fashioned French hemmed ruche of silk edging it, and the bodice had the guipure arranged as epaulets and a zouave jacket, the sleeves being tight to the elbow, with a large puff of silk above.

A BRIOCHE PASTE.

It Makes an Excellent Crust for Meat and Fruit Pies.

A brioche paste is one of the triumphs of French cooks and one which is recommended as making an excellent crust for cold meat pies and fruit-pies for summer. Take a pound of flour, weigh out one-fourth of it, and add to it about three-quarters of a cake of compressed yeast. Mix this with a very scant gill of tepid water, just enough to make a rather stiff dough. Set this sponge to rise over night, or till it is double its original volume. Take the remainder of the flour, put in a tin dish by itself, add a teaspoonful of sugar and a teaspoonful of salt, each dissolved in a tablespoonful of cold water. Mix three-quarters of a pound of butter with this flour, using a common case knife or a chopping knife to chop it in as you would for pastry. It will not be mixed smoothly in the flour but remain in little lumps through it. Add four beaten eggs and mix well, and when these are added put in still another egg and mix again—and then another and another till seven eggs have been put in, in all. Now mix this paste with your risen sponge, tasting the two in pieces and putting them together again until the mass cleaves from the bowl.

Cover the paste and set it aside in a warm place for about four hours. Then roll it out and double it over as you would puff-paste, four times. Return it to the fire and let it rise until it is double in volume. Then roll it out and fold it over four times again in the same way as before, and let it rise again. Then set it away in a very cold place for at least three hours, or until you are ready to use it, if not more than twelve hours. The genuine brioche loaf is made in the form of a crown or hollow circle, about three or four inches across, or in individual cakes in the form of one ball with a smaller one surrounding it. If you wish to use this paste for pie-crust roll it thin, fold it over as you do puff-paste, then roll it out again, and use it as you would puff-paste. It is almost an impossibility to make puff-paste in summer unless you have a cold store closet in which to prepare it, and any substitute for this crust should be welcome. Brioche, when baked in a stove or individual balls, is one of the most delicious breakfast rolls or hot tea breads which we have. Though troublesome to prepare, it pays to serve it occasionally by way of an excellent change.

MADE WITH RASPBERRIES.

Recipes for What Every Household Will Readily Consume.

Take equal weights of fruit and roughly pounded loaf sugar; bruise the fruit with the back of a spoon. Then boil the crushed fruit and sugar together for half an hour. If a little juice is wanted use the juice of currants.

RASPBERRY ICE CREAM.

Take one pint of raspberries and one pint of cream, nearly half pound of powdered white sugar and the juice of a lemon. Wash the fruit through a sieve and take out the pips, mix with the other articles and freeze. A little new milk added makes the whole freeze more quickly.

RASPBERRY VINEGAR.

To each quart of ripe berries (black) add one pint of cider vinegar. Let it stand over night. Put on the stove and scald; then strain as for jelly and add one pound of white sugar to each pint of juice. Boil half an hour, then bottle for use.

RASPBERRY PUDDING.

One egg, one teacup of sugar, one teacup of sweet milk, two and a half teacups of flour, one dessertspoonful of butter, two teaspoonfuls cream of tartar, one teaspoonful of soda and a little salt. To mix it stir the cream of tartar and salt into the flour, then the milk; add the egg without beating, dissolve the soda and melt the butter in a teaspoonful of hot water. Then beat all together a few minutes. To a two-quart pudding dish put a quart of raspberries. Pour them over the butter and steam forty minutes.

Aids to the Laundry.

Gum arabic is, doubtless, the most invaluable aid to the laundress who desires the most beautiful possible finish for her goods. As this gum does not dissolve very readily, the following will be found an excellent method for its preparation: Pound two ounces of the fine white gum to a powder, and pour over it in a pitcher a pint of boiling water; cover the vessel and allow it to stand over night. In the morning pour the solution carefully from the dregs into a clean bottle and set it aside for use. A tablespoonful of this gum water in a pint of starch will give a fine, smooth gloss to shirts and like goods, which can be obtained in no other way. It is not safe to add the powdered gum to the starch while it is being made, as there is the possibility of particles of undissolved gum remaining, and it will be difficult to get a perfect blending of the gum.—Good Housekeeping.

Pineapple Souffle.

Pare and grate enough pineapple to make one pint; add one pound of granulated sugar; mix well and squeeze in juice of one lemon. To half a box of gelatine add half a glass of cold water; soak until soft; then set over a kettle of hot water. Beat the yolks of three eggs with egg beater and stir into the pineapple; when gelatine is melted add to the pineapple and pour all into a dish and set in a pan of cracked ice; stir slowly until it gets thick; then add one pint of whipped cream; turn into a mould, which has a cover; put a thin cloth over the top; fit the cover down closely over the cloth; pack the mould in a mixture of chopped ice and salt. In two hours it will be ready to serve. In the centre it will not be frozen, but the outside portion will freeze a little.

Red and Buff Cotton Pickets.

Red pickets can be made of linen or wash silk embroidered, edged with lace about the top and interlined with perfumed wadding. They are particularly convenient for invalids whose smell her longings have a disagreeable knack of getting out of sight or reach when most needed.

Hanging pockets for the bureau or dressing-table are also convenient as receptacles for the mussed handkerchiefs and laces many are too fine for sending out to the common laundry.

How to Poach Eggs in a Ball.

To poach eggs in a ball is a knack known to clever cooks. The water is heated to boiling and then rapidly stirred till a small whirlpool is produced, in the hollow heart of which mastercom the egg is cleverly dropped. The motion of the water sets the white instantly into a circular covering for the unbroken yolk.

This Date in History—Aug. 5.

COLUMBUS.

1492—Columbus discovered treachery in his fleet; sailors unwilling to go on had damaged the Pinta, so he was delayed at the Canary Isles.

1780—Richard Lord Howe, British commander in America, died in London; succeeded by Admiral Barrington.

1864—Admiral Farragut forced his way into Mobile bay, but the monitor Tecumseh struck a torpedo and went down with all on board.

1873—Waterspout struck Kirn, in Brussels, and drowned 13 persons.

An Effective Hint.

Harry wanted to give Lucy a birthday present, but couldn't make up his mind what it should be; so the next time he called he frankly told her the difficulty under which he was laboring.

"Want to make me a present, Harry?" exclaimed Lucy in well counterfeited astonishment. "Why, Harry, you forgot yourself!"

Harry took the hint and offered himself on the spot.—Boston Transcript.

Displaced.

The Sword Swallower—I have had notice that they don't want me any longer in the museum.

Fat Woman—Well, who is going to take your place?

Sword Swallower—Why, a girl from Boston is going to swallow her words.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Very Much in the Way.

Tramp—Madam, have you got anything in the way of an old pair of trousers that your husband don't want?

Lady of the House—Yes. There's a cord of wood out there.—Detroit Free Press.

An Apt Comparison.

"Miss Budd's heart is like a volume in a circulating library."

"How is that?"

"Not to be kept longer than two weeks."

THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

THE REGULAR MEETING FOR AUGUST.

Residents Allowed to Macadamize Sycamore Avenue at Their Own Expense.—Bills Ordered Paid.

A regular meeting of the Borough Council was held last evening in the Council chamber. Present—Councilmen Hegeman, Sebring, Connelly, Needham, Humber and Neal. Mayor Saunders presided.

In the absence of Mr. H. H. Brokaw, Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed was appointed clerk pro tem.

A petition was received from the residents of Stone avenue asking that it be accepted by the borough as a public street. Referred to the Street Committee.

Chairman Neal of the Street Committee made a report on the macadamizing of Willow avenue, which was filed.

A petition was received, signed by B. A. Hageman, jr., Jane Boome, De Witt Brokaw and other residents on Sycamore avenue asking permission to macadamize the avenue in accordance with the established grade from Willow to Mercer avenue at their own expense.

Councilman Neal, as chairman of the Street Committee, objected. He said he opposed the granting of the petition on the ground that allowing it would be a reflection upon the Street Commissioner and upon the Street Committee, by whom he asserted all macadamizing should be done.

Councilman Hegeman replied that no reflection was intended nor should any be construed to have been intended. The residents of Sycamore avenue, he said, had asked to make a public improvement, paying for it out of their own pockets. Therefore, he considered that it was the duty of the Council to allow them to do so and cited several instances in which similar petitions had been granted heretofore.

A vote was then taken upon a resolution offered by Councilman Hegeman to grant the petition, the work to be done subject to the approval of the Street Committee, and the petition to have the use of the borough roller, scraper and plow with which to do the work.

The resolution was carried, all voting for it except Councilman Neal, who stated that he would decline to act in connection with the matter.

The following bills were ordered paid:

Plainfield Gas and Elec. Lt. Co.	$ 11 00
Jos. Spithaler	12 50
S. A. French	9 12

A resolution was passed authorizing the Committee on Streets and Public Health to build a board walk of local width and construction in front of the properties of Charles Hyde, Patrick Duffy and Jonathan Dunn.

The borough tax collector reported that the tax duplicate would be ready for inspection on Aug. 19.

Marshal Pangborn presented his official fees in the sum of $206, which were referred to the Committee on Laws, Ordinances and Election.

Chairman Neal offered a resolution to macadamize Vine street and Park place. He stated that $215 had already been subscribed by the property owners. The resolution was seconded by Councilman Hegeman. After considerable discussion it was adopted.

Councilman Connelly reported that two electric lights on Duer street had been placed too close together and recommended that they be changed.

The Council adjourned, it being decided that in case of necessity a special meeting should be called instead of fixing the date as the 19th, as had been suggested.

Will Sit on a Fence.

There was a very large crowd at the ball grounds when game was called.

The Somerville team came to town with blood in its eye, and they will probably spring something new on the home players—League men perhaps.

It was this morning said that "Willie" Murphy had asserted that he would not play with the Crescents this afternoon, but would watch the game from the fence.

Sunday Evening Concert at the Netherwood.

The orchestra at the Hotel Netherwood will give a concert to-morrow evening. The following is the programme:

Overture—"Strabell"	Flotow
Selection from "Bohemian Girl"	Balfe
Selection from "Erani"	Verdi
Cornet Solo—"Home, Sweet Home"
Waltz from "Lohe"	Gungl
Selection from "Bohemian Girl"	Balfe
"Angel's Serenade"	Braga
Selection from "Aida"	Verdi

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Sisterare at Moscow, Pa.

Rev. Dr. Mitchell is still at Asbury Park.

Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Hegeman have returned from the Pocono Mountains.

Miss Lizzie Mattis of this city is the guest of Miss Tillie Slack of Raritan.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Vanderbeek have gone to Denver, Col., for a three weeks visit.

Mr. Thomas Hale of East Fifth street is registered at the Mansion House, Asbury Park.

Mrs. Charles Smith of West Front street has returned from a visit to her uncle in Brooklyn.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Loughlin of West Front street was made happy by the advent of a son this morning.

Miss Emma L. Adams, librarian of the public library, will take her vacation on Monday. She will go to West Port Point, Buzzards Bay.

Mrs. Harriett Elliott of Michigan, and her sister, Miss Elizabeth Shotwell of this city, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Williams at Rahway.

Mr. Clarence Van Deventer, of East Fourth street, is convalescent from an attack of pleuro-pneumonia. He was seriously ill for two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Jackson have gone to the Thousand Islands. St. Lawrence River, where they have a beautiful cottage on one of the little isles.

Mrs. R. J. Lawton, of Shippens, Pa., is visiting her niece, Mrs. E. D. Murphy, of Sandford avenue. Mr. Oliver Jackson of Lexington, Ky., is also the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Murphy.

Mrs. Steinhauser and daughters, Miss Marie and Agnes, who are spending the Summer with Miss Verdon of Somerset street, started for Asbury Park this afternoon. They will be at the Mansion House for a week.

Mr. Douglass Murphy of Sandford avenue, while visiting friends at Lexington, Ky., was taken very ill last week, and was compelled to return home. Last Sunday he was in a very serious condition and at one time it was not expected he would live. He rallied, however, and is now out of danger.

Dr. J. A. Coles, of Scotch Plains, has one of the most beautiful country homes to be found around Plainfield. It is called Deerhurst and is situated on the Springfield road. It commands a handsome view of seventeen acres of which are laid out in a very artistic manner, and make the place resemble a grand park. The house is of brick, is large and roomy, and fronts toward the south-east. The floors and interior finishings are of hard wood. In the main hall is a large memorial window, and artistic stained glass windows are everywhere throughout the house. Dr. Coles is a great lover of sculpture, and has a fine collection of same mounted with choice pieces of statuary, the most valuable of which is "Deborah." It was carved in Italy from pure white Italian marble, and is worth several thousand dollars. For pets the Doctor has a family of red deer. They have an acre of ground entirely to themselves and are very good specimens. The pets of the herd are two young fawns, born in June. Dr. Coles is a very pleasant man of middle age, with hosts of friends. "He finds much amusement in conducting visitors to his fairyland to the "labyrinth," which is an acre of ground covered by rows of hedges arranged in such a manner that a person may wander for an hour or more through the many paths. Sometimes they give up in despair or ever reaching the big hickory tree in the center, and after reaching the goal, they become bewildered in trying to find the exit. It is a miniature of the Hampton Court labyrinth.

A Chance for the Farmers Hereabouts.

The American Jersey Cattle Club has offered fifty prizes of $25 each for acceptable essays on Jersey cattle to be governed by the following rules:

Anything pertaining to their history, value, usefulness, care, treatment, peculiarities of product, etc.

No essay shall contain less than 600 or more than 900 words.

All essays must be submitted on or before September 1, 1892. They may be sent earlier, and the committee request as prompt attention as is practicable.

All essays submitted are to be the property of the American Jersey Cattle Club, regardless of prizes. No essay will be awarded a prize unless it is considered by the committee to merit publication.

Forty of the prizes are open to competition by men. Ten of the prizes are open to competition by women.

Prizes will be awarded and paid within sixty days after contest closes.

DOLLARS AND CENTS.

NEEDED FOR THE OPENING OF THE NEW STREET.

Reasons Why Such a Street Would be of Benefit—Property-Owners Along the Line Find Their Assessments a Burden, and Think the Cost Should be Distributed Throughout the Township.

A gentleman, a large owner of Plainfield real estate, and a competent judge of land values, said recently, regarding the proposed new street:

"Many people are interested in the extension of Peace street. Nine out of ten of the property-owners interested want it. Everyone acknowledges that it would greatly enhance the value of land and add great beauty to both Plainfield and North Plainfield.

"One man said enthusiastically, 'Why just imagine it!' The only straight avenue in the place. The sidewalks flagged and curbed, the street macadamized, and an electric street-car line running from one end to the other.'

"That would be a pleasant sight indeed. Those assessed, however, while anxious for the street, do not feel like bearing the entire expense of it. They think it would be of public benefit and that the Township should bear its share.

"On the other hand," says a Township official, "the street will be of direct and potent value to the property-owners along its line, and, that being the case, why should outsiders, who are only indirectly benefitted, pay for it! That if the Township was expected to pay for every new street, the next thing wanted on the plea that it would be of benefit to the public at large, would be for the Township to pay for a new house built."

This last argument, those interested say, is of course preposterous.

"A street such as the one proposed," said the property owner referred to, "would be of public benefit for these reasons:

"1.—It would give employment for a long time to an army of workmen, on the street, surveyors, carpenters, plumbers, tinsmiths, etc., and the money brought into the place would be incalculable. Then new dwellings need fixings, and the merchants would be benefitted.

"2.—The increased valuations of property would, or should unless gross mismanagement or doubling up of salaries and offices interfered, cause a lower tax rate. This would be a benefit the township would be of public benefit for these reasons:

"3.—The assessment for benefits on many of the property-owners along the line between Dudley and the new line. This would hardly be noticed. The fact that the property owned along and near the street would be of more value if the street opened, is offset as an argument by the likewise palpable fact that the same increase in value would also mean increase in tax for the owners.

"If the street is ever to get through, its management should be put in the hands of a competent committee free from interference.

"Hit-dilly-dallying method now employed will eventually end with nothing accomplished. Then there is the useless expense of the surveyors, the commissioners, etc., to be paid for. In other cities, when an improvement is needed, and where, as in this case, where "Barkis is willin'," the improvement is secured in short order and the objections of the kickers, usually those least assessed, are over-ruled."

BREVITIES

—Painters are at work painting handsome signs on the sides of the entrance of the Hotel Grenada.

—Rev. Carlos Martin, one of Newark's popular preachers, will conduct the services to-morrow at Trinity Reformed Church.

—A number of the disciples of Izaak Walton from this city are going a-fishing off South Amboy to-morrow. They will start shortly after midnight.

—A game of ball was played on the Park avenue grounds yesterday afternoon between the Shot Ends of this city and the young Gorhams. The home team won by a score of 10 to 6.

—Messrs. Van Emburgh & White have something new and interesting for the ladies in their "ad" to-day. They advertise a special mid-Summer sale of durable goods, at much reduced prices.

—Two boys were left behind at Asbury Park yesterday, the excursion from this city returning without them. They got on a later train to Elizabethport where one of them was compelled to pay fare to Plainfield, the conductor passing the other free.

Farms for Immigrants in New Jersey.

Franklin Dye, Secretary of the New Jersey State Board of Agriculture, has come to the conclusion that immigrants and others are paying good farms in New Jersey for poorer lands in the West, and is making an effort to arouse the interest of prospective purchasers in the farming lands of his State. His aim is to aid those who are honestly seeking a country home in finding one suited to their wants. He believes he can satisfy them here in the East, where he claims, lands are cheaper and improvements and advantages are greater than they are in the West. Therefore he freely offers himself, in a circular letter to all farmers in the State, as a medium for bringing together those who want to buy and those who have farms for sale, and for the sake of New Jersey's farming prosperity he announces himself ready to answer free of charge all inquiries addressed to him at Trenton.

STATE NEWS

MISS DICK SUES FOR $50,000.

Miss Beth Gage, a well-known school teacher of Rahway, has caused considerable excitement by bringing a breach of promise suit against Thomas Matthews, of this place, for $50,000 damages. She alleges that Matthews is the father of her one-year-old child. Matthews is a well-to-do young business man about town, and is well-known throughout the county.

A BRAVE JERSEY BOY.

A gasolene stove exploded in the store of Max Adler, New Brunswick, yesterday afternoon, and the clothing of his daughter Dora caught fire. Clayton Wilt, a boy of sixteen, ran into the store and saved the girl, but was himself terribly burned about the body.

—The main of the Union Water Company has been laid through Cranford. Superintendent Dowd borrowed 30 feet of hose from the Fire Department of this city for the purpose of testing the pressure.

—A very charming lawn party was given last evening by the Misses Wikoff at their residence on West Eighth street. The proceeds will be given to the Trinity Reformed church. The committee who had the affair in charge were Miss Searing, Miss Williams, Mr. Zimmer and Miss Wikoff. Among the guests were the Misses Dunn, Miss Van Winkle, Miss Schoonmaker, Mr. and Miss Hunter, and many others. A good sum was realized.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"And then, the beautiful great white rain." So sang Joaquin Miller of a storm in Venice on the afternoon of a hot day. In fact, what are more glorious or welcome than the infrequent showers of a "dry summer?"

A unique feature of the Columbus Day celebration has been proposed by the superintendent of schools at Pittsburg. The pupils in the public schools are to set out an extensive grove, covering many acres, in Schenley park, to be known forever as "Columbus Grove." These commemorative forest monarchs will be walnut, maple and oak trees.

Now that Noah's ark has really been discovered upon the top of Mount Ararat, one may reasonably suppose that a "syndicate" of Chicago capitalists has already been formed, with the reverend doctor who made the discovery at its head, to go at once and bring the ancient barge from its moorings, and after its journey to the sea tow it across the Atlantic to America, where it will become a feature of the Columbian fair. As a matter of fact, Chicago must have Noah's ark!

Few people consider the importance of local history. Much of what should be preserved in every neighborhood, town, county and state is lost for the want of using the "art preservative" in making authentic records of current events. Nothing should be lost. Supposing every village or town with its farming, dairy, manufacturing, fruit growing or horticultural interests should employ some competent scribe to make complete records of all affairs of interest occurring throughout the year, giving statistics of value concerning the weather, trade or business in any form. What a mine of practical information such a record would be for all time to come.

A Suggestion from Paris.

The young bachelors of Paris society have sense even if they are accused of certain serious shortcomings. During the fashionable winter season they of course receive many invitations. This summer they are paying what might be called their social debts by giving open air parties in the suburbs of the gay capital, where the velvety lawn answers for carpet and the sky for ceiling. Recently some of them who were clever fixed upon the pretty island in the lake of the Bois de Boulogne as their playground. Invitations by the hundred were issued; all the trees and bushes were decorated with Venetian lamps and colored lights sparkling like countless jewels; a white satin tent was erected, in which, and in the large room of the restaurant on the island, the dancers disported themselves; the lake was furnished with gondolas, wreathed with flowers and sparkling with fairy lights, and this midsummer night's dream was enacted to the delight of one and all. The men, by the way, wore red coats, and the ladies light dresses and large country hats.

Doesn't this narrative embody suggestions, possibly not so gorgeous in the realization for the American young man who was well received at various homes during the past winter, and who desires to recognize his obligations, with something more substantial than the popular but sometimes painful dish of ice cream?

A Worthy Example.

In one of the pleasantest streets of Portland, Me., stands a roomy and attractive house, the pretty dooryard of which is inclosed by some slight iron railing. But the gate is either always open or removed altogether. This of course leaves the plants and shrubbery at the mercy of every passing dog and street gamin, but as you approach more nearly the seeming carelessness is explained. The house is furnished with Sebago water, and from the basement pipe projects through the wall into the yard at the corner of the house nearest the street.

Above this spout, on the house wall, appear the words, "Water for horses." Any person driving along the street—truckman, huckster, peddler, coachman or ragman—is at liberty to enter the dooryard and there water his horse and himself, and many a poor, tired horse, panting under the blazing sun, has been refreshed there in the past years. Portland, like many other cities, not being oversupplied with public drinking troughs for horses and dogs, and there being none whatever in that neighborhood.

The arrangement hurts the appearance of the house, which is the abode of plenty and refinement; it spoils the dooryard, which might else be a very bower of bloom all summer; it calls some critical comment from thoughtless and selfish observers; it has even caused the dreadful and dreaded word "crank" to be applied to the gentle and kindly lady of the house; but it has blessed the weariness and thirst of many a four footed faithful servant of men; it has planted in many heedless souls the first germs of kindness to animals; it has set a valuable and beneficent example before the townspeople, and it has shown forth the kindly spirit and merciful hand of the dweller behind the blinds, who thus sacrifices her house to her humane impulses.

CONGRESS ADJOURNED.

The Columbian Exposition Gets $2,500,000 as a Gift.

APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE SESSION.

The Total Foots Up in Round Numbers $507,000,000 as Against $463,000,000 for the First Session of the Last Congress—The House Hilarious at the Close.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—The 5th of August, 1892, will be remembered as a red letter day in the annals of legislation and in the history of the country, as it chronicles adjournment of the first session of the Fifty-second congress and the passage of the World's fair bill appropriating $2,500,000 for that enterprise. The passage of the bill was without special incident, as it was a foregone conclusion. One hour was devoted to debate, and the final vote resulted: Yeas, 191; nays, 83. A substitute of Mr. De Armond, of Missouri, allowing the World's fair managers to coin bullion to the extent of $5,000,000 in souvenir coins, the seigniorage to the management (estimated at $2,500,000) and the premium on the coin, was rejected. The house not then being in a mood to pass any general bills took a recess until 7 o'clock in the evening.

The Vote on the Fair Appropriation.

The vote in detail on the World's fair bill was as follows: In favor of the bill:

Democrats—Andrew, Babbitt, Barwig, Bentley, Boatner, Bowman, Breta, Brookshire, Brown, Busey, Bushnell, Butler, Byrnes, Cable, Cadmus, Caminetti, Capehart, Caruth, Castle, Catchings, Causey, Chipman, Clark, Coburn, Coombs, Cooper, Cox of New York, Daniell, Dixon, Dungan, Durborrow, English, Fellows, Forman, Funk, Geissenhainer, Hall, Harris, Hatch, Harter, Hayes of Iowa, Houk of Ohio, Lane, Lapham, Martin, McClellan, McInnis, McKaig, Meyer, Mitchell, Money, Montgomery, Owens, Page of Rhode Island, Page of Maryland, Parrett, Patton, Pendleton, Price, Ray, Rer, Reilly, Rockwell, Rusk, Searley, Shively, Snow, Sperry, Stevenson, Steward of Illinois, Stone, Stump, Tarsney, Tracey, Wheeler of Michigan, White, Wike, Williams of Illinois, Wilson of West Virginia, Wolverton.

Against the bill:

Democrats—Alexander, Autrey, Bacon, Bailey, Bankhead, Barnes, Blanchard, Branch, Breckinridge of Arkansas, Breckinridge of Kentucky, Bunn, Byrnes, Cate, Clarke of Alabama, Cobb of Alabama, Cobb of Missouri, Covert, Cowles, Cox of Tennessee, Crain, Crawford, Culberson, Cummings, De Armond, De Forest, Dockery, Dockery, Donovan, Dunphy, Edmunds, Ellis, Enloe, Epes, Everett, Forney, Goodnight, Heard, Henderson of North Carolina, Holman, Jones, Kyle, Lanham, Lawson of Virginia, Lawson of Georgia, Lester of Virginia, Lester of Georgia, Little, Long, Mallory, McCreary, McMillin, McRae, Meredith, Montgomery, Mutchler, Norton, Oates, O'Ferrall Patterson of Tennessee, Patterson of South Carolina, Pierce, Richardson, Sayers, Shell, Terry, Tucker, Turner, Turpin, Van Horn, Warner, Washington, Wheeler of Alabama, Williams of North Carolina.

People's Party—Baker, Davis, Halvorson, Kem, McKeighan, Otis, Simpson, Watson, Winn.

Republicans—None.

The Pairs.

The pairs on the question were as follows, those in favor of the appropriation being first in each couple.

Haugen of Wisconsin and Bullock of Georgia, Clark of Wyoming and Moory of Texas, Scott of Illinois and Kem of Nebraska, Canning of California and Layton of Ohio, Harmer of Pennsylvania and Hatch of Missouri, Robinson of Pennsylvania and Hopkins of Pennsylvania, Whiting of Michigan and Johnson of Ohio, Haynes of Ohio and Stewart of Texas, Wadsworth of New York and Campbell of New York, Belden of New York and Abbott of Texas, Pithian of Illinois and Crosby of Massachusetts, Springer of Illinois and Bryan of Nebraska, McCreary of Kentucky and Walker of Massachusetts, Allen of Mississippi and Turner of Kentucky, Herbert of Alabama and Boutelle of Maine, Booher of Mississippi and Milliken of Maine, Bungarner of Tennessee and Hooker of Tennessee, O'Neill of Massachusetts and Cogswell of Massachusetts, Arnold of Rhode Island and Weaver of Nebraska, Wilson of Missouri and Hall of Pennsylvania, Andrew of Massachusetts and Lodge of Massachusetts, Wise of Virginia and Ketcham of New York, Outhwaite of Ohio and Scull of Pennsylvania, Johnston of South Carolina and Burrows of Michigan, Tillman of South Carolina and Morse of Massachusetts.

The Night Session.

Expectation of an adjournment filled the galleries of the house at its night session, and the same reason brought an unusual attendance of members. Promptly at 7 o'clock Speaker Crisp called the house to order and soon after the Durborrow World's fair bill was reported from the senate. Mr. Jolley, of South Dakota, secured the passage of a senate measure creating a new time for holding sessions of the United States courts in South Dakota, and then the private calendar was taken up.

After the passage of several of these bills Mr. Holman, of Indiana, presented the report of the conferees on the sundry civil bill. Mr. Holman explained the nature of the agreement, detailing the items in dispute and the compromises effected. He said the bill as finally agreed to carried $27,367,439. This was $6,000,000 less than the bill as it passed the senate and $2,614,786 more than its aggregate when it passed the house.

Concerning the Pinkerton detective clause of the bill Mr. Holman admitted that the amendment adopted by the house was a little too broad, and that in the interest of a speedy adjournment the house conferees were obliged to accept the substitute submitted on the part of the senate. The objectionable clause had been the amendment offered by Mr. O'Neill, of Missouri, and adopted by the house, but out side of the 5th by the senate, to prevent any officer of the government having the power to make contracts with any corporation, firm or individual who employed Pinkerton detectives. After consultation it discovered the conferees agreed to substitute for the amendment the following proviso:

"And no employe of the Pinkerton detective agency or any similar agency shall be employed in any governmental service or by any officer of the District of Columbia." This relieved the application to government contractors.

The senate conferees were firm in their refusal to make any concession other than that agreed upon, and they even went so far as to state that they would report final disagreement unless this substitute was adopted. The house conferees were obliged to surrender, and the amendment quoted above was incorporated in the committee's report.

The Pinkerton Debate.

Mr. O'Neill, of Missouri, whose amendment was rejected by the conferees, said it was the use of armed guards that was objected to. It was sending these armed guards from one state to another that was wrong. It was not that he objected to the use of detectives, but we had not reached the time when the proper authorities were not able to protect life and property without the help of this band of hired murderers. Why did not these giant minds of the senate create a proper amendment? It was only to-day that members of the senate conference committee were willing to prohibit sending these armed guards from one state to another. This miserable makeshift was a miserable backdown on the part of the representatives of the people.

"I tell you tonight, here and now," said Mr. O'Neill fervently, "in the interest of peace, good will among men, to put your feet on this armed guard feature, or you will have civil war, for no American workman will allow himself to be foully crushed by any hired assassins. Send this bill back into conference," he said. He had no fears but that the conference would agree to substitute which would give life and vitality to this principle. Loud applause from the floor and the galleries followed Mr. O'Neill's remarks.

Mr. Bingham, of Pennsylvania, criticised Mr. O'Neill's interest in the Pinkerton amendment. He was in thorough accord with the action of the house in sending for detectives to investigate the use of armed forces in Pennsylvania, but he was not in accord with any measure that prohibited something that had not been investigated. He objected to the amendment of the gentleman from Missouri because it would prevent the manufacture of steel plate by the Carnegie company; it would prevent express companies from transporting the money of the goverment; it would prevent the very transfer of the mails. The senate had appointed a committee to investigate the matter; the house had done likewise, and it was for these committees to investigate and make a report before action should be taken.

Mr. Simpson, of Kansas, denounced "the act of the representatives of the house in surrendering to the representatives of the plutocracy of the country." He called the Pinkerton employees "armed thugs, robbers and murderers."

"You'll hear from this in the elections in the fall," said Mr. Simpson, "and any one that votes for this amendment should be left at home. You should not surrender to the representatives of wealth."

Republicans Cried "Rats."

Mr. Simpson's time expired while he was speaking, and amid loud raps of the speaker's gavel and much disorder he concluded with the remark that the great steel works at Homestead were properly called "steal."

Cries of "Rats" and prolonged hissing from the Republican side marked the conclusion of Mr. Simpson's remarks. The speaker directed the official reporter to strike out all Mr. Simpson had said after the gavel fell.

The reporter would do himself honor by leaving all of it out," shouted Mr. Johnson, of Indiana.

At this point there was some excitement in the house. The aisles were crowded in Mr. Simpson's vicinity and the babel of voices drowned individual utterances. It was not until the sergeant at arms had cleared the aisles that the house settled down to the previous question on the report of the conference report, but before the motion could be put Mr. O'Neill interjected a question, in substance that side of the chamber. Now I need be alluded to the fact that $5,000,000 additional had been appropriated for the postoffice service. This was made necessary by the growth of the country, and still left many expenditures absolutely necessary for the conduct of the postoffice department unprovided for which would have to be met by deficiency appropriations at the next session.

Mr. Allison disclaimed making these remarks in a partisan sense, and stated that the appropriation committee had not divided on party lines. He admitted that the increased appropriations were made necessary by the growth of the country.

Mr. Gorman, of Maryland, a member of the committee on appropriations, characterized Mr. Allison's statement as fair and correct, but again earnestly called the attention of the house to the necessity of the economic basis of fixed expenditures. Before this congress adjourned, unless he (Gorman) very much mistook the figures of the secretary of the treasury, congress would be required to levy additional taxes to meet the requirements now upon the statute books. When this time came, as he believed it would before the fiscal year 1895, then he had no doubt both parties, being brought sharply face to face with the people, would find some means by which these great sums appropriated annually would be reduced.

Adjournment.

Mr. Cockrell, of Missouri, said in his judgment the house had done its best to keep down appropriations. That they had been larger than many expected he did not doubt.

Mr. Allison at 10:25 reported the house adjournment resolution, substituting for Saturday, Aug. 6, 11 a. m., Sunday, Aug. 7, 11 p. m." The resolution was agreed to, and the customary committee of three (Messrs. Allison and Gorman) was appointed to wait upon the president of the United States.

Thanks were tendered the vice president and the vice president pro tem. (Mr. Mandersen) by motions made by Democratic senators.

At 10:50 the senate committee reported that they had waited on the president and he had no further business to lay before congress.

The vice president paid a fitting tribute to the two senators who had died during the session (Messrs. Plumb and Barbour) appropriately acknowledged the vote of and thanks and then declared the senate adjourned without day.

THE ACT NULL AND VOID

New York's Reapportionment Decided Unconstitutional.

THE CASE WILL NOW BE APPEALED.

The Court of Appeals to Finally Determine the Legality of the Measure. Senator Hill on His Way to Gray Gables to Have a Conference with Cleveland.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Justice William Ramsey, of the supreme court, rendered his decision in the case of the people ex rel. Charles F. Pond against the board of supervisors of Monroe county, involving the constitutionality of the act of the last legislature making a reapportionment of the senate and assembly districts of the state. The court holds that the law is unconstitutional, and for that reason declines to issue a writ of mandamus requiring the board of supervisors to reapportion the assembly districts of Monroe county as declared by the act.

Judge Rumsey cites many cases to show that the provisions of the constitution of the state of New York in regard to changing the organizations of districts are mandatory and not discretionary, and says:

I am firmly persuaded that the principle which allows any provisions or limitations of the constitution to be construed as directory and not as mandatory is perilous and dangerous, and such construction is not in accordance with the limit of authority in this state at least.

It is by virtue of the constitutional provision that the apportionment act was passed, and the objections to it based upon these words are:

First—That the enumeration upon which it was based was taken in 1862 and not a tenth after 1865.

Second—That the extraordinary session at which the act was passed was not the session after the return of the enumeration within the constitutional provision.

Third—That the apportionment is unconstitutional because in estimating the number of inhabitants in the new senate districts the persons of color not taxed were included.

Fourth—That both senate and assembly apportionments are unconstitutional because the the senate districts are grossly unequal in number of inhabitants, and the members of the assembly are not apportioned among the counties as nearly as may be according to the number of citizen inhabitants, but that command of the constitution is ignored.

One of the chief points on which the judge decides that the apportionment act is void is the inclusion of persons of color not taxed.

The question will now be taken to the court of appeals, which will have the final decision.

McKinley in Omaha.

OMAHA, Aug. 6.—Governor McKinley was the center of a mammoth Republican demonstration here. The Republican Ward club of the city with a band escorted Governor McKinley to the high school grounds, where he made a speech to a throng of 30,000 people, who were demonstrative from first to last. Governor McKinley discussed the methods of taxation and tariff proposed by the Republican and Democratic parties.

He admitted that for a time a protective tariff is paid by the consumer, but that in the end the consumer is benefited. Picking up an earthen pitcher from the table he said: "Now this pitcher is taxed 55 per cent. I know that, for I put the tax there myself. The result of protection to the pottery industry is that we now manufacture at home all the pottery we use."

Protection, he continued, has cheapened everything it has touched except labor.

Referring to Republican defeat in 1850, Governor McKinley said: "We were beaten two years ago by false pretenses." A voice shouted, "That kind of language would be unparliamentary for me."

New York Democratic Committee.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—The Democratic state executive committee was called to order by Chairman Hubert O. Thompson. Bourke Cockran called for the reading of the resolution passed at the last meeting of the state committee in reference to the filling of vacancies as delegated to the executive committee, and then offered a resolution that a candidate for chief justice of the court of appeals be nominated by the committee at the next meeting. The resolution was carried.

Charles M. Preston, E. D. Cutler and Charles F. Durston were appointed a committee to call conventions in congressional districts whose boundaries have been changed. A campaign committee was appointed, which will open permanent headquarters at its next meeting, which has been called for Monday night at the Grand Central hotel, Saratoga Springs.

Hill to Meet Cleveland.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Aug. 6.—The steam yacht F. D. Pavaia arrived in port from Cuttyunk with a party of five gentleman aboard, including Ed Stokes, the owner, and Senator David B. Hill. Mr. Hill said he was out on a pleasure trip and must be excused from saying anything for publication. The captain of the yacht stated that she would go to Gray Gables today, where Mr. Hill will meet Mr. Cleveland.

THE RIOTERS ARRESTED.

Eleven in Jail at Pittsburg—Trick at Work at Mile Bank.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 6.—Constables Price and Breslin, of Alderman McMaster's office, having in charge eleven men arrested at Duquesne on charges of riot, sworn to before Alderman Riley by A. P. Griffith, chief of the guards at Duquesne, has arrived in Pittsburg. The prisoners were handcuffed in pairs and as they marched from Alderman Riley's office, after having been committed to the jail, attracted considerable attention. There are four more warrants out and the men wanted will soon be in custody.

H. C. Frick, chairman of the Carnegie Iron and Steel company, surprised everybody by appearing at his office. It is two weeks since he was shot, and his rapid recovery is considered remarkable. He was cordially received by the men in the offices. He was quite pale and showed the effects of confinement. His face was bleached, but he appeared to be strong and walked with firm step.

The places where the bullets entered his neck were indicated by pieces of court plaster. Mr. Frick thinks he has fully recovered and will return to be at his office daily. His friends believe he is indiscreet.

The top of the bodice has a yoke of lace insertion, showing green through, and a small bebe of lace and mull is tied across the bust. The large puff sleeves are of the willow green taffeta, forming two puffs and a frill worn over tight under sleeves of white embroidery and lace. The effect is charming. A large leghorn hat with striped green and white and black wings is worn with the costume.

The President Wants Seclusion.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—President Harrison left the city last night by the Pennsylvania road shore route shortly after 9 o'clock, going directly to Loon Lake to see his wife and will probably be gone about a month. The president expresses the wish not to be disturbed in any manner while at Loon Lake, either by newspaper people or the public.

The Ballot Box Stuffers.

JERSEY CITY, Aug. 6.—The last batch of Jersey City ballot box stuffers, indicted for the election fraud of 1889, Richard Whalen, James Connell, Thomas Rush and Frank E. Herrick, came into court, withdrew their plea of not guilty and pleaded non vult. Judge Lippincott ordered them to appear in court on Aug. 16 for sentence.

FALL RIVER'S MYSTERY.

The Horrible Borden Tragedy Still Remains Unexplained.

THE HOUSEHOLD UNDER SUSPICION.

Miss Borden's Strange Actions, Coupled with the Fact That She Purchased Poison Shortly Before the Murders Were Committed, Impress the Police.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 6.—The Borden murder mystery deepens and casts the shadow of suspicion on the surviving members of the household. The police were unable to find any clew outside the house and they turned their attention to the members of the family. They have made no arrests, but virtually have made prisoners of the two daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Borden, the nephew, John W. Morse, and the servant, Bridget Sullivan.

A most important clew is in the possession of the police. From Clerk Eli Bence, at D. R. Smith's drug store, they learned that Miss Borden had been in the store within forty-eight hours past and had inquired for a certain poison. The clerk was asked to accompany the officers, and they closely questioned him as to the time of the girl's call, her condition mentally, the amount and quality of the poison she had bought or called for.

The officers then took the drug clerk to a rendezvous on Second street, where Miss Lizzie Borden was stopping for the time being.

The clerk was not previously well acquainted with the young woman, but he had told the officers that he could identify her at sight. He did identify her, and in the presence of the police officers informed them that she was in his place of business and made inquiry for a bottle of poison.

Miss Borden's reply to this accusation, as well as the exact language which was used at the time, is known only to the police and herself.

The demeanor of Miss Lizzie through the trying ordeal of being confronted with the man who says that she asked about poison was that of contempt and scorn. In fact her conduct, as observed by the police since the affair happened, has been strange, inasmuch as she stood the pointed questioning of all who interviewed her with the show of no other feeling than that of a disinterested party.

It is generally known among the close friends of the family that Lizzie has not been on the best of terms with other members of the household. It is alleged that for some time previous she did not sit at the table with the balance of the family, but that she had her meals served at a separate table.

The feeling of coolness between the members of the family is not accounted for by either the police or neighbors. The murder had hardly been discovered before she told the neighbors that she was very sorry, as she had arranged to go to Marion for a vacation. Later it was learned that Miss Lizzie had inquired at a drug store for hydrocyanic acid in a diluted form, saying that she wished to use it for furs.

Very Much a Mystery.

The absence of any apparent motive for the crime has baffled the police in their investigations fully as much as the absence of clews in the immediate vicinity. They don't know which way to turn or where to look for evidence. It is generally established that the murderer did not attempt to leave the house until after the crime was discovered. He must have been close at hand when Lizzie opened the sitting room door and saw her murdered father.

Then, too, the murderer must have had blood stains on hands and clothing, for the attempt would be a fatal one. Within not less than twelve deep cuts on each head, the skull of each victim being laid open and horribly gashed, yet this daughter bore no criminating evidence. If she had committed the murder she must have hidden the ax or cleaver in the house, but the police have searched every nook and corner in the house and have withheld finding the weapon.

The absence of the weapon goes to prove the innocence of the members of the household, but there is no conclusive proof. Its absence is evidence to be sure, but it is important.

The argument used by the relatives is that the murderer was in the room with Mrs. Borden when the daughter's screams announced her discovery of the first murder. There was no time then for robbery. Flight was the only thing to be thought of.

Why the same impulse that a murderer could have escaped under such circumstances without leaving a clew it is not impossible, as the many mysterious crimes of a similar nature have proved.

WATER JETS.

The Manner in Which a Solid Stream Breaks Up Into Separate Drops.

A jet of water thrown into the air seems at first sight to be a very simple affair. In fact, however, the water jet is governed by very complex and important laws not perfectly understood. Popular Science News considers one feature—the breaking of a jet into drops at a distance from the orifice—as follows, with the aid of the accompanying engravings from La Nature:

A soap bubble consists of a mass of air inclosed by an envelope of soap and water. This envelope is elastic and in a state of tension. If we touch the outside of the bubble in such a way as to break the continuity of the film the tension is so great that the entire bubble is destroyed, and the film of soap and water is converted into a fine spray. The experiments about to be described can be best understood by considering a jet of water as somewhat resembling an elongated but solid soap bubble, with the interior compressed by the tension of the surface film, and with a tendency to break up into separate drops from the unequal force of this surface tension.

In Fig. 1 is represented a jet of water thrown three feet into the air from a rubber tube with a glass tip, the opening of which has a diameter of about a sixteenth of an inch. At a little distance from the orifice of the tube the jet will break up into drops of various sizes, which scatter themselves irregularly in the air. If we now bring a stick of electrified sealing wax near to it, the jet gathers itself together and instead of a scattered spray of irregular drops it is transformed into a procession of drops nearly equal in size and distance from one another, which fall with great regularity. The electric excitement appears to so affect the surface tension of the jet that its action is exerted more uniformly and regularly.

A good illustration of this action of electricity in the siphon recorders which receive telegraphic messages sent over ocean cables. The message is recorded upon a sheet of paper by means of a fine stream of ink discharged from a small tube, which is moved in different directions by the electric current. The ink in this tube is electrified by a separate apparatus, so that it is thrown on the paper in a fine regular stream. The tube or pen does not have to touch the paper at all, and all friction between paper and pen is avoided.

In Fig. 2 is illustrated an interesting experiment with liquid jets, which shows how, in some respects, they act like solid bodies. Two jets of water, one of which is colored with aniline, are arranged so that they strike each other at an acute angle. They do not mix at all, but the colored water rebounds from a colorless stream and follows a perfectly distinct course. But if a piece of electrified sealing wax is brought near the two jets, they unite at once and follow an intermediate path to the ground.

A Steam Wagon.

A remarkable specimen of mechanical ingenuity has recently been shown by a machinist of Baltimore, says The Industrial World. It is in the form of a unique wagon, which is propelled by means of a Vandusen 10-horse power gasoline engine. The proposed wagon, which is completed and has had one trip and is now under going some alterations in the axle bearings, is about sixteen feet in length, weighs about 6,000 pounds and is quite long enough to seat twenty persons comfortably. The engine, as designed and applied, is small and compact, resting beneath the floor and between the axles and concealed by curtaining to the body of the vehicle. A tank of thirty gallons capacity will be placed in the wagon, but ten gallons per day will probably be an ample allowance. The levers necessary for the propagating, lessening and increasing the motion will be a brake, a speed lever and a steering apparatus, the driver or steerer will be placed in the front part of the wagon conveniently near all of these.

An Oil Lamp Without Wick or Chimney.

An English invention of interest is a new oil lamp that requires no wick or glass chimney, and is inexplosive. The lamp, which consumes the oil in a vaporized condition, consists of two compartments, an air chamber and an oil vessel. By means of an air tube going through the lamp into the oil vessel the latter receives a permanent supply of air, and the air thus admitted acts partly as atmospheric pressure upon the oil, while another current of air finds its way through fine perforations into the top of the burner, which forms a vacuum. The heat of a lighted match applied to the burner converts the oil into a gaseous vapor, which then ignites, and the heat of the flames afterward keeps the lamp going. There are no complications about the lamp, and it is claimed that it can be either thrown over or rolled about the floor without either interfering with the light or incurring any risk of explosion.

The Curiosity Shop

THE PERFECT PEARL.

Its Beauty Delights Every Taste—Famous Pearls of the World.

Pearls have ever been among the most prized of gems, especially among the young. As seed pearls they have always been available for decoration and ornament, and a dress sewed over with seed pearls is about the most beautiful thing in the way of embroidery we know. Then they are so beautiful! They "marry themselves" so well to youth and beauty—to fair flesh and lovely forms—of the most regal as well as of the most spiritual kind. The most famous anecdotes, as of Cleopatra; of the portrait of Pompey wrought in pearls, "that costly superfluity invented for women;" the pearl necklace for which Marcus Aurelius seems to have acted less worthily than, according to his noble nature, one might have expected—yet what will not even a great man do for the sake of a beloved woman—the "six cordons of large pearls, strung as paternosters," be longing to poor Mary Stuart, and bought for a comparative song in forced sale by Elizabeth; the pearl embroidered garments of the great in the Middle Ages; the fool ish wager of Sir Thomas Gresham when, to uphold his boast that the queen had subjects who at one meal expended not only as much as the daily revenues of Spain, but of all its grandees, ground to powder a pearl for which he had refused $75,000, and drank the whole in a glass of wine; the wonderful chance—or fate?—which found "la peregrina," that fairest pearl of all the earth, now in the crown of Spain; the Hope pearl, measuring two inches in length and four in circumference, and weighing 1,800 grains; the famous pearls of sweet Queen Margherita, that pearl herself among royal women, the old arts of the heathen Chinee, by which pearls are manufactured inside the shell; and the confessedly false pearls of the Roman shops—all these facts and anecdotes are as well known as the alphabet, and to relate them here at length would be superfluous.

Pearls are also more fragile than other gems, and decay with time, damp and neglect; therefore they appeal to the sentiment, as all fragile things do. They "breed," even as diamonds are said to breed, and wild stories have floated around the world of pearls shut up for a time, which, when looked at again, have surrounded themselves with a nice little family, like the "hen and chickens" daisy.

The "Sixty" of Germany.

The "Nixy" of Germany has by some been supposed traceable to "Old Nick;" but this is not probable, since St. Nicholas has been the patron saint of sailors for many centuries. It was during the time of the Crusades that a vessel on the way to the Holy Land was in great peril, and St. Nicholas assuaged the tempest by his prayers. Since then he has been supposed to be the protector of mariners, even as Neptune was in ancient times. The German Nixy was so docile a later form of the old Norse water god, Nikke. You meet with him again in another form in Neckan, the soulless. The "Nixy" along the Baltic coast was once, however, much feared by the fishermen. It was the same spirit which appears as the Kelpie in Scotland—a water demon causing sudden floods to carry away the unwary. Generally speaking, however, Nixies may be described as descendants of the Sea Gods of ancient times, and as somewhat resembling the Russian Rusalkas, of which the peasantry live in so much dread.

A Russian peasant, it is said, is so afraid of the water spirits that he will not bathe without a cross around his neck nor ford a stream on horseback without signing a cross with the whip or scythe or knife. In some parts these water spirits are supposed to be the transformed souls of Pagan Kings of ancient times, and as somewhat resembling the Russian Rusalkas, of which the peasantry live in so much dread.

Coins Bearing Dogs.

There is an important group of about forty coins containing outlines of dogs, which deserve careful study. The Fanciers' Journal says concerning them: "The heads of some of these coins is mainly mythical, as with Lælaps, then hounds of Actæon presented to Cephalos by Procris, or with the dog of Segesta, which symbolized the river Crimisus.

"The coins afford no evidence of the development of a spaniel, there being no example of a pendulous ear, or of a mastiff, though bulldogs are undoubtedly known in the arenas of imperial Rome. But they prove conclusively that the ancients had four kinds of hounds—the waldog, the hounds, the greyhound and the terrier. The Umbrians had their wolfhounds, the Apulians of Asculum their greyhounds. The remarkable hunters of the Tuscan forests their foxdogs. The favorite dog of Artemis Lephria, as on coins of Patræ and Sparta, was a greyhound, while Aetolian dogs must have been the breed deer-hounds. Rhegium, if the coins may be trusted, had his sheepdogs; the Macedonian city of Menda his terriers, and Cumæ, in the bay of Naples, that in which all the luxuries of the ancient world were brought, its poodles."

Dwellings and Families.

The census bulletin gives some interesting figures in relation to the crowded condition of tenements in the different cities. In New York 26.85 per cent. of the population are in dwellings with more than twenty persons to each, and in Chicago only 16.63 per cent. live in dwellings containing more than twenty each. Philadelphia makes the best showing among the cities, with 56.61 per cent. of her population in dwellings, with less than ten persons to each, and only 3.41 per cent. in dwellings containing more than twenty persons each.

Woolsack.

The name given to the seat of the lord chancellor of England in the house of lords, which is composed of a large square bag of wool without either back or arms and covered with a red cloth. It was first introduced in the house of lords as the chancellor's seat in the time of Elizabeth as a memento of an act which was passed against the exportation of wool, that commodity being then the chief source of the national wealth of England.

FRUIT PRESERVES AND JELLIES.

Preserving with Sugar Pound for Pound. Hints by Miss Maria Parloa.

Miss Maria Parloa, in a talk before the Massachusetts Horticultural society, said in regard to preserves and jellies:

Preserving with sugar pound for pound is not extensively practiced now, most people preferring the simpler and more healthful mode of canning with a small quantity of sugar. Still, there are some things that are better for the following of this mode. The strawberry cannot be preserved without plenty of sugar.

If you wish to preserve the pineapple by cooking core must be taken that it is not exposed to a high temperature for any length of time, as cooking hardens and darkens the fruit. All fruits are prepared for preserving in sugar the same as for canning. Then a rich syrup is made—four pounds of sugar to a pint of water—and the fruit is simmered in it until tender and clear. Such fruit as quinces and hard pears should be cooked until tender before being put in the syrup.

Some kinds of fruit are better for having the sugar added to them when partially cooked, while others should always have it added the moment they are put on the fire. Again, one kind is better for standing for hours in the sugar, while others should not have the sugar touch them until they are ready to go on the fire. There are a few fruits which are far better without sugar than with it. This is the case with the prune, with which sugar should never be put, long, slow cooking serving to develop a fine, rich flavor. Cranberries, on the other hand, should have a pint of sugar to a quart of berries, and the sugar, water and berries must go on the fire at once and be cooked rapidly for a short time. No other method will give a satisfactory result.

In no department of preserving does the housekeeper feel less sure of the results than in jelly making; so much depends upon the condition of the fruit. This is more pronounced in the case of small fruits than with the larger kinds. When currants are overripe, or have been picked after a rain, the result of using them will be uncertain. Perhaps we notice it more with this fruit than with any other because it is so generally used for jelly.

Pectin, which forms the basis of vegetable jellies, is a substance which in its composition resembles starch and gum. It gives to the juices of fruits the property of gelatinizing. This property is at its best when the fruit is just ripe; better a little underripe than overripe. When boiled for a long time it loses its gelatinous quality and becomes of a gummy nature. These facts show the importance of using fruit that is but ripe and freshly picked, as well as the need of care not to overcook the juice.

One form of preserves which is most useful, convenient and wholesome should be more generally adopted than it is—namely the canning of fruit juice for creams, ices, drinks, etc.

Grease Spots in Carpets.

Grease spots that cannot be accounted for are sometimes discovered in carpets. The Carpet and Upholstery Trade Review explains their presence thus: In the weaving of pile fabrics a little oil is occasionally used to facilitate the movement of the wires, and a very careless weaver may in handling the oilcan allow a few drops to fall on the fabric. So much of this may appear at the time, but when the carpet is on the floor the dust which would otherwise be swept off by the broom is attracted and held by the oil, and a spot becomes visible. When the spot is on or near the edge of a breadth there is another explanation. Sometimes the cars in which carpeting is carried south or west have been previously used for the transportation of oil, and the bottoms of these cars are liable to become saturated with the drippings and leakage of oil barrels. Woolen carpeting placed in such cars may absorb the oil, and the fact may not become evident to the dealer until a carpet so damaged has been laid on a floor or shown in his salesroom often enough to catch some dust.

When such spots appear in ingrains one explanation may be that the wool was not properly scoured.

But of course in most instances where complaints concerning spots are made the cause need not be looked for outside the house in which the carpet is laid. Children or careless servants are responsible for most of these spots, as well as for a great deal of the "sprouting."

Fortunately the remedy for the trouble is simple. A mixture consisting of equal portions of chloroform and ether will remove the spots at once.

An Effective Arrangement.

It is generally considered that a bed does not look well in a corner, but such an arrangement of canopy and draperies as is depicted in the cut changes the whole aspect of affairs.

Individual taste must of course decide the material to be used with a certain style of bedstead. The bedstead in the present instance is iron, enameled in white and gold, and the canopy, cretonne in a delicate tint. The arrangement of the spread covering the bed and pillows is graceful and pleasing.

A Good Picnic Dish.

Cold mackerel pie is uncommon and very good for a picnic or luncheon dish. Line the bottom and sides of a tin with crust which will bear turning out and fill with fresh or freshened mackerel, stuffed with two thirds veal and one-third fresh pork, well minced and seasoned with pepper, salt, mace, and, if liked, a little grated lemon peel and sweet herbs. Pour in a wineglass of water, cover with pastry and bake in a moderate oven.

The Penitent Conductor.

Railway Official—Mr. Beetus, you are the oldest conductor on the road and I am sorry to have to say that you are more than suspected of knocking down fares. The evidence against you is conclusive. After next Monday you will be out of a job and I trust this will be a lesson to you as long as you live.

Conductor—Yes, sir. You have always been very kind to me, Mr. Overus. May I ask one favor before I go—just one?

"Yes."

"Then I wish you'd tell me where I can buy a hundred shares of stock in this blooming road. I want a heap of money that ain't earning anything."—Chicago Tribune.

Just the Place.

Cleverton—I called on Miss Penfield last night, and she is so popular with the men that I declare there wasn't a place to hang your overcoat.

Dashaway (thoughtfully)—That would be a good place for me to call, wouldn't it? Cleverton—I don't see why. You would not see much of her.

Dashaway—No. But I need a new overcoat.—Clothier and Furnisher.

Very Likely.

A self important schoolmaster felt his dignity hurt by a chubby faced boy (one of his scholars) who was passing him without moving his hat.

"Do you know who I am, sir, that you pass me in that unmannerly way? You are better fed than taught, I think, sir."

"Well, maybe I is so, master, for you teach me, but I feeds myself,"—Boston Globe.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

LARGE CONGREGATIONS AT THE VARIOUS CHURCHES.

First Church of Christ Corner Stone Laying Colored People in Camp Meeting—Rev. Mr. Snodgrass' Advice to Young Men—Ordination's Lutheran Minister.

Yesterday was the first Sunday in August. The weather was delightful. Under such circumstances the desire for church and the religious services conducted therein, which the hot, oppressive weather of the past few Sundays had well nigh stifled, returned with force, and the churches, with few exceptions, were well attended.

THE CORNER STONE LAID.

About four hundred people witnessed the laying of the corner stone of the First Church of Christ on Grove street yesterday afternoon, at 4:30 o'clock.

The services were opened by the choir singing a hymn, which was followed by a prayer by the pastor, Rev. J. B. Cleaver. After another hymn, the pastor made the dedicatory address.

In the corner stone which was interred "Chapel of the First Church of Christ, erected A. D. 1892" was placed the following report:

The First Church of Christ emanated from the Berean Class which several years ago was led by Rev. J. B. Cleaver of Plainfield.

The church came into actual existence July 1, 1889. The membership now is 138. In May 1890 the church was incorporated with the following officers: For Trustees, B. W. Hand, president; A. J. Stewart, treasurer; W. H. Warner, secretary; Edenden, B. W. Hand, A. J. Stewart and J. Shuttles; Jno. Staats, treasurer of the church; Henry VanMiddlesworth, secretary of the church. Other articles such as coins, hymn books and relics, were put in by various members.

On May 8, 1889, the following committee met for aggressive work and formed the First Church of Christ: Messrs. J. B. Cleaver, W. W. Logan, C. Gaskill, S. C. Hoffman, H. VanMiddlesworth and J. Carey.

Their creed is: "Jesus is the Christ the son of the living God." Book of Discipline and the new Testiment Scripture.

THE COLORED PEOPLE'S CAMP MEETING.

For some time past the colored people camp-meeting, for revival purposes, has been in progress in Hyde's woods.

Yesterday afternoon Rev. Mr. Harris preached. He told, in picturesque language, of the Israelites in Egypt, and of the plagues brought on the Egyptians on account of Pharoah's stubbornness.

In speaking of the Exodus movement, when the first-born throughout all the land was visited by death, excepting the houses in which the Israelites put "blood upon the lintels of their doors, Rev. Mr. Harris said, "Now why for did de Lord be wantin' de blood, sprinkled on de Passovah, put upon de lindels and opon de do'h posts?

"De Lord ain't such a fool dat he don' know whar de Egyptians lib', or whar de Jews lib', "Oh! for de blood, de blood, de holie lib' so long 'mid de wicked, dat de Lord he want de faithful to show dey faith by de sign of blood, an my brederin he asks yo' has yo' de blood, de sign ob' de faith, sprinkled upon de do'h postes, an upon de lintels ob' yo' dwellin'?"

After the sermon another colored man, who is conducting the camp-meeting, arose, and after leading in singing, said there would be a collection. He said: "Some people don't like de 'festival. "Jess give ten cents each," said he, "all yo' peoples brash, an we will have enough. If yo' haven't ten, give five, if yo' haven't five, give fo'h, give one. If yo'h haven't change, get change off de' plate, which de brederin will now please pass round."

Many a colored man and woman put down ten cents on the plate, and took back five, nine cents change. They all gave something, however.

The camp-meeting had the appearance of a picnic ground. A booth for the sale of soda water, fruit, etc., had been erected and did a thriving business.

There were more white people at the afternoon session than colored.

The camp-meeting will be continued indefinitely.

A GOOD MOTTO IN LIFE FOR YOUNG MEN.

The Rev. Mr. Snodgrass, of Jersey City, occupied the pulpit of the Methodist Episcopal church.

In the morning his sermon was a plea for everyone to make of his life what was intended. "Your life," said he, "is a mission." In his opening remarks he gave the following list of advice, which is brief, forceful and worthy of reflection, "Be Industrious, be Thorough, Lead."

A LUTHERAN MINISTER ORDAINED.

Yesterday the Rev. Edward Klonka was ordained and installed as pastor of St. Peter's German Lutheran Congregation, by the Rev. Dr. E. F. Moldenke of New York.

Over fifty persons attended the impressive ceremony which was held in Warren's lecture chapel.

This congregation, though in existence for several years, has lately received a great impetus from the fact that now for the first time in the history of Plainfield a Lutheran minister resides in the city.

Rev. Mr. Klonka will also undertake to organize the Reformed German Lutherans in the vicinity of Plainfield, and to rekindle the religious fire which, it is conceded, burns in the Germans in the hearts of the German brethren.

Through the kindness of the trustees, and especially of Mr. Gardner, the congregation has obtained the use of Warren Mission chapel at a small rental.

BICYCLE RACES.

A Plainfield Boy Wins Second Prize.

A large number of Plainfielders were present at the final races of the Asbury Park Wheelmen, Saturday afternoon, together with about 5,000 other people.

The third-of-a-mile track is one of the finest in the country, although it was laid out only two months ago. By next year it should certainly be among the finest. The track record was broken chiefly because the riders had to make half of the distance in the face of a strong wind. Champion Arthur A. Zimmerman was again among the starters in four of the races. As usual he was the star attraction.

In the third-of-a-mile race, open to boys under sixteen years of age, C. S. Thompson, of New Haven, was first, and C. Weaty Abbott of this city second. The time was 2 4-5 seconds.

$14,000 FIRE IN NEW BRUNSWICK.

At 9:40 Saturday evening, fire was discovered in the third floor of the New Brunswick Home News Building. The third floor and roof was gutted, and the press-rooms and cellar flooded with water. The Home News' loss was $8,000. The Century Press Co., which occupy the same building, $3,000, and the three other tenants of the building lose $3,000, making in all $14,000, which was totally insured.

The Home News is one of the most prosperous newspapers in the State, and with its usual enterprise will issue its paper to-day as usual.

REVIEWING MAYOR SAUNDERS' STATEMENTS.

About New South Wales as a Free Trade (?) Country.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—At a Democratic ratification meeting held in North Plainfield last week, Mayor Saunders was felt called upon to make a speech. The Press, in its report of the gentlemen's utterances against our Americus protective tariff, published the following:

Mr. Saunders produced further proof of his startling statement in the statement of Mr. Hutchinson of Australia, made personally to him. Mr. Hutchinson is the elected head of the municipal association of Australia to represent that great country at the Columbian exposition. He is an ex-mayor in New South Wales, and one of the most prominent men of that section. New South Wales, he says is a free trade, absolute free trade country. The other provinces have adopted the "protective" policy. Yet it is a matter of fact that in Free Trade New South Wales wages are from 15 to 30 per cent. higher than in any of the "protected" colonies, while the price of all such commodities as food, clothing, boots, shoes, and general supplies, is lower. This fact the mayor considered a most telling argument. The testimony was unimpeachable, and the experience of New South Wales could be safely taken as a criterion for any other country.

Since Mr. Saunders is willing that the experience of New South Wales shall be taken as a criterion for any other country, it is, perhaps, worth while to examine closely and with fairness the statements upon which the gentlemen rests his case. The first statement made in the extract quoted is, that "New South Wales is a radical, absolute free trade country." There is one thing about this statement to which well informed persons will object: it is not true. Prior to her tariff of last year, New South Wales, alone, of all the English Australian colonies, had a tariff for revenue only, which taxed a few of the articles of import, among which were many of the articles mentioned by Mr. Saunders, for example, was taxed 4c. a lb., butter 2c. a lb., candles 2c. a lb., chickory 2c. a lb., coffee 4c. a lb., cocoa-bean 4c. a lb., coffee 12c. a lb., prepared cocoa 12c. a lb., farinaceous foods 2c. a lb., self-raising flour 2c. a lb., fruit 2c. a lb., condensed milk 2c. a lb., molasses 27c. per cwt., preserves 12c. a lb., salt 42.50 per ton, spirits and wines, malt and sugar manufactured, 75c. a lb., etc., etc. This is as near free trade as New South Wales went to free trade; for, while the people were taxed for the necessaries of life, their home industries were protected, and had in 1891, owing to the general stagnation of trade, the provincial treasury came to the rescue by taxing the people. This movement reversed its policy of a tariff for revenue only, and adopted a protective one. Mr. Hutchinson, while here made the surer Lee, in his address before the New York Legislature parliament in favor of this protective principle, said:

"It (the government) believes in taxing people for their good, and for the good of cheaply-paid foreign labor—It intends to place before the house of the country the principle that—It has shaped its protective policy so that it will have the effect of extending agriculture and manufactures and give employment to the people at a better rate of pay, and at the same time keep the money in the country. To help and not be for revenue purposes only, but also to encourage industries."

Of course Mr. Saunders trusted a statement of a Mr. Hutchinson in this matter; but whether that is sufficient excuse for his making so gross a misstatement to an American audience, I leave for them to judge.

Other points of this remarkable speech will be considered later, in another letter.

Yours truly, A. W. REEZE.

Westfield, N. J., Aug. 6, 1892.

Jr. O. U. A. M. Notes.

The preliminary meeting of the new Westfield Council of the Jr. O. U. A. M. was held in Kenyon Lodge rooms, Westfield, Friday, August 5th, nearly all of the charter signers being present, and enough having paid their dues to insure success. The members decided to go into election of officers without further delay. Bro. Brother Frank Lewis of Industry Council, No. 83, Jersey City, acting as chairman. The following officers were elected:

Councilor—R. B. Shove.
Vice Councilor—Charles Clark.
Recording Secretary—W. M. Stamets.
Assistant Secretary—John Hall.
Financial Secretary—J. S. Burhans.
Treasurer—Chas. B. Hann.
Conductor—R. N. Crosby.
Warden—Wm. Cox.
Inside Sentinel—W. C. Townsend.
Outside Sentinel—Henry Dorr.
Trustee, 1 month, John I. Collins.
" 2 " W. B. Goff.
" 3 " Albert Wolds.

After election of officers it was regularly moved and seconded that this council be named Westfield Council No. 178.

Brothers were present from Franklin, No. 41, Plainfield; Sherman, No. 61, Roselle; also from Industry, Jersey City; Clinton, No. 13, and Brother D. Jones of Industry, No. 35, Jersey City.

The council was closed in due form.

The next meeting for the purpose of selecting committees to arrange for a parade and collation on the night of installation will be held at the residence of Mr. George Cox near Friday evening, at eight p. m.

The installation will take place September 2nd.

—A forlorn looking man wandered into an East Front street saloon on Saturday evening, and proceeded to make himself comfortable. He wore a much battered hat which was ridiculed by the bystanders, who suggested that he exchange it for a new one. The man promptly did and walked out. The owner of the good hat fails to see the joke.

THE CRESCENTS WIN.

THEY ARE NOW AHEAD FOR THE PENNANT.

The Most Exciting Game of the Season—A Large Crowd Present—Westfield Beats Elizabeth by a Score of 2 to 1.

The Plainfield Crescents and the Somerville West Ends played an exciting game of base ball on the Somerset street grounds, Saturday afternoon, which resulted in a victory for the Crescents by a score of five to one.

The two teams were tie for first place in the series of contests for the pennant of the Central New Jersey Base Ball League, each having won seven games and lost four.

All of the previous games between these two teams, three in number, had been won by the West Ends, and though the results were very close, it was thought by many that they would again win and take first place for the pennant.

The weather was perfect and about two thousand people were present, representing residents of all the surrounding towns, and a large contingent from Somerville. The latter, being over-confident in the ability of their favorites, freely made bets in their favor, though they would not give big odds.

The playing on both sides was very good throughout, individually and collectively, the fine pitching of Sneeden in particular, causing many enthusiastic remarks.

The following is the score of the game:

—There is talk of starting a branch of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. at Westfield.

—A party of Germans with their families spent yesterday on the mountains.

—The Jersey City Athletic Club Wheelmen had a club run to this city Saturday, returning home by moonlight.

—A drunken man, named Drake, went to sleep in a wagon on Somerset street Saturday evening. He was seen by some practical jokers, who treated him to a hair cut.

—For some time past Mrs. Brown, who lives near the Grant avenue station, has been missing sums of money which she supposed was stolen. While rummaging in the attic Saturday her son found $35 stowed away in a corner. How it got there is a mystery to those interested.

—At the bicycle races at Asbury Park, Saturday afternoon, H. C. Roth, of the Union County Roadsters, collided with another competitor and fell heavily, while a third man rode over his body. Both was picked up unconscious, but soon recovered. He was taken to a hotel. No bones were broken.

—About 7.35 o'clock Saturday evening, a gasolene stove exploded at 45 West Third street, setting fire to the house occupied. Engine No 2, Zephyr Hook and Ladder and Alert Hose Co. responded but no alarm was sent in. Chief Engineer Cox, On the way to the fire, Zephyr Truck collided with two wagons, wrecking each.

Elizabeth Wheelmen Win.

The final heat of the ten-mile road team race for the championship of Union county was ridden Saturday afternoon over the Elizabeth course. The riders were teams of six men each. The Elizabeth Athletic Club, the Westfield Athletic Club, and the Jersey City Wheelmen were the winners of the trial heats.

The track was in fine condition and the race was fast throughout. Charles Brown of the Elizabeth Wheelmen finished first. Time, 29 minutes 53 seconds. Sidney Bowman of the Elizabeth Athletic Club was second. Time, 29 minutes 59 seconds.

The team was won by the Elizabeth Wheelmen, they scoring 36 points out of a possible 171. The Elizabeth Athletic Club scored 42.

A LAWYER BUNCOED.

A Wily Rogue Gets $200 From Lawyer Wm. A. Coddington.

A week ago a gentlemanly man about 35 years of age, with light hair, a heavy, wavy blond mustache, dark blue eyes and fair complexion, who was well dressed in a dark cheviot coat and vest and striped trousers, called at the office of Lawyer William A. Coddington on West Front street and introduced himself as A. G. Dixon of the firm of Bullitt, Dixon & Dale of Philadelphia. He presented a letter of introduction and recommendation from Congressman Buchanan of Trenton. He said that he had called to engage Mr. Coddington as counsel to represent the Philadelphia Cordage Company in testimony to be taken in New Jersey in a suit for $300,000, which James Morrison, a lawyer of Omaha, for shipping meats, had brought against the company for the annulment of a contract assigning his patent rights. He went thoroughly into the case, explaining every detail and showing a familiar knowledge of many intricate points of law.

After talking over the matter several hours, he came to an agreement with Lawyer Coddington to pay him $50 per day, and expenses, and also agreed to pay $100 as a retaining fee, and $500 more at Cape May the following week.

Get Mr. Coddington meet us with affidavits, Grand Union Hotel. Be later, being over-confident in the ability of their favorites, freely made bets in their favor, though they would not give big odds.

The playing on both sides was very good throughout, individually and collectively, the fine pitching of Sneeden in particular, causing many enthusiastic remarks.

The following is the score of the game:

He then went to the telegraph office and sent messages to parties in Perth Amboy, Jamesburg and Trenton, saying that Mr. Coddington would call and see them Monday and get affidavits to be used in the suit.

He also sent a telegram to J. G. Johnston of Philadelphia, the opposing counsel, saying that he had been retained by Mr. John B. Jackson as the special master to take the New Jersey testimony in the case. He also telegraphed to John C. Bullitt at Congress Hall, Cape May:

Coddington, satisfactory, he will execute affidavits, and meet us Monday. Notify all attaints.

He tried to get a check for $200 cashed on Saturday afternoon, owing to it being a Saturday half-holiday, and asked Mr. Coddington what he should do about the check. He also said that he was out with him and succeeded in getting Cashier Runyon, who was still at the First National Bank, to open the door for him.

He introduced Dixon, who entered into a spirited conversation with the cashier on the prevalence of the name of Runyon in New Jersey, and said that ex-Chancellor Runyon was for many years the New Jersey counsel for his firm.

Dixon, his self-confessed pal, and then he and Mr. Coddington went to New York to look over the pleadings in the case which Dixon said they brought with them in his other baggage. On arriving in New York they went to the reading room of the Astor House, and Dixon counted out the $100 retainer for Mr. Coddington, and asked him to make a receipt, in which he was to say that he would get the pleadings from his satchel in the baggage room. After writing a few moments Mr. Coddington hastened after Dixon, but the hotel clerk, the porters, and the surrounding loafers knew him, and the register did not contain his name. Lawyer Coddington then immediately took the next train for Jersey City, and returned home. On Thursday the check was returned marked no good, and Mr. Coddington had to pay it.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Ancestor Puzzle.

It is not well to let the tone of the mind run altogether down in hot weather, so we give our readers a puzzle on which to exercise their mathematical faculties.

One of those distracting fellows who is always figuring has been calculating how many ancestors everybody now on the globe must have had. Every man has two parents necessarily; but each of these two parents must likewise have had a father and mother, making four grandparents for the man. Going still a step farther back in the father and mother business, these grandparents had each one spouse. That would pile another layer of ancestors on the person and give him eight great-grandparents.

Now continue the calculation for yourself on the basis that each ancestor, no matter howsoever far back you go, must have had two parents to himself. Each generation you must multiply the number of ancestors by two as you go backward. Everybody has sixteen great-great-grandparents, for instance. Now if you simply multiply your ancestors by two for twenty generations you will find that you must have had even in that time at least a million ancestors, so the statisticians say. It is enough to drive one to suicide to be loaded down with ancestors like that. But now calculate that everybody had, twenty generations ago, a million ancestors, where will you find people enough to supply him? There were not so many, or quarter so many, on the globe as would be required to fill the cubic of ancestors to even as many people as there are in one state of the Union. They would have to be packed all over the earth like sardines and be piled high as the moon. Yet figures do not lie, it is said. If you had a million ancestors twenty generations ago, and if every other person likewise had a million ancestors twenty generations ago where were they all? This is the puzzle

The Fiscal Year.

It is possible that in the present generation a year of production like that which closed with the first six months of 1892 will scarcely be known. The fiscal year ending June 30, 1893, will certainly not be so prosperous a one unless the labor troubles now disturbing the manufacturing field are settled soon. This marvelous fiscal year is summed up in The Review of Trade. The immense increase in commerce and in railway earnings and the fewer number of business failures as compared with 1891 show that there has been an undercurrent of prosperity throughout, floating certainly the majority of the people of the country onward, however individuals have suffered. The Review of Trade says:

A fiscal year never matched in the whole history of the country in volume of industrial production, in magnitude of domestic exchanges, in foreign trade has just closed. The imports for the year have been about $860,000,000, the increase at New York in June over last year being about 18 per cent. Exports from New York in June gained 15.4 per cent., and the increase for the year to June 30 was about $92,000,000. Railroad earnings have been the largest in any year thus far, and clearings in June the largest ever known in that month, exceeding last year 8 per cent., and for the whole year the largest ever known outside of New York. Failures for the half year have been 5,503, against 6,074 in 1891, and liabilities $82,000,000, against $92,000,000, and on the whole about the smallest for five years. In spite of low prices additional works are going into operation in woolen and cotton. Moreover, the crop of the year promise to be very satisfactory.

An interesting question has come up under some of the state laws forbidding the employment of children on the stage and in public exhibitions. The question is, How far is such a law a violation of parents' rights as to the services of their children? Undoubtedly the law has a right to prevent cruelty to children and to compel them to be educated. But when a child under fourteen is allowed to dance or sing for a few minutes in a theater nightly, and it is well taken care of, well paid and enjoys the performance as well as the audience does, is there any cruelty here, particularly if the child actor continues in the best of health and spirits? In one case occurring lately a middle aged single woman, who had no trade or profession, had by the death of a sister two children thrown on her for support. They secured employment at a theater at five dollars a week each. Their aunt was devoted to them, and they were well and happy. But an agent of the society for the protection of children spied them out and found that one of them was under the prescribed age. He forced the aunt to quit it of the stage, thus reducing the family living of three persons to five dollars a week. Then he went on his way with a swelling of satisfaction in his breast at having done a virtuous thing.

After all the fuss about the superiority of steel ships, marine architects are beginning to wonder whether the old fashioned iron armor plating is not better than steel. In the breaking up of old fashioned iron ships it has been found that the plating was in a better condition than any old steel plating taken from dismantled vessels.

The variations in the magnetic needle, so long inexplicable, are now ascribed to the presence in the earth underneath of ore and metal bearing rocks. When the variation changes, becoming greater at irregular intervals, it is believed that internal disturbances in the earth shift the position of the rock strata.

STILL A DENSE MYSTERY

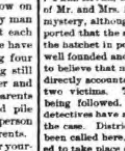
No New Developments in the Borden Tragedy.

SUSPICION RESTS ON THE FAMILY.

It Is Claimed That Spots on a Hatchet in the Possession of the Police Are Blood Stains and That They Will Bring the Crime Home to the House of Death.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 8.—The murder of Mr. and Mrs. Borden is still a deep, dark mystery, although in some quarters it is reported that the suspicions of blood spots on the hatchet in possession of the police are well founded and that there is every reason to believe that members of the family are directly accountable for the death of the two victims. The poison theory is still being followed. Providence and Boston detectives have arrived and are working on the case. District Attorney Knowlton has been called home, and the autopsy is expected to take place either Tuesday or Wednesday.

Today City Marshal Hilliard submitted to a long interview with the Press reporter. As to the spot of blood said to have been found on the ax in the custody of the police last night he said: "I don't know whether those spots were blood or iron rust. They were of a character that might be taken for either, but until the Boston chemist passes an opinion it would be folly for me to speak. We have four axes in our possession. Two are such axes as farmers use; one is an ordinary chopping ax, the other is what is called a shingle ax. There may be spots of blood on either of these, but I cannot say there is the slightest evidence on any of them.



A. J. BORDEN.

"Yesterday there was a report current that men had been seen escaping over a fence back of the Borden homestead. That may have been the case, but the closest scrutiny of my officers has failed to disclose any witness to that effect.

"All yards in the vicinity have been searched most carefully, but no trace of any unusual occurrence has been discovered. I have three or four wires out now and may find something later on.

Clews Don't Match.

"At this moment I can say there is nothing to connect any members of the family with the murder. We can reach a certain point, but from thence forward things will not match and we cannot make them. A great deal has been said about the fact that no arrests have been made up to this time. These persons in the house have practically been under arrest the past few days. If I was asked to give a candid opinion why arrests should not be made, I would say that with the present evidence nobody could be held. It would be folly for us to place the family behind bars when so many outside clews are yet to be looked up.

"We had Mr. Jennings with us during the search, at the desire of my own request. He is the acknowledged counsel of the family. We believed he should be about while our investigations were being made. Mr. Morse and the family were all about the house as usual while we were looking around. If you ask me if I have anything ready to put in the whole case I would say no, but of course you know I have a great many things in hand. Anything may happen at any moment."

The police guard has been kept up around the house and crowds of visitors have swarmed about the locality. Today the most important callers were Andrew J. Jennings, the family counsel, and Assistant Superintendent Hanscom, of the New England Pinkerton detective agency. The latter was brought here by Counsel Jennings on the part of the family. He declined to be interviewed, further than to say that he would be engaged some days.

He acknowledged that the crime was the most mysterious affair he had ever encountered, and would require the best efforts of the criminal detective force of New England to ferret out the crime. He remained at the house two hours consulting with the two girls.

Mr. Morse is talking more freely than any person in the family, with the possible exception of Hiram Harrington, who married a sister of Mr. Borden. Mr. Harrington is embittered intensely against the family, and he does not hesitate to say the most unfounded things.

The Doctor's Statements.

Strange as it may seem, the police do not put much faith in the statements made by Dr. Bowen, who was the first person on the scene. He saw Mrs. Borden dead when he visited the house the first time, but he did not discover that she had died from murderous wounds until his attention was called to the blood on her hair by a policeman and reporter. According to the statements of the authorities he does not speak with that freedom which might be expected of a man who had witnessed the crime. He remained at the house two hours consulting with the two girls.

THE OPENING OF THE FAIR.

ALBANY, Aug. 8.—John Boyd Thatcher, commissioner from New York state to the World's Columbian exposition, says a tribute might be appropriately paid to the memory of Americus Vespucius by opening the exposition on May 5, 1893. The law now provides that the buildings of the exposition shall be formally dedicated on Oct. 21, 1892, thus commemorating the discovery of the New World by Columbus on the exact occurrence of its 400th anniversary. This day, Oct. 21, may be called the birthday of America.

On May 5, 1507, there was printed a little book in St. Die, Lorraine, which first suggested that the newly discovered quarta pars orbis should be given the name of America, and thereupon deliberately and formally baptized the fourth part of the world "America" after the Florentine discoverer, Americus Vespucius. This book was printed on the 7th of the kalends of May, 1507 (April 25), which is equivalent to May 5 as corrected by the Gregorian calendar. This day, May 5, is the christening or baptismal day of America.

Historical research has acquitted Americus Vespucius of the charge of himself giving his name to the new world. The best historians of today believe in the voyage which Americus Vespucius claimed to have made in 1497, when he discovered the continent, thus justifying somewhat, if not entirely, the name which the St. Die book bestowed upon it.

Congress does not fix any exact date for the opening of the exposition. It is simply provided that "the exposition shall be open to visitors not later than the 1st day of May." Congress at the December session can provide for this opening. The 5th day of May also falls on Friday, which is another singular coincidence, as it was Friday that Columbus set sail from Palos; Friday he first saw the land of the new world; Friday he first reached Palos on his return, and the 400th anniversary of the discovery falls Friday.

John L. Sullivan "Watched."

CANOE PLACE INN, Aug. 8.—John L. Sullivan was "watched" by members of the Manhattan Athletic club. The timepiece was a handsome gold, split second instrument valued at $500. It was presented as a testimonial of the champion's services on the occasion of the McAuliffe-Frazier contest before the club. Sullivan refused to take any money on that occasion in payment for his services and the watch was presented as a substitute.

Canada's Backdown.

OTTAWA, Aug. 8.—The Dominion cabinet has passed an order abolishing the rebate on tolls on all eastbound cargoes, whether Canadian or American, shipped to Montreal. This removes the alleged discrimination against American vessels, which may use the Welland canal on equal terms with Canadian vessels.

The Hennepin Canal Delayed.

DAVENPORT, Ia., Aug. 8.—The bids of two of the principal contractors for work on the Hennepin canal have been rejected by the governor because the estimates were not based on the eight hour day as required by the new law. The effect of this will be to prevent doing much work on the canal this season.

The Bridge Fell.

BUFFALO, Aug. 8.—The state bridge over the Clark and Skinner canal fell, carrying down with it a team and wagon. One leg of the driver, John Comowski, was broken and one horse was killed. The bridge had been inspected two months ago.

A Snake in the Cabbage.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Aug. 8.—J. H. McIntyre's family of four and the colored cook ate cabbage for dinner and died shortly afterward. Upon investigation it was found that a poisonous snake had been cooked with the cabbage.

A Determined Suicide.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8.—James Rodman, aged thirty-two years, a convict in the Eastern penitentiary, committed suicide by setting fire to his straw mattress and throwing himself upon it and then cutting his throat with a knife.

OUR MONETARY SAGES.

Uncle Sam's Selections for the International Conference.

TWO OF THE FIVE FOR FREE SILVER.

The Commissioners Are Senators Allison and Jones, Congressman McCreary, Ex-Comptroller Cannon and General F. A. Walker—Commissioner Carter's Report.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The names of the five commissioners who are to represent the United States at the coming international monetary conference are officially announced. They are Senator William B. Allison, of Iowa; Senator John P. Jones, of Nevada; Congressman James B. McCreary, of Kentucky; ex-Comptroller Henry W. Cannon, of New York, and General Francis A. Walker, of Massachusetts. With the exception of Mr. McCreary these names have all been among those discussed for the appointment.

Senator Allison, of Iowa, has seen nearly twenty years' service in the United States senate and was eight years a member of the house before his election to the senate. He is chairman of the committee on appropriations, a leading member of the committee on finance and a recognized leader in financial matters. He voted against the Stewart free coinage bill when it passed the senate in July last.

Senator Jones, of Nevada, has been an earnest advocate of free silver. He has not spoken often in the senate, but whenever he has spoken on finance in that body his remarks have always commanded close and earnest attention. He is also a member of the senate committee on finance.

Mr. McCreary, of Kentucky, succeeded Mr. Perry Belmont as the chairman of the committee on foreign affairs in the house of representatives and has devoted considerable attention to international questions. He introduced the bill which called out the Pan-American conference in Washington and also the house bill providing for the present monetary conference. He voted in favor of free silver. Mr. McCreary is serving his fourth term in congress. He is, of course, a Democrat in politics.

Mr. Cannon succeeded Mr. John Jay Knox as United States comptroller of the currency, and resigned to accept the presidency of the Chase National bank, of New York. He is classed as opposed to free coinage of silver under existing conditions.

General Walker, of Massachusetts, is a well known writer on economic questions. He was superintendent of the tenth census and was a member of the international monetary conference held at Paris in 1878. He is president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, president of the American Statistical society and honorary fellow of the Royal Statistical society of London.

The place of meeting of the conference is not yet definitely decided upon. It will be in one of the capitals of Europe, probably either Brussels or Berlin—the time October 1. An appropriation of $80,000 was made in the sundry civil bill to defray the expenses of the United States commissioners.

Commissioner Carter's Report.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Commissioner Carter's valedictory report of the operations of the land office for the past fiscal year has been made public. The commissioner says that under the repeal of the timber culture law approved last year large numbers of cases, long suspended on the merest suspicion of fraud or other harsh, technical rulings, have been passed to patent, and more than 300,000 additional entries have been considered and proper action taken.

Patents issued to agricultural patients issued from 1888 to 1892 is 398,128, covering 65,700,000 acres, substantially clearing the docket of applications to be allowed to attend to current business. The total number of mineral patents issued from 1885 to 1888 was 3,708; the total number issued from 1888 to 1892 was 7,354, covering the mineral and coal dockets. The total educational and internal improvement selections made from 1885 to 1888 was 354,000 acres, while from 1889 to 1892 the total selections made was 2,025,000 acres.

In the matter of surveys and reserves during the past year the old rules were maintained. The acreage of public lands disposed of during the fiscal year was 1,571,000. The miscellaneous entries aggregated 11,906,000 acres, Indian lands 97,000, making a grand total in round figures of 13,664,000 acres. There were patented for the benefit of railway companies under congressional grants during the past fiscal year 2,018,000 acres, as against an area patented to railways during the previous fiscal year of 3,598,000 acres.

The total area of the vacant public land in the United States is 567,886,000 acres, of which 389,091,000 acres have been surveyed. Two hundred and seventy-seven million eight hundred and sixty-one thousand acres have not been surveyed. He suggests that a law be enacted for the immediate reservation of all public lands bearing forests, except for entry under the homestead and mining laws. Individual settlers, farmers, locators of mines, etc., should be authorized to procure from the public timber lands such timber as may be imperatively needed to supply their actual necessities. The cutting or removing of public timber should be prohibited for purposes of transportation or exportation, or for sale or disposal or for any other use or purpose whatever.

THE ARENA OF POLITICS

REID AND PLATT IN CONFERENCE.

They Met in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, and the Result Is Said to Have Been Eminently Satisfactory—Kolb Charges Fraud in Alabama.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 8.—Ed Stokes' steam yacht Wa Diavalo, with Senator David B. Hill and party aboard, dropped anchor in Morris cove, off the Pequot clubhouse, about 10 o'clock last night and sailed westward this morning.

In an interview with a reporter Senator Hill said: "Unfortunately our party missed Mr. Cleveland. While we were in Buzzard's bay he was in New York. We have not seen a single politician of prominence on our trip."

When asked the probable chances for Cleveland's election this fall he said, "I think the chances are in favor of the Democratic party, but there are a great many considerations to be taken into account."

When asked if he would take the stump himself he said, "I have not yet decided, but shall probably be heard from later."

North Carolina Politics.

RALEIGH, Aug. 8.—North Carolina will be the scene of various political events during the months of August and September. General Adlai Stevenson, the Democratic candidate for vice president, and Senators Vance and Ransom will address a mass meeting of the Democratic clubs of the state at Raleigh, and General Stevenson will make four other speeches while in North Carolina—one at Charlotte and the remainder at places to be selected.

The Republicans in the Fourth North Carolina district will make a warm contest for the seat now held by Representative Bunn, they being encouraged by the fact that in redistricting the state two Democratic counties were taken out of Mr. Bunn's district and two Republican counties added in their places. Another hope expressed Thursday for success is that the Farmers' Alliance will hold a convention on Aug. 18 and place a candidate in the field.

It is generally supposed that the Peoples' party of North Carolina will nominate for governor Colonel T. B. Long and for lieutenant governor Dr. S. Ewell.

Republican Campaign in the West.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The Republican campaign in the west will be directed from Chicago by the following committee, subject to the national executive committee: W. J. Campbell, of Illinois; J. N. Huston, of Indiana; E. Rosewater, of Nebraska; R. G. Evans, of Minnesota; R. C. Payne, of Wisconsin.

It had been decided at the first meeting of the executive committee to establish western headquarters, but later the idea was given up. Within the last ten days the plan has been revived and the executive committee has determined to operate in the western field through corps commanders stationed at Chicago.

John S. Tanner, the Illinois member of the national committee who succeeded Mr. Campbell, has resigned, and Mr. Campbell has taken his place both on the national committee and on the executive committee. Mr. H. C. Payne, of Wisconsin, is also a member of the executive committee. The other three are members of the national committee.

The Alabama Contest.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., 8.—The official count has been reported in fifty-two of the sixty-two counties, and Jones, regular Democrat, is ahead by just 10,000 majority. The estimate of the remaining counties is very close, and Jones will wind up with about 12,000 majority. Of the total number of counties Jones has carried twenty-nine and Kolb thirty-seven. Kolb seems to have a majority of the white vote in the state by from 2,000 to 5,000, while Jones has a large majority of the negro vote.

The Kolb faction claims fraud in the large black belt counties, which gave Jones large majorities, and have filed contests on the face of the returns. Kolb himself declares his purpose to contest the governorship before the legislature on the allegation of fraud.

Platt and Reid Confer.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The Sun prints the following in today's issue: "The Sun announced on Thursday last that the Hon. Whitelaw Reid, the Republican candidate for vice president, and Thomas C. Platt were to have a conference over the New York state situation. The Sun was intimately informed later that the conference took place on Friday. It occurred in Mr. Reid's room, 51 Fifth Avenue hotel, on Saturday morning, between 10:30 and 12:30. It lasted over an hour. It was known to at least half a dozen persons in the Fifth Avenue hotel. It was known to more yesterday. The Sun is not indebted to either Mr. Reid or Mr. Platt or their confidants for this information. The conference, it is reported, was eminently satisfactory."

The Congressional Campaign.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—During the next three months the headquarters of the congressional campaign committees in this city will be in constant touch with the movements of both parties in every congressional district in the country. A feeling of uncertainty as to the outcome will make hard work necessary, and the celerity with which senators and members have already left this city to participate in the campaign plainly indicates that there will be no lack of shoulders to carry the burden. In many of the districts the campaign has already begun.

Statesmen in Indiana.

The Peacemaker's Reward.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Aug. 8.—James Foley and his wife quarreled and he knocked her down. William Shortie attempted the part of peacemaker and was so badly beaten by Foley that his life is despaired of.

Consul Ryder's Denial.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 8.—Mr. Ryder, United States consul here, denies all the stories which are afloat reflecting upon his integrity and his public and private character.

Probably Drowned.

EAST MORICHES, L. I., Aug. 8.—A. R. Pasch, of Virginia, has been missing since Monday last, when he went out for a sail in a canoe.

Miss Willard's Mother Dead.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Mrs. Mary B. Willard, aged mother of Francis E. Willard, died at her home in Evanston.

HUGH O'DONNELL IN BOSTON.

He Says His Mission Will Keep Him in That City a Week.

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—Hugh O'Donnell, of Homestead, Pa., arrived in this city and said in an interview that he saw no reason for throwing such a cloak of mystery around his movements since he left Homestead. He has been in no sense trying to conceal himself or evade any one. Said he: "Of course the mission that brings me east is something that it would not be judicious to talk about just yet. It will keep me in Boston a week. Then I will make a tour of New England.

"Regarding the lockout, it has just begun and the end is not in sight. The Carnegie Steel and Iron company may have one thousand men or more, but that does not mean that the union workers are defeated. It requires much skill and practice to make a competent workman, and one incompetent man can put the Carnegies to a great deal of loss and trouble. In those works, where machinery plays such an important part, every man has his place, and his absence has the same effect as the breaking of a cog or wheel."

Mr. O'Donnell seemed to be perfectly unconcerned about his arrest and stated that he thought the arrests were made with the hope that the men in the ranks would become frightened and surrender to Carnegie and Frick unconditionally, but, said he, "It has edified the men and made them more determined than ever to win."

To Boycott Carnegie Products.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Aug. 8.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, was in Homestead yesterday in conference with the leaders of the Homestead strike for several hours. He refused to talk for publication, but it is understood he assured the officers of the Amalgamated association that the 700,000 members of the federation were determined that the full power of the organizations will be brought to bear in behalf of the Homestead steel workers and that every member will contribute to a fund for the benefit of the strikers. The federation, according to Mr. Gompers, will also assist in carrying out the boycott on all material manufactured by the Carnegie Steel company. The Knights of Labor, too, have fallen into line and the men here feel greatly encouraged.

HARRISON AT LOON LAKE.

The President With His Wife, Who Is Still a Very Sick Woman.

LOON LAKE, N. Y., Aug. 8.—President Harrison is again with his wife at his quiet summer residence, arriving as unostentatiously as did the other guests who visit Loon Lake. He dines as of yore in the little dining room. Lieutenant Parker, Mrs. Parker and Mrs. Dimmick drive out with him.

Mrs. Harrison still takes her meals at the cottage. Dr. Gardner, the physician who attended Mrs. Harrison on her arrival, is no longer here. He has now been gone several days, but it is understood that he will return in a few days. There is no getting around the fact that Mrs. Harrison is still a very sick woman. That she has improved to a wonderful degree is also certain. But the newspaper reports published saying that she has entirely recovered are without sense and foundation.

Corbett Getting Mighty Strong.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 8.—John McVeay, the well known Philadelphia wrestler, will in future assist Jim Daly in the training of Corbett for his fight with Champion Sullivan. Corbett's strength has increased to such an extent that Daly has become too light for him. McVeay says that he never saw a fighter in better condition than Corbett is at present. He also says that Corbett's activity and science will be of great advantage in his fight with Sullivan.

The New York Tribune Boycotts.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Typographical Union No. 6 has agreed to take off all boycotts from The Tribune as soon as the details of unionizing The Tribune have been settled, when circulars will be sent to all labor organizations informing them of the fact.

Big Tobacco Combination.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 8.—Six great tobacco houses—the Bodman, the Cincinnati, the Globe, the Morris, the Miami and the Walker—have combined. Their capital stock is $3,500,000. They will secure a charter under the laws of New Jersey.

A Limited Train Wrecked.

LOGANSIER, Ind., Aug. 8.—The New York and Chicago limited train on the Lake Shore road was wrecked here, colliding with an engine on the curve east of the station. Engineer Bohdner was fatally injured. The passengers were badly shaken up.

Destroyed by a Firebug.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Aug. 8.—The five buildings composing the Tygard Manufacturing company's general planing and buggy factory, with all the machinery, lumber and buggies, were totally destroyed by an incendiary fire.

Engineer Conflin Dead.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8.—John B. Conflin, chief engineer of the Philadelphia fire department, died at his home, 800 North Forty-first street. He was made chief engineer of the fire department in February, 1879.

Diseased Cattle Owners.

ENID, I. T., Aug. 8.—The leading cattle owners say they will sign their stock over to the Cherokee Indians before they will suffer the severe loss in making the long drive to western Texas.

Poured Boiling Metal Over Him.

WYANDOTTE, Mich., Aug. 8.—Angered by insults, Herbert Gault, a laborer in the rolling mill, poured a dipper of boiling hot metal over John Langston, who will die.

Good Seal Fishing.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 8.—The sealing schooner Sophie Sutherland arrived from Hokodate with 1,600 sealskins and reports many large catches.

Empty Whisky Bottles Beside Her.

SOUTH SOMERSET, Mass., Aug. 8.—Mary Gifford, seventy years old, was found dead in a clump of bushes with two empty whisky bottles beside her.

A Precious Cargo.

Did as Ordered.

Mrs. Malaprop has a host of followers who never heard of her, or who if they should hear of her would see nothing out of the way in what she said. The following true story could perhaps be matched by other Mrs. Malaprops. A well known Rochester physician was hastily summoned to attend a sick child, whom he had already visited once.

The Physician (entering)—What is the matter with the child?

Mrs. M.—Oh, sir, I don't know.

The Physician—Well, what have you done for it?

Mrs. M.—I only gave it what you told me—the condemned milk and impaired fig!

It is little wonder that the child had indigestion.—Rochester Post-Express.

BISHOP FEDERICI MURDERED.

Horribly Butchered and Then Robbed in an Italian Railway Coach.

ROME, Aug. 8.—Bishop Federici, bishop of Foligno, was murdered in a first class railway carriage between Assisi and Foligno last evening. Robbery is supposed to have been the motive. The bishop had with him a considerable sum of money, which he had drawn from the bank on Saturday. He left Assisi with but one other person in the compartment with him—an undersized man of heavy build, dressed in black and carrying a handbag.

As the train entered the Foligno station the guard noticed that the door of the bishop's compartment was open and that something white fluttered on the floor. An investigation revealed a horrible state of affairs. In one corner and half wedged under a seat lay the bishop's body bathed in blood.

His head had been beaten with a hammer or iron rod so that in five spots it had been cracked open. He had been stabbed in the breast twice and in the neck once. His clothing about the waist had been almost torn off in the struggle between him and the assassin, and half of his shirt lay in blood at the door at the opposite end of the compartment.

The two men evidently had fought for several minutes, as the cushions and walls were spattered with blood and many covers were torn loose. Nothing of value was left on the bishop's body. Even the lining had been torn from his cap in the search for money. The rings had been torn from his fingers so forcibly as to break the skin.

A description of the man who left Assisi with the bishop was secured at once, and was sent out to all cities and villages which the assassin could reach today. Police are out along the whole line of railway, but as yet no arrests have been made. It is supposed that after the deed the assassin jumped from the train to seek hiding in the woods.

Has Ward and Miss Felton Eloped?

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—A special from Middletown, Orange county, to The Morning Advertiser says: "Miss Frances Felton, the young woman with whom it is said Ferdinand Ward is in love, has disappeared. Ward has been gone from his summer place in Thompson. Now it is declared that the two have gone together. It was alleged at first that they had gone to Newburgport, Mass., but no message sent from this city did not serve to discover them.

Reed's Charred Body.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 8.—The charred body of Martin Reed, the escaped murderer, who after he had been brought to jail, killed Deputy Sheriff Cook, wounded Chief of Police Orr and then, when his pursuers set fire to the building in which he was secreted, committed suicide, was brought to this city, where it was viewed by the coroner. It was found that he had shot himself through the heart.

Excursionists in a Panic.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 8.—On the Brooklyn, Bath and West End railroad six heavily loaded cars ran off the track, were roughly as heavily loaded, throwing the passengers from the open sides to the track, and a frightful panic ensued among the thousand passengers on Coney Island. People climbed out of the cars indiscriminately, treading upon one another, and twenty persons were severely injured.

SOME ODD STORIES.

INTERESTING INCIDENTS RELATED BY MAJOR A. R. CALHOUN.

A Scout Tells How He Rescued a Female Captive from the Arapahoes—A Tale of Adventure That Ends with a Wedding.

Years before the railroads and settlers drove the Indians and buffalo from western Kansas I found myself encamped with a party of engineers and a small escort from the Seventh cavalry on the Smoky hill, a short distance east of Pond creek. The Indians were very bad at this time, so that our work as surveyors was anything but ideal.

Our guide, scout and hunter, Tom Herndon, was, I think, the most unique and original character I ever met, and withal as brave as a lion and as simple hearted as a child.

The talk was about Indians, and particularly Santa Anna's band, some of whom we had seen that day, when Tom Herndon knocked the ashes from his pipe, felt in the bowl with his fingers and then placing it in his pocket said, with an inimitable drawl:

"I never trust an Injun, and the man as does is sure to be fooled."

After some coaxing Tom told us that he had a wife and five young ones, "all worth braggin on," and then to illustrate his reason for not trusting Indians he said:

"Let me see; yes, it's now jest ten years since the big war atween the Pawnees and Arapahoes bruk out. I'd been with the Pawnees right smart, and every one of 'em was my friend, jest as much as a Injun ever can be the friend of white men. My father was then livin with a well growed up family of 'leven children, and me the youngest, over on the Kaw, not far from the mouth of the Republican. 'Bout two mile further up the river, in the direction of sunset, Bob Cobb lived. He had a good ranch and a sung family of six gals and two boys. The gals was good lookin, and as most of father's family was boys, you can bet Cobb's ranch was a pop'lar place for 'em, though for a bit we had some trouble in sortin the gals out to suit.

"HE FELL FROM HIS HORSE AS MY PISTOL FLASHED."

"It took me 'bout two year to find out that Sue Cobb, the third from the oldest, was the one that suited me best.

"Well, as I was sayin, the Injun war broke out, and one day when no one was expectin it the Arapahoes come down the river, drivin the Pawnees before 'em like mad and, as was their habit when on the war path, scalpin every white man they come across, jest to keep their scrawny hands in.

"The first we knowed of it was when Bob Cobb and all his family 'ceptin Sue came a-gallopin in. The Arapahoes had showed up the night before, and in tryin to 'scape in the darkness he'd lost Sue.

"When I heered that I felt cold for a bit down to my toes, and then my hair stood up on en.

"The Herndons wasn't never much on the stand and think when there was work starin them in the face. In less than a minute we was all in the saddle, with the two Cobb boys, and dad at the head—though he was sixty-two.

"It didn't matter to us now how strong the Arapahoes was, we felt 'bleeged to go for 'em whenever they showed up; and I'll say right has they was too strong and savvy 'bout us at time to think of kilin.

"Jim, my oldest brother, was to've been married to the oldest Cobb gal in ten days, and Jim was a tough one in them days, and it'd take a man to handle him now.

"Well, we rode all that day, till we most broke the hosses down, without jumpin a Injun. We halted after dark and rested a bit-critters, but no one thought of sleep.

"'Them's the fellows we wants,' said Jim and dad to once, and before you could say 'skat' we was all in the saddle.

"There was no need to give orders. All dad ever wanted his boys to do was to follow his example, and we was willin to do it then, you can bet yer bottom rock.

"The Injuns saw us 'bout's quick's we saw them, and from the way they acted it was clear they wasn't skeert to hurt. They galloped on to meet us, and we could hear 'em shoutin and laughin at the easy job they'd have in cleanin our little gang out.

"We-a-al, they hadn't rid far afore they changed their tune. Eleven rifles just rit and flashed like one, and that ar Arapahoe line stopped suddintlike and turned back. Jim was ready for this, and with dad by his side he pushed his horse, lookin as he ran, and we follerin suit. We dashed through a string of Injuns bleedin on the ground, but as they was dead we had no more use for 'em.

"We gained on the speaks at every jump, for their ponies was no match for our hosses. We hadn't rid in pursuit more'n a mile when we dashed into a hollow, and lookin ahead what did I see but Sue Cobb sittin tied on a hoss, and a half naked Injun a-hurryin the animal to its quickest with a spear.

"Somehow, that sight took away all my senses, and, for the life of my hoss acted I reckon he must have lost his senses too. The fust thing I knowed I was away ahead of all the boys, shoutin like mad; and then I ran slap in among the Arapahoes.

"I felt them hittin me with their spears. I heard the hosses blowin and the arrers whizzin; but I saw nothin but that ar Injun ahead of me, pokin Sue Cobb's hoss with his spear.

"My hoss 'peared to grow faster and stronger at every leap, so it didn't take long to come up with that 'ar particklar injun. He saw one comin, and tried to git away, but it wasn't in the wind. He fell from his hoss as my pistol flashed agin his side.

"I come alongside o' Sue and got hold of her bridle, but I soon used her critter was peggin out. For the life of me I can't justsay how or why I did it, but as the Arapahoe animals run neck and neck I caught Sue round the waist and swung her before me on my saddle. Then I gave a shout and I heard the boys a-cheerin behind me and the rifles poppin like mad.

"I took a look back and saw the injuns was between me and my friends. Nigh ahead I saw a deep gully, and into this I headed my hoss. The brave critter dashed on for what seemed hours; then he began to heave and slow up, and I knew he was done for.

"I lifted Sue from the saddle as the brave hoss fell dead, then I ran to the top of the arroyo to see the sun settin, and now a livin thing but us two in sight.

"All that night we said Sue traveled by the stars, and jest afore daylight we came to the banks of the Kaw and saw a fire among the cottonwoods.

"It didn't take long to find that it was dad's party, with not a man missin, though they'd about give me and Sue up for dead.

"We-al, Jim was married ten days after that, and to save the preacher's comin again me and Sue was hitched at the same time. And since then the Cobb and Herndon families has got so mixed that the fathers and mothers can't tell which is which."

Torturing Prisoners.

There is a general but very erroneous belief that torturing prisoners, in order to make them confess before magistrates, has been long since banished from civilized lands, but it is practiced in this very time, and of all countries in the world, in civilized (?) Switzerland.

M. Borel, member of the assembly of Lucerne, recently proposed that information should be asked from the federal council as to the torturing of a prisoner in the canton of Zug.

The man in question was accused of theft. When brought before the court the prisoner acknowledged that he had taken the missing articles, but insisted that he had not stolen them but found them.

Following this the court ordered further inquiries to be made.

By way of getting at the truth as to the prisoner's guilt or innocence, the following course was pursued:

From the 20th of October to the 10th of November the man was kept in solitary confinement on a sparse diet of bread and water, but this treatment failed to induce him to vary his first statement.

On the 11th and 12th of November thumbscrews were applied to the man's hands, and his thumbs were pressed till the blood burst through the skin at the ends, still he persisted in his story.

For the three following days he was stripped every morning and beaten on the bare back with green withes till the skin was torn off. The poor fellow shrieked with agony, after each beating an attendant would ask him:

"Now will you tell the truth"

"I have told the truth," persisted the prisoner.

"That you found the things?"

"Yes."

"Then the torture will continue till you confess that you stole them," was the attendant's response.

After each beating the man's back was washed in cold brine, and he was thrown again into a dark cell.

On learning of the prisoner's obstinacy, the judge had him brought before him again, and said:

"Why do you not tell the truth?"

"I have told the truth," was the reply.

"Then the torture must proceed."

"Your honor can kill me, but he cannot make me say I am a criminal when I am innocent," said the prisoner.

The judge ordered the prisoner back to his cell, and here, after three months of such torture as even the Inquisition never dreamed of, he was released one night—by death.

And all this happened not in the Middle Ages, but last year in the heart of the free and independent Swiss republic.

Fortunately the man's death promises to result in a repeal of the barbarous law of torture.

A Highlander's Faith.

In the western highlands of Scotland some years ago I heard the following story, which well illustrates the Highlander's endurance to his chief and his faith in his master's power. Even to this day the peasants of Argyle believe that the power of "MacCallum More," as the Duke of Argyle, the head of their clan, is called, is more than mortal.

A Highlander was benighted on the moors when suddenly he saw a light, which at first he imagined to be one of those two stars called by Argyleshire men ton-thena, "fiery tall," and ful-oche, "guide of night."

After watching the light for some time the man found he was mistaken, for the light began to dance before him, being nothing more than an ignis fatuus, will-o'-the-wisp.

The superstitious Highlander, however, imagined it was a ghost, for he is a great believer in apparitions. In his awful alarm he fell on his knees and implored Peter, Paul and the Holy Virgin to save him from this monster of the marsh, or, better still, to banish it back to Hades.

Despite his prayers to the saints, the light danced more vigorously and came nearer.

Driven to extremity the Highlander used the strongest form of adjectives of which he had any knowledge. Lifting up his hands and his voice he shouted out:

"In the name of the great MacCallum More, our blessed Duke of Argyle, I command you to depart!"

The charm was effectual. The light paled and vanished, and with more faith than ever in the name and power of his chief, the man got safely home.

Carried His Head Under His Arm.

I recently came across a little history of St. Denis, the patron saint of France. This history was not a burlesque, but was evidently written in good faith by a man named Samuel Ireland.

The saint, it will be remembered, was beheaded, after which he walked from Rheims to Paris. This miracle Mr. Ireland emphasizes in the following striking way. He says:

"During this and other peregrinations of the good St. Denis, he carried his head under his arm. He took as much care of it as if it were to him the most precious thing in the world, and frequently he would sit down by the roadside, and taking his head in both hands lift it to his lips and kiss it with much affection."—ALFRED R. CALHOUN.

Trouble in Afghanistan.

"Men and stones" are the chief product of Afghanistan, according to an old proverb, but the population is now increasing so rapidly that, as an Indian journal points out, the answer runs the risk of filling a kingdom of "only stones" before long. Cholera has swept away 10,000 Mohammedan inhabitants within a very short time, and the answer, much alarmed for his country's prosperity, is inviting all Afghan refugees to return to Cabul.

Bengal Lights.

Bengal lights are made out of niter, sulphur and antimony. To make them sparkle four parts of sulphur and four parts of niter are mixed with two parts of fulminating mercury and gunpowder, and one of antimony.—New York Evening Sun.

THE SHUT-IN SOCIETY

A UNIQUE AND HELPFUL ORGANIZATION FOR INVALIDS.

A Remarkable Work That Is Being Done by Unfortunates, Most of Whom Are Women, to Aid One Another—Various Branches of the Good Work.

Fifteen years ago Miss Jennie M. Drinkwater, now Mrs. Conklin, of Madison, N. J., was shut in her room by a long and serious illness. Time hung heavily on her hands, and she conceived an idea so simple, and yet so obviously full of common sense, that the wonder is that some one had not thought of it long before. She entered into a correspondence with another invalid personally unknown to her, in order that they might be mutually cheered and entertained. This was the origin of that remarkable organization of invalids known as the Shut-In society, which has a membership of many thousands in every country of the civilized world.

The correspondence so modestly begun proved so pleasant that it was extended to other invalids, until in 1884 the correspondents organized themselves into the Shut-In society, and the next year the society was incorporated under the laws of the State of New York, with Miss Drinkwater president.

Of course the primary qualification for admission is illness. "To be a sufferer shut in from the outside world constitutes one a proper candidate for membership in this society," says the constitution. But there is a character qualification also, and all applicants for membership must "send with their application, if possible, the name of their pastor or their physician, or of some associate member of the society, as an introduction."

The associate members are not invalids, but "being in tender sympathy with the suffering, volunteer in this ministry of love." Each associate member volunteers to correspond with members in a certain assigned district and is expected to subscribe at least one dollar a year.

The society is managed by an advisory board composed of associate members. As might naturally be expected, the society is largely composed of women. There is a men's department, however, under the direction of Mr. Will S. Mather, of Chicago. There is a flourishing children's department, the members of which are popularly known as the "sunshine makers." It is under the direction of Miss G. L. Lewis, of Boston, and Miss Josie A. Jones and Miss Abbie A. Miller, of Dorchester, Mass.

There is also a department of children associate members, which have formed themselves into a band called the Little Cup Bearers to the King. It is composed of boys and girls from six to nineteen years of age, who pledge themselves to carry sympathy and comfort to some little sufferer. It is found that children enter into this work with great enthusiasm, and the little cup bearers have helped many a poor and weary sufferer to become a sunshine maker.

Another department of the society is the whispering committee, of which Miss C. O. Ross, of Newark, N. J., is the active manager. Its object is to alleviate the condition of the shut in members by furnishing them, when possible, with a wheel chair. When a wheelchair invalid dies, a little silver plate is fastened on the back of the chair inscribed, "To the memory of ——," and it is sent back to the committee, to be used by some other member. The King's Daughters are interested in the wheelchair work, and in fact a number of circles of King's Daughters have been formed among members of the Shut-In society. Many of the members themselves work for the wheelchair committee.

The library of the society is one of its important features. Books, magazines and papers are freely sent to invalids in every state in the Union, as well as to many foreign countries. In Philadelphia a Push-Along club has been formed, which circulates periodicals among invalids. The Open Window is the name of the excellent monthly publication issued by the society.

It is an interesting fact that a missionary spirit has been developed in this society, although its members might well be excused if they thought only of their own selves. There is an "Invalid's auxiliary," which is now supporting a native nurse in the Margaret Williamson hospital at Shanghai, China, and is also raising a fund to endow a bed in the same hospital, to be known as the "Shut-In society's bed." Another branch of missionary work done by the society is the writing of letters to prisoners. About 1,700 letters have been sent to Sing Sing alone. They are sent unaddressed to the chaplain, who addresses them personally to the convicts. The name and address of the writer accompany, however, given to the convict. It is the testimony of the chaplain that these letters have done much good.

The letters written by invalids to other invalids have resulted in many warm friendships, and the term "letter friend" has become a recognized phrase in the society. The organization of the society has brought out the fact that a surprisingly large number of invalids have been "shut in" for a long term of years, many for twenty-five or thirty years. One member of the society, who died last year, had been confined to her bed for sixty years.

The condition of such long term patients is apt to become very desolate, as their early friends die or drop away and they are made to feel that they are a burden on those who are charged with their care. To such invalids the society comes as a blessed boon, for it not only puts them in direct communication with many fellow sufferers and sympathetic friends, but the various interests of the society give them something to think of and thus break the dreary monotony of their lives.

One of the best known members of the society is Miss Fannie Casaday, of Louisville, who has been confined to her room for twenty-five years. She has acquired a widespread reputation as the founder and national president of the Flower mission.—New York Tribune.

Mothers' Debts to Their Daughters.

Were it not for their daughters thousands of mothers would scarcely ever be able to go outside the house for an evening's pleasure or change of scene. Mothers are under great and many obligations to their girls, many of which are entirely overlooked and remembered only when their daughters belong to some one else.

The average girl returns from school almost as neat and prim as she left home. As a rule she does not climb trees, tumble in the brook, play truant or give her mother hours of work repairing injured garments; on the contrary, she is a distinct help to her mother. There is the help to mind, the things to iron, antimacassars, stockings and a host of other articles to make and mend, to say nothing about messages in town and numerous other ways of relieving her mother of household duties.—London Tit-Bits.

The first anniversary of the Third street mission was held Sunday evening. An interesting programme consisted of singing by Miss Nancy Randolph, Miss Kittie Glen and Masters. R. B. Ryder and B. T. Barnes. Speeches were made by Mr. L. W. Randolph, Rev. W. F. Richards and Mr. G. H. Batchelor. A large number of people was present. The mission was started a year ago by the Young Peoples' League of the First Baptist church.

State Controller Heppenheimer's annual report of railroad accidents in New Jersey for the past year has just been put in print. It shows that there were 1,500 accidents on the 4,246 miles of railroad in the State. By them 321 persons were killed and 1,339 injured. Of these 204 were killed or injured by jumping from moving trains. The coupling of cars and track walking are shown to have been the most prolific cause of injury or death.

Father Gessner, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, made a raid Sunday night on half a dozen saloons at Elizabethport, and caught the proprietors violating the license law. Men in the saloons got out in a hurry when they saw the priest. Father Gessner made a bitter attack Sunday from the altar on the Mayor and City Council for not, as he said, enforcing the law against Sunday selling. He declared that some councilmen were so bottled than midnight bummers, and that the Mayor ought to have a saloon placed by the Excise Board on each side of his house, as he seemed to be so partial to the liquor sellers. Father Gessner's attack has badly frightened the saloon keepers, who hereafter will have pickets out to watch for the priest.

Mr. F. A. Dunham, Plainfield's city surveyor, started yesterday afternoon at four o'clock for New York State to superintend his extensive work there. Of his staff now employed there Mr. Frank Ruhbard is at Olean, Mr. Harry Van Emburg is at Dunkirk, and J. L. Bauer is at Sewickley, Pa. Mr. A. J. Gavett returned yesterday from duties in all three of the above places.

Runaway this Morning.

A team belonging to Mr. Lewis Codington, the expressman, were drinking at the pump in front of Blatz's hotel on Somerset street this morning about eleven o'clock. One of the horses turning his head suddenly caught the bridle in the nozzle of the pump and tearing it off. This frightened the horses and they ran away. Mr. Coddington who was on the truck to which they were attached, being unable to control them jumped to the ground. The frightened horses ran to their stable on Regent street, North Plainfield, and though the street was filled with vehicles no collisions happened. Aside from some broken harness, no damage was done.

Poll Taxes Collected.

Delinquent Tax Collector V. W. Nash reports that in the past six weeks he has collected over 250 poll taxes, with costs and interest. It was necessary to make three or four arrests, and more will soon be made.

ANOTHER BICYCLE STOLEN.

Taken Last Evening—A Victor B Cushion Tire.

A Victor B bicycle of 1891 pattern was stolen, about 9:30 o'clock last evening, from No. 21 Sandford avenue, where it had been left standing against a tree by the owner, Mr. Geo. W. Morrison.

The loss was discovered about half-past ten and the police were immediately notified and telegrams sent to the police of the surrounding towns.

Search and inquiry revealed the fact that the wheel had been pushed along the grass bordering the walk toward Front street and thence toward Richmond street.

The thieves are supposed to be persons who were returning from the colored camp meeting held in Hyde's woods.

Special Policeman Frank Morsn says he saw two men whom he now thinks were the thieves and is keeping a close lookout for either the bicycle or thieves, whom he can identify.

It has been suggested that the bicyclists of Plainfield, who are so numerous, should form a club for their mutual protection from bicycle thieves who have committed many depredations in this locality, and unquestionably run down all such criminals and have them prosecuted.

Two years ago Mr. George Morrison had an expensive Warwick bicycle stolen from him, which was never recovered, though the thief was after much trouble and expense, captured and imprisoned. He has served his sentence of several years and is once more about town.

Twenty-five dollars reward is offered in another column for the arrest and conviction of the thief or thieves.

The bicycle is described as an 1891 Victor B., with Columbia saddle, L post without mud guards. Nuts on pedal cranks and oil cups on rear wheel missing. A "bell rock" lantern and defective bell were with the wheel.

Not Dead as Supposed.

Peter Sheridan, whose body was supposed to be lying in the family plot at Mount Olivet Cemetery, walked into his parent's house, 1,023 Magnolia avenue, Elizabeth, at nine o'clock last night, and is around town receiving the congratulations of friends. Sheridan says he has been working in Philadelphia for the last two months, and did not hear that his parents, believing that he had been killed by a train at Bloomsbury, went there and positively identified the body as that of their son Peter. The body was shipped and buried on July 15. It cost the family $265.

Peter's life was insured for over $300 with the Prudential Insurance Company, and the company paid the sum amounts to the young parents. Now, the question is, Who was the man who was buried for Sheridan? The agent of the Prudential Company made a demand last evening on the Sheridan family for the insurance money, and threatened to bring suit unless it is refunded at once.

Carnival at Cranford.

The water carnival at Cranford Saturday night was a decided success. Commodore Leo Abry, assisted by an efficient staff, supervised the affair. The decorations along the river banks were beautiful. Chinese lanterns of all shapes and sizes were strung on the trees.

Residents along the line of the procession vied with each other in making displays.

There were incessant discharges of rockets, bombs and Roman candles during the procession of the flotilla from the starting to the finishing point. The Roselle Band and the Veteran Zouave Band, of Elizabeth, played.

Over 100 boats took part in the parade. Thousands of people from Elizabeth, Rahway, Plainfield, Westfield and other parts of Union county saw the spectacle.

The Right to Property on Trial.

A trial of the right of property, in the case of Mrs. Josephine F. Schlieth vs. Noel Verrier, was held before Justice Nash yesterday afternoon. Sometime ago judgment was obtained by Mr. Verrier against Mr. Schlieth, and Constable Mattox levied on all his household goods at Summit. Mrs. Schlieth claimed the property and applied to Justice Nash for a writ to try the right of property. Constable Amos Moffett summoned the following jury: J. E. Mosher, Geo. H. Rockafellow, R. J. Allabard, Geo. H. Rockafellow, William A. Tolley and James De Graw. They gave a verdict in favor of the claimant for the goods levied upon. Lewis Read was counsel for the claimant, and Wm. A. Coddington for the defendant.

A Brave Boy.

Clayton Witt, the young man who, on Friday last, saved Gussie Adler of New Brunswick, from being burned to death, died last night. Miss Adler was cooking over a gasoline stove when it exploded. Witt was passing and heard the girl's screams. He ran in to save her. As he seized her to take her from the room, which was an fire, his clothing took fire. Although he was enveloped in flames he saved the girl. She was badly burned, but will recover.

A New Swindle.

There is a new swindler going about the State. His plan is to go to a physician's house in his absence and pay a bill of $18 which he says he owes the doctor. In making payment he presents a check for $20 and receives $2 change. Yesterday he swindled a lady at Dr. Bruere's house on Ferry street, Trenton.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

AT A FASHIONABLE MOUNTAIN RESORT.

To the Editor of The News: —Up here in the Delaware Water Gap, this beautiful mountain resort, where it is supposed to be cool, it is cool anywhere, it will surprise those who stay at home to know that, during the prevalence of the recent hot wave, it was so hot here that for three nights it was impossible to sleep. The air that stirred the trees around the commodious house at which we are stopping was like the hot air from a furnace.

It was amusing to hear the grumblers. Some said they would go home, it was so warm here, but, as the news came from the Catskills, Adirondacks and other places that the warm wave had reached them, people became better satisfied, though a few went away condemning the "Water Gap," and saying it was the hottest place in the country. Just now it is *very enjoyable, and as I sit in the Sum*mer house Ten Years ago, I have blown off the bench three times, and I had to run around after it.

There are all sorts of people here including myself, and it would be a good place to write a book, as all the different characters can be found. We have the gay widows who (to use a slang expression) are trying with all their might to "catch on," the sentimental maiden, the girl who lets the fellows see that she can't be picked up by every new-comer; the sweet-looking woman who attracts her own sex as well as the other, the group of gossips who watch the movements of every one, and then get into groups and discuss the news of the hotel, the grumbler at the table who thinks he can't get half enough for his money, and the woman who sits and teaches her own children to gobble up all they can lay their hands on at the table, even at the expense of making their stomachs uncomfortable.

Then we have the husband with his second wife, and he has come to the time of life when he has a good business, and the woman No. 2 is enjoying the labors of No. 1, who by her industry put the pot things together; we have the children of the No. 1, who look upon their step-mother as a miserable creature who stepped into their home and took control, though they were old enough to take charge themselves. While I speak of all these different characters, I must not leave out myself, and you know what I am.

I keep at a civil distance from the gossips, as I don't want to get mixed in anything that transpires, but, after all, I am gossiping for you.

In this beautiful hotel here—its built on a hill—the piazzas are a picture at night, when they have hops. A large party of us take part in the hops, and the older ones act as chaperones.

The beautiful Misses Laidlam of New York, about whose beauty there is so much talk, are stopping here. One of the sisters is called "Joy" and the other "Rapture." The one name Joy is like a laughing French doll, the other a different type—more stately. To night of the dance, as they come out on the piazza with their partners, every eye is on them. Joy goes down on the river dressed in a white sweater and white cap, short sleeves to her sweater and low neck. She looks a very picture. I shall now stop to catch the mail.

STATE NEWS

Chatham post office has been made a money order office, dating from July 28th.

The Philadelphia and Reading System, Lehigh division is laying a new crossing at Dublin, near Perth Amboy.

Excessive cigarette smoking is said to have been the chief cause in unbalancing the mind of Robert Kerr, the young Philadelphia man who became violently insane Saturday morning at the Rygeia Hotel, Atlantic City. He is about twenty years old, slender and of a nervous temperament. He was visiting with his parents.

Travel was delayed several hours on the Pennsylvania Railroad near New Brunswick on Saturday, both east and west of the city, caused by a west-bound freight train jumping the track near Dunellen depot and dashing over ties and mud, smashing the stone walls of two buildings alongside the track, demolishing a flag shanty and wrecking a large number of cars. A part of the track was torn up, and for some distance about the track was covered with wreckage. The construction train was called out and a large number of workmen put to work and after two hours' hard work the west-bound trains were able to pass the city, after being transferred by a temporary switch from the west to the east bound track and back again.

Robert Gaylor as "Sport McAllister."

The attraction booked at Music Hall next Thursday evening is the New York comedy success, "Sport McAllister, one of the 400," with that prince of funmakers, Robert Gaylor, at the head of the organization which for completeness is unsurpassed. The success attaining this production is unsurpassed in the annals of farce-comedy. The critics have been unanimous in their praise of the entertainment everywhere. Mr. Gaylor is a peculiar comedian with a personality entirely his own, and original in the extreme. An audience commences to laugh at him on his very first appearance and as he has the happy knack of being able to keep a continual flow of his laughing fluid among them, they laugh from the rise to the fall of the curtain. Manager Brady, who is conducting Mr. Gaylor through the country, has surrounded his star with a magnificent company and among the great specialists in it are Bernard Dyllyn, the famous baritone; Charles W. Young, David Conroy, Walter Goldie, Wm. Gilbert, Josie Sutherland, Bessie Fairbairn, May Gaylor and many others comprising a company of twenty-two artists.

Stole a Watch for his Girl.

Earl F. Peterson, a clerk for the Adams Express Company at Elizabeth, has fled to escape arrest. It is said he stole a gold watch, consigned to John R. EDITORIAL NOTES

The Next British Cabinet.

Although the British government is of the same form as that of the United States, being in fact the original of which the latter and all recent republican constitutions were framed, yet two features of it are very puzzling to Americans—the established church and the so called cabinet. The same day's dispatches which told us recently that Mr. Gladstone might "find it impossible to govern with his slender majority" gave us the names of the supposed members of his cabinet.

Mr. Gladstone is himself, of course, to be premier and first lord of the treasury; Lord Herschell, lord high chancellor; Earl Rosebery, foreign secretary; Sir William Vernon Harcourt, chancellor of the exchequer; John Morley, chief secretary for Ireland; Lord Ripon, secretary of state for India, etc. All this seems rather premature in view of the fact that Mr. Gladstone's supposed majority is made up of such discordant elements that one or more sections of it may refuse to sustain him, and so the Tory cabinet may remain in power. The usual rule is, when a "government" is beaten, either by an adverse vote in the house of commons or a general election, it resigns at once. If not, a vote of "want of confidence" is passed and the queen calls on the leader of the triumphant party to "form a new government."

The truth is that the cabinet, which is "the government" for the time being, is not the creature of positive law, but of slow growth and custom. Down to the latter years of William III it was the regular thing for the head of one department to be a Whig, of another a Tory and of a third a "trimmer" and so on. Little by little, however, the custom grew up of having a privy council, composed only of those in close sympathy with each other and with the sovereign. Then the rule was established that all heads of departments should be in sympathy with the prime minister, and so the cabinet came into being. Nevertheless statesmen of great influence sometimes sit in the cabinet without holding office, and heads of important departments are frequently not members of the cabinet, so the number of members varies greatly.

When Victoria became queen—June 20, 1837—Lord Melbourne was premier. His "government" abolished the free constitution of Jamaica, was beaten thereon by the Tories and Sir Robert Peel was called but could not "form a government." Melbourne held on till the "opium war" was over, and then Peel took the helm. He carried a series of most praiseworthy measures in behalf of laborers in the factories and mines, suddenly changed the policy of the Tory party from protection to free trade and carried it through, but was beaten on a coercion bill for Ireland, and the Whigs came in again with Lord John Russell at the helm.

The Irish famine and famine clearances, "Chartism" and the commercial panic of 1847 weakened him, and in 1852 he was defeated on the militia question and the "Aberdeen coalition ministry" was formed. Lord Palmerston next had his innings, and then came Gladstone and the long rivalry between him and Disraeli. The practice of changing the chief officials and governmental policy every time the popular majority changes would seem very radical in America, but it works well in England.

The average length of the school year in all the public schools throughout the United States is 135.5 days. In the city schools it reaches 191.6 days. The national public school celebration of Columbus Day, Oct. 21, will give the 13,000,000 pupils in public schools an additional holiday this year, and possibly the average length of the school year may be one day more next year. But whatever be the loss resulting from the cessation of routine school duties for a single day, it will be amply compensated for. The day will be put to the highest educational use, and the prominence which will be given to our public schools will be a permanent benefit to that institution. The observance of so memorable an event will awaken an interest in history and stir the American people to protect, strengthen and perfect our public school system, upon which so much of future prosperity depends.

It is a matter of wonder to the slower thinkers of this country why woman, in this progressive age, should try to excel in man's sphere, when there are so many things in her own which a man could never do and which she might glory in. Miss Potter Palmer is a fine de siecle example of what a woman can do and do well and still be thoroughly feminine in a Paris dress. She possesses executive ability combined with tact, and results prove that she has the quality of management which makes her the peer of man without encroaching on his sphere.

Will Paderewski shorn of his hair be like Samson? So far as women are concerned it may have been a matter of self defense with him. Our English cousins were quite as demonstrative in their adoration as the American women, and at a recent concert, had it not been for the kindly offices of his manager, he would have been affectionately mobbed.

THE BUSY POLITICIANS.

Sheehan Will Manage the New York Democratic Campaign.

THE REPUBLICAN ADVISORY BOARD.

Among Those Selected Are Said to Be Jones of Pittsburg, Disston of Philadelphia, Aldrich of Rhode Island, Sawyer of Wisconsin and Pullman of Illinois.

SARATOGA, Aug. 9.—The Grand Union hotel corridors were filled last night with politicians anxious to know who was to conduct the democratic campaign in this state. The campaign committee was called to order in the clubroom of the hotel by Chairman Edward Murphy, of the state committee, and these responded to the roll call: Edward Murphy, Jr., William Sheehan, John D. McMahon (for S. S. Beardsley), William B. Kirk, E. T. Dunning (for Cordmeyer), James Stephens, James J. Martin, Samuel J. Tilden, Jr., Calvin J. Quackenbush (for H. J. Mowrey), Charles M. Preston, James H. Manning, D. E. Griffin and John Hughes.

Daniel E. Griffin nominated for chairman of the campaign committee William F. Sheehan. There was no other nomination, and Mr. Sheehan was named by acclamation. In accepting the office he said:

There is nothing that I will leave undone to secure the success of the Democratic party in this state and I look for the co-operation of every member of this committee. In a state that is naturally Democratic we must not because that is a fact, falter in our work. Hard work must be done. I will lead; you must all assist me. Let us take our coats off and stand shoulder to shoulder.

Bill to Be Called On.

Charles H. Defrees, of Troy, was named as clerk of the committee by acclamation, and the officers were authorized to secure suitable quarters for headquarters of the committee. The chairman of the committee was authorized to appoint as many subcommittees as he deemed expedient for the campaign. The clerk was authorized to engage such clerical assistance as he deemed necessary, and then the committee adjourned subject to the call of the chair.

It was said here by a politician present at the conference that in a few days the committee would meet in New York, and at that time a letter would be addressed to Senator Hill asking his assistance in the campaign in this state. A favorable reply is expected and then a route will be laid out. It was intimated from the same source that the national committee would have to use the same tactics with Mr. Hill, or else he would not do any campaign work outside of the state.

The Republican League.

BUFFALO, Aug. 9.—James A. Blanchard, of New York chairman of the subexecutive committee of the National Republican league and also of the special committee intrusted with the task of arranging for the league convention to be held here on Sept. 1, was in the city for a few hours, when he met the local committee and the general arrangements were quickly completed.

Mr. Blanchard is on his way to Denver to settle a dispute in the state league. On his way back about the 20th he will stop off here, when the details will be arranged. The programme of the convention so far arranged is as follows:

Thursday, Sept. 1—Opening the convention at Music hall; address of welcome by prominent Republicans, to be selected later; response by President Clarkson; ball; annual address; mass meeting in the evening with addresses by speakers of national renown.

Friday—Business session from 10 to 1 o'clock; special session of college clubs from 3 to 5; great parade in the evening.

Saturday—Excursion to Niagara Falls.

Mr. Blanchard says the convention will be the greatest ever held by the national league. There will be over 1,000 delegates and as many alternates and a host of visitors. It is not settled whether the president will be present. Of the campaign outlook Mr. Blanchard says it is most favorable and the reports from all parts of the state are of the most encouraging nature.

Stevenson and the Golden Circle.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 9.—Adlai E. Stevenson passed through here for Bloomington, Ills., and in an interview, in response to a question relating to the charge that he had sold points to the Knights of the Golden Circle, General Stevenson said: "That is an absolute falsehood. I shall be charged with murder next, perhaps, if this promiscuous plan of campaign lying continues. I never sold a pistol nor owned a pistol in my life."

"There are affidavits supporting this statement."

"I have not yet seen them, but they are false, and you can say so as strong as you care to put it."

Arrangements were made to open the campaign here on Sept. 8, when General Stevenson will make a speech.

The Republican Advisory Board.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The advisory committee of the Republican national committee is said to have been practically decided upon. Among those selected, it is said, are B. F. Jones, of Pittsburg; Hamilton Disston, of Philadelphia; N. W. Aldrich, of Rhode Island; Thomas Sawyer, of Wisconsin, and George M. Pullman, of Illinois. All five men are immensely wealthy.

Booming Marshall Cushing.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Friends of Mr. Marshall Cushing, private secretary to Postmaster General Wanamaker, are urging his fitness as a reason why he should be promoted to fill the unexpired term which will be vacant upon the retirement of Colonel Whitfield as first assistant postmaster general.

Ramsey's Decision Ignored.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The police commissioners have laid out the city's election districts under the new apportionment, despite the fact that Judge Ramsey says that it is unconstitutional. Under this new arrangement the districts number 1,137, as against 887 heretofore.

Human Heads for the Sultan.

TANGIER, Aug. 9.—The sultan's troops brought here three prisoners, who will be beheaded. The heads of rebels who were slain in battle were sent to the sultan.

Two Lads Burned to Death.

WALKERTON, Ont., Aug. 9.—The house of Robert Young, near Kinloss, was burned and two of his sons, aged fourteen and sixteen, perished in the flames.

A Tugboat Sunk.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The tug Sandford was run into and sunk by a sand scow. The captain and crew of twelve were rescued.

The Smallpox in New York.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Three additional smallpox cases have been reported here.

RUSSIA IN A PANIC.

Cholera Invades the Capital—Supply 25,000 Deaths in the Empire.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 9.—The city is in a panic. A woman who was seized with cholera died within a few hours, and all doubt has now disappeared that cholera has invaded the capital. The rich, who are able to get away, are flying to health resorts and merchants are closing their shops. The governor of the city has issued a proclamation begging the people to be calm and giving directions as to preventative measures.

The latest advices from Moscow state that the panic there is on the increase, notwithstanding the efforts of the authorities to suppress any general evidence of the spread of cholera and of popular terror.

The cholera is becoming more virulent at Novgorod, and the people there blame Baranoff, the governor, for not taking better measures of prevention. Baranoff, in reply to popular criticism, has increased the severity with which he punishes his critics. Two respectable citizens, by orders of the governor, were publicly punished with one hundred strokes of the knout for having spoken unfavorably regarding the sanitary arrangements made by Baranoff.

The official lists of the deaths from cholera were published. The number of victims up to Aug. 1 is given as 23,919. The lists, however, are admitted to be incomplete, and the most conservative estimate places the number at 25,000.

FASHIONS

FASHIONABLE SHIRT WAISTS.

They are Light, Cool and Becoming. Consequently, Popular.

Shirt waists of white dotted nainsook with turned-over collar and square cuffs of linen are delightfully cool-looking for home wear in midsummer. These are made in French waist fashion, without fullness at the top, and gathered to a belt or shirring-string. They have a single box pleat in front to hold some pretty studs, or else they are merely hemmed and buttoned on a concealed band beneath, then trimmed with two knife-pleatings of the dotted muslin turned toward the right side, closely lapped, and finished with the narrowest Valenciennes edging. These frills are cut to round upward and fill in the space at the throat between the points of the collar, and are graduated narrower toward the belt. The linen collar is sharply pointed in front, and is set on a high band. The square linen cuffs four inches deep are to be fastened by linked buttons.

Haberdashers make ladies' shirts of white cambric or of colored Madras cotton very much as they make men's shirts, even providing them with a narrow neckband and wristbands to which a fresh collar and cuffs may be buttoned. The white shirts have a shallow yoke, and the front has a shield-shaped bosom of pique stiffly starched and fastened with studs. A turned-over collar and square cuffs of linen or of pique are to be buttoned on the bands. The only feminine touch is a drawing-string at the waistline.

Pretty Madras or zephyr gingham shirts are of light colors—pale blue, pink, or lavender—with a standing collar of white linen, and square linen cuffs. The fronts may be softly gathered to a yoke, but the newer shirts are tucked and pleated, three tucks that are nearly an inch wide being each side of the middle box pleat. It is considered good taste to wear a black four-in-hand tie with these light-colored shirts.

Shirts of cotton Cheviots so sleazily woven in basket pattern that they do not exclude the air are the comfortable choice of busy women, as they are found in all sizes ready made, and are quite inexpensive.

The Scotch plaid silks so fashionable in Paris are used here for sea-side shirt waists in blue and green plaids cross-barred with white. They also form a girdle of folds with long sash ends at the back, and a collarette and sleeves on dresses of dark crepon.

For elderly ladies and those in light mourning are gathered waists of black crepe de Chine made with many rows of shirring around the neck, about the waist, and around the wrists.—Harper's Bazar.

The Treasure Train.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—The treasure train from San Francisco, which is carrying cast $20,000,000 in gold, passed through the city. The cars bristled with muskets, and one was allowed within hailing distance of the precious freight. The train stopped only a few moments to procure water for the guards, and then the journey was resumed.

"Invincible" Sheridan Injured.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—P. J. Sheridan, the "Invincible," who was charged by the British government with the Phœnix park murders, and whom it tried to extradite from France and then from this country, was crushed between a vehicle and a gate in his ranch, eight miles south of Monte Vista, Colo., and is probably fatally hurt.

Harrison and Ireland.

LOON LAKE, N. Y., Aug. 9.—President Harrison is spending his time here quietly. Being questioned again by a reporter, Mr. Harrison refused to make any statement in regard to his alleged letter to the pope asking the appointment of Archbishop Ireland to be a cardinal. Mrs. Harrison continues in good spirits.

DESERTING THE HOMESTEAD WORKS

The New Men Flocking from Inside the Big Fence and Joining the Cause of the Locked Out Workers — Colonel Streator Re-elected to His Command.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Aug. 9.—It would be hard to find a more jubilant or more hopeful set of men than are the Homestead strikers now. Not since the beginning of the present conflict have they been so confident of success. Last week many of them were going around attired in their Sunday clothes with despondent looks. They were beginning to feel that the battle was about as good as lost, and the leaders experienced no little difficulty in keeping the discouraged ones in line. But it is different now.

The sudden change in the situation was brought about by so many of the company's nonunionists deserting their posts yesterday. From the time the main entrance to Fort Frick was opened in the morning until it closed at night men continued to leave the mill.

Those who came out through the main gate were received with open arms by the strikers, who conducted them to their headquarters two squares distant. Here were assembled all through the day several hundred idle steel workers, and the arrival of each nonunion man was the signal for cheers of the most enthusiastic breed.

The deserters from the little army of imprisoned workmen were provided with transportation to their homes, the majority of them being sent to Baltimore and Philadelphia. By 8 o'clock last night all who left the works during the day had been started on their homeward journey.

Chairman Crawford, of the advisory committee, said that over 150 men had come from the mill to Amalgamated headquarters during the day. "We have the names of 146 of them," said Mr. Crawford, "and we have it that fully that many took their departure by boat.

"It is no exaggeration to say that over 400 have left the company's employ since Saturday. They represented the more intelligent of the workmen secured by the company. Such a stampede of the men who came here to take our places naturally encourages us and we feel that we have the fight about as good as won. Superintendent Potter's statement that thirty employees returned to work is untrue. We have made a careful canvass and can discover only a few defections from our ranks during the past three days.

"I learn that some of the furnaces charged by the new men the latter part of last week caved in, owing to improper handling, and that several serious breaks had occurred in the machine shops.

"The fact that the Duquesne strikers returned to work will not have the least bearing on the situation here, for if the men now in Homestead continue coming out the company will soon find its gatbe blocked, and it will be only too glad to get the old men back."

Streator Re-elected.

Lieutenant Colonel James B. Streator was unanimously re-elected to his position in the Tenth regiment last evening, his term having expired. This is a complete vindication of his course in the Homestead affair by the latter's comrades. When the news reached this side of the river the three regiments gave three hearty cheers for joy. Iams, who was here, was greatly chagrined.

The Duquesne Strikers Flock Back.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 9.—The Carnegie Steel company's mills at Duquesne worked full in all departments today, the strikers having gone back with a rush. All that remains as evidence of a strike are thirty or forty old men, who will not be reinstated because of their connection with the strike, and whose names will hereafter have prominent places on the Carnegie blacklist. The new amalgamated lodges organized at considerable cost to the association, will go the way of all other labor organizations at this place.

The workers at these works were brought in during previous labor troubles and have a lack of confidence in each other, and to this can be attributed the unanimous manner in which the men flocked to the mill at the first intimation that the owners intended to resume operations. Nearly all of the men were assigned to their old positions, and now everything was running as smoothly as if there had been no interruption.

It is expected that by tonight 800 men will be at work. A few deputy sheriffs are stationed in the mills. The two companies of the Sixteenth regiment will likely be withdrawn in a few days, as there is not the slightest probability that their services will be needed at Duquesne.

The Duquesne Riotery Held.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 9.—The Duquesne rioters had a hearing before Alderman Reilly. Quite a crowd of Duquesne workmen were present to testify in behalf of the prisoners. Attorneys Dalzell and Reed appeared for the commonwealth and Messrs. W. J. Brennan and J. R. McQuaide for the defendants. After hearing the testimony Alderman Reilly held Ursic, Easler, Ilakis, Bennett, Kennedy, Hogan, Nolan, Haas and Costes for court and fixed bail at $1,000. Snyder and Kelly were released on parole to appear for a further hearing. All of the men got bail except Ursic, who went to jail.

Wrecked by Wind and Hail.

MARSHALL, Minn., Aug. 9.—The worst tornado and hailstorm ever known in southwestern Minnesota beat down portions of Lincoln and Yellow Medicine counties and the southern half of Lyon county. Present reports indicate a loss in Lyon county of no less than half a million dollars. Near Lumsings the Icelandic Lutheran church was picked up and thoroughly demolished. Several residences, barns and small outbuildings were destroyed and innumerable trees were blown down.

The capital stock of the trust is limited at $60,000,000.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The fact that John Boyd Thatcher had proposed a tribute to the memory of Americus Vespucci by opening the World's fair on May 5, 1893, instead of Oct. 12, 1892, has aroused a storm of protest among the intelligent Italians of this city, who regard Vespucci only as an emulator.

SEARCHING FOR CLEWS

The Borden Tragedy Too Much for the Fall River Police.

SOMEARERIA SOLUTION THAN EVER.

The Inmates of the House, Who Are Constantly Shadowed, Are on the Verge of Nervous Prostration—Hair Said to Have Been Found on One of the Axes.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 9.—The clothes worn by the victims of the Borden murder and which were buried in the yard were dug up and spread out on the grass for the inspection of Medical Examiner Dolan. He picked from several parts of the clothes a quantity of hair from Mrs. Borden's head, which he placed in two lots and took with him in his carriage. He would say nothing as to the reason for resurrecting the clothing, but after making his examination he ordered it to be placed in a shoecase and buried four feet below the surface of the lot.

Another prolonged search of the house did not result in any clews, nor did the officers feel at its conclusion that there was any cause for expecting more developments. Portions of the chimney were dug away by a mason and the barn floor was torn up. Marshal Hilliard said that the search was of value in showing that whoever the assassin was his tracks were completely covered from view.

The police have been at fever heat and have succeeded in running down seven out of nine clews. There was a grand round up by all the officials engaged in the detective business at the Wilbur House at 1 o'clock. District Attorney Knolton, of New Bedford, was expected, but failed to put in an appearance. Dr. Dolan will probably be on the inquest during the week, as soon as he has an opportunity to formulate a complaint.

One Theory Exploded.

The theory that the murder was committed by a man who was seen sitting on the garden fence half an hour before the murders were discovered has been exploded. The man seen by Mrs. Nathan Chase picking pears has come to light. His name is Patrick McGowan, and he is a mason's helper employed by John Crowe. Mr. Crowe occupies a barn on Third street, in the rear of Dr. Kelly's house, which is the next one south of Borden's. The yard into which the man dropped when Mrs. Chase shook her garment at him is used by Mr. Crowe for the storage of old lumber.

State Detective Seaver and Detective Henry, of Providence, were looking for this man and found him. One of Mr. Crowe's men was engaged until 12 o'clock Thursday dressing stone in this yard. He was south of the barn, out of sight of the Borden house, but no one could have jumped the fence into Crowe's yard and escaped his notice, though one could have escaped through the Chagnon yard.

A second man was splitting wood at a woodpile nearer the Borden house, and from the place where he was working he could see the dividing fence. He remained in the yard until noon and saw no one jump the fence. McGowan came to the yard between 11 and 12 o'clock, and waited there a few minutes until he was sent out on a new job. While waiting he went to the fence, climbing up on some old frames, and began picking pears when Mrs. Chase saw him.

When he dropped he disappeared from Mrs. Chase's sight, but did not go between Mr. Crowe's barn and the Chagnon fence, as the only way he could reach the place of the fence at this point. Mrs. Chase could not see McGowan after he disappeared, but he walked around south of the barn and was at once sent off on his new job. It was to go off on this new job that he left the pears. While on the fence he saw no one in the Borden yard.

Detective Seaver states that one of the two hatchets found in the cellar was examined under a powerful glass and two hairs were found adhering to it. The inmates of the house are all suffering from nervous prostration, Miss Lizzie and the servant girl more particularly. The servant girl, Bridget Sullivan, left the house yesterday with some friends and also slept at their house. She returned this morning. In all her movements she was watched closely by a policeman.

Mr. Morse went down Second street to The Daily News office and was shadowed all the way. The young ladies are beginning to realize the awfulness of the suspicions resting upon Miss Lizzie and cannot control their feelings. Among the callers at the house was the Rev. J. W. Miller Jubb, of the Central Congregational church. He made a pastor's call only. Inspector Hanscom and Lawyer Jennings did not appear at the house.

Blames Lizzie Borden and Morse.

HARTFORD, Aug. 9.—George B. Fish, of this city, whose wife is the sister of the murdered Mrs. Borden, of Fall River, in a published interview says that he believes Lizzie Borden and J. V. Morse concocted the deed and hired some one to do it. Lizzie and Emma Borden are stepdaughters of the murdered woman, and have never been on pleasant terms with her, owing to trouble over the division of a small property left by the girls' mother to Mr. Borden, who gave it to the second wife instead of the girls.

Calcutta Fears a Panic.

CALCUTTA, Aug. 9.—The fall in the price of silver is causing great uneasiness in financial and business circles and a panic is feared.

THE PAGO PAGO INCIDENT.

England Has Not Violated Any of the United States' Rights.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The views of the state department officials most familiar with the Samoan troubles of the past continues to be that the occupancy of the harbor of Pago Pago by Great Britain as a coasting station cannot be considered as a seizure. One of these officials said today: "It is not necessary for England to seize the harbor in order to establish a coaling station. Under treaty stipulations England has a right to locate a naval depot wherever she pleases on a Samoan shore. The treaties under which the United States and England acquire their respective rights are as follows. Article 2 of the treaty of 1878 reads:

"Naval vessels of the United States shall have the privilege of entering and using the port of Pago Pago, and establishing therein and on the shores thereof a station for coal and other naval supplies for their naval and commercial marine, and the Samoan government will hereafter neither grant nor authorize any jurisdiction within said port adverse to such rights of the United States as restrictive thereof. The same vessels shall also have the privilege of entering other ports of the Samoan islands.

"Aug. 27, 1880, a treaty was proclaimed between Great Britain and the king of Samoa, which contained this provision:

"Her majesty, the queen of Great Britain, may, if she thinks fit, establish on the shores of a Samoan harbor, to be hereafter designated by her majesty, a naval station and coaling depot, but this article shall not apply to the harbor of Apia or Salnatafa or to that part of the harbor of Pago Pago which may be hereafter selected by the government of the United States as a station under the proviSions of the treaty concluded between the United States of America and the Samoan government on the 17th day of January, 1878.

From this state of things it is argued that neither the United States nor Great Britain has an exclusive right to the privileges of Pago Pago harbor. Germany is the only government which may lay claim to an exclusive grant on the part of Samoa.

Nominations Held Up.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The three nominations which were left unacted upon when the senate adjourned, and which accordingly were virtually rejected, were George V. Miller, to be collector of internal revenue of the Twenty-third district of Pennsylvania; James Hill, postmaster of Vicksburg, Miss., and Edward J. Day, of Monett, Mo., postmaster.

Senator Quay was responsible for the inactivity which was displayed in Mr. Miller's case. Mr. Hill's stumbling block was ex-Senator Blanche K. Bruce. Mr. Day's case was held up because it was alleged he had recently been indicted in Missouri.

The San Francisco Site.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—A check for $1,040,000 has been forwarded to San Francisco in payment of the Mission street site for a public building in San Francisco. This is the final act in a case that has occupied the attention of the treasury department for over a year, which has necessitated two or three commissions to investigate the suitability of the site and has been the subject of a dozen official reports.

The Scientists Must Go.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—There will be a very considerable shaking up among the highly salaried officers of the bureau of geological survey tomorrow, when the reductions imposed by the sundry civil bill will be carried into effect. Nearly forty members of the present force will be asked to resign, and three-fifths of them being scientists employed on special work.

The Rebates Not Yet Removed.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Secretary Foster, of the state department, says the Ottawa dispatch announcing that discriminating rebates on vessels passing through the Welland canal had been withdrawn was premature. The matter was in the course of adjustment and would no doubt be satisfactorily settled.

Army Matrons Discharged.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—General Schofield has ordered that all hospital matrons in excess of 100 now employed be discharged. This is made necessary by the provisions of the army appropriation bill.

The Souvenir Half Dollar.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Engraver Barber, of the Philadelphia mint, has completed the design for the new souvenir half dollar which congress has authorized to be coined and has forwarded it to the mint bureau at Washington, where it will be passed upon. The design provides for a bust of Columbus on one side and on the other a cut of the administration building at the World's fair. It was said at the mint that the World's fair managers would get the very thing the free silver men were after—the seignorage—which would amount to about a million dollars, as the cost of the coinage of a silver dollar would be about 40 per cent, less than its face value called for, the 40 per cent. therefore representing the profit, which will either go to the fair or be represented in additional half dollars.

Faulkner Rearrested.

BUFFALO, Aug. 9.—James Faulkner's pardon arrived from Washington and he was set at liberty. He was immediately rearrested on a bench warrant from Livingston county charging him with forgery in the second degree. The indictment was found two or three years ago. Faulkner says he thinks the feeling at Dansville has changed now and he does not think he will be prosecuted further.

Caprivi May Resign.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—Kleine's Journal gives currency to a report, as yet unconfirmed, to the effect that Chancellor Caprivi is about to resign, owing to differences of opinion with the kaiser as to the Bismarck crisis, and that Prince Hatzfeldt-Wildenburgh, now the German ambassador in Great Britain, will be his successor.

Periodical Hydrophobia.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 9.—John Allen is suffering from a peculiar case of a disease resembling hydrophobia. Fifteen years ago he was bitten by a mad dog. In August or each year since then he has had attacks similar to the present one.

"Doctor, my little boy is in a very critical state, and I am satisfied that Dr. Probe, who is now attending him, doesn't understand the case. I wish you would come right over and see the boy."

"I don't see how I can do it. Probe and I were old friends, and in these matters of professional courtesy we have to be mighty careful."

"But, good heavens, man, if you don't come the boy may die!"

"That's just the point. Suppose I should save the boy. Why, Probe would never forgive me."—Life.

PARLIAMENT MEETS.

An Amendment of No Confidence Moved in the House of Commons.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—There was a full attendance in parliament to listen to the opening speech and the real beginning of the struggle between the parties.

Previous to the dissolution on June 28, the speech said, the business of the session was completed; therefore it was not necessary for parliament to continue its session at an unusual period of the year for the transaction of financial or legislative business.

It expressed the hope that when parliament met again at the customary season it would direct attention to measures of social and domestic improvement, and that it would continue to advance in the path of the useful and beneficent legislation which had been so judiciously followed at previous sessions.

In the house of lords the Earl of Campserdown complained that parliament and the country were in the dark as to the parliamentary programme. Lord Salisbury said that there was no precedent for the present situation, since there was no measure before the house. It had been thought best to leave all reference to the future policy out of the queen's speech. He did not intend at present to vindicate the past policy of the government.

The Duke of Devonshire said that he would ask the opposition to state whether, should parliament be kept for six months, steps would be taken to scuttle out of Egypt.

Lord Herschell held that no declaration of policy coming from the Liberal government ought to be given until the Liberal government was constituted.

The address was approved.

In the commons before the opening of the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne Mr. Gladstone entered the house and took the usual oath administered to members. He was the recipient of hearty cheers from his supporters.

Neither the speech of Mr. Barton, in moving the address, nor that of Mr. Cross, who seconded the address, attracted any attention. The house was listless until Mr. Herbert Henry Asquith, Gladstonian, member for the East division of Fifeshire, rose to move the amendment declaring that the house had no confidence in the government. His motion was greeted with cries of derision and prolonged cheering by the Liberals.

Mr. Asquith declared that parliament had met for the obsequies of a dead majority. The house ought not to delay over a practical question, but should, as speedily as possible, place in power a government representing the decision of the country as expressed at the polls.

Mr. Thomas Burt (Gladstonian), member for Morpeth, secretary of the Northumberland Miners' Mutual Confidence, seconded the no confidence amendment. He contended that the question of home rule for Ireland must dominate all other questions for the present parliament to be charged.

The Right Hon. George J. Goschen, chancellor of the exchequer, said that he hoped the house would at last hear something definite about home rule. Mr. Gladstone, he declared, could no longer shirk explaining his home rule scheme, nor could Sir William Vernon-Harcourt evade unpleasant questions by going out of the house instead of responding to them.

Mr. Goschen, in continuing his speech, denied that home rule was the paramount question which had been submitted to the country in the recent campaign, and declared that it had occupied in a large number of electoral addresses a very subordinate place. The Irish members seemed to think that they had nothing to do but evict the present ministers in order to get home rule. [Cheers from the Irish members.]

Mr. Justin McCarthy said that the Irish party expected that coercion would cease when the Liberals came into power. If the Liberal party promised home rule bill did not satisfy the people of Ireland there would be an end of it. [Conservative cheers.]

Mr. John Redmond said that he would support Mr. Asquith because he considered it the duty of every Irish member to assist in counting the present government, regardless of the question whether they were likely to fare better at the hands of its successor. He could not assent in any way to Mr. Goschen's suggestion to give the Newcastle programme precedence over the home rule question. It might be possible to deal with certain English reforms concurrently with home rule, but he would not consent to any policy placing home rule in the second rank.

Viscount Wolmer, Liberal-Unionist for Edinburgh, closed the debate, and the house adjourned.

She Preached Abolition.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Miss Rose, one of the first women to speak in the United States in favor of the abolition of slavery, was buried in Highgate cemetery today. In the United States she was associated with Lucretia Mott, Abby Kelly, John G. Whittier and Wendell Phillips in the antislavery agitation. Several times during her abolition speeches she was narrowly escaped being tarred and feathered. She was eighty-three years of age.

The Constellation a Flyer.

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., Aug. 9.—"The greatest race ever sailed by the New York Yacht club" was the unanimous verdict of all who saw the glorious run from Vineyard Haven to Marblehead. The schooner Constellation broke all records by covering the course of 102 nautical miles in less than ten hours, elapsed time. The previous record of the club was beaten by over one hour and a half.

WOMAN'S WORLD

THE WAY TO DISINFECT IN TIMES OF CONTAGIOUS DISEASES.

A well known physician gives the following directions for disinfecting clothing and bedding used in contagious diseases: Soak the garments two hours in a solution made from four ounces of sulphate of zinc, with two ounces of common salt to every gallon of water. The clothes should be soaked in this solution before they are sent to the wash, then boiled with washing soda or borax. The solution of one part of corrosive sublimate to 1,000 of water, while known to be the best for disinfection, is so destructive to fabrics that it is often not practicable to use it.

All brooms and clothes used in sweeping and dusting should also be disinfected before they are taken to other parts of the house, and dresses and clothing worn by those having charge of the sick person should be changed before joining the family. Even with these precautions it is thought better where there are young children in the house to have "the isolation complete." A sheet wet in some disinfectant should, it is urged, be hung before the patient's door, and small dishes holding chloride of lime be placed under the bed and about the room.

In disinfecting a room, after the bedding has been put in the solution given and well washed, and the tinware and crockery thoroughly cleansed, the doors and windows are thoroughly closed, the cracks are filled with cotton and sulphur is burned. Three or four pounds of stick sulphur are used for a room of ordinary size. The sulphur is put in a basin or spider and set in side a larger vessel partly filled with water. The vessel is set on bricks, an ounce of alcohol is poured over it and lighted.

When the sulphur begins to throw off its fumes, go out of the room and fill up any crevice about the door with cotton. In twenty-four hours an outside window may be opened. The floors and walls are then to be washed with a disinfectant, and the furniture cleaned and polished. It is best at the beginning of any contagious disease to take away drapery curtains, upholstered furniture and all expensive millinery adornments.—New York Post.

Interview with a Designer.

One of the successful dress designers of the city is a woman not yet thirty. She was telling me some days ago how her work is done. She supplies a large number of fashion sketches issued with the fashion sheet of a big pattern house, and she earns sixty-five dollars a week at her trade. "It is something," she began, "that only a few women and not half a dozen men can do. There are the ladies' tailors of course, but they repeat themselves in essentially the same designs. Outside of tailor work, practically all the new dress designs gotten up in the city are from sketches made by women. It is very seldom that a man tries his hand at it who does not fail. For me, I often walk the streets till I get my idea. In an hour on Broadway or Fifth avenue I catch a hint from the draping of a skirt that suggests something to me, or I see a combination of colors of a novel use of some fabrics that sets my mind working in a new direction.

"Then I go home and make a rough drawing. It may not embody anything I have seen, or it may take hints from twenty different costumes. To be fit for use as a pattern supplement it must be original, it must be up with the times, but not too far ahead of prevailing ideas, and it must be practical; that is, it must be such that an ordinary dressmaker or a woman with a knack for cutting her own gowns can reproduce it without too much trouble. If I am sure I am on the right track, and want to be certain of turning out something especially clever, I get the material for such a dress as I am thinking of and get a girl of good figure to try it upon. I stand her up in the middle of the floor and I stick in pins and pull out pins, and try this effect and that effect and some other effect for maybe three hours at a time. It's tiresome work, but I always feel repaid if it ends by being a love of a gown.

"Sometimes it won't come to suit me, and then I lay awake half the night and plan how I will compel it to be the confection I want in the morning. When I get it I sketch it and color it and write directions for cutting the pattern for it without a minute's delay."—New York Advertiser.

"I never have five cents even for postage stamps without asking for it." The speaker was a young wife, who in her girlhood earned regular wages as a seamstress, and when married found her financial position changed. Eben held the purse strings, and made plenty of money. But new machinery was often needed; improvements must be made; hired hands must be good deal, and so no allowance was thought of for the wife, who had the position of "nurse, seamstress, housemaid, cook," with the added duties of motherhood.

"I always have a lump in my throat when I ask for a dollar," she said, "and I used to go to his pocketbook for spare change, for at the marriage service he said, 'With all my worldly goods I thee endow.' But when little Tom began to steal pennies because he wanted something and could not get it I began to wonder if I had done wrong and the sin was visited on him."

It was a sad contrast, this little mother's tender conscience, with a world of trickery and knavery.

Nowhere in this lack of pocket money felt so much as among farmers' wives and daughters. Many of them go from positions in the city, teachers, typewriters, saleswomen, with a regular salary—a good cook can earn her fourteen dollars a month. She may marry a young farmer, and with all her life before her decide to be his helpmate and money saver. How they work and struggle to pay off the farm, to get the necessary improvements made! But when the fight is partly over, sometimes the young wife has a feeling of envy on Saturday nights, when her husband pays the "hands" who have worked for him, and has not a dollar for her, for she knows that they have been fed while she has sewed; that they have slept while she lost hours of slumber with the sewing baby in arms, and that they can buy clothes that she would feel it extravagant to wear.—Montreal Witness.

The Mistress of the White House.

To be the mistress of the White House is altogether tempting. It is a position of almost unequaled social power and influence, which has generally proved the best, far ahead of prevailing ideas, and it must be practical; that is, it must be such that an ordinary dressmaker or a woman with a knack for cutting her own gowns can reproduce it without too much trouble. If I am sure I am on the right track, and want to be certain of turning out something especially clever, I get the material for such a dress as I am thinking of and get a girl of good figure to try it upon. I stand her up in the middle of the floor and I stick in pins and pull out pins, and try this effect and that effect and some other effect for maybe three hours at a time. Many of them go from positions in the city, teachers, typewriters, saleswomen, with a regular salary—a good cook can earn her fourteen dollars a month. She may marry a young farmer, and with all her life before her decide to be his helpmate and money saver. How they work and struggle to pay off the farm, to get the necessary improvements made! But when the fight is partly over, sometimes the young wife has a feeling of envy on Saturday nights, when her husband pays the "hands" who have worked for him, and has not a dollar for her, for she knows that they have been fed while she has sewed; that they have slept while she lost hours of slumber with the sewing baby in arms, and that they can buy clothes that she would feel it extravagant to wear.—Montreal Witness.

The Mistress of the White House.

To be the mistress of the White House is altogether tempting. It is a position of almost unequaled social power and influence, which has generally proved the best, far ahead of prevailing ideas, and it must be practical; that is, it must be such that an ordinary dressmaker or a woman with a knack for cutting her own gowns can reproduce it without too much trouble. If I am sure I am on the right track, and want to be certain of turning out something especially clever, I get the material for such a dress as I am thinking of and get a girl of good figure to try it upon. I stand her up in the middle of the floor and I stick in pins and pull out pins, and try this effect and that effect and some other effect for maybe three hours at a time. It's tiresome work, but I always feel repaid if it ends by being a love of a gown.

"Sometimes it won't come to suit me, and then I lay awake half the night and plan how I will compel it to be the confection I want in the morning. When I get it I sketch it and color it and write directions for cutting the pattern for it without a minute's delay."—New York Advertiser.

"I never have five cents even for postage stamps without asking for it." The speaker was a young wife, who in her girlhood earned regular wages as a seamstress, and when married found her financial position changed. Eben held the purse strings, and made plenty of money. But new machinery was often needed; improvements must be made; hired hands must be good deal, and so no allowance was thought of for the wife, who had the position of "nurse, seamstress, housemaid, cook," with the added duties of motherhood.

"I always have a lump in my throat when I ask for a dollar," she said, "and I used to go to his pocketbook for spare change, for at the marriage service he said, 'With all my worldly goods I thee endow.' But when little Tom began to steal pennies because he wanted something and could not get it I began to wonder if I had done wrong and the sin was visited on him."

It was a sad contrast, this little mother's tender conscience, with a world of trickery and knavery.

Nowhere in this lack of pocket money felt so much as among farmers' wives and daughters. Many of them go from positions in the city, teachers, typewriters, saleswomen, with a regular salary—a good cook can earn her fourteen dollars a month. She may marry a young farmer, and with more of the various regions of the world than Miss North. She journeyed through Europe again and again. She visited Egypt, Syria, the islands of the Mediterranean and the Canary islands. She traveled all through India with the thoroughness of an explorer bent on leaving nothing untouched. She traversed Borneo and Java and visited the Malay peninsula. She was in Japan, in Australia, in Tasmania, in New Zealand, in South Africa, in the Sandwich Islands, in South America and more than once in Canada and the United States.

The celebrated Darwin was delighted with her work, and it was upon his advice that she went to Australia to paint the flowers of which she has been called the fifth quarter of the globe.

Miss North is described as having had a stately presence and a most charming manner.—Youth's Companion.

Loyalty in the Home Circle.

Loyalty in the home circle is not as often considered as it ought to be; it should be held as part of the ethics of family honor never to speak slightingly of any member of the household to outsiders. The old and somewhat vulgar proverb, "Wash all your soiled linen at home," contains the gist of an obvious truth. Parents should impress this family loyalty upon their children, and teach them that it is where dignity and strength and happiness to be the guardians of their own hearth, as it were, the stanch defenders of the honor of the family.

Brothers and sisters should never allow themselves to say anything derogatory of each other to their acquaintances whatever may be their private differences. Husbands and wives would do well to remember that "nagging" at each other, or even what is called "running each other in public," is not only disloyal to the family dignity, but is in very bad taste, and is moreover exceedingly tiresome to any one who may be with them. Mothers—even good, loving mothers—have an unwise way sometimes of bringing every trivial fault to the surface before any one who happens to be present.

Parents, too, should be loyal to their children if they expect the latter to be loyal to them. Every now and again we see a family where the men all become doers or less prominent in their various walks in life, and in almost every case there will be found among them a very strong sentiment of what the world calls "clannishness," but what might be better designated as faithfulness. Even from a worldly point of view young people would do well to remember that whatever keeps the family together in faithful allegiance adds to the position and influence and consideration of each member individually.—New York Tribune.

A Woman Who Has Proved Her Honesty.

One of the first women who were assigned work in the treasury building was a colored woman, Sophie Holmes by name.

One night when Sophie was sweeping the refuse papers in her room she found a box of greenbacks that had been picked, counted and packed to transfer to the vaults and had been accidentally overlooked. She did not dare call the watchman for fear he would be tempted beyond resistance. She thought of her four small children at home alone, with no one to give them their supper or put them to bed, but the one duty that shared her in the face was to protect that money. She sat down upon the box and quietly waited for the hours to go by.

At 1 o'clock in the morning she heard the shuffling step of General Spinner in the corridor and heard him open the door to his room. She quietly slipped along the corridor, knocked at his door and told him what she had found. The general had the box taken to his room and sent Sophie home in his carriage. The next morning, when she returned she found the general still keeping guard. That night he sent for her and placed in her hand her appointment papers, given for honesty, and for thirty years she has earned and drawn her fifty dollars per month.

Fifty thousand dollars was in this box. At another time she found $80,000, for which the testimony of Sophie is seen over the general's initials in handwriting.—Mary S. Lockwood in Chautauquan.

What Color to Wear.

An artist's rule as to color is: Choose tarefully only those tints of which a duplicate may be found in the hair, the eyes or the complexion. A woman with blue gray eyes and a thin, neutral tinted complexion is never more becomingly dressed than so the blue shades in which gray is mixed, for in those complexions there is a certain delicate bluenese. A brunette is never so exquisite as in cream color, for she has reproduced the tinting of her skin in her dress. Put the same dress on a colorless blond and she will be far from charming, while in gray she would be quite the reverse. The reason is plain—in the blond's sallowness there are tints of gray, and in the dark woman's pallor there are always yellowish tones, the same as predominate in the cream colored dress.

Women who have rather florid complexions look well in various shades of plum and heliotrope, also in certain shades of dove gray, for to a trained eye this color has a tinge of pink which harmonizes with the flesh of the face. Blonds look fairer and younger in dead black, like that of wool goods or velvet, while brunettes require the sheen of satin or gloss of silk in order to wear black to advantage.—Fancy Goods Graphic.

About Women.

Japan women load vessels.

Warsaw has women car conductors.

There are 4,500 women printers in England.

Mrs. Marsh, of Chicago, is an undertaker.

Many southern women plant and ship peanuts.

Three hundred women are florists in the United States.

Mrs. Kimball, of West Virginia, is president of a railroad.

There are 58,000 women in England enrolled in trades unions.

In Massachusetts 133 women are employed in making cartridges.

Soft Water for the Face.

An authority warns women who would preserve or enhance the beauty of their complexions—and what woman would not—to use rain water, if possible, to wash their faces in. If this is not procurable, boil the water before using it. With this good soap should be used, as the basis of all beauty is cleanliness. It is a mistake to fancy that oils and unguents will cleanse the skin. A few women still cling to this most mistaken idea, and there was never a greater delusion. Water is the best of all cosmetics.

There are some delicate skins, however, to which the grit and dust of travel prove irritants. Such may use a little cold cream well rubbed in and afterward gently wiped off with a piece of fine linen. Even then, however, must finish the process with tepid water, into which a dash of eau de cologne has been put.—Exchange.

Medicine for the Hair.

To brush and brush and still to brush is the best medicine for the hair, remembering always that it is the hair and how the scalp which is to receive this treatment. Upon the brush used depends a great deal. In the first place it must be immaculately clean, and one's brushes should be washed as religiously as is one's face. The comb should be coarse, so that it will disentangle the hair if it is snarled, and if the hair is well brushed the comb really is of very little use. A fine comb is never advised. The brush should have long, soft bristles that go through the hair, taking with them every particle of dust and leaving behind them a glow that is beautiful.—Mrs. Mallon in Ladies' Home Journal.

Daughter of an Emperor.

Princess Marguerite Beatrice, youngest daughter of the late emperor of Germany, is tall and strong, with a mass of fair hair, very pale eyes and very prominent lips. The frightful of her face reminds one of England and her robust figure of Germany. She is the favorite sister of William II, a domesticated woman, knows how to sew and to embroider and does not like dancing. It is even said that she writes verses as melancholy as the German sky and as foggy as the Thames.—Paris Letter.

Egg Improves Whipped Cream

Before whipping cream for the top of chocolate or coffee it is better to add the white of an egg and a tablespoonful of powdered sugar. Then whip until stiff. In default of the cream the whites of egg, with powdered sugar lightly dusted in, make the drinks much more tempting than when served plain. Whip very stiff in either case and keep on ice till wanted, which should be very soon after being prepared.—Exchange.

Tin Wedding Gifts.

The favors at a recent up town tin wedding were rather unique. Each of the twenty lady guests received a tin jelly pan, on the reverse side of which the host, who is a tinsmith, had engraved his name, and filled in oil a pretty landscape or marine view. The edges of the tin were punctured to hold in place a handsome silken cord, thus making a plaque worthy an honored place as a household ornament.—Newark Advertiser.

Even women of much experience in all kinds of cookery like occasionally to get some new idea to make the table for home repasts more inviting. For this reason in every cooking class started in any vicinity there will be found always one or two who seem to need no instruction.

When a child cries, find the cause—the pin prick. Nature has but one way of showing its suffering in infancy, and evidences of temper on your part will fall on senseless ears. Gain character and self control by recognizing the inevitable.

Only as to Business.

"I hope you don't associate with that man I saw you speak to on the street just now."

"Associate with him! What do you take me for? That man, sir, is one of the most rascally, corrupt, sneaking, underhand, low down, villainous and depraved scoundrels that ever managed to keep out of jail!"

"I know it. But why are you on speaking terms with him at all?"

"Why, I'm—er—his lawyer."—Chicago Tribune.

Aid to the Afflicted.

The tramp walked into the Jefferson avenue store with an air of deep dejection.

"I beg your pardon," he said to the proprietor, "but can you give a poor suffering man something?"

"Certainly," responded the proprietor blithely, "here's a bottle of Jamaica ginger. I guess that will make you feel better," and the disgusted tramp growled and went off without it.—Detroit Free Press.

BREVITIES.

—Papiac is to-day devoted to the State Sons of Temperance.

—Robert Gaylor, as "Sport McAllister" will be at Music Hall to-morrow night.

—To-morrow afternoon the Plainfield Cricket Club will go to Lambert's Mills, by way of Terrill road, for an afternoon of picture taking.

—Somerset street is receiving much needed patching. The street commissioner is making his presence known in a way people who use the road like.

—The Plainfield Street Railway Company have extended invitations to some of our prominent citizens to attend a trial trip at six o'clock this evening.

—It is reported that there are several cases of "black diptheria" on Lake street among the Italians, and that scarlet fever is also raging in the same neighborhood. The place is quarantined.

—The excursion of the Y. P. S. C. E. of Dunellen, New Market and Warren Mission left this city at 8.01 this morning for Poughkeepsie. There were two trains, each section having one baggage and two passenger cars.

—"Patsy" McClymont, who ran away from his home on Somerset street last Friday, returned yesterday. He says he rode on coal trains to Pittsburg, Pa., and was very penitent and somewhat hungry, his meals not having been of the best during this trip.

—The New York papers are again devoting much of their valuable space to remarks on the weather. The official report of "Sargeant" Dunn shows that the present hot wave is second only to the one a week ago, but relief is promised by to-morrow night.

—One of the drivers employed at Keech's Mills had a very narrow escape from death this morning. While hoisting a large bag of grain from a wagon to the third story of the mill, the chain broke, and the bag broke letting it fall about twenty feet. It missed striking the man below by but a few inches.

—One of the members of the Plainfield Association writes from the Wanamaker camp at Asbury Park that "It is just splendid. I have had as long a possible. Words fail to tell you of the many advantages offered." Four Plainfielders start for the camp to-day and others who have been there speak in the highest terms of their experience while in camp.

—The trial of Patrick Heeley, which was to have been held before Justice Nash this morning, was postponed until next week. There are three charges against Heeley, namely, letting his horse run at large, taking property from an officer, and resisting and assaulting an officer. The offences were committed on Sunday, July 30. Heeley is under $300 bonds.

—All the union cigar makers of New Brunswick, struck Monday for an advance of $1 per thousand. They have been getting $7, and the manufacturers say they have been making good wages under the old scale. Two of the manufacturers have acceded to the demands of their men, who resumed work. Several others say that they cannot afford to pay any more. The men say they will remain out till they get what they want.

—State Geologist Smock, of New Jersey, has gone to Holland to study the dyke system of that country and to secure other information that may be utilized in solving the problems as to how to save the New Jersey sea-shore coast. Old Ocean's inroads in the coast from Sandy Hook southward to Cape May are deep and many. In some places indentations of a mile or more have been officially noted. The United States Geodetic and Coast Survey is to take the matter up this coming Autumn.

—Further inquiries regarding the Vicar B safety bicycle which was stolen from George W. Morrison Monday evening show that the bicycle was taken by a man dressed in light clothing at exactly 9.30 o'clock. He was seen by some residents of Sandford avenue who were returning home from a walk. He rode very poorly and was seen at Richmond and Front streets by Officer Moran and later by Officer Cooney. The police throughout the State have been notified, as have also the bicycle dealers, pawnshops and repairers, so that should the thief endeavor to sell the wheel he will be surely captured. The number of the wheel is 14892. It is thought by the police that the thief is still in this neighborhood and a sharp lookout is being kept for it. Ten dollars reward and no questions asked, is offered for the return of the bicycle.

Bond, while the young man is spending his vacation camping on the Delaware. Their father is expected home next Summer, his previous visit having been about ten years ago.

TO BUILD UP MOUNTAIN AVENUE.

The Proposed Improvements to be Made in the Fall.

Mountain avenue, North Plainfield, joins the Springfield road at Scotch Plains and thus makes one long beautiful avenue straight through to the Oranges and Newark.

These two gentlemen possess considerable wealth, and, it is now said, that having patched up former misunderstandings, they will work together in making numerous improvements, one of which is said to be the building of the residences on their extensive real estate facing on Mountain avenue.

The brush was all cleared away, and rustic fences put up early in the Spring.

The next thing they want done, and for which it is said they will pay a large proportion of the cost, is the macadamizing of that thoroughfare.

Good Prospects for Builders.

A man well informed on the building trade in Plainfield, said yesterday, to a News reporter, "The prospects in the building line this Fall are fine. There will be dozens of houses going up. Plans are now being figured on by plumbers, tinners, carpenters and masons."

— Work on the new Nethervood station is progressing. Some of the stone for the foundation arrived yesterday.

THE FIRST TROLLEY CAR.

Ran on the Experimental Line Last Evening.

The first car of Plainfields new electric street railway was run last evening. A large crowd of people gathered on the street and had been standing for several hours to see the long talked of trolley car. When it came the street and tracks were crowded with people who followed the car over its entire course. There was much cheering all along the line.

Car No. 3 was started about eight o'clock and ran back and forth on Grant avenue to see that everything was all right. About nine o'clock it was started along Front street for its maiden trip, going nearly to Somerset street, where the experimental line ended.

The car is handsome, but small, and is finished in Royal Blue, similar to Royal Blue trains. The platforms were crowded, and one or two passengers were inside.

Workmen were busy an hour or two before the car was run clearing the track. No mishap occurred either to the car or people, but that perhaps was because everybody was looking for it, and the car was run very slowly. When the cars are running on regular schedule time, and they have ceased to be a novelty, accidents may be expected, for our narrow streets are often crowded with wagons, bicyclers and pedestrians, especially on market days, when the farmers come in with their produce.

A Talk About Razors.

"How long does a razor keep sharp?" asked a young man in a local barber shop, as the barber massaged the soap suds on his chin, incidentally leaving some in his ears.

"Well," replied that individual, as he commenced to remove the lather and down from his victim "that depends. Now, your face, for instance, a razor ought to keep sharp over a year. Some folks have beards that dull razors in a few days. Then again some razors never get sharpened. The owner only shaves once a week and he gets used, after a while, to shutting his eyes and soapping the hair off. Those kind of razors are handed down from generation to generation."

"Yes, we rest our razors once in awhile, that lets the edge get busy."

I knew a young man who always used his father's razor. The old man never sharpened it. Said he didn't think his razor needed it.

One evening the young fellow got up in the room and tried to shave. The razor almost tore the hair out. He was laying it down in disgust when he heard his father's step. Determined that the razor should be sharpened, and for fear the old man would give the regular excuse about it being sharp enough, the young man drew it hastily, edge down, across the stone. Then he laid it on the bureau and sat down.

The father came in and picked up the razor to shave. It didn't seem to cut very well.

"Say Pa," said the son, "why don't you get that thing sharpened?"

"Cuts well enough" was the reply.

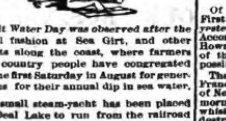
"Why its as dull as a stick" said the young man in disgust.

"Betcher it will split a hair" said the old man.

"Take you up!" said the boy, and they put up their money.

The son pulled a long hair out of the father's head and smiled joyfully. The old man took it and laid it out carefully on the bureau. Then using the razor as one uses a hatchet he brought it down on the hair, neatly dividing it, pocketed the money and went on shaving.

Sea Shore Notes.



Salt Water Day was observed after the usual fashion at Sea Girt, and other points along the coast, where farmers and country people have congregated on the first Saturday in August for generations for their annual dip in sea water.

A small steam-yacht has been placed on Deal Lake to run from the railroad bridge to the Y. M. C. A. camp at Wanamassa.

Thirty-seven fishing boats were anchored off shore at Asbury Park, yesterday. They were loaded with passengers anxious for a big catch.

Saturday was the heaviest baggage day of the year at Asbury Park. Counting Fifth avenue station the total was considerably over two thousand pieces.

The moonrise over the ocean just at dusk was an inspiring sight, and its appearance was greeted with several thousand exclamatory "Ohs!"

When to Carry an Umbrella.

When flies sting sharply, and ants may be seen making haste with their tiny burdens; when the donkeys bray unusually, and the cows clustered in corners of the fields before milking time; when the pigs pick up straws and carry them about with lively interest, as if they had some business with them, or wished to learn if straws really do show the way the wind blows; when the dog is heavy with sleep, and the cat seems possessed to wash her face—when any or all of these signs are seen they are not in vain, observes the Detroit Free Press, for it is sure not to be a dry time and rain is on the way.

GIFTS TO MOTHER WALBURGA.

Mother Superior Walburga Rock, who has charge of the Benedictine Convent of St. Walburga, at Elizabeth, celebrated her silver jubilee Monday. She took charge of the convent when it was built, in 1867. The members of the confraternity have increased to seventy-five. Mother Walburga also has supervision of the convents at Calstandi, Bayonne, St. Benedict's, Newark and Manchester.

Bishop Schumacher of Ecuador, has presented Prioress Walburga with a deed for two houses valued at $20,000 as a token of gratitude for the services of the fourteen nuns she sent there to establish convents in 1887 and 1888. The sisters in Ecuador sent as a jubilee gift to the mother superior $600. The members of the Elizabeth Confraternity presented a purse of $650. A large number of valuable gifts were presented by prominent Catholics in Elizabeth and elsewhere.

The exercises in commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary consisted of a solemn high mass of thanksgiving, offered by Rev. Father Polycarp, of St. Benedict's Order, Newark, and congratulatory addresses by Sister Monica in English and Sister Beatrice in German. A Jubilee chorus was sung by the assembled confraternity, the words of which were composed by Miss Eleanor Donnelly, of Philadelphia. The gifts to the venerable mother were then presented; and she in turn gave each of the assembled sisters a neat souvenir.

The Trolley Abomination.

(New York Times.)

There are many indications that syndicates and combinations of capitalists are plotting to force the abominable trolley system of electrical propulsion into the streets of this city, and there should be a universal and vigorous determination on the part of the people to keep it out. It has fought and brought its way into several cities, where it is an intolerable nuisance. Its most submissive victim, perhaps, is the City of Boston, but to the everlasting disgrace of that town of lofty pretensions it has allowed itself to be bled white by the West End Railway Company. That mighty monopoly has corrupted the City Government and the Massachusetts Legislature, and silenced the press of Boston by its continual subsidies; or, if it has not silenced the newspapers, it has, with one or two honorable exceptions, brought them over to its own side by its liberality in paying for statements in its behalf, insomuch that nothing against its atrocities is admitted to their columns. Another such spectacle of a greedy and arrogant corporation overriding a great civilized community cannot be found on the face of the earth.

The trolley system of street cars has failed wherever it has been tried. It is the cheapest to operate, and therefore the most profitable for capitalists. That is the only motive for the efforts to get it into this city, the richest field in the world for the highest dividends. The promoters care nothing for the convenience, comfort, or safety of the people in comparison with the prospect of big dividends. For ten years the people of New York have been contending to get rid of overhead electric power on the Elevated roads and streets, and they are near the consummation so long sought. But the most insidious and dangerous of all overhead electric wires are those of the trolley system. It involves a line of poles along each side of the street, with cross wires at short intervals, supporting over each track a naked wire which carries a powerful and deadly current. The wires used for the current cannot be insulated, for they would then be useless. Any connection with them is sure death to man or beast, and they are liable by any chance breaking of a telephone or electric graph wire to set a conflagration a going, as they did in Boston two or three years ago. These are of a character and condition obliges that of the grade crossings of railroads in populous towns. The system of wires is not only dangerous and hideous to look at, but it is an obstruction to the work of fire departments in the streets. Moreover, the cars are among the nosiest of modern inventions, and so liable to get beyond control that crossing or coming into the streets in which they run is to a constant peril.

The one thing that is pushing this scheme is money, directed by the unscrupulous power of corporations.

STATE NEWS

Of the seventy-seven privates of the First regiment who went to Sea Girt yesterday, fifty-eight were Plainfielders. According to Rifle Inspector Captain Wm. Howard, good scores were made, many of the men making 40 and 43 out of a possible 50.

The large warehouse of Morgan R. Francis at Old Bridge, eight miles south of New Brunswick, was burned yesterday morning. The place was full of apple butter, and the fire department interested the destruction. The loss is about $5,000, with $1,000 insurance.

Dr. John Elstone rowed from Red Bank to Highland Beach yesterday afternoon. While there he went in bathing. When he returned to his bath-house he discovered that a thief had stolen a gold watch and chain valued at over $120. His money he had in his stocking.

The Newark police have been notified by a dispatch from Moncton, N. B., that a man answering the description of "Jim," the man wanted for the Stedman murder, passed through Hillsboro last Thursday and took passage for Boston on the schooner Clara E. Rogers. They will be on hand when the boat arrives to arrest him.

Justice Hetfield, of Elizabeth Headquarters, yesterday united in matrimony two negroes. They are Edward Hunter and Henry Kienvald. The couple have been acquainted a few weeks, and, following the fashion of the civilized negroes who would tie the knot. They were accompanied by several friends and left the place apparently well pleased.

The Board of Engineers of the New Brunswick Fire Department issued a formal invitation to the civic societies to-day to join in their biennial parade on Columbian Day, Oct. 12th. If this is intended as a delicate hint to the civic societies it is not likely to be accepted. The bones of contention are the right of line and the selection of the grand marshal. The fire department having decided that it is entitled to and will have them, the civic societies have nearly all decided to have nothing to do with the affair. The Board of Education took no action on the matter.

Lawyers Threatened with Death.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 10—(Special.)—In Alderman McMasters mail yesterday was an anonymous letter, which had been posted in New York city before 12 a. m. on Monday. The letter was enclosed in a small envelope. It was written in a cramped and pushed hand, probably disguised. The letter read:

Aldermen McMasters, Pittsburg, Pa.:

DEAR SIR—Some time this week a party of men will leave here and will try to kill you and Superintendent Frick again. It is supposed the letters were written here, and mailed from New York.

LIVES WITH A BROKEN BACK.

Physicians are deeply interested in the case of John J. Hackett, of 127 Third street, Passaic, N. J., who is alive with a broken back.

Hackett was recently a trolley street railroad conductor in Passaic. His car was run into by a locomotive of the Erie Railroad over a week ago. Hackett was struck in the back between the shoulders.

He was picked up unconscious, and the physicians saw immediately that his spinal column had been severely hurt. A diagnosis showed conclusively that part of the backbone had been broken.

Hackett was operated upon, and it was evident that some of the spinous processes had been broken or rammed into the spinal column. It was amazing that the man lived.

The only possibility of saving his life, however, was the removal of these broken bones. The operation was performed last Tuesday by Dr. F. M. Rice, of Passaic, assisted by Drs. Terhune, Van Riper and Kunkel.

Dr. Rice says it is not impossible for Hackett to live, but he is afraid the man will die. If he recovers he will be about as good as he ever was.

—Henry Irving is fond of relating a little incident that occurred to him when in a Dorsetshire village last Summer. Whilst passing a group of children one of them eyed him so sharply that the actor said, "Well, little girl, do you know me?" "Yes sir," was the reply, "you are one of Beecham's Pills.'" She had seen his face in one of their advertisements.—Ex.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Now sprinkle your Christmas trees.

Some people are never satisfied. The man who finds fault with August heat will complain of cold in February

About this time of the year it's a good idea to take a look at the roads leading to town, and to see whether the pathmasters and overseers have done their full duty. The need of well kept highways grows daily more apparent.

The Bankers' Reporter gives some interesting statistics which make food for reflection for the student of the all absorbing question of labor and capital. There are nine Americans who possess from $50,000,000 to $150,000,000, and perhaps a thousand who are worth a million or more. The Duke of Westminster, who possesses the largest fortune in a foreign land, is worth about $60,000,000, and Queen Victoria, who is the richest monarch in the world, is worth only $15,000,000.

The wonderful vogue abroad of authors with established reputations, even in the sensational line of writing, has yet to be paralleled in America. The day has not arrived when eager throngs wait for a New York, Chicago or San Francisco bookstore to open that they may get early copies of first editions, when the scene may be witnessed in Paris whenever a new book by a popular writer sees the light. On the publication of Zola's last book, says a recent observer, at early morning the shelves of the booksellers were yellow with piles of copies, mountain high, of the new work, and hour by hour these piles dwindled down and were renewed by panting clerks. A new animation was given to the bookyards, and in every hand was seen the yellow back, so that a new color was given to the streets. An impressionist painter might make a very striking picture out of the subject, "Paris on a Zola Morning," and for this he would need not much more than his tube of light yellow.

Who Is Master?

Nothing is better calculated to take down the self conceit and abate the assumption of the human being who boasts himself the superior of all animals and lord of creation than the fact that some of the smallest and feeblest of animated creatures defy him to his face, and, virtually putting their thumbs to their noses, laugh him to scorn. Every summer finds him fighting some sort, perhaps several sorts, of small vermin, and in nine cases out of ten the battle is not to the strong. The army worm, the phylloxera, the doryphora, the squash bug, the cabbage worm, the curculio and the grasshopper and many other such small deer spoil his crops, damage his temper, decrease his income and augment his labor out of doors; the common fly, the roach, the water bug and even worse things invade his home and make the life of the housewife a perpetual combat, which, like freedom's battle, is never done.

It would seem so easy to rout these little creatures, which, when cornered, have no defensive weapon whatever, and of which, were they in a body, we could crush thousands by a single step. But yet, with all the study and ingenuity which have been expended on the matter, nothing has yet been found or invented which will permanently drive away mosquitoes, houseflies, roaches, water bugs or the ant which walks in darkness. Many nostrums are advertised to do this, but not one succeeds. It is not that they cannot be killed; spirits of turpentine, kerosene oil, indeed any kind of oil will kill every individual of them which it touches, but the destruction of individuals does not appreciably lessen their numbers. It seems utterly impossible to drive water bugs from a house where they have once established themselves. A few years ago they were considered as a pest peculiar to cities, notably to those cities large enough to have a system of water works. In New York they were Croton bugs, in Boston they were Cochintate bugs, in Portland, Me., they were Sebago bugs, and so on. But now there is hardly a country village within an hour's ride of any city which is not also infested with them.

Persian insect powder is the only thing which will dislodge them, even temporarily. Blown carefully into every crevice of the house, it makes them scarce for a few days, but its power soon evaporates and they return as before. This fact, with the additional disadvantage of its great expensiveness, prevents it from being generally used.

A thousand fortunes await the lucky person who shall hit upon something which will effectually destroy or permanently drive away these ubiquitous, annoying pests of the household. Until this is done, or, as he humbler, for now in vain we urge our feeble voices against our insect enemies. Mosquito bars don't bar mosquitoes nor doors of wire keep out the flies. Behind the kitchen's shelf-boring panels the water bugs increase by scores; the moths devour our furs and flannels, the chintz turns us out of doors. In vain we glory in our reason; small is the balm that boasting brings, while we are beaten every season by all these tiny, six legged things.

MISS BORDEN'S ORDEAL

She Is Rigidly Examined at the Coroner's Investigation.

THE SERVANT ALSO ON THE RACK.

Secrecy Maintained by the Officials as to the Result of the Investigation—Some Glaring Discrepancies in the Stories Told by the Daughter of the Victims.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 10.—Here—more than one hundred hours after the axe did its awful execution—there is no one bold enough to place his hand on man or woman and say: "I arrest you on suspicion of having murdered Andrew J. Borden and Abby Borden, his wife, on Aug. 4. You must come with me."

After several days of seeming lethargy the police officials have at length begun active steps toward the unraveling of the mystery that surrounds the murder, and they subjected to an inquisitorial examination Lizzie Borden and Bridget Sullivan, the servant. What it all means no one can tell with certainty, but it looks very much as though Marshal Hilliard and his aids were trying the effects of a bulldozing process, known in New York city police circles as "working the third degree." It is quite certain that finding the mystery surrounding the terrible crime beyond their detective ability, they have determined to make the suspected people themselves furnish the testimony which they have failed to gather.

The decided step taken was the outcome of a conference. Marshal Hilliard, District Attorney Knowlton, State Detectives Rhodes and Levear and Medical Examiner Dolan were closeted for some time in the marshal's office, and adjourned to meet later in a parlor of the Melson House, where they remained behind locked doors until an early hour in the morning. During that time had been every minute scrap of evidence that had been accumulated by the police was carefully examined, and a close comparison was made of the statements of different persons.

MRS. BORDEN.

Miss Borden Contradicted.

Lizzie Borden's claim that she had discovered the dead body of her father after her visit to the barn, where she had gone for the purpose of making some sinkers to be used in a fishing excursion, was contradicted by a policeman, who declares that he carefully examined the barn left on the day after the murder, and that he distinctly remembers that the thick dust on the floor was undisturbed by any footprints but his own.

The apparent inconsistency on the part of the young woman may be explained by the fact that in the excitement following the discovery of the murders she had forgotten where she had gone for the sinkers.

A point that is not so satisfactorily settled is the disposition of the letter which Lizzie says was received by Mrs. Borden that morning, calling her to the bedside of a sick friend. The most careful search has failed to reveal any traces of that important epistle. Scores and shreds of paper have been carefully gathered and pieced, but to no avail.

Mrs Borden has on different occasions given the time of her absence from the house in the barn as 10:30 and 10:30 a. m., and the police lock upon the discrepancy as serious. The police still believe that she tried to buy prussic acid at Smith's drug store, which she still positively denies.

An important piece of evidence submitted to the district attorney by the marshal was the distances between the scene of the tragedy and the adjoining houses, showing that the noise of any violent struggle must have been heard by the neighbors, as well as by Lizzie and the servant.

During the search conducted on Sunday a piece of lead pipe was found in the yard about five feet from the barn. Whether or not this is the metal from which Lizzie was going to make the sinkers has not yet been proved.

Rigidly Questioned.

When Marshal Hilliard drove up later to the Borden residence and told Miss Lizzie that she was wanted she displayed not the least sign of emotion, but asked only that a friend and old schoolmate, Mrs. George Brigham, who was in the house at the time, be permitted to go with her. The marshal assented and the women were driven to headquarters, followed by a curious crowd of men and boys. As they stepped from the carriage Lizzie looked around at the crowd without displaying the least sign of discomposure.

For four hours she was subjected to a rigid questioning. Professor Wood, to whom had been subjected for analysis the viscera of the murdered couple, and Attorney General Pillsbury were present, but did not remain long and drove off together. It was not until 6 o'clock that Miss Borden's ordeal was ended for the day and she was taken to her home, and Marshal Hilliard's double guard was put on the house to prevent the escape of any of the suspected people. Bridget Sullivan, who had not been permitted to see her mistress, was taken to the home of a friend, Mrs. Patrick Barrington, of 98 Division street.

Professor Wood, before leaving the city was seen by a reporter, to whom he admitted to the best of his belief the stains on the rags gathered from the cellar of the Borden house during the search on Sunday were human blood. These rags were found under an upturned pail. That they were remnants of a garment has not, however, yet been settled.

THE IRON HALL RECEIVERSHIP.

Supreme Cashier Davis Declares Himself in Favor of It.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—A special to The Press from Indianapolis says: It now appears that Supreme Cashier Davis declares himself in sympathy with the effort to have a receiver appointed for the Order of the Iron Hall, and one purpose of the supreme sitting will doubtless be to dispose of him, which Chief Justice Somerby and his executive committee will have the power to do. Davis was asked as to the probable investigation of his accounts and said:

"I am perfectly willing to have experts come in and go through my books at any time. I am not afraid of an investigation. If there should be something wrong or an omission I am able to make it good.

"I know there has been a disposition among certain persons in the order to put the blame of this thing on me, and I am ready for them to go through the books. Suppose I did say to some one that there was something wrong with the order. I had a right to do it. Any member has a right to make a statement of that kind if he wants to."

Superintendent of State Banks Charles H. Krumbhaar went to Harrisburg without renewing his application to the common pleas court for a receiver for the Mutual Banking, Surety, Safe Deposit and Trust company. The cause of Mr. Krumbhaar's visit to the state capitol is unknown. Richard C. Dale, attorney for Superintendent Krumbhaar, says he does not know whether or not such an application will be made, as Mr. Krumbhaar has not yet got the evidence upon which he would make the application.

That the affairs of the Mutual company are destined to play a conspicuous part in the Iron Hall receivership proceedings is evidenced by a secret and hurried visit of Supreme Justice Somerby to this city.

He dropped in the Mutual bank like a spirit and as silently departed again for Indianapolis. Hardly any one knew that Justice Somerby was here until he had gone. It is learned that the justice came here for affidavits of the solvency of the Mutual company. These he procured from the officers and bore away with him on a noon train. They are for use in the supreme sitting of the Iron Hall in Indianapolis, and in case the officers of the bank are not present at the receivership meeting will also be used there.

The Hartford Branch in Trouble.

HARTFORD, Aug. 10.—The officers of the local branch (No. 1,054) of the Iron Hall, who are investigating the accounts of F. William Rogers, the accountant of the branch, have discovered a shortage of $1,000.

FASHIONS

STYLES FOR EQUESTRIANS.

Including Great Variety in Costumes Cool, Becoming and Practical.

A few years ago there was only one possible make of riding habit, plain and uncompromising, and the tall hat worn as necessary as the beast itself. Now, however, in summer especially, comfort and individual taste assert their claims, and there is a variety of costumes. While the fashion of skirts remains much the same, every variety of jacket, covert coat, shirt and waistcoat is admissible, and in the matter of hats, too, a wide choice is given, though the tall hat retains popularity for park riding.

This year, among the lighter colored habits, brown appear to be much worn: but the majority of skirts are black, or else the darkest blue. All open jackets worn with shirts and waistcoats are much longer than those of last year; the latest English habits for the most part touch the saddle, and some even come on to the horse's back like a man's coat. Our cut represents a coat of moderate length.

NEW RIDING HABIT.

With a black skirt, a slight black cloth jacket open in front is worn, to look well, as it gives the wearer the chance of introducing whatever color is most becoming in her shirt or waistcoat and tie. A smart black habit and jacket looks strikingly well worn with a pinkish shirt, a sailor hat trimmed with a striped red ribbon (toning with the shirt), and a tie to match. A pale blue tie and band of the same around the hat is a favorite color and suits many people.

Both for riding and ordinary wear, ties fastened in a bow with short ends are still what appears to be the desire of many women's hearts—to approximate as closely as may be to man's attire.

Besides the ordinary white sailor hats, a good many mixed fancy straws are worn; the brims are rather wide and the crowns low. Nearly all these hats are made in coarse straw, and both in texture and shape are similar to men's sailor hats. White waistcoats, and those in light fancy materials, are worn, and with them straight collars and stiff hard ties.

Yellow or brown leather boots appear to find favor with some riders, but they are very striking in appearance to the ordinary sized foot.

The New Ocean Flyer.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—Although no contracts have yet been signed by the Cramps for the construction of steamships for the Inman line, which will at least equal if not surpass the steamship City of Paris and City of New York of the same line, such a move is practically certain.

HOUNDED TO THE GRAVE

Judge Normile, of St. Louis, Kills Himself with Poison

AND BLAMES THE POST-DISPATCH.

The Judge Had Intended to Shoot Managing Editor White, but Changed His Mind—The Suicide Becomes a Singular Sequence to the Curse of a Mother.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 10.—This city was thrown into a state of great excitement by the report that Hon. James C. Normile, judge of the criminal court, had committed suicide at his boarding house, 1,422 Washington avenue.

Judge Normile returned to his boarding house after a short visit to the business portion of the city. On entering the house he requested his landlady to come to his room in an hour, saying that he felt unwell and that he might be seriously ill at that hour.

The judge retired to his room, and when it was visited by the landlady she found him lying dead on the bed. On a small table was an empty phial which had evidently contained acid of an extreme and deadly character. Physicians were at once summoned, but a glance showed that the victim was beyond all human aid. On the stand adjoining the bed was a note addressed to the coroner, the contents of which are at present withheld from the public, but which are supposed to give the reason for the self murder.

The Libel Suit.

Some time ago the Post-Dispatch, of this city, severely criticised the judicial administration of Judge Normile, and recently the judge brought suit for libel against that paper in the sum of $400,000. Monday depositions were being taken in the proceedings and Judge Normile was subjected to a severe examination as to his antecedents, life and rulings. It is believed that the examination preyed heavily on his mind. Monday night he was seen in various resorts and gave evidence of having drank heavily.

The following note was found in a diary on the person of Judge Normile and had evidently been written just before his death:

For more than a year the atrocious libelers of The Post-Dispatch have had me on the rack. They have almost succeeded not from performing my judicial duties and made life little less than a protracted torture. For the past week I have slept little. I concluded to go to the office and kill Florence White, managing editor of The Post-Dispatch, but I have just the morning awakened that purpose, as I shrink from taking human life, especially while being a judge. I cannot fight this paper in the courts. The law is slow, and it would be more than a year probably before I could get the damage case brought to trial. I crave rest, which also I must rest in the grave, upon whose brink I pencil these closing lines.

The Judge Made His Will.

Among the personal papers of Judge Normile was found a last will and testament which the judge had drawn up and signed just previous to taking the poison. He directs that his counsel, Chester H. Krum, be paid $1,000; that provision be made to secure payment of a note for $3,000 held by a local bank, and that his missing stock, of which he had a large quantity, be held for five years before selling.

Judge Normile was born in Ireland in 1844. He came to this country at an early age, and with his parents passed the years previous to his majority in Kansas. He studied law in Georgetown university and later in the law department of the Columbian university at Washington. He was elected circuit attorney of this city in 1872 and was elected judge of the criminal court in 1876. He was re-elected in 1880 for six years. Judge Normile was unmarried and leaves but a moderate fortune.

A Mother's Curse.

Judge James C. Normile was prosecuting attorney in the famous trial of Walter Lennox-Maxwell, alias Brooks, who was convicted and executed for the murder of his friend and benefactor, C. Arthur Preller, at the Southern hotel here on Aug. 3, 1877. Preller was killed and his body placed in a trunk, where it was discovered several days after the murderer had flown. He was arrested at Auckland, New Zealand, and brought back. His father and mother came from England, where Brooks, senior, is a schoolmaster, and made a heroic effort to save him. Failing, they remained till after the execution. Mrs. Brooks was convinced of her son's innocence, and it was said at the time in St. Louis that she cursed the trial judge, the prosecuting attorney, and lastly Governor Morehouse, who refused to interfere.

Judge Van Wagoner failed of a re-election, Governor Morehouse committed suicide in a fit of delirium less than a year ago, and now the prosecutor, Normile, has died by his own hands.

Murdered by Indians.

DEMING, N. M., Aug. 10.—Word has been received here from Hatchita, a town about eighty miles north of here, that Lee Hodgen, a cowboy on the Davenport ranch near that place, was found murdered by renegade Indians from the San Carlos reservation.

CHOLERA CREEPING WESTWARD.

The Deadly Plague Has Now Got as Far as the German Frontier.

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—Cholera has appeared on the western frontier, and a death has been reported from a village near Metz.

The Russo-Hebrew committees for forwarding emigrants from Russia have suspended operations.

Dispatches have been sent to officials on the eastern frontier to exercise redoubled vigilance in examining all persons coming over the border.

Great uneasiness is felt here, as about thirty squalid Russian families are said to have been smuggled into the city within the last three days, despite all precautions.

DILLON FLOATS A FLAG.

He Says It Denotes Victory for the Carnegie Company.

THE MEN TO COMMENCE A BOYCOTT.

They Claim to Have the Backing of the American Federation of Labor and Are Working to Get the Assistance of the Engineers' and Switchmen's Organizations.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 10.—Three workmen stepped out on the roof of the machine shop of the Upper Union mills early in the day and quickly ran a large American flag to the top of a high flag staff, amid the cheers of hundreds of nonunion workmen in the mill.

The Amalgamated association men on strike could not understand the meaning of the flag raising. Every member of the association, however, was soon wearing a small flag in the buttonhole of his coat. It seemed as though a tidal wave of patriotism had rolled over Lawrenceville.

Superintendent Dillon, of the Union mills, said: "We raised the flag as an evidence of our victory. Every train of rolls in the Thirty-third street mills are in operation on a single turn, and before the week is over we will have men enough to operate the mill double turn. We have between 600 and 700 men in the mill now. The Amalgamated people admitted that the entire mill was in operation, but claim that good work was turned out. They deny a rumor started to-day that there would be a general break in their ranks tomorrow morning. No attempt has been made to start the Twenty-ninth street mill.

The Carnegie Steel company today gave out the scale it has arranged for the Upper Union mills. The scale is almost the same, item for item, as this years' Amalgamated association scale, which the firm had signed.

There are but few slight changes made. The scale is based on the $5.50 puddling rate, which the other Pittsburg manufacturers say they cannot pay. Each employee has signed an individual contract for eighteen months, so that the scale will expire at the end instead of the middle of the year. It is the plan of the Carnegie company to make the scales expire at the end of the year to be able to know how to figure for a year's contracts. The scale expired June 30, 1893.

An official of the company said: "We are willing to pay a fair price, but will recognize no organization. We shall fix our scales for ourselves without any outside assistance."

To Inaugurate a Boycott.

The advisory board of the Amalgamated association met and again, to-day, considered the attitude to be adopted by the association in the present labor troubles. The board expects to spend the remainder of this week in deliberating over the matter. The point at which the association intends to try and make its most effective fight is at Homestead. They have a scheme in hand which they think will effectively hinder the company's plans. The point under consideration by the board is to endeavor to secure the aid of the Brotherhood of Engineers, the Switchmen's association and other organizations with a view to effectually stop the shipment of all material for Frick and Carnegie works.

If this plan is put into operation, together with the boycott that the American Federation will adopt, the workmen will have a power at least on a par with that which has never been wielded by any labor organization in the country. Hitherto it has been tried, but never successfully, because of a want of co-operation, directly from the different labor organizations.

But as the Homestead fight is considered by the labor leaders as one of the most vital interest to them since labor has been organized it is likely that the plan may meet with success, and that a fight, now in full blaze, may be culminated. Correspondence will at once be opened with President Arthur, of the Brotherhood of Railway Engineers, and the heads of other railway organizations with a view to procuring their aid. The boycott will be established by the American Federation of Labor.

Speaking of the attempt to get the railroad men to refuse to handle or haul the products of the Carnegie company, Mr. James M. Dailey, of the Steel Rolling Mill company, said: "They cannot do it. The law would prohibit such a move, and the parties concerned would be liable to arrest for conspiracy. The railroads are common carriers and cannot refuse to handle the goods."

SIR KNIGHTS IN LINE.

Thirty-five Thousand of Them Make a Magnificent Parade.

DENVER, Aug. 10.—Parade day was the biggest day of the great triennial Knights Templars' conclave. Everybody expected it would be and no one was disappointed. The parade was a magnificent affair. Several of the commanderies were mounted, but the larger part of them were on foot. The total number of uniformed knights who took part in the parade exceeded 35,000, while the total number occupied the grand stands and the buildings watching them pass.

The line was enlivened by the music of 200 bands, the very best that could be secured. Some of them added to their music fine exhibitions in drilling, not detaining or hindering the line of march. The most notable work was by the First Regiment band of Cincinnati, accompanying Henselman commandery, and that with Tancred, No. 25, of Moberly, Mo. Their evolutions as they passed the reviewing stand were especially fine and were most enthusiastically applauded.

The commanderies which attracted the most enthusiasm along the line were the Cincinnati and Boston boys. Detroit, No. 1, and California, No. 2, were cheered with genuine enthusiasm for their fine appearance. St. Louis, Kansas City, Topeka, Pennsylvania, Iowa, Nebraska and Ohio were especially well received.

The parade was announced to move at 10 o'clock and did so on the minute. The Cowboy band, in their unique costumes and banners bearing immense specimens of horns, left the Brown hotel at the head of St. John's, of Philadelphia, which acted as escort to Grand Master Gobin and all the members of the grand encampment.

The grand encampment were in carriages, that in which Grand Master Gobin and Deputy Grand Master Beckwith rode being drawn by four gray horses. Then the procession proper came, headed by Custer's fighting band and Colorado commandery, No. 1. Grand Master Gobin reviewed the entire line, the column passing being exactly two hours and thirty minutes.

As the last division passed the carriages were again filled, and the grand commandery was soon called to order in the temple by Grand Master Gobin, who delivered his annual report.

HOME RULE THE ISSUE.

Gladstone Will Not Resign Even If the Lords Should Reject It.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—When cheers greeted Mr. Gladstone when he arose in parliament to speak in the debate on the queen's address. When the applause subsided Mr. Gladstone said that there was just cause of complaint against the government for having kept the house in an utterly barren and monotonous debate. Hitherto the queen's speech had always admitted that the result of a general election was binding and conclusive. Now," added Mr. Gladstone, "we find the decision of the country challenged by the government, and this house has not to discuss it does not know what." (Conservative and Liberal-Unionist cheers.)

Home rule, said Mr. Gladstone, it was pretty well known, was based on the unanimous demand and support of the imperial parliament. Ireland would have full and effective control of her own concerns (cheers). Was it the intention, he thought he presented to the house of lords they would have before them the most important question ever submitted to their house and a question of the deepest interest to themselves. If the lords should reject the bill the government would not be compelled to resign. He would decline to say more on the question. The Irish Parliamentary party would not be silenced by a half hour of the total time consumed in the journey.

GOOD HEALTH

DIET FOR A HOT DAY.

A Wholesome Bill of Fare for Breakfast, Lunch and Dinner.

Dr. Nokes, an English medical man, holds that a man must in some form take muscular exercise, and if he does so the following diet for summer would almost universally apply. The most suitable articles for hot weather are fish, such kinds of meat as fowl and game, green vegetables, salads and fruit. Farinaceous food—that is, starches—should be taken in the very smallest quantity only. Sufficient sugar would be found in the different fruits that the season of the year produces, and therefore should not be supplemented. In the case of a man of ordinary size, doing ordinary physical or mental work, the following would represent an ordinary day's food for hot weather as far as quantity and constituents are concerned:

Breakfast, 8:30 to 9 a.m.—Two cups of tea or coffee, sweetened with saccharine; 1 or 2 teaspoonfuls of cream in each; 1 ounce of dry toast, thinly buttered; 4 ounces of grilled or boiled fish, such as plaice, sole, whiting, haddock, cod or cod roe; or 4 ounces of cold chicken, cold tongue, or grilled steak or chop.

Lunch, 1:30 p.m.—Two or 3 ounces of cold mutton, beef or lamb; 3 or 4 ounces of green vegetables, plainly boiled; plenty of green salad, made with vinegar, but without oil; 4 or 5 ounces of stewed fruit, water, or 2 or 3 glasses of pure dry Moselle or other Rhine wines.

Dinner, 7 to 8.—Julienne or clear vegetable soup; 3 or 4 ounces of fish; 3 or 4 ounces of any red meat, such as chicken, rabbit, game or venison; 6 ounces of any green vegetable, with gravy from the meat only; 4 ounces of stewed fruit or of fresh fruit; a little stale or pulled bread, with a small piece of cheese.

Fruit may, however, be taken at proper times, and although it is much more popular now as a food than it used to be it is, according to Dr. Nokes, only beneficial in moderate quantity. More fluid is of course necessary in hot weather than in cold, and so long as it is a harmless fluid Dr. Nokes questions whether too much can be taken: "Fluid in this way is to the kidneys what fresh air is to the lungs, and the waste of meat not used in the system is carried off by its aid. A meat diet is healthy and life prolonging if supplemented with plenty of fluid to carry off its waste. That fluid should be taken in large quantities in the summer is a wise provision of nature, as the skin carries off a large amount of waste from the system, and therefore its activity should be stimulated in every way, and it is most desirable by frequent baths to keep the pores open. In the summer acidulated drinks are the most grateful to the palate. There can be no doubt that the most refreshing beverage in summer and certainly the most harmless is the properly made cup of tea."

Oatmeal and Oranges.

No sort of food is better for the complexion than oatmeal and oranges. The finest complexions in the world are those of the Italian and Spanish ladies, who live largely on coarse grained food and fruit like the orange or banana. It is said that the fact is becoming appreciated, and that some ladies, to acquire and preserve a good complexion, are living almost entirely on oranges. Half a dozen for breakfast, with a cup of coffee; a dozen for lunch, with a glass of milk and a saucer of oatmeal, and a dozen more for supper, with a crust of bread and a sip of tea, may not be high living in the proper sense of the word, but such a course of diet will bring a complexion of peach and ivory which will drive almost any belle out of her head with envy. —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A New Cure for Poison Oak.

A physician reports in Medical News the cure of a case of poisoning of the hands from Rhus toxicodendron—poison oak—by the free dusting of powder of aristol on the affected parts. The relief afforded was almost magical in its suddenness, though there was already much swelling and burning of the poisoned hands.

ETIQUETTE

A PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

Artistic Arrangement of the Bridal Party and Friends.

At home weddings, where there is a floral canopy or marriage bell, a pretty arrangement is to place this at one end of the room and fasten to it two long white ribbons which are extended to the entrance or near it, where they are each held by an usher or bridesmaid, who sees that the bride's family enter on the left and the groom's at the right of the ribbons. Between the lines the bridal party approach the semblance of an altar, over which the canopy is suspended. The clergyman, groom and best man are first in place, having come in, when possible, from the altar end of the marriage room. When the cannot be planned and the wedding party is large, good form dictates that the clergyman comes first, and then the groom and the best man walk in together while the procession is descending the stairs or approaching from another part of the house. The guests are assembled, the ushers having conducted near relatives to standing places in proper order of kinship.

After the ceremonies the bridal party turn to face the assemblage, the ribbons are removed, and ushers conduct families, two and two, to congratulate bride and groom, and otherwise there is the usual order of proceedings.

A woman is sometimes married in what is called a traveling dress, but the term is usually a misnomer. This attire, as a rule, is a visiting gown, with bonnet or hat and gloves that are in harmony. Of course this toilet is exchanged as soon as possible for a less noticeable and expensive one.

For evening weddings all men wear evening dress, even when brides are in traveling or visiting costume and are bonneted.

Macedoine of Fruits.

Make a syrup by boiling together one pound of sugar and a pint and a half of water; strain it, and flavor it with wine, spirits or liquor. Have ready the fruit, sliced and cut up, and toss it well together in the syrup, standing it on ice or in a cool place till wanted. This is excellent made with all kinds of preserved or fresh fruit.

Accuracy.

"I am glad to become acquainted with you, Mrs. Montooth," said the lady, somewhat embarrassed, to the neighbor who had called on her for the first time. "How is Mr. Montooth, and how are the little Misses Montooth?"

MOTHER'S ROOM.

I'm awfully sorry for poor Jack Roe;
He's that boy I'm in with his aunt, you know;
And he says his house is filled with gloom
Because it has got no "mother's room."
I tell you what, it is fine enough
To talk of "mothers" and such fancy stuff,
But the room of rooms that seems best to me,
The room where I'd always rather be,
Is mother's room, where a fellow can rest
And talk of the things his heart loves best.

What if I do get dirt about,
And sometimes startle my aunt with a shout?
It is mother's room, and, if she don't mind,
To the hints of others I'm always blind.
Maybe I lose my things—what then?
In mother's room I find them again.
And I've never denied that I litter the floor
With marbles and tops and many things more.
But I tell you, for boys with a tired head,
It is jolly to rest on mother's bed.

Now poor Jack Roe, when he visits me,
I take him to mother's room, you see,
Because it's the nicest place to go
When a fellow's spirits are getting low.
And mother, she's always kind and sweet,
And there's always a smile poor Jack to greet;
And somehow the sunbeams seem to glow
More brightly in mother's room, I know,
Than anywhere else, and you'll never find gloom
Or any old shadow in mother's room.
—New York World.

Nomenclature of Servants.

"I always call my cook Berks, my maid Mary and my man John. We're constantly changing, and I can't be bothered learning their real names." It might have been suggested that this lady's indolence in learning the names of those who serve her might account somewhat for their frequent change. Not a few mistresses complain at the increasing sensitiveness of servants to the use of their names. If the cook is a married woman she wants the sign of her promotion recognized. "Mrs. White, Mrs. Brown would like to see you," was the message the housemaid brought from cook to mistress the other day.

The mistress remonstrated. "Mary, why do you not say 'Mrs. White, the cook would like to see you?'"

"Oh, ma'am, Mrs. Brown would not like it."

"But I wish it."

Shortly after the girl returned. "Mrs. Brown says, ma'am, she wasn't baptized 'Cook.'"

Mrs. Brown had been in the house five years as cook and was indispensable. Mrs. Brown accordingly she remains.

In the south negro house servants make this demand imperative. The cook is not only Mrs. Brown, but the housemaid is Miss Mary, the right to waive the miss she will admit only to those in authority. The butler calls Miss Mary from the chamber above and the cook addresses her as Miss Mary through the open door, and both speak of her respectfully as Miss Mary to those above them. Confusing and inconvenient in a household as this polite address is apt to be where some daughter of the household also may be Miss Mary, there is no escape from it if one desires to be served.—New York Evening Sun.

A Little Essay on "Notions."

"Nannie has been away visiting," said a mother the other day, "and has come home with notions."

"Nonsense!" cried Nannie, who was present. "Mamma laughs at me because I put parsley around the cold meat at supper and make butter balls."

A heightened color on each face showed there was a little more beneath the remarks than either speaker cared to have appear. It was the old story of the daughter going abroad to discover that other and better ways of doing some things existed than were practiced at home. All mothers will do well to let these Nannies make their little innovations and give fling to the "notions," even when they are more pronounced than garnishing the meat platter and serving the butter in balls. It is the compensation of the busy mother, if she will only see, that the day comes when the young and fresh energy of her daughter arises in her behalf.

A few years ago, in the happy time of homemaking, it was her pride and effort which showed everywhere, but the cares of motherhood, the "bearing, nursing and rearing," of which Lucia Ingelow so tenderly sings, together with the combat of life, have dulled the edge of ambition in small things, and the home misses little details of comfort and attractiveness in consequence.

But here is the buoyant spirit eager to supply all difficiencies of that sort, to give a touch of grace to the plain dignity of the household—it is the wise and fortunate parent who will permit and enjoy the assistance thus within her reach.—Her Point of View in New York Times.

Away with Ugly Mourning.

Why do we still continue to wear mourning? The custom is outworn; it is an anachronism in the Nineteenth century. It is unchristian; it clouds the spiritual significance of the resurrection with the ever present expression of temporal loss. It is cruel; it forces helpless and innocent people into action which entails a privation and unnecessary suffering. It is untruthful; it makes a hollow show of a solemn sentiment. And it is essentially vulgar, for it presses private affairs upon public notice; it thrusts claims of fashion and frivolity upon a time which most greatly moves the heights and depths of being, and it forces its superficial worldliness into the fiercest throes which can ever rend human nature.—Mary E. Blake in North American Review.

Sleeping in Lighted Rooms.

Among the most pernicious habits of foolishly tender mothers is that of keeping a light in the room in which little children are supposed to be trying to go to sleep for the night. It is true that there may be now and then an abnormally timid or nervous child, for whom a light at such a time is a necessity, but the vast majority of infants are readily accustomed to going to sleep in the dark, and the habit once formed need not be broken over, unless illness intervenes to overthrow all rules and routine.—Exchange.

Ovid's Recipe for Wrinkles.

Take equal parts of bean and barley meal and mix with new wine. When the mass is thoroughly hard and dry it should be ground to a fine powder and made into an ointment with melted tallow and honey. A thick layer of this applied to the face every night was warranted to smooth out all wrinkles and make the skin as soft as a baby's.—Exchange.

A Real Pretty Girl.

An Augusta (Ga.) newspaper speaks of "an independent western girl" as "slender, graceful, with eyes lit with azure fire and a shapely head poised on the neck aspiring as the Alexandrian shaft that lifted Pharos to light the sea; commanding as the tower of ivory that looketh toward Damascus."

Banqueting the Children.

The wife of a naval officer returned from Honolulu tells of the pretty fete the queen gave on the occasion of her recent birth day. It was a children's reception, in which the elders took little part, and was participated in by the foreign children of the port. There are about 150 English and American residents, and the children of these families, with those of navy people temporarily in Honolulu, made a considerable array. Invitations were taken about by a comic functionary ten days beforehand, and the little people were required to appear in fancy dress. The rooms of the palace were beautifully decorated with plants and flowers, and the throne room, where the queen received her young guests, was especially beautiful. Here the children were presented by the grand chamberlain, being led up in twos to salute their royal hostess. Afterward a grand banquet was spread solely for the children, with parents and guardians looking on from a respectful distance.—Her Point of View in New York Times.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

The Puzzled Wayfarers.

These little children are going home from the village. They are not very well acquainted with the roads and lanes, and now they have come to a guidepost, which is supposed to tell the direction and distance to the adjacent towns. Our little friends cannot read, and therefore the guidepost is of no assistance to them, but they will probably stand and look at it until some one comes to put them on the proper road.

When they have grown up they will frequently come to crossroads, when they will have to choose between two or more paths. But then they will have the light of experience and knowledge to assist them, and should not have a great deal of difficulty in choosing the right road.

The Charm of Giving.

A prettily dressed little American boy was walking along the streets of Paris one day when, as he tried to cross the crowded boulevard, he was knocked down by the pole of a carriage. In a moment a crowd had collected, but the first upon the spot was a little crossing sweeper, ragged and dirty, who had seen the danger and had sprung to help the child, almost before the pole touched him. Tenderly and carefully the street boy raised the rich man's son in his arms, carried him through the crowd and into a drug store near by. It was found that the boy was but as much hurt as might have been expected, and soon the crowd dispersed. The drug-gist bound up the boy's wounds, the little crossing sweeper standing by in sympathy, and when the work was done he ran out, paid his fare and told the conductor where to stop. As the omnibus rolled away and the crossing sweeper turned back to his work, a gentleman who had been looking on spoke to him, offering him six cents.

"Here, my boy," said he, "you can't afford to pay that rich child's fare. Let me give it back to you."

The crossing sweeper put his hand behind him.

"Oh, no," said he, "for there wouldn't be any charm."

He meant the charm of having done the kindness would all be lost to him if he took him nothing, and he was quite right. The poor little crossing sweeper understood the true secret of happiness in giving or in doing good.—Home Magazine.

He Plays the Classic.

"If I give you a penny will you play me The Blue Bells of Scotland?"

"O'Gran, sah, I've got no notion o' hart. D'yer take me for a hortermatick musical box?"

He Couldn't Say Breakfast.

Mrs. Laura Richards, one of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe's daughters, in some reminiscences of her childhood, tells the following of her brother Harry: When about four years old he had the habit of summoning his father to breakfast, and not being able to say the word, would announce, "Brescott is ready!" This excited mirth among the other children, which he never could understand. "There seems to be awfully few people seven years old nowadays."—Hartford Post.

A New Animal.

A young hack writer was employed to write up a prospectus for a circus.

"Say," he said, turning to the manager, "I've about exhausted my vocabulary on this thing. Have you a kangaroo?"

"No," said the circus man, "we've only got a hippopotamus."—Harper's Monthly

My Wife.

When I married my wife she had studied stenography,
Got that down solid, then took up photography,
Mastered the science and started geography—
All in the course of a year.
She presently took up a course of theology,
Followed that up with a touch of mythology,
Got a degree in the line of sociology—
Still her great mind remained clear.

So she took in a course on the theory of writing,
Some lessons and points on the subject of fighting,
A long course on housebuilding, heating and lighting,
For over her classmates she'd soar.
So she entered the subject of steam navigation,
Took also instruction in church education,
And mastered the study of impersonation—
And still she was longing for more.

Next she tackled the latest great fad, electricity,
Drove reform institutes taught her simplicity,
Sought the best way to encourage felicity—
Oh, she's as bright as a book!
She at last ended up with a course of phonetics,
Gave a little attention and time to athletics,
The rest of her leisure she gave to magnetics.
And now she is learning to cook!

—Robert Gaylor, the eccentric Irish comedian, will, with his company, play Sport McAllister at Music Hall this evening.

—The play of the lightning on the clouds just before the breaking of the storm last evening, was indescribably beautiful.

—The waiters of the Netherwood and Albion hotels will give a grand concert, cake-walk and ball this evening at the Crescent rink.

—Several stages of young people from over the mountain went to Papiac yesterday morning, returning about nine o'clock in the evening.

—A hot day fact: The right side of the body perspires more than the left, and the palm of the hand four times more than the skin of the chest.

—Messrs. Smalley Bros., have bought Mr. R. F. M. Chase's stone crusher which stood on Johnston's Drive and have added it to their already extensive plant.

—Camp meeting at Mount Tabor commences on the 17th instant, and will continue until the 27th. Twenty-five new cottages are erected on the grouds.

—Messrs. Neuman Bros. touched a sympathetic chord in the breast of the hot and thirsty mortal when they advertised the timely subject "Iced Tea." Read their ad'y.

—The second re-union of the Thirtieth N. J. V. will take place at Reform Hall, on Thursday, Sept. 1, at 10 a. m. All the members of the regiment are requested accept this as a final notice.

—Werner is having a clearing out sale of summer clothing, elsewhere advertised, in which one is sure to get bargains. The house is one of well-known reliability, and sure to please reasonable people.

—An Italian working on East Front street, in the employ of the Water Company, was overcome by the heat on Tuesday afternoon, and carried him on the grass in the shade of a tree and bathed his face with cold water.

—A detachment of Companies C and E of Elizabeth and Co. B. of Somerville, about twenty men in all, headed by a couple of drummers and in command of Lieut. C. H. Dartter, went to Sea Girt yesterday morning, via the Central Railroad, for rifle practice.

—A Trenton gentleman gives the following wrinkle—how to get ice cold water without the use of ice. Wrap a porous jug—one of those earthenware things—in flannel—wet flannel—put it all around, leaving no place exposed to the air, and then fill with water in an open window exposed to all the air there is. Keep the flannel wet; each hour the water of that jug will be almost as cool as if it had been iced.

—Mr. Thomas R. Sinclair, captured, a few days ago, a pair of young bald eagles, before they were two weeks old, from a nest in a tree in the woods on his property near Milford. One of the birds is now in the possession of Peter Hartsell at Milford. It is as large as a hen hawk, with pin feathers just beginning to show themselves. The old birds have been seen by Mr. Sinclair on the premises, but they are so wild that it is impossible to get within gun-shot of them.

THE CRESCENTS LOSE THIS TIME.

The Crescent League base ball team of this city was defeated in its game with the New Jersey Athletic Club team at Bergen Point yesterday afternoon by a score of 2 to 1.

It was an exceptionally good game throughout, but the elusive curves of Westervelt were too much for the Crescents. Only four hits out of three errors were made by each team. The following is the score:

A CHOLERA SCARE.

Twenty Deaths in a Village near New Brunswick.

There has been an epidemic of cholera morbus at Gelmetta Village, near New Brunswick. In the past three weeks there have been twenty deaths. It is feared there will be an outbreak of Russian cholera.

A Valuable Decision.

The decision of Chancellor McGill in the famous Job Male will case has been issued in pamphlet form, and the lawyers have already exhausted the first edition. They agree that it is, without doubt, one of the best and most valuable legal decisions that has been handed down by a judge in many years.

—The rather novel sight of trolley cars caused considerable commotion in the horse world this morning. Several excitable steeds tried walking on their hind legs, while others endeavored to occupy the sidewalks. The drivers of the fire-engine horses ran them up and down alongside the cars to accustom them to them.

IN FULL BLAST AT LAST.

THE TROLLEY CARS WENT OVER THE ROUTE LAST EVENING.

The Officials and Citizens on the Trial Trip—Although Careful Preparation was Made Still there was a Hitch—All the Cars Blocked for Fifteen Minutes.

THE unusual sight of trolley cars doing business, stopping at corners for passengers; the conductors going through the cars collecting fares, to-day is the source of continued interest.

About fifteen minutes before six last evening a large crowd was seen gathering all along West Front street. They lined the curbstone, stood in doorways and crowded the windows. There was much suppressed excitement, and all this hub-bub was caused by the announcement that the four new electric street cars would make a trial trip at six o'clock, going the full length of the line, and return.

The route is about two and a half miles in length, and runs along West Front street to Grant avenue, thence to Fifth street, and along Fifth street to Monroe avenue where it makes the last turn and ends at Seventh street.

The cars, which are very handsomely finished inside and out, made their appearance at ten minutes after six o'clock, and members of the Plainfield and North Plainfield Common Councils, prominent citizens and local newspaper representatives, who had been invited by General Superintendent J. H. Passmore to attend the trial trip, filed in and made themselves comfortable. When the cars had all been filled, they started off in their numerical order, 1, 2, 3, 4. The passengers all had a broad smile, frequently bordering on a laugh, which kept spreading as they noticed the invious looks on the faces of the bystanders, and all remarked that "the thing ran fine." So it did until the first car reached Grant avenue and Fifth street, when the current suddenly ceased working, for some unknown reason, and the cars were brought to a standstill. The second car was under the Grant avenue railroad bridge and the other two were still on Front street.

Mayor Gilbert, who was on one of the cars, became disgusted at the delay, so it was reported, and started home in a cab. After waiting about fifteen minutes the "juice" again accelerated the heavy copper wire overhead, and the cars proceeded to Monroe avenue and Seventh street where the temporary line ends.

The cars ran smoothly the entire distance without further mishap, although several horses were some what frightened and kept on a gallop.

The trip enabled a majority of the gentlemen who have not recently been about the city to see how much Plainfield had been growing, and many were surprised at the progress.

The regular trips of the cars commenced this morning at 6.15 o'clock and they will continue running every seven minutes until 10.30 in the evening.

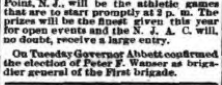
Councilman Vincent W. Frazee said that he thought the railway would help the Front street merchants by bringing people from the outskirts of the city down town to do their trading. But all the trade got in this way would not be worth the loss of a single life, from the dangerous trolley which is being everywhere condemned. Milford, Mass., was reported a little town of about two evenings ago to have had the storage system in successful operation for over a year. They send gas, and as soon as Plainfield ought to have, to take every precaution against endangering people's lives. The safety of the people should be considered. The trolley is not a safe means of travel.

The total catch of shad by New Jersey fishermen in the Delaware river this season aggregated 49,000 as against 154,000 last year.

The great Middle States Regatta takes place on the Passaic on Saturday of this week. Preparations for the most successful meet ever held by the association have been made and weather permitting, the Elizabeth, Passaic and Orange Crews from the Arthur Kull Boat Club will contest in several of the events.

One of the principal features of the Labor Day carnival that is to be held Monday, Sept. 5, by the New Jersey Athletic Club, at its grounds at Bergen Point, N. J., will be the athletic games that are to start promptly at 2 p. m. The prizes will be the finest given this year in open events and the N. J. A. C. will, no doubt, receive a large entry.

On Tuesday Governor Abbett confirmed the election of Peter F. Wansee as brigadier general of the First brigade.



TITSWORTH—At New Market, August 10th, Abel S. Titsworth, aged 52 years.

Relatives and friends are respectfully invited to attend the funeral services at his late residence on Saturday, August 13th, at three o'clock. 11-3

SHOOTING CHOLERA VICTIMS.

Wretches in Constantinople Break for Liberty.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 11th. (Special.)—The cholera is raging in Asia Minor, having been brought there by travellers from Persia. At Trebizond, not less than 1,500 persons are confined in the lazaretto, a rude inclosure outside the walls of the town. Many are restless under detention, and yesterday made an effort to break through the cordon established around the lazaretto and to gain their freedom. The Turkish troops were summoned to prevent the escape.

A large force of military hurried to the scene, and the mob was ordered to disperse and return to the lazaretto. The mob refused, whereupon the troops were directed to fire. The soldiers sent a volley straight into the struggling mass, who were filling the air with cries and shouts of defiance.

A number of persons fell, killed and wounded. This terrified the rioters, and the survivors returned, without farther demonstration, to the lazaretto.

The number of killed was eight and of wounded thirty-four. The populace of Trebizond are greatly excited, and they strongly resent the steps taken by the authorities to prevent, by sanitary precautions, the spread of the disease.

HOT WAVE ENDED.

A Two Days Cold Wave to be Here To-night.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11th. (Special.)—Weather Forecaster Dunn, from his office on top of the Equitable Building announces that a cold wave will be here this evening and continue with us for two days. It may then be hot again.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Mr. Reese Again After Mayor Saunders and His Little Speech.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—In my last letter, discussing Mayor Saunders' speech of Aug. 2d, I showed that while the gentleman preferred to New South Wales as a "radical, absolute free trade country," it is, in reality, a country with a pronounced protective tariff. In order that, in further discussion, we may proceed understandingly, I will quote again from the Press, the report of that portion of Mr. Saunders' speech under consideration. It is as follows:

Mr. Saunders produced further proof of his tariff-reform arguments in the statement of Mr. Hutchinson of Australia, made personally to him. Mr. Hutchinson is the elected head of the municipal association of Australia, to represent that great country at the Columbian exposition. He is an ex-mayor in New south Wales, and one of the most prominent men of that section. New South Wales, he says, is a radical, absolute Free Trade country. The other provinces have adopted the "protective" policy. Yet it is a matter of fact that in Free Trade New South Wales wages are from 15 to 30 per cent. higher than in any of the protected colonies, while the price of all such commodities such as food, clothing, boots, shoes, and general supplies, is lower. This fact the mayor considered a most telling argument. The testimony was unimpeachable, and the experience of New South Wales should be safely taken as a criterion for any other country.

The speaker's second statement, it will be observed, is that wages in New South Wales "are 15 to 20 per cent. higher than in any of the protected colonies." Since the colony had, prior to the act of 1801, a tariff designed for revenue purposes only, this statement, by being made to refer to this previous period, and then being authenticated, might be bolstered into an argument for a tariff other than protective. But neither of these things has been done by Mr. Saunders. Supposing, however, for the sake of argument, that his statement refers to the tariff-for-revenue-only period, there still remains the question of its authenticity. I have no reliable data on the rate of wages paid to New South Wales, and therefore make no statement on that point. Unless Mr. Saunders can produce such data in confirmation of his statement, he cannot expect voters to accept it. I know that the statement is attributed to a real live Australian ex-mayor, but, when dealing in facts and figures, an Australian ex-mayor is as apt to err as a North Plainfield mayor. I give below the experience of the mayor of the great city of Sydney, in 1891, taken from a British publication, "The Colonies and India":

"It seems odd that in a country such as New South Wales a deputation should wait upon the mayor of the capital to ask him to call a public meeting 'to consider the best means of alleviating the present misery and suffering existing among the families of the unemployed in the colony through the coal strike," as was recently the case. Yet such a deputation did call upon Mr. Burdekin, the mayor of Sydney."

The men referred to in the above extract as "unemployed through the continual depression in trade," are the men who, when paid in specie were able to get employment at a rate of wages 15 to 20 per cent. higher than is paid in protected countries.

But, moreover, if the laboring man was so exceptionally well paid in New South Wales, under a tariff for revenue only, why were labor troubles so numerous, and the friendly relations of capital and labor so much strained? Strikes were frequent, notably the shearers' strike of 1890, culminating in a general strike, and the shearers' strike of 1890-'91. "Labor thought it was unfairly treated," says the United States Commercial Agency at Newcastle. And did not the government adopt a protective tariff for the purpose, as Treasurer Lee admitted in his address before the Parliament, of raising wages in the colony? He (Treasurer Lee) said:

"It (the government) has shaped its protective policy so that it will have the effect of extending agriculture and manufactures and give employment to the people at a better rate of pay." Is this what we expect to hear from a country where "wages are 15 to 20 per cent. higher than in any of the protected colonies"?

Indeed, it must appear to the unprejudiced seeker after truth that Mr. Saunders' second statement is as much entitled to belief as his first, about New South Wales' being "a radical, absolute free trade country."

I shall have more to say in reference to this most remarkable speech in another letter.—Signed, W. Reese. Westfield, N. J., Aug. 11, 1892.

[It will no doubt amuse our readers over the way the borough Free Trade champion has got himself cornered. Evidently one would suppose that people here would know very little about such a far-off country as New South Wales, and that a stump speaker happening to blunder in his statements about its condition would be safe from discovery because his hearers would know no better than to accept his statements as facts. However, this may be a lesson to orators hereabouts who may hereafter be reckless in their statements.—ED.]

Judge Depue Hears Motions—Other Matters.

Judge Depue sat in the Union county court house, Elizabeth, yesterday morning, and heard motions in the following cases:

Motion to set aside the verdict in the case of Mary Ann Hall against the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey. Mrs. Hall was injured in the Elizabeth railroad accident of July 4, 1888, and brought suit for damages. The case was tried in the Union county court in May, 1891, and a verdict rendered in favor of the plaintiff for $5,000. The motion was argued by Mr. Lindabury for the plaintiff and Mr. Pitney for the defendant. Judge Depue reserved decision.

The first entry on the records where the amount is stated in dollars and cents is for April, 1799, and all amounts thereafter are expressed in the American terms. It is evident from these records that the water question, which is now agitating the minds of the people, was not new in 1800 John Williams was paid $1 for pumping water. Why the town required John to pump the water is not shown. Perhaps the Worthington pump at the water works was out of repair and the authorities had a dollar's worth pumping while they were having it fixed. It would be surprising if a petty blower system of water pipes should be discovered beneath the streets of Westfield—Ed.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The contemporaries of Christopher Columbus thought he was suffering from a case of delusion when he sailed westward in August, 1492.

This might fairly be called the ice age. Ice has now become a necessity of the summer time, and has its winter values as well. Think how it clinks and laughs and sparkles with good fellowship—well, say in a glass of lemonade.

Doctors agree and disagree as to what we ought to eat or drink and how to dress, but at all times we may reform. We read, write and now comes the cheerful intelligence that we spell on a new plan, and wise men say that any peculiarity of spelling is allowable so long as it is rational. Professor F. J. Child, of Harvard, says: "One of the most useful things just now is to break down the respect which a great foolish public has for the established spelling. Some have a religious awe and some have an earthborn passion for it. At present I don't much care how anybody spells. Any particular, individual spelling is likely to be more rational than the ordinary." As Professor Child is the foremost American authority on the English language, his opinion is most interesting. Mr. Lounsbury, the English professor at Yale, says that "no fetichism among savage tribes is so senseless as our respect for the present orthography of the English tongue."

Fifty Thousand Schools in Line.

A letter was recently sent out from Boston to the 7,000 city, county and village school superintendents in the United States. In this letter the superintendents were asked to present the plan for the celebration of Columbus Day on Oct. 21 to the teachers and pupils under their jurisdiction and report the number of schools in which the pupils signified their intention of assuming the leadership of the local celebrations.

Through these superintendents 50,000 public schools have already announced their determination to participate in this first great American public school festival.

From many remote sections and sparsely settled communities no reports have yet been received. There is, however, no reason to doubt that our more than 240,000 public schools will be very largely represented in the local observances on Columbus Day.

There will, of course, be some schools lacking energy and enterprise which will permit themselves to have no part in this memorable event. The percentage, however, will not be large. We hope that no school in this county will be included in this latter class.

A Word for Drivers.

As soon as the weather is warm enough in the spring to enable children to play in the open air there are constantly recorded in the newspapers of every city and large town instances of the youngsters being run over, maimed and, in frequent cases, killed outright by passing teams. At once a cry goes up about "the slaughter of the innocents," the unhappy driver of the mischievous team is arrested for reckless driving, taken to a police court and fined and imprisoned, and happy if he escapes a conviction of manslaughter.

While every right minded and humane person feels that really careless drivers should be summarily punished, this matter is not so one sided as it appears in the ordinary local report. The picture as given is that of an innocent, helpless child, harmlessly crossing or playing in the street, and a brutal, heedless teamster, car driver or coachman, utterly careless and cruel, driving relentlessly over the poor innocent before it has time to get out of the way. While there are no doubt some bad and even intemperate drivers, it is just to say that this inexcusable thing does not often happen in cases where children are run over. In many cases it is clearly and distinctly the child's—and primarily its parents'—fault.

In the more crowded streets of every large city, and especially in the tenement districts—the slums, where most of these accidents occur—the small children actually live out of doors—the streets swarm with them from morning till late at night. These children, generally untaught and precocious in mischievous and vicious, soon find that they can annoy carriage and cart drivers by running before the horses.

It is a common thing to see one of the little miscreants lie in wait until a loaded team comes along at a good pace, and then suddenly dart out from the sidewalk and place itself directly in the way of the straining horses, glorying in the trouble and struggle of the driver, who is often compelled to pull his horses almost upright in order to keep them from trampling the triumphant gamin, who impudently glories in the kindness and terror he has caused. An observant person can hardly walk three blocks on the sidewalk of any crowded street without seeing this done more than once.

It is to be hoped that there will some time be a city wise enough to make and enforce an ordinance forbidding children to play in the streets. Let them keep to the sidewalks; they will not be run over there.

PROBING THE MYSTERY.

The Borden Star Chamber Inquest Still Continues.

NO NEW FACTS BROUGHT TO LIGHT.

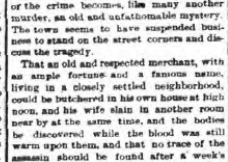
FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 11.—People of Fall River can talk or think of nothing but the murder of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Borden until some one is arrested or tried, or the crime becomes, like many another murder, an old and unfathomable mystery. The town seems to have suspended business and stands on the street corners and discuss the tragedy.

That an old and respected merchant, with as ample fortune and a famous name, living in a closely settled neighborhood, could be butchered in his own house at high noon, and his wife slain in another room near by at the same time, and the bodies be discovered while the blood was still warm upon them, and that no trace of the assassin should be found after a week's search, seems incredible. And yet the Fall River murders one of the great murder mysteries of the epoch.

The Inquest.

State Detective Seaver handed the following bulletin to the press reporters: "The inquest was continued and the witnesses examined were Miss Lizzie Borden, John V. Morse, Miss Emma L. Borden, Dr. S. W. Bowen, Adelaide B. Churchill and Hiram C. Harrington. Nothing developed for publication."

This was all that was given out after examinations lasting four and a half hours. The principal witness was Miss Lizzie Bor-



J. V. MORSE.

den. The change in Miss Borden's appearance after her examination was the chief topic of conversation at the police station. Whatever the police may think of the strength of their clews, it is certain that the opinions of Miss Borden's many friends are entirely of her innocence. This feeling is gaining more adherents every hour.

When Mr. Morse came from his examination he was as calm and collected as he has been since suspicion has been directed toward him. His manner in Mr. Borden's manner was less disturbed than any of the witnesses. Dr. Bowen told a straightforward story, covering the time since he was called to the Borden house, a few days before the murder. He incidentally gave some evidence which startled the authorities. The nature of this would not be given for publication, but it was learned that today another examination of the dead bodies will probably be made at Oak Grove cemetery.

Hiram Harrington could offer very little testimony regarding the circumstances surrounding the murder, as he said he was not in the vicinity when it occurred. Taken altogether in connection with an authoritative statement volunteered the police have presented very insufficient and meager evidence against any member of the family, and the evidence that they have presented is such that it would be dangerous to proceed upon it.

A Doctor's Change of Views.

The Daily News publishes the following: "A physician who figures as prominently in the investigation of the Borden mystery as any one can be stumbled upon a hypothetical case, which would indicate that he has been undergoing a change of sentiment. From the first he made no secret of his personal opinion that Miss Lizzie Borden was probably guilty of murder. This morning he was asked if there had been any development upon the line of the theory, and also, and his opinion concerning it was rendered. Instead of answering directly he cited his hypothetical case as follows:

"Given a strong minded, resolute woman, with nerve enough to have committed these two murders, one after another—if this woman had obtained prussic acid and used it, would she not use it again? Supposing this woman committed the murders, then learned that she was suspected of the crime and that there was evidence contradictory statements of family difference and possibly even stronger evidence against her of which she knew nothing, would she submit to being locked up in a cell? Would she take chances of being arrested and confined in a cell? The doctor's hypothetical case looked as though the prussic acid story was being discredited.

"Miss Lizzie Borden knew that she was suspected and had an idea of what evidence would be used to convict. A part of this evidence was that she had tried to purchase prussic acid, and it was held that she had probably secured some where else and had used it. The inference was that, learning that she was suspected and liable to be convicted, she would have taken it herself rather than take any chances of a trial."

"The physician who cited the hypothetical case was one of the first and strongest supporters of the police theory."

It has been a noticeable fact that while policemen have guarded the house outside no officers have been quartered within.

THE KNIGHTS TEMPLARS.

Many Commanderys in the United States Will Now Use the Same Ritual.

DENVER, Aug. 11.—The grand encampment did a big day's work yesterday. Sir G. C. Connor was the happiest Templar in town when it was completed, for the rituals of the Red Cross and Order of the Temple degrees, as reported from the ritual committee, were unanimously adopted. The same ritual for Knights Templars' work will now be the same in every commandery in the United States.

The election of officers will be the next matter to be disposed of. At this order of business no one but the members of the encampment will be allowed to be present. No nominations are made under Templar laws, so no ticket is in the field. There does not seem to be any doubt but that Hon. Hugh McCurdy, deputy grand master, will be called upon to be Grand Master Gobin's successor.

Several thousand people witnessed the exhibition drill at River front park. It had been decided by Grand Master Gobin that there could be no competitive drill, so only the exhibition was permitted. Two commanderys entered—California, No. 1, and St. Barnard, No. 2, of Chicago.

California knights were mounted on black horses and wore black uniforms with silver trimmings. There were twenty-five men in line and their appearance elicited frequent applause. They were preceded by six trumpeters and the bugler sergeant of the Seventh United States cavalry. The six knights were under command of R. P. Hurlbut, C. G. This commandery drilled first for fifteen minutes. Cavalry tactics, modified to suit formations in sets of three, were used. The formations from circles to column crosses, diamonds and steady marching were well executed and frequently applauded.

The St. Bernard commandery marched into the arena with the George W. Cook Drum corps at their head. They carried twenty-five swords and drilled on foot, Templar tactics. The first movements of the mounted drill were simple formations from column to platoon. The wheels were executed in good alignment and after marching in phalanx a circle was formed. Playing a lively quickstep, the buglers and ladies marched in and formed in shrink inside the circle. The famous yell was then given three times. It is "California, California, California commandery, No. 1, K. T. Hurrah, hurrah, hurrah!"

St. Bernard commandery then marched forward in single rank formation, not a button out of line. The column formation could not be executed. Equal distances between the marching sets were preserved and the platoons wheeled perfectly.

No prizes will be given, but the chamber of commerce will give a handsome banner to each commandery.

FASHIONS

The Latest in Blouses.

Fashion has been delightfully free and easy this season. Ladies have not compelled to wait until the summer time before we could enjoy the loose, easy full comfort of the blouse bodices. We have seen, marked and inwardly digested their various advantages for some few years now, and the knowledge which we have gained is resulting in their very deserving popularity. The "up to date" blouse is quite a different thing from the shapeless garment of other days.

Success in making blouses seems to lie in limiting their fullness very considerably while paying special attention to the shape and effective armor of the sleeves. The beautifully setting blouse shown in the cut never rucks up or sets out under the arms, perhaps because it is clasped by so attractive a waistband. This latter is shaped into a point in the front, seamed down the center, drawn through a deep curved buckle and hooked at the back with a row of rosettes. The sleeves are prettily made in plaid ribbon, and on a bodice of pale yellow silk, one which is crossed with lines of black and yellow, looks especially fascinating. They seem simple to make, but the amateur who attempts them will find that the art of concealing art lies in the depth of their every fold and plait.

The very newest grenadine is the "gadfly," shot like the wings of that insect.

MEN AND BOSSES AGREE

And 40,000 Steel and Iron Artisans Will Resume Work.

THE AMALGAMATED SCALE SIGNED.

Concessions Made on Both Sides—The Result May Help the Homestead Strikers—Another Threatening Letter for Frick—The Carnegie Cooks Stop Work.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 11.—The Pittsburg manufacturers have signed the Amalgamated association scale in a body. This means that 40,000 iron workers will return to work as union men. It saves the association from the wreck which has threatened it ever since the Homestead trouble. There were two conferences between the manufacturers and the men.

At first both masters and men were obstinate. The employers insisted on heavy reductions, and declared they would all start as nonunion mills unless the men agreed at once. On the other hand the men presented the vote of the 300 Amalgamated lodges throughout the country, which vote was decidedly opposed to arbitration. The committee of men also refused to agree to a reduction.

At the second meeting both sides were in a better humor. The employers declared they must start the mills and the men acknowledged that they wanted work. On this basis a compromise was soon effected. Both sides were willing to make concessions and both sides made concessions, though the men seem to have the best of it.

Conceded What the Men Wanted.

The manufacturers conceded what the men greatly desired—that the basis of puddling remain at $5.50 per ton. While the men agreed to a 10 per cent. reduction in all finishing departments. In the bar and guide mills, with the exception of the plate and rolling mills, the men also agreed to twelve cents per ton less than last year. Heating in rolling mills is 10 per cent. lower.

This agreement affects fourteen large mills in the Pittsburg district alone, employing 40,000 men. Many of these mills have put in improved machinery by which, as the men are paid by the output, wages will be over a larger than under the last scale, which was adopted in 1889. The Carnegie mills will be the only important nonunion establishments in the district.

The manufacturers are delighted and the men are no less so. As soon as repairs are made the mills will start up. It is believed that this unexpected signing of the scale will have a bad effect on Mr. Frick's fight with organized labor at Homestead. Hundreds of men are working there because their own mills are shut down. With a general resumption all over the country, however, it is believed these men will seek work elsewhere. The union men, too, may be able to prolong the fight at Homestead by more contributions to the strikers.

More Threatening Letters.

The postoffice authorities here are busying themselves with the source of threatening letters to the officials of the Carnegie company and others connected with the labor troubles. Squire McMasters is the latest victim of a threatening letter. It was mailed posted in New York on Monday, and it informs him that "some time this week a party of men will leave here and try to kill you and Superintendent Frick again." All the attorneys for the prosecution have received similar letters, but say they feel no uneasiness.

The first trouble since the beginning of the strike at the Union mills has occurred. John Reams, a nonunion man, was assaulted and badly beaten by union men. One of the assailants was a striker and the other an outsider. Both were promptly arrested by the police.

Reams was late for work and took a near cut from his home to the mill. He was followed, and when near Thirty-third street and the Allegheny Valley railroad he was overtaken. One man sprung forward and pinned his arms behind his back, while the other dealt the helpless workman a terrific blow just above the left eye.

Disregarding the warning not to call for help, Reams shouted "Murder!" "Police!" "Help!" and he received a blow for every cry.

The appeal of the injured man was heard by the police, and for the first time since the officers have been on duty around the mill they were called into active service. Captain Brophy, followed by Lieutenants Richards and Orth and Patrolman Mercers surrounded the fighters, who were too much surprised to offer any resistance. The prisoners were recognized as Edward Zimmer and Thomas Conners.

The Carnegie Cooks Strike.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Aug. 11.—Seventy-two cooks and waiters came out of the Carnegie Steel works this morning. As they passed down Eighth avenue the deserters were cheered by the strikers, their wives and children. The trouble began when J. A. Stevenson, who entered into a contract with the company several weeks ago to furnish meals for 300 men, became involved in a dispute with another contractor in the same line of business. Superintendent Potter was called upon to act as arbitrator.

He decided against Rayborn, whereupon the latter threw up his contract. The help then sided with Rayborn and stopped work.

Rayborn then led the blacks and whites down into Homestead to the strikers' headquarters, where he paid them, after which they were accompanied to the depot by fully 500 men, women and boys, who looked upon the deserters as real Sesh and blood heroes.

Nearly 100 new men, the greater part of them being machinists and practical steel workers, came to the works yesterday. Superintendent Potter stated that the statement that the work being done by the nonunionists is perfectly satisfactory, and as far as the firm is concerned the strike is a thing of the past.

A nonunion man who has just left the mill said: "I do not think there are over fifteen men now at work for the Carnegie Steel company." He further said that Hall and Lindsay mill men have deserted since last Saturday.

KING'S LIFE IN DANGER.

The Pardoned Murderer May Be Lynched.

HE IS SMUGGLED OUT OF MEMPHIS.

A Mob Boards a Train with the Purpose of Overtaking and Killing Him—Governor Buchanan Denounced and Hanged and Burned in Effigy for His Action.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 11.—Late yesterday afternoon Chief of Police Davis received a letter informing him that Colonel Clay King would be taken from the jail at night and hanged or shot to death by a mob. The letter stated that the preparations were on foot to form such a mob as would be able to storm the jail, no matter what he would do. The police at once communicated the contents of the letter to Sheriff McLendon and he lost no time in making up his mind. The north bound Newport News train was stopped in the rear of the jail and Colonel King, in company with his son Houghton, quickly emerged from the prison and got aboard. They were accompanied by the sheriff. The trio will proceed to Fulton, where they will board a Nashville and Chattanooga train and thence proceed to Nashville. The Fulton train will meet the Louisville train from Memphis at McKinnishkis, and there is no remote possibility that the prisoner can be intercepted there.

It is stated that the Poston party are on a special train endeavoring to overtake the sheriff, and an attempt will be made to kill the prisoner.

Indignant at Buchanan.

Never was there such a storm of indignation aroused in this city as that caused by the action of Governor Buchanan in commuting King's sentence to imprisonment for life. Immediately after the sentence of King by the supreme court his wife began her work in his behalf. Then friends of David Poston, the man whom he had murdered, prepared a petition to the governor praying him to allow the law to take its course. This letter was signed by thousands of the best people of Memphis, the leading lawyers and gentlemen in all the high walks of life.

The federal court refused to interfere and Attorney General Garland was taken into the case, though his efforts and others begin the pleas from beyond Memphis which were so distasteful to the people of this city. Governor Buchanan received letters and petitions from Senators Carlisle and Blackburn, of Kentucky; Congressman Culbertson and the entire Texas congressional delegation. Other petitions were received from Governor Hogg, Governor Francis, ex-Governor Taylor, of this state, and many from persons beyond the state who have played a successful hand in politics.

Hanged in Effigy.

When the news of commutation was first received last night there was not much comment, but when it was learned that the governor's action had in a measure been prompted by this political influence violent expressions of indignation were heard on all sides. Governor Buchanan is being roundly denounced and there are some unfavorable comments on the part taken by Senator Harris.

Grover Cleveland is also mixed up in the business. The widow of ex-Lieutenant King, of Kentucky, one of King's sisters who married her cousin, wrote to Mr. Cleveland in regard to the matter, and Mr. Cleveland in his reply said he had only superficial knowledge of the case, but from what he knew he hoped that the death sentence would not be executed. Mr. Cleveland's letter was at once forwarded to Governor Buchanan, and when Mr. Cleveland's action became known he also was roundly denounced.

Last night a huge crowd gathered at the corner of Main and Madison streets, where King assassinated Poston, and hanged Governor Buchanan in effigy. Speeches were afterward made by prominent citizens, in which Governor Buchanan was fiercely denounced.

After hanging Governor Buchanan in effigy the crowd set the effigy on fire and watched it burn.

Coff, Lewis H, house and lot, east of King by the supreme court his wife began her work in his behalf. Then friends of David Poston, the man whom he had murdered, prepared a petition to the governor praying him to allow the law to take its course. This letter was signed by thousands of the best people of Memphis, the leading lawyers and gentlemen in all the high walks of life.

The federal court refused to interfere and Attorney General Garland was taken into the case, though his efforts and others begin the pleas from beyond Memphis which were so distasteful to the people of this city. Governor Buchanan received letters and petitions from Senators Carlisle and Blackburn, of Kentucky; Congressman Culbertson and the entire Texas congressional delegation. Other petitions were received from Governor Hogg, Governor Francis, ex-Governor Taylor, of this state, and many from persons beyond the state who have played a successful hand in politics.

Hanged in Effigy.

When the news of commutation was first received last night there was not much comment, but when it was learned that the governor's action had in a measure been prompted by this political influence violent expressions of indignation were heard on all sides. Governor Buchanan is being roundly denounced and there are some unfavorable comments on the part taken by Senator Harris.

Grover Cleveland is also mixed up in the business. The widow of ex-Lieutenant King, of Kentucky, one of King's sisters who married her cousin, wrote to Mr. Cleveland in regard to the matter, and Mr. Cleveland in his reply said he had only superficial knowledge of the case, but from what he knew he hoped that the death sentence would not be executed. Mr. Cleveland's letter was at once forwarded to Governor Buchanan, and when Mr. Cleveland's action became known he also was roundly denounced.

Last night a huge crowd gathered at the corner of Main and Madison streets, where King assassinated Poston, and hanged Governor Buchanan in effigy. Speeches were afterward made by prominent citizens, in which Governor Buchanan was fiercely denounced.

After hanging Governor Buchanan in effigy the crowd set the effigy on fire and watched it burn.

The Kaiser as a Godfather.

BERLIN, Aug. 11.—The emperor has consented to be godfather of the seventh son of Mathias Neumann, a weaver in Kettenim; of the eighth son of Thomas Bernary, a workman in Lindenau, and of the tenth son of Peter Tichy, a carpenter in Batibor. He has given each of the baby boys twenty marks.

Vaughan to Be a Cardinal.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—The Paris correspondent of The Daily Chronicle says: "The pope has decided to elevate Archbishop Vaughan, his intention of making another American cardinal having been frustrated by the differences between Archbishop Corrigan and Archbishop Ireland."

Gas the Pleasure from His Pipe.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 11.—Petrillo, the murderer who is in jail here awaiting execution, tried to end his life by nicotine, used as a poison. He obtained the drug from his pipe. No effect followed the dose, however, other than an hour's intense nausea.

Drowned While Bathing.

NEWMARKET, N. H., Aug. 11. — James Quinlan, aged twenty-five years, and Austin Redlands, aged twenty-three years, were drowned while bathing. Their bodies were recovered.

A Boy Weds an Actress.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 11.—Charles J. King, aged sixteen years, the son of a saloon keeper here, was secretly married to Sadie Steele, a variety actress twice his age.

A Lover's Suicide.

CAMDEN, N. J., Aug. 11.—Reuben Gorman, aged eighteen, of Philadelphia, committed suicide presumably because of a love affair with a seventeen-year-old girl.

Two Men Killed.

PRINCETON, N. J., Aug. 11.—William Pippin, a peanut merchant of Trenton, and William Payran were instantly killed by a train near here.

A Big Mackerel Catch.

BOSTON, Aug. 11.—The mackerel catch of the New England fishing fleet to date is 22,000 barrels as against 11,000 last year.

BUFFALO, Aug. 11.—John Kearns fatally stabbed Walter Dorn during a quarrel. Kearns was locked up.

WHEN I WAS LITTLE.

At nightfall, by the firelight's cheer,
My little Margaret sits me near,
And begs me tell of things that were
When I was little, just like her.

Ah! little lips, you touch the spring
Of sweetest sad remembering!
And hearth and heart flash all aglow
With ruddy tints of long ago.

I at my father's fireside sit,
Youngest of all who circle it,
And beg him tell me what did he
When he was little, just like me.

—John D. Long.

WHY WOMEN GET LESS THAN MEN.

They Are Not Worth So Much Because They Are Weaker, a Woman Says.

The reason why most women workers are not paid so much as men workers is because they are not worth so much, says a woman who believes what she says, who believed so ten years ago, whose belief has only deepened with every working year that has passed over her head. Women are not paid so much as men because they do not really earn so much as men. That is a generalized statement. A few women are paid more than some men, because they are doing something that a man can't do so well as a woman. They are paid for the advantage of sex.

Some women get just as much for their work as a man would get, because the work has no advantage or disadvantage of sex either way. Most women are paid less than most men because men have the advantage of their sex in strength—strength of body and of muscles, units of bone power.

Men and women are paid for work, and their work is a matter of body as well as of brains. When people begin to talk about this matter they findst upon treating it as if ability were purely a matter of brains, as if the reason that a woman's work isn't worth so much as a man's in the money market is because she hasn't so much brains as a man. Nonsense! The very fact that women hold their own against men as they do in this competitive period, with less physical strength, proves that they have more brains than men, if it proves anything at all.

Some women, to be sure, are as strong as men. But the mass of women are not. And the law of political economy, which has set the wage mark for men and women, deals with the rule and not with the exception. Take the branches of work in which men and women are engaged, and in the great majority of them a man can do all a woman can do and more. That is true even in cases on which at first glance it seems to have no bearing. Take, for example, the question of teaching. The success of women as teachers is eminent, and yet a man in that profession is always paid more than a woman for what seems like the same work. But a reserve power is in the man that is not in the woman—a something which he may never be called upon to do, but which he could do if it were necessary.

She can teach as well as he; sometimes she teaches better, because she is more likely to have that tact of the soul and that happy inspiration which will rouse the young mind into good learning. But she can't enforce her own authority beyond a certain limit, and a man can. He can thrash an unruly boy into obedience, and she can't. And although that method of controlling a class is extolled, yet it must be confessed that there is an irresistible persuasiveness about it. His advantage is in his muscles, not in his brains.

The same principle applies in other fields of work. A man clerk may not be able to sell more yards of lace or of cloth in a day than a woman clerk, but he can handle bales of cloth and bigger bundles than she can. He can do the heavy work of a porter if necessity requires. He may never do it, but he could do it, and that very potentiality makes him worth more.

In nearly all the kinds of work in which both men and women are engaged the muscle potentiality in physical strength plays a part—in the greater endurance of long hours or greater rush. In these branches into which it does not enter women are paid as much as men. A woman physician gets as much as a man. A woman writer gets as much for her novel, if it be as good. A woman artist gets as much for a picture, if it be worth it.

But in most of the work of the world physical strength does play a great part. Therefore the wages mark of men will always be higher than that of women, and it should be so. Woman's work was not meant to be measured by comparison with men's and by dollar standards alone. Women were not put into the world to compete with men, but to complement them; not to show that they are capable of doing what a man can do, but to show that they can do what a man can't do.—New York Sun.

Bringing a Boy Up by Rule.

A friend of the Rambler has a bright little heir who is learning by experience a simple yet severe logic. For instance, when his father corrected him the other day Master Tommy said between his sobs, "You didn't whip me the last time I waded in the gutter." "That was the first time," said his father. "Well, then, how was I to know that you'd whip me this time then?" asked the little fellow reproachfully.

This made my friend do a little thinking. As the product of this mental labor he recently showed me his son, as busy as a bee, copying from one small brown bound book into another. His was the usual agonizing position adopted by all youngsters when laboriously scribbling. He looked up as I entered the room and a big spot of ink on the end of his stubby little nose gave him an odd expression. "Hello," he said; "say, I'm going to have a constitution—its a jim dandy, and it says when I'm going to get whipped, and when pop's going to give me five cents." In response to my puzzled look the small boy's father explained that he had written out a set of rules for the government of his high spirited, though as yet low statured, son.

The rules were being impressed upon the young hopeful's mind by making him copy them for his own use. "It's a sort of revised family paraphrase of the constitution of the country," said the boy's father. There were articles upon the subjects of tidiness, lessons, politeness, music, play, duties, punishments and rewards. The idea is at least original.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Banana Juice for Bronchitis.

The juice of bananas is recommended as one of the best remedies in chronic bronchitis with insufficient expectoration and marked dyspnœa. A dram eight or ten times a day during the first days is usually prescribed, and later the dose can be diminished.

The syrup is prepared as follows: Cut the fruit in slices and place them in a jar, sprinkle with sugar and cover the jar, which is then enveloped in straw and placed in cold water, and the latter is heated to the boiling point. The jar is then removed, allowed to cool, and the juice is poured into little bottles.—New York Telegram.

FOR PARENTS ONLY.

Who Was the Youngest Boy Ever Caned? Here's a Contest.

I have just returned home from an evening at the play, or rather from visiting my friends, the Robinsons.

Robinson, an amiable man except when his shoelace breaks, sat alone and glum in the study. His teeth were clenched, his face was pale and he stared hard at the fire. He welcomed me with an effort and then forgot me. He is a business man and I am not; so I concluded that stocks or debentures had fallen or risen for whatever it is these things do to plunge those who know what they are in despair. I tiptoed the drawing room and there found the two little girls crying. Mrs. Robinson on the couch, with her face to the wall. This was serious, and seemed to me to mean at least a "corner" in stocks.

It was not stocks, however, my hostess told me from behind a handkerchief, it was Bobby. Had not her husband shown me "the letter?"

Bobby is the heir, aged seven. I softly withdrew from the drawing room and returned to Robinson, who, with trembling arm, handed me "the letter." It was from the master of a school to which Bobby goes by train daily, except during the blindness ing season, when other matters claim his attention. The letter read thus:

DEAR SIR—I regret to have to apprise you of the fact that I had today to cane your son severely. The youngest boy I have ever caned, but his delinquencies have of late been so frequent that no other course was open to me. This communication will doubtless cause you pain, but the punishment will have a beneficial effect not only on him, but on the other boys of his age, whose leader he unfortunately has been. They will no longer make a hero of one whom they have seen publicly chastised. The disgrace of the punishment, indeed, is greater than the punishment itself. That Robert may feel his shame more keenly I have read this letter to him, and he shall be the bearer of it to you.

"And where is Bobby at present?" I asked, when I had read this terrible letter.

"Crying his eyes out in the nursery, no doubt," answered Robinson. "Of course I should have him here, but I can't face him—I can't face him. I don't blame his master, but—My dear friend, think of it! The youngest boy ever caned in the school! The marks won't wear off his hands for a week, and think of his agony of mind every time he thinks of them! Bobby is a sensitive boy, otherwise I should not take it so much to heart. My hands, I assure you, are tingling as if I had been caned myself."

Mrs. Robinson was for the moment not on speaking terms with Robinson, because he seemed to think that Bobby should continue to go to "such a school." If Bobby had misconducted himself, surely the blame lay with a master who did not understand that he was a boy who could best be ruled by kindness. She had never had the least trouble with Bobby. No, he was not in the house. He had ran out immediately after delivering the letter, and she had searched for him everywhere in vain. His pride had been broken. He would climax a day during the first days usually prescribed, and later the dose can be diminished.

"Edgar, love," said the bride as the train moved away with them on their wedding journey, "I want you to make me one solemn promise." "Name it, darling," was the answer delivering the letter, and she had searched for him everywhere in vain. His pride had been broken. He would climax a day during the first days usually prescribed, and later the dose can be diminished.

"But this is something else. I want you to promise that—that" "That I will never marry again if you should die?"

"No, indeed. That you always will be good to dear little Fido."

The bridegroom said something, but it was lost in the rattle of the train and the recording angel forgot to put it down.—Detroit Free Press.

SHE DIDN'T SEE IT.

A Romance of Love, a Mustache and Despair.

CHAPTER I.

George Van Doozendyke and Matilda de Bumblethorpe loved each other fondly and passionately. Had you seen them on the evening on which our story opens you would have thought so.

They were in the palatial parlor of Reginald de Bumblethorpe, Matilda's proud parent.

The lights were low, and in the glimmering gloaming the young people were clasped to each other's hearts with a patent clasp adjusted on the lips, commonly called a kiss.

George was going away for three long months.

CHAPTER II.

A young man is standing before a looking glass, gazing intently at an almost imperceptible excrescence on his upper right hand lip.

"Ha!" he says, "I have succeeded. Victory has crowned my efforts. A porous plaster, applied every night for three months, has produced the desired effect.

"I have a mustache!

"But, I left Matilda de Bumblethorpe she proud maiden refused to become my wife until I should have produced one, and now I have done it. Tomorrow I return to claim her as my bride!"

And he went to bed.

CHAPTER III.

It is the De Bumblethorpe mansion again. We would have made it somewhere else, but scenery is very expensive nowadays and we are forced to limit ourselves. Matilda is seated at the piano thumbing "Annentzer Rooneyata" with "Boggymanne" variations. She is happy because she is expecting her love.

George is coming.

There is a ring at the bell, she rushes to the open door and is clasped in his strong arms and their lips meet in a complex, diamond cement kiss.

The round lasts two minutes and then they break away and go to their corners. Only it is the same corner for both.

"Ha!" remarks George to himself, "she will notice my mustache, my golden silky mustache, in a minute. I long to ask her if it tickles her liplets, but I shall refrain. I will wait until she goes into ecstacies over it."

The moments roll by and still she speaks not of it. She asks him about his trip, makes him vow that he has not flirted with a single, single girl (he is very glad that she says nothing about flirting with widows) and everything is lovely.

But she says nothing about the mustache. Finally George becomes desperate.

"Darling," says he, "do I—have you—ahem! Don't you notice any change in your tootsey wootsey?"

"Why, yes, George," she replied fondly, "I do! Do looks ever so much sweeter. darling—so manly dear!"

No, she says no more.

"Petsy," says he, "don't you remember what you said when I went away—something about your not marrying me when I—ercould have raised a mustache?"

"Why, yes, I do," she replies, and then in the same breath she says, "and oh, deary, why don't you raise one? You might try, anyway, to please 'oor little pet."

He thrusts the maiden from him, rises, brushes the wrinkles from his trousers, slaps on his hat and rushes out in the cold, cold night.

Thus ends a romance.—Boston Globe.

The Enterprising Machine Agent.

The most active and persistent man in the mountain regions of east Kentucky and Tennessee is the sewing machine agent, and he is to be found everywhere. One day I rode up to a house before which a machine wagon was standing and yelled "Hello!" A woman came to the door.

"Good afternoon," I said. "Is this Thornton Jackson's house?"

"No," she snapped. "It's mine."

"Why, I beg pardon, doesn't he?" I suggested affably.

"Yes."

"Are you his wife?"

"Have my husband," she replied.

I laughed and her face softened somewhat.

"Can I see him?" I proceeded.

"Not right now. You can light and wait if you want to. You ought to been here before the other one came."

"Which other one?" I inquired in surprise.

"The other agent."

"I'm no agent," I said emphatically.

"Oh, ain't you? You kinder looked it. You ought to 'a' seen the fun anyhow."

"What was it?"

"Sewin machine agent wanted to sell Thorns a machine. She said in an odd, jerky sort of a way. "Thorns didn't want it. They had words and the agent called Thorns a liar, and Thornt got down his gun."

"What for?" I inquired, as she stopped a moment in doubt.

"What any man 'round here gits his gun down for the calf of the lang," she explained.

"Did she agent skip and leave his wagon out there?" I asked.

"Narry time," she said with a smile.

"What became of him?" I asked, this time really concerned for the safety of the traveler from civilization.

"He's in thar talkin sewin machine to Thorns harder'n a mule kin kick, an I reckon I'll have a machine before he gits Thorn's laig tied up an fixed comfortable."

About twenty minutes afterward the agent came out of the room and asked me to help him carry the machine in the wagon into the house.—Detroit Free Press.

BREVITIES.

—An excursion from Flemington to Ocean Grove passed through this city this morning.

—The Netherwood station is being built on the same plan as the station at Somerville.

—One of the trolley cars jumped the track this afternoon through a slight defect in the switch.

—An automatic clock has been placed in the steeple of the new depot of the New Jersey Central at Elizabeth.

—The first meeting in the Republican wigwam, a rough building just erected at Westfield, will be held Saturday night.

—Yesterday, Justice V. W. Nash levied on the personal property of Mr. Julian Hasbrouck of East Fifth street, for delinquent taxes.

—Railroad people say that excursionists avoid Mondays and Fridays for dates. One is wash-day and the other is just as lucky as any other.

—Dr. H. K. Carroll, of Westervelt avenue, the special agent in charge of the Church statistics of the Federal Census, has just issued the eighth bulletin.

—Only about one mile of pipe remains to be placed in the ground to connect Netherwood and Elizabeth to supply clear water by the Union Water Company.

—While running along West Front street about half-past eight last evening, one of the trolley cars ran into a team of mules belonging to Mr. William Baldwin of North Plainfield.

—The guard gates, flag-men's shanties and other structures along the line of the Central Railroad are being painted a bright yellow, with brown trimmings. The effect is pleasing.

—Paper is now being made fireproof, and is extensively used in the construction of dwellings. It can be made of any color desired, and can be polished and worked like most woods.

—More dogs go mad in cold weather than in hot, as shown by statistics. Canada and all Northern counties show a large amount of cases, while in India and Africa the disease is exceptional.

—William E. Miller, an insurance man of Bridgeton, N. J., recently made an assignment to John S. Mitchell and then disappeared. A warrant has been issued for him on a charge of embezzlement.

—When a gun is fired absolutely in the vertical the ball will fall a few inches South and West from the gun in the northern latitudes, a little to the eastward, and northwest in southern latitudes.

—The regular meeting of the Plainfield Camera Club will be held August 16 at eight p. m. An amendment to the constitution and by-laws relating to the amount and time of payment of dues will be offered.

—Among the trotting horses eligible to start in the races of the Breeders trotting meeting to be held in Somerville on Aug. 17 and 18 are two of J. W. Johnson's horses and one of Quinn & Brower's from this city.

—The evening newspaper proprietors of Elizabeth, N. J., have been requested by the Central Federation of Labor in that city not to publish any papers on Labor Day, to give their employees an opportunity to join the parade.

—The narrow foot-tunnel opened under the tracks of the Central railroad at Westfield is the cause of much complaint. There is no drainage and whenever it rains six or seven inches of water collects there, rendering passage almost impossible.

—William Corcoran was arrested last evening on a charge of disorderly conduct. He had insulted a woman on street and was given a hearing before Judge Codington, who sentenced him to sixty days in the county jail. He was taken to Elizabeth by Chief Grant this morning.

—Three double-screw ferryboats for service in New York Harbor are being built, two for the Central Railroad of New Jersey, at the yard of Harlan & Hollingsworth Company, at Wilmington, Del., and one for the Pennsylvania Railroad. All of these vessels will have two stacks and joiner work on the main deck.

—The Electrical World of this week devotes several columns to a description of an automatic telephone exchange which is intended as a substitute for the telephone girl. It is not a new type of telephone but merely an adjunct to the ordinary Bell transmitter and receiver by which any subscriber can place himself in connection with any other subscriber with whom he wishes to converse merely by the operation of a set of simple keys placed on the telephone box at the subscribers end of the line. It can be used at present only where there are a few hundred subscribers. It is a wonderful invention.

—Katie Emmett, one of the cleverest of young actresses, will open the regular season of the Star Theatre, New York City on Monday, August 22nd, with her new play, Killarney. As the name would denote the play is founded on an Irish theme, the scenes of which are laid in the vicinity of the famous Irish lakes. The play was written for Miss Emmett by Col. Murphy, the author of the Ivy Leaf and other well known Irish plays, and he considers it the best thing he has ever written. Miss Emmett has a role that is particularly adapted to her and in well calculated to display her talents to the best advantage. She has composed a number of very pretty songs for the play which she sings with exquisite taste.

BURGLARY AT SUMMIT.

A Summer Home Robbed of Property Worth About $5,000.

The house of Gustav Amsinck, near Summit, was entered by burglars Tuesday evening, and a large amount of silverware, jewelry and clothing, amounting in value to about $5,000, was secured by the thieves. Mr. Amsinck is a prominent merchant in New York, engaged in the South American trade, and owns a beautiful home overlooking the Orange Valley, about half a mile from Summit station. Mr. Amsinck is a bachelor, and is frequently detained from his home, by business, and his housekeeper, Mrs. Ropke, has entire charge of the place.

The first notification Mrs. Ropke received of the robbery was early yesterday morning, when the butler rushed up to her room and told her the silverware was missing. A thorough investigation revealed the fact that the thieves had entered through the conservatory, and the footprints of two men were imprinted on the walk outside.

That the burglars were professionals was demonstrated by the fact that they tested all the silver and left the plated ware behind them. There is no clew to the identity of the thieves, and as the chief of police is absent on business, the matter will have to rest till his return.

A NEW MANUFACTORY.

Started a Short Time Ago at Westfield.

Mr. Ira Lambert of Short Hills, owner of a large whisky distillery at that place, has purchased and fixed up an old factory at Westfield, formerly used as a bucket dish manufactory and has started it as a grist-mill.

Several men are constantly employed and the factory is in full blast.

PERSONAL.

Mr. James Minniet of this city is at the Tremont House, Asbury Park.

Miss Miriam Baker of Harrisburg is visiting Mrs. H. F. Skiff of Carleton avenue.

Mr. A. C. La Boyteaux of East Sixth street, is at The Vista, Haines Falls, New York.

Mrs. Wm. M. Runyon and son, Albert, are at the Grand Central, Asbury Park, for the month of August.

A stage load of amateur photographers, composed of Messrs. Geo. H. Babcock, Oscar S. Teale, J. Hervey Doane, Mrs. Hyde and Mrs. A. W. Rand and daughter, started from the Plainfield Camera Club at half-past two o'clock yesterday afternoon for an outing. They went through Terrill Road to the "old well in the woods" and from thence to Holly's pond, returning about six o'clock. About fifty exposures were made.

Mr. George W. Terry, commercial reporter for the Commercial Bulletin and Commercial Advertiser, died at his home in Westfield yesterday morning, from spinal meningitis. On the afternoon of July 26 Mr. Terry was entering the Produce Exchange when he was prostrated by the heat. He was picked up and carried into the Exchange and laid on a sofa. He lay on the sofa all night without medical attendance, the watchman taking a look at him occasionally. In the morning he was taken home by one of the porters connected with the Exchange. When he reached home he was delirious. Doctors were called in who pronounced the trouble spinal meningitis. He leaves a widow and two children, a boy eight years old and a girl of seven. The body will be taken to Brooklyn, and the funeral will take place from his father-in-law's residence, 261 Monroe street, on Sunday afternoon.

The E. A. C. Bicycle Handicap Race.

A meeting of the E. A. C. Bicycle Division was held Wednesday evening to make final arrangements for the ten-mile handicap club race, to take place Saturday over the Westfield avenue course. The officials decided on were: Grand marshal, Robert Gentle, E. B. C.; judges, C. C. McBride, E. W.; Wm. Bettger, E. W.; starter, F. C. Gilbert, E. W.; clerk of course, John C. Wetmore; timers, W. A. Keddie, E. B.; J. W. Price, E. A. C.; E. S. Coyne, E. A. C.; umpire at turn, C. V. Dimock. The starters will be Bowman, Bauer, Salmontail, R. S. Lagerson, Brink, Woodward, J. S. Tucker, Victor Meyer, Ames and N. B. White. The handicap limit is ten minutes.

The start will be made at 5.15 o'clock in front of the residence of Mr. Gentle, on Westfield avenue, and the distance will be five miles out and return.

Members of Iron Hall Confident.

The Iron Hall Assoc. of this city held its regular monthly meeting in the rooms in the Odd Fellows Hall on Second street last evening and discussed the reports that have been recently published in the newspapers regarding the unstability of the order. The members generally expressed themselves assured of the organization. Resolutions to that effect were read and adopted. A general meeting of the N. J. branch will be held soon at Coney Island. Supreme Justice Jornerby will address the meeting.

A Tree Stopped Them.

A team of horses belonging to Mr. A. D. Thompson ran away on East Fourth street about 5.30 last evening. The boy who was driving jumped from the rear of the wagon to which they were attached. The team collided with a small tree on Broadway and stopped. No damage was done.

LIGHTNING'S PRANKS.

DURING THE STORM OF YESTERDAY AFTERNOON AND EVENING.

The Residences of Ex-Councilman Slater, Mr. Pfister and Others Struck. Telephones Burned Out, and Other Damage Done Here and Elsewhere.

During the terrific thunder storm of last evening, a flash of lightning, about eight o'clock, struck the residence on Jackson avenue, of ex-Councilman Fred. Slater, who with his wife, was absent summering at Moscow, Pa., at the time.

Mr. Slater's mother and a daughter of Mr. Edward Morse, a neighbor, were seated in the parlor, one on each side of the mantel, the young lady being there to keep the older lady company during the family's absence. Both were greatly alarmed, as well they might be.

The chimney was shattered and the slates were torn from the roof, by the bolt, which appears to have then descended into the parlor, blinding the occupants, and turning the gilded frames and ornaments about the room black.

The mantel itself, strange to say, shows no damage, and, what is more remarkable, the ladies were only slightly shocked, though greatly scared.

A bell had been connected by a string to the house of a neighbor, so that in case of trouble of any kind an alarm could be given.

In this instance, however, the ladies were powerless to give any alarm, because when the storm arose the neighbor thoughtlessly closed the window, so that the sash, coming on the string, made it impossible to pull it and thereby ring the bell.

They were too much frightened to give alarm until the storm had somewhat subsided.

Later in the evening there was a still more terrific flash which seemed to have struck somewhere hereabouts.

Everybody appeared to think it was his neighbor's house that was struck, and many people this morning made inquires to that effect without apparently finding their conjectures verified.

Mr. J. J. Lang of Mt. Bethel says that a dense black storm cloud was noticed in the direction of Somerville about 7.45 last evening passing off toward Morristown, not touching the city. He reports that two large fires were noticed at the same time, one apparently at Somerville and the other in the direction of Morristown.

A house at Mount Pleasant belonging to Mr. Henry Clay Randolph was struck by lightning about 8.45 o'clock last evening. The house is occupied by a German named John Pfister and his wife. The thunderbolt stripped the plaster from the wall within arms' reach of a bed in which the couple were sleeping, giving them quite a shock. They were considerably frightened and passed the remainder of the night with the head of neighbor. Mr. Pfister was still trembling when he came to to town this morning.

The storm kept telephone bells about town tinkling, burning out several, and caused the incandescent electric lights to go out at several points.

ASTRAY IN THE WOODS.

Owen, age 20 years, and two younger sisters, son and daughters of Widow Francy, of Westfield, were in the big woods near the Jerusalem road, when the storm burst upon them last evening, and lost their way. They traversed the woods all night, unable to find their home, which is located in the woods, near the road referred to. They were drenched.

The summer cottage of Dr. J. B. Kinsey, on Tower Hill, near Red Bank, was struck by lightning, during the earlier part of the evening, or late in the afternoon. The roof was splintered and part of the cupola was demolished. No one was injured.

At Newark the lightning struck the building of the Cold Storage Company, now in course of erection at River and Cherry streets, shattering the roof and creating consternation in the district. All the timbers were wrecked and so fearfully was the structure shaken that the streets are closed and traffic is stopped. The weakened walls have been braced.

A number of men about the same time were crossing Centre street from the East Newark pool rooms. One man had reached the Centre street depot. He seemed to be dazed by the flash of lightning, and dashed across the tracks just as the New York train due at Market street at 4.55 was approaching. The locomotive struck him and he was carried about twenty yards. His face was badly cut, his body bruised and several bones were broken. He was taken to St. Michael's Hospital. There was nothing to identify him by. The hospital people found a gold watch and $66 in one of his pockets. He will die.

Poisoned by a Worm.

Charles Courtney, of Westfield, was sitting under a tree in his yard yesterday, when an immense green worm fell from a branch above, glanced from his head and landed on his bare arm.

In flaring there an instant before he killed it, but it must have stung him for his arm later became swollen to twice its usual size and caused him intense pain. He is no better to-day.

—The body of John Powers, formerly of this city, but at the time of his death a resident of Staten Point, arrived here on the 12.38 train. It was taken charge of by Undertaker Ousey and will be interred in the Catholic burying ground.

SHE STOLE $210.

Mrs. Botcher, of Elizabeth, Arrested on a Charge of Grand Larceny.

Mrs. Andrew Botcher, who lives on Pine street, Elizabeth, was arrested yesterday at noon on a charge of grand larceny as she was preparing to go to Newark and was held in $500 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. Being unable to furnish that amount Justice Jacobs committed her to the county jail.

The complaint against the woman was made by Frank Dankofsky, a young Polander who boarded at her house. He had saved up $210 and had given the money to his boarding mistress for safe keeping. On Tuesday he asked her for it, he wanting to invest the money in furniture as he is going to be married to a young woman living in Newark. She informed him that her husband had gone to Newark Monday and she believed he had taken the cash, as the trunk she kept it in was broken open.

The intended bridegroom was dismayed at this and consulted Lawyer Kelly, who advised him to have the woman arrested as being an accomplice in the crime. This step, it turned out, was not taken any too soon, for when the constable armed with the warrant reached Mrs. Botcher's residence he found all her effects being packed upon a furniture van, which was about to transport them to Newark. They were taken to a livery stable for safe keeping and the owner was sent to jail.

The prisoner's husband has acquaintances in Newark and he is supposed to be in hiding there. An effort will be made to secure him, if possible.

Cholera Reports False.

The rumor published in papers throughout the country that cholera had made its appearance in Helmetta, N. J., and the villages Spottswood and Jamesburgh, nearby, happily has no foundation in fact. I visited the three places yesterday, saw all doctors, made various inquiries and found that what was reported to be the genuine Asiatic cholera is simply dysentery in an aggravated form.

Inquiry for the residence of the nearest physician in Helmetta brought this reply:

"You'll find no doctor in this place. A doctor would die of starvation here. There is a little sickness here now, but it is very unusual."

It seems that within the past two weeks a dozen of the residents had died of dysentery; that there is now less than half a dozen on the sick list, and that all these are convalescing. The idea that the sickness was cholera had entered no one's head, and there had been no cases.

The town has about three hundred inhabitants. Nearly all of them are employed in the snuff and tobbaco mills of Mr. George N. Helm. Many of the employes are Poles and Hungarians, but the sickness has not been confined to them. The town is on low ground, but it is well drained. There is a stagnant pond which supplies the water power to the mill, but as this pond has been in existence for years the snuff mill was established, in 1838, and as the place has been uniformly healthy, it is not believed that the prevailing sickness can be charged to this source. There is an abundance of good wells and the water looks light and clear and has always been regarded as exceptionally good.

Drs. Delenbach, of Spottswood; Zant, of Jamesburg, and Disbrow, have been the attending physicians. They all unite in attributing the sickness to the unusual heat and disagree it as pestenger. There have been only two deaths at Spottswood and one at Jamesburgh.

Engineering Notes.

The Excelsior Electric Lighting Company's plant, which lights Harrison and Kearney, N. J., has been purchased by the Nutley Electric Lighting Company. The plants will be consolidated and improved, and the service extended to Belleville, Essex, Nutley and Franklin.

The State Electric Subway Commission has given the Trenton Passenger Railway Company permission to erect poles and wires over its whole system and to make a 3-mile extension. The North Hudson County Railroad Company was also granted permission to erect poles and wires.

The contract for the northern section of the Orange sewers has been awarded to the Delafield Construction Company, of New York. The amount of the contract, according to the engineer's estimates, is a little over $64,000.

At Englewood, N. J., by subscription and contributions of the township $4,000 have been raised for a high-service extension of the Hackensack Water Company's works. A stand-pipe will be required.

—The United Tea & Coffee Growers' Association call attention in their advertisement to Early Rose potatoes, and fine table butter, at special prices.

STATE NEWS

The Odd Fellows of Jersey City propose to erect a hall at a cost of $100,000, for joint occupancy of all the lodges.

Editor Joseph S. Leach of the Cape May Ocean Wave died at his home in Cape May, Monday, aged seventy-six years.

The competition for plans for a city hall in Jersey City resulted in choice of those prepared by Architect L. H. Broome. The building will cost about $250,000 and specifications will be ready for bidders in September.

The stone piers on the east end of the Pennsylvania Railroad bridge to support the arches over the New Brunswick meadows are progressing rapidly. The bridge plans have been changed to meet the suggestions of Henry L. Janeway, a prominent manufacturer, in order that the water way of the river may not be interfered with.

A happy reunion of the Pierson family was held Tuesday at the old homestead on the Columbia road near Morristown. The occasion of the meeting was to celebrate the ninety-second anniversary of Mrs. R. T. Pierson, who is the widow of a soldier of the War of 1812. She was the mother of twenty-four sons, each of whom fought in the Union ranks during the Rebellion.

The Montclair Bicycle Club on Tuesday evening elected these officers: President, C. O. Howard; vice president, A. J. Harding; secretary, J. F. Kramer; treasurer, E. E. Dengler; captain, W. Rutan; first lieutenant, E. E. Mosely; second lieutenant, William H. Gallagher; sergeant, Albert Fentzian; color-bearer, Arthur Eaglish; bugler, William C. Garrabrant; club handicapper, Frank G. Stone; trustees, Frederick Unger, Harry B. Stalls, Philip Young, C. O. Howard, J. A. Harding, J. E. Kramer, E. E. Dengler, W. Rutan and F. G. Stone. The club colors will be dark orange and black.

A Queer Revenge.

The people of religious Ocean Grove have been badly shocked by the appearance in the streets there of a young lady in a decidedly decolette dress. Reporting a low neck and short sleeves the material was of a very gaudy color. Each day for the last week this woman has appeared on the street attired in a dress of similar cut but of different material. The attention of the authorities has been called to the matter, but they are powerless to do anything. The young girl is of a good family, and it is said that her reason for appearing in the street in such a costume is revenge for having been ordered off the beach for wearing an "immodest" bathing suit.

—The case of Ballantine vs. Sharp will come up before Justice Nash for trial on August 16.

HERE is the secret of its unparallelled success.

EDITORIAL NOTES

How We Traveled Fifty Years Ago.

It is interesting to compare the methods of travel at present with those of fifty years ago. At that time stagecoaches, four and six-in-hand, were used throughout all the New England states. There was railroad communication between Lowell and Boston, Boston and Springfield, Boston and New Bedford, also between Hartford and New Haven. There were no railways in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont or Rhode Island. There was a "strap" railway from Albany to Syracuse and a horse railway from Buffalo to Niagara. The cars upon the Albany and Syracuse railroad were divided, like those in England. They were upholstered in sheepskin and were bare and shabby in every way. Each division could seat six persons face to face. The conductor clambered along the outside, as in England. The cars were inferior to the English third class.

The canal was a convenient but slow method of travel. Fancy our business men and fashionable ladies of today taking an outing in this style. The old fashioned way had its advantages. One could see all the pretty country while gliding at full along and have time to study its features instead of flashing by like a comet. There was some inconvenience in dodging the bridges, especially for fat people or those with rheumatic knees. Meals were neatly served on board the packets and sleeping arrangements of a narrow kind were provided, a cotton curtain separating the women and ladies from the men. In one boat this arrangement was not bad, ladies had a safe warden to care for them in emergencies instead of a "gentleman of color," not to speak of enjoying better ventilation than we do now in the Pullman sleeper.

For the next twenty years the lake steamers enjoyed a monopoly of western travel. The boats were very fine, well furnished and with excellent officers. It was in fine weather a very pleasant way of traveling.

During the fifties the rails invaded Wisconsin, Minnesota and other western states, and the passenger trade upon the lakes was virtually abandoned. Since that time an immense growth in railroad travel has been made possible by the electric telegraph. The imagination of fifty years ago had not the faintest suggestion of the miracle which has been wrought since then. What will be achieved in the next half century will be worth living until that time to see.

Sympathy for Ex-Convicts.

For many years sensible and benevolent men and women have been interested in devising and carrying out a system of relief and assistance for discharged convicts. It is well known that no class of men stand in greater need of material as well as spiritual aid than these unhappy beings. This worthy charity, important as it is, has been greatly hindered, however, by a class of sentimentalists, many of whom, are women, who show a morbid sympathy for criminals inconceivable to well balanced minds.

A well educated young widow in the state of Wisconsin became engaged to a man convicted of murder in the first degree. There is no doubt of the man's guilt. He not only murdered his victim, but robbed him after the murder. The engagement was broken by the man, otherwise this young woman would have married the man, who was about to secure a pardon. Another young woman became infatuated with a burglar while he was in jail. A correspondence ensued. As, however, the Romeo could not write, the letters were composed by his cellmate. These letters became so emotional that they were ordered discontinued by the officers.

In both of these instances these women became interested in these men while doing philanthropic work. These cases, however, should not outweigh the hard fact that almost every discharged convict is in danger of becoming a worse rather than better man, owing to the fact that he has paid penalty for a crime. He is virtually an outcast, no one will employ him, he has no home, no money, no character and he must steal or die.

A certain old lady relates that somewhere in the late forties she was traveling from Buffalo to Wisconsin territory upon one of the great lake steamers which conveyed the living tide of emigration from Europe and eastern states to the west. In the saloon of the crowded steamer she observed a man sitting alone, most of the time absorbed in reading. He had light hair, almost "sandy," a fair, rather freckled face and a spare figure. He was carelessly dressed and his trousers did not quite reach the tops of his blue socks. He left the boat at Sheboygan, a little settlement upon Lake Michigan. The man's name was Horace Greeley. It was on this trip two years per week for over five weeks on almost 1,000,000 men, at any rate."

APPROVED BY CARNEGIE.

Lovejoy Says He Is in Accord with the Company's Homestead Policy.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 12.—Within a week the iron mills in this vicinity will have resumed their busy aspect. Preparations to start up were begun today. Painters were hired and started up this morning in full. The eastern iron scale has been signed by fewer firms this year than ever before. This scale holds a good part of the Allegheny mountains and puddling is based on one dollar less than the western scale, and the power of the Amalgamated association has been practically broken in the east.

The conference on the jobbing mills will take place in a few days. The preliminaries for a conference between the manufacturers and Amalgamated association are arranged. It is regarded as certain that the manufacturers will be granted a reduction on jobbing mills.

The acceptance by the Amalgamated association of a 10 per cent. reduction in the finishing departments leaves the Carnegie Steel company in a rather peculiar position.

Secretary Lovejoy said: "We have fixed our scale and will pay it. We will be willing to take back the old employees of the Union mills and pay them at that rate, which is 10 per cent. more than that agreed to by other manufacturers and the Amalgamated association. Of course we would not deal with the Amalgamated association. They broke their agreement with us. We believe that the settlement of the scale will hasten the end of the Homestead strike. The presence of a good many idle mill workers from outside mills has added to the excitement at that place. We receive cable messages from Andrew Carnegie daily. Mr. Carnegie approves the course that has been taken."

FASHIONS

RIVER AND TENNIS DRESS.

A New Boating Costume—Materials for Novel and Striking Dresses.

There are new pastimes so becoming to a woman as that of boating; whether she elect to idly lounge upon cushions, to stand and wield her pole with energy, to rest in the stern of a skiff and steer, to bend backward and forward in rythmic measure with her sculls, to sit upright, or with graceful turn of her wrist prove her worthiness to be allowed to paddle her own canoe, she looks graceful. Costume on the river is limited; it is bounded on the north by a sailor hat, on the south by the navy blue skirt, and individuality is forced to find its outlet chiefly in the cut of the coat and the make of the shirt.

BOATING COSTUME.

There is now a shirt which is a very monarch of its kind. It is made of batiste, tucked in large tucks and embroidered by hand, and in yellow or heliotrope, embroidered with a design. It looks charming worn beneath a corsolet skirt and short Eton jacket. The boating dress depicted in the cut is made in stone gray bengaline, the skirt and corselet in one, and fastening under the arms, so that the placket hole down the center of the back is dispensed with, and the skirt falls in undisturbed plaits to the feet. The coat of this is lined and faced with silk, with three buttons on either side of most admirably setting collar and the sleeves are of a distinguished bearing. This is to be worn with a yellow batiste shirt spotted with black.

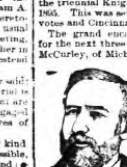
Cream flannels spotted with bright colors, dark serges with red or white spots, a kind of Turkish toweling with line stripes of color and white dots, are among materials fitted for the more novel river and tennis dresses.

SIR KNIGHTS ELECT OFFICERS.

McCurley Chosen Grand Master—Boston the Next Meeting Place.

DENVER, Aug. 12.—Boston will entertain the triennial Knights Templars' conclave in 1895. This was settled when Boston got 16 votes and Cincinnati 78.

The grand encampment elected officers for the next three years. The Hon. Hugh McCurley, of Michigan, was elected grand master. Mr. McCurley was deputy grand master, and according to the customary rule the other highest officers of the grand encampment were moved up. W. L. Thomas, of Danville, Ky., was elected deputy grand master; Reuben S. Lloyd, of San Francisco, grand generalissimo; Andrew H. Stoddard, of Bryan, Tex., grand captain general.



HUGH MCCURLEY.

The organization of the Grand Secretarial Guild of Freemasonry of North America, an association of the Masonic grand secretaries and grand recorders of North America for the purpose of systematizing the secretarial labors of Freemasonry, was made permanent. The guild will meet twice every three years at the triennial convocations of the general grand chapter and the triennial conclaves of the grand encampment. It may hold a meeting at Chicago next year.

FIVE MEN KILLED.

Seven Were Buried Under a Falling Wall. Five Escaped Death.

HARTFORD CITY, Ind., Aug. 12.—A terrible accident occurred at the glass factory here. A crowd of men were engaged in laying the brick wall surrounding the new tank, when without a second's warning the west wall, brick, mortar and earth, caved in, burying seven men.

Albert Inman, William Inman, Foreman Alex Moore, of Hartford City; Charles Sawyer, of Keystone, and John Pummell, from the country, were instantly killed. Cyrus Eppley, the foreman of the work, had an ankle sprained and head hurt. Preston Bradshaw sustained an injury to his foot. The dead men when dug out were horribly crushed.

Cyrus Eppley, the contractor's foreman, is almost deranged, taking the blame of the accident upon himself.

The Gold Increase.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—The "ten days' treasury statement" shows a gratifying increase in the net amount of gold held, the aggregate being $112,150,953, a gain since Aug. 1 of nearly $2,000,000.

A PLOT AGAINST FRICK.

Another Anarchist Said to Be Sworn to Kill Him.

DETECTIVES GUARD THE MANAGER.

The Would Be Assassin Is Alleged to Be the Artist Aaronstamm, with Berkmann Lived—Carnegie's Chairman Receives the News with Composure.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 12.—H. C. Frick's life may be again in danger. Authentic news that an anarchist, pledged to take the life of the chairman of the Carnegie company, is hiding in this city reached here. The miscreant is Aaronstaam, the rabid friend of Assasin Berkmann. The following dispatch received from New York explains the depth of the plot:

"Vice Consul Otto Eberhard, of Austria, discovered evidence that goes to show what a web of anarchistic toils has been thrown around H. C. Frick, and goes far to prove that the plot to kill him was worldwide, instead of being merely the freak of a crank. The vice consul has been for some time closeted with an attaché of the Austrian police bureau.

"The vice consul has learned that an agent of the Vienna police was sent to this country with positive and startling information regarding the deep laid plot to kill H. C. Frick. Landed in New York, this emissary hunted up Otto Eberhard, the vice consul of his country, and told what he knew. The Viennese, whose name is withheld by the police for the present, was armed with letters of recommendation from Chief Paitz, of the Austrian police. These letters, which were addressed to Herr Eberhard, New York, contained the strongest possible indorsement of the Austrian from the heads of the police department of that country, and stated that any information he might impart was accurate and reliable.

The Anarchist in Pittsburg.

"The plot unfolded to the vice consul by the Austrian had its inception in the old country, while its ramifications extended from New York to Chicago. The Austrian produced proofs that Aaronstamm, the friend of Berkmann, had been assigned to do the killing.

"By the aid of police headquarters in New York the consul learned that Aaronstamm had started for Pittsburg, being accompanied to the train by Berkmann. He has been in Pittsburg the past two days. An accurate description of him was sent to the authorities here. The police here have been warned that Aaronstamm is a desperate man and should be arrested on sight.

"H. C. Frick was informed of the second intended attempt upon his life. He serenely smiled and said he intended to stick to his work; that he was doing his duty and merely following out the instructions of his company. If any further ill befell him he would not hold the workingmen responsible, but mistaken revolutionists from a foreign country. Detectives McGuire, Bolton and Benedict, chief of police John Fetterton men, watched Mr. Frick in his office.

That Aaronstamm is here the police have no doubt, as he has tried to see communication with Berkmann by means of a third party. Berkmann is still in jail and refuses to talk, except to say that H. C. Frick is in danger. Every suspected anarchist in the city is under police surveillance and Aaronstamm may be arrested at any time.

A GIGANTIC BOYCOTT.

The American Federation of Labor to Help the Homestead Strikers.

HOMESTEAD, Aug. 12.—The quarterly meeting of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor is in session here with the full board—Samuel Gompers, president of the federation and representative of the Cigar Makers' union; Chris Evans of the United Mine Workers; John B. Lennon, of the Tailors and Cutters' union; P. J. Maguire, general secretary of the Brotherhood of Carpenters, and William A. Carney—present. The council has heretofore met in New York. While the usual business will be transacted at the meeting, the object of calling the council together in this place is to consider the Homestead strike.

In discussing the subject Mr. Carney said: "A gigantic boycott on Carnegie materials is to be considered, and interested in that are 80,000 carpenters, 100,000 persons engaged in bridge building and the operatives of shipyards where armor plate is used.

"We are willing to bring about any kind of honorable settlement if it is possible, but if Messrs. Lovejoy and Frick and associates are determined on manifesting nothing else but an aggressive disposition toward us, there is no alternative left for us—after having recourse to every other honorable method to bring about a fair and honorable adjustment of the difficulty—but to meet them with their own weapons, feeling confident that with the resources behind us we must assuredly will come out victorious."

"What are the resources?" asked the United Press reporter.

Plenty of Money Pledged.

"Now that a satisfactory adjustment of the car trust case has been obtained, we shall have a large source of income to prosecute the Homestead fight, for many thousand Amalgamated men go to work in the near future and every one has intimated his intention of voluntarily subscribing 10 per cent of his wages, irrespective of whether it is $1.50 or $10 per day. In the aggregate this will mean $20,000 every two weeks, and I feel that I am underestimating the amount, for in the first of Pittsburg alone there are 30,000 members, in the third of Mahoning and Ohio valleys 8,000, in the fourth or Chicago and Wisconsin districts 6,000 and in the fifth or St. Louis and Alabama district 3,000 steel and iron workers.

"In addition to this will come the assistance of the American Federation of Labor and the Knights of Labor, which have already demonstrated co-operation, not by resolutions but by checks. The laws of the American Federation provide that two cents per week on all members affiliated can be levied for the period of five weeks for the assistance of any union engaged in a legalized conflict. This assessment is subject to renewal at the discretion of the president of the American Federation of Labor. The two cents per week for five weeks on almost 1,000,000 men, at any rate."

GLADSTONE'S TRIUMPH.

The Tory Government Shorn of Power by the Liberals.

THEY VOTED IN A SOLID PHALANX.

The "No Confidence" Motion Passed in the Commons by a Majority of Forty. An Ovation to the Grand Old Man When the Result Was Announced.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—The house of commons, by a vote of 350 to 310, voted "no confidence" in the Salisbury cabinet, and nothing is now left for it but to resign.

The house was packed when parliament assembled. When Mr. Gladstone entered he was cheered enthusiastically. Joseph Chamberlain was also cheered as he went to his seat, and more or less applause greeted each notable from his partisans. Members were generally good humored, the Conservatives looking reconciled to defeat and the Liberals happy over victory.

When Joseph Chamberlain arose to speak on the question of "no confidence" Alpheus C. Morton, Liberal, of Peterborough, objected to Mr. Chamberlain being allowed to speak, on the ground that he had already spoken the previous evening.

The speaker overruled the objection, whereupon Mr. Chamberlain commented on the tactics employed to prevent him from speaking and said that it was an early sample of the petty and malignant treatment to be meted out to the Liberal-Unionists. Mr. Gladstone was civilly answered.

GLADSTONE.

Irish members were treated in a similar way, but remarks by Unionists were regarded as irrelevant and impudent.

After this outbreak Mr. Chamberlain said that the policy and composition of the incoming government were unknown; foreign troubles were looming up in Italy and Egypt, and if ever a foreign policy were needed that would command the respect of the world it was now. He trusted that Lord Rosebery would be called to the foreign office. The people trusted Lord Rosebery. Why? Because his views were utterly opposed to the views of Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Morley.

Forty Miserable Irishmen.

During his address Mr. Macarthney said that the honorable gentleman from Dublin (Mr. W. Field) wanted to wade in Protestant blood. This statement was received with loud cries of "Oh, oh!" from the Irish benches, and Mr. Macarthney subsequently withdrew and apologized. Mr. S. Woods, Gladstonian for the Ince division of Lancashire; Mr. J. W. Bens, Gladstonian for the St. George's division of Tower Hamlets, and other Gladstonians criticised Mr. Chamberlain.

Admiral Field, Conservative for the Eastbourne division of Sussex, said that the government, by firing at the opposition for three days, would have sunk it had it not been for the cork dust of the Irish lifeboats. It would be the bounden duty of the house of lords, he said, to reject a bill sent to it by a miserable majority of forty Irishmen.

Sir Henry James, Liberal Unionist for the Lanes division of Bury, defended the government in favoring a protracted debate, and cited the four days' debate in the house in 1841. He called upon Mr. Gladstone to confirm the applicability of the precedent, but Mr. Gladstone refused to sanction the comparison, remarking dryly, "The cases are totally dissimilar."

Gladstone's Triumph.

The house showed symptoms of restiveness during Sir Henry James' speech, and when the Right Hon. Henry Chaplain arose to defend the government he was received with cries of "Divide!" and general confusion among the opposition benches. Mr. Chaplain sat down amid renewed calls for a division, laughter from the opposition benches and faint cheers from the ministerialists.

The calls for a division swelled to a chorus and were not stilled until the declaration came that the vote on "no confidence" was at hand. In the division the Parnellites and anti-Parnellites fell in together behind Mr. Gladstone. When the members re-entered the house ironic cheers were given for Mr. Balfour. Mr. Gladstone was almost the last of all to come back. When he appeared on the Treasury bench he waved their hats and cheered. It was then announced that the vote for the amendment was 350; against the amendment, 310; majority for the amendment, 40. The Liberals rose, waving their hats, turned to Mr. Gladstone and cheered for several minutes. The old man stood bowing to the ovation, but otherwise was apparently unmoved.

As the cheering abated Mr. Balfour, amid cries of "cheering," cheering and "booing" and counter cheering, moved the adjournment of the house.

LIZZIE BORDEN IN JAIL.

She Is Charged with Murdering Her Father and Mother.

THE OFFICIALS STILL RETICENT.

They Refuse to Make Public the Evidence on Which the Young Woman Is Now Remains Indifferent, Who Arrested—The Bodies of the Victims Again Examined.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 12.—Lizzie Borden, daughter of the murdered merchant, is under arrest. She was made a prisoner in the inquest room of the Central police station, where she was taken ostensibly as a witness.

Even though the community has been in some measure prepared for this terrible outcome of the pending inquest, Lizzie Borden's arrest caused an immense sensation. She was lodged in jail and access to her was denied everybody, even her sister Emma and her counsel coming under the ban.

When driven through the streets her face was veiled, but when she lifted the veil at the warden's residence her almost masculine countenance betrayed no emotion. It was the same tense, set expression which has been noticeable since the tragedy.

It is believed that her arrest would not have been ventured upon unless some positive evidence had resulted from the continued session of the inquest.

She Took It Coolly.

There were present her sister Emma, seven years older than Lizzie, and her counsel. Marshal Hilliard. Her counsel waived the reading of the warrant. It charges her with the murder of her father and stepmother. She was lying on the lounge when formally accused of the crime. She manifested no surprise. Her face expressed anger, but no fear. After a moment it resumed the expression of stolid reserve that it wore even in the presence of her murdered father. While her sister moaned and wrung her hands in anguish she lay quietly on the couch without a sign to indicate that she was uncomfortable or in danger.

She was given over to the custody of the matron at the station, but she will not have to sleep in a cell. Arrangements are being made to confine her in quarters pleasanter than the ill fitted dungeons of the provincial Fall River lockup.

Her sister, still weeping and trembling, left the inquest room leaning on the arm of Mrs. Brigham, a friend of the family. She needed the supporting arm, for she trembled violently as she walked to the carriage in waiting at the door.

It was evident all day that part of the mystery of the Borden murder was supplied by the police. Marshal Hilliard and his associates are close mouthed. Not one word of official information was given to the public except Marshal Hilliard's brief announcement of Lizzie Borden's arrest. Not even refusal to tell was reported by those who witnessed at the inquest were. The most important of these witnesses, so far as Lizzie Borden's arrest is concerned, was Levi Bence, a drug clerk. It is presumed that he identified her as the purchaser of the prussic acid a few days before the murder.

Bodies Again Examined.

Medical Examiner Dolan, of this city, and Medical Examiner Draper, of Boston, visited the tomb in Oak Grove cemetery and took the body of Mrs. Borden out of its shroud and made a final and critical examination. They discovered a deep and ghastly wound in the dead woman's back. It was in the center and just out of the shoulder blades. It was not known before, and only added horror to the already shocking details of the ferocity of the butchery.

A minute and careful examination of the body was made, and then it was hauled back to the tomb in an ox cart which is used for work around the graveyard. Mr. Borden's body was then taken up, but examination revealed no further evidence as to the manner in which he was slain.

An expert safe opener arrived from Boston and he was sent immediately to the Borden house and began work on the safe door. It has not been opened since the murder, for Mr. Borden alone knew the combination. Possibly the safe contains papers which will be of value at the inquest, and it is surmised that it hides some evidence which will assist in determining the motive for the murder.

The expert worked for two hours at the combination and failed. Then he sent out for a sledge hammer and somewhat, and with a muscular assistant began to pound on the face of iron and steel. For three hours the work went on, and finally, after nearly half a day's work, the door opened and yielded up its contents. The police were on hand to take charge of the contents, and to them alone is the nature of the matter known.

To say that the arrest of Miss Borden is beyond the comprehension of a great many people is not too strong a term. There are thousands in this city who do not now and perhaps never will be made to believe that she was capable of the awful crime.

GROSS EXTRAVAGANCE CHARGED.

An Alleged Sample of Reckless Expenditure by Iron Hall Officials.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 12.—The supreme council of the Order of the Iron Hall began its investigation of the condition of that organization in the council hall here. While the supreme council was in session a dozen attorneys were before Judge Taylor arguing the application for a receiver to be appointed in the pending suit. Mr. Hawkins, representing the plaintiffs, made the opening statement, reiterating the allegations in the complaint and amplifying them.

He said that it would be shown that the supreme officers had conducted the affairs with the utmost extravagance. At Omaha in 1889 the four days' session of the supreme council, which was composed of only forty members, cost the organization $150,000. The council had given a champagne supper at the board of trade and the council of that city and had presented the mayor with an expensive silver service. It had also voted $3,000 to Somerby as a gift. Other similar incidents were related by the attorney.

Judge Howe made the opening speech for the defendant, in which he said: "We are ready to go to trial. This suit was filed while Mr. Somerby was out of the city, and we were compelled to go to Mr. Davis and Mr. Walker for our information, which we believe is not as complete as that given the opposition." He denied all allegations as to any dishonesty, but admitted and sought to explain many points made by the defense.

Money had been "borrowed," he said, from the reserve fund for the general fund, but paid back. The heavy expense account was due to legislative lobbying in fighting the old line insurance companies' efforts to overthrow the order in eastern states three years ago.

In regard to the Mutual bank, of Philadelphia, he said that Somerby had but $8,300 stock in it. He had no power to either put the order's money in it or draw it out. All the stockholders are members of the order. He admitted that there was $500,000 of the order's funds in the bank when the crash of the Spring Garden and Keystone banks came, and when the courts ordered that $170,000 be put into the bank the supreme officers put that much more of the order's funds in it rather than lose what it had. There is now, he said, some $706,000 of the order's funds in the bank.

"There is," said he, "more money there than ought to be, but it does not strike me that it is the proper thing to appoint a receiver to wreck this institution or to draw that money out all at once."

He declared that the point upon which the suit turned was its present solvency, not the possibility of future insolvency, and stated that on Jan. 1 last it had in its benefit fund more than $1,000,000, in its general fund $15,000, in its reserve fund $1,400,000 or total assets of $2,400,000, nearly all cash. Since then its assets have increased until it now has $2,696,274, with an income of $250,000 per month from assessments, which usually run two dollars per month. With its power of assessment it could pay all it will be required to pay for two years if the Philadelphia bank were wiped off the earth.

He closed by declaring that the suit was the result of a conspiracy within the order to drive Somerby out, intimating that the chief conspirators were Supreme Cashier Davis and Supreme Accountant Walker.

Plainfield, N. J., August 2, 1892.

AN ORDINANCE

For the repairing and permanent improvement of East sixth street.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the roadbed of East Sixth street from Franklin place to Richmond street be hereby repaired and strewed with broken stone for a width of eight feet on each side of the centre line of said street and for a depth of six inches at the general expense of the city, to be paid for, after first applying the direct contribution of property owners out of money raised by taxes for the improvement of streets as provided by the act of the Legislature entitled "An act to authorize cities to make permanent improvements in the roadbed of the streets at the general expense." Approved May 18, 1874.

Section 2. That before any work shall be done under this ordinance, the property owners along the line of the proposed improvement shall deposit with the City Treasurer a sum equal to thirty cents per linear foot for the entire distance along East Sixth street covered by this ordinance.

Fees—$6.60.

CORPORATION NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that the Common Council have fixed the 31st day of August, A. D., 1892, at 8 o'clock P. M., and the Common Council Chamber in the city of Plainfield as the time and place for William E. Sayres, Edward C. Mulford and Jeremiah Manning, the commissioners appointed by the common Council, pursuant to an ordinance entitled "An ordinance to widen Peace street," Approved February 1, 1892, to meet. The street proposed to be widened and laid out is Peace street from the Central Railroad of N. J., to the southeasterly side of Front street. The alterations proposed to be made are to widen said Peace street so that the same shall be of the uniform width of thirty feet on each side of the centre line thereof, which centre line is described in said ordinance and shown on map on file in the City Clerk's office entitled "Map showing proposed widening and extension of Peace street from the Central R. R. of N. J. to Green Brook, city of Plainfield, N. J., July 1891."

The lands or real estate intended to be taken for such purposes are all those that come within thirty feet of either side of said centre line between said railroad and the southeasterly side of Front street as shown on said map, and said ordinances, to which reference is hereby made for more detailed description.

AN ORDINANCE

To macadamize West Third street from the southeasterly side of Madison avenue to the northeasterly side of Plainfield avenue.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the owners and occupants of the lands, tenements and real estate fronting on or adjoining West Third street in the city of Plainfield from the southeasterly side of Madison avenue to the northeasterly side of Plainfield avenue be and they are hereby ordered and directed within thirty days from and after the date upon which this ordinance shall take effect, to macadamize said portion of West Third street in front of his, her or their said property with crushed stone for a width of thirty feet, that is to say, for a width of fifteen feet on each side of the centre line of said street and for a depth of nine inches, and the Common Council do hereby appoint Robert A. Meeker, Street Commissioner of said city, as the person to superintend the said work and prescribe the manner in which the same shall be performed.

Section 2. That if any owner or owners shall refuse or neglect to comply with the requirements of this ordinance within the time specified it shall be the duty of the Street Commissioner to cause the same to be done, and the Common Council of the city of Plainfield and they are hereby authorized and directed to advertise for the letting of the work so performed to such work to the end that the Common council may cause the same to be done under and in pursuance of the charter of the city and the general statutes in such case made and provided.

Section 3. That in case any of the said property owners shall fail to comply with the provisions of this ordinance and it shall be necessary to make assessments, the commissioners hereby appointed shall assess the costs and expenses of said macadamizing upon the land and real estate benefited in proportion to the benefits thereby received. And no lot or parcel shall be assessed more than it is benefited and in case the total cost and expense shall exceed the aggregate amount of assessable benefits, then such excess of such cost and expense as equals the aggregate amount of such benefit shall be so assessed and the remainder of such cost and expense shall be borne by the city at large and paid in the manner prescribed by law.

Fees—$6.80.

AN ORDINANCE

To regulate the use of bicycles, tricycles and other noiseless vehicles in the public streets.

Section 1. That no person shall ride upon any bicycle or tricycle, or other wheeled vehicle not propelled by horse power, upon the sidewalk of any of the streets of the city of Plainfield, except when necessary so to do in passing from one street or upon any driveway to the roadbed; nor shall any person ride any such vehicle in or upon any public park or square of said city without a bell or sounding a whistle at a distance of at least fifty feet from and previous to any intersection or corner which any person may be passing, in such manner as to give full and sufficient notice of such approach; nor shall any person ride upon any such vehicle upon any street or upon any driveway between one hour after sunset and one hour before sunrise without carrying and displaying a lighted lantern.

Section 2. That every person who shall violate any of the provisions of this ordinance shall on conviction be liable to a fine not exceeding twenty dollars for each offense.

SEWING AND CARVING

TEACHING BOYS TO PATCH AND GIRLS TO WORK IN WOOD.

A Glance at the Methods Employed in Manual Training Classes—The Boys Prod Their Fingers with Needles and the Girls Draw Blood with Chisels.

Johnny sewing patchwork and Susan whittling kindling!

That is the vision of the future which the critic of manual training beholds with his prophetic eye. For confirmation he points you to the New York College for the Training of Teachers, where young Americans in trousers are pricking their fingers and learning bias from straight, and where the daughters of this new revolution are wading through grey seas to the goal of perfection in wood cutting and carving.

The boys begin their sewing lessons at an early age, one three years old being a member of the youngest class. Occasionally a spirit of rebellion crops out at the suggestion of sewing, as in the case of one little chap who professed a decided objection to an acquaintance with a needle and thimble on the view that he "didn't want to be a tailor." He is not alone in his opposition to the movement; therefore it may be as well to give the point of view of the teacher.

It is all explained under the magic phase, "manual training." It seems that there is not any particular desire to have the boys learn to sew. They do not care to manufacture tailors at the college any more than they want to make a seamstress of every girl who enters. But the children in the first classes are too young to take up such forms of manual training as wood cutting. They would simply slice themselves up like green cucumbers. Still, the little hands must be trained, and sewing is the only available method for young scholars who have completed the kindergarten course.

When there is any show of rebellion on the part of the boys who are to begin, there is one unfailing argument which is advanced. The teacher relates the skill of sailors and trained soldiers in the use of the needle, and, presto! Johnny seizes upon patchwork with an interest which will not be denied.

The other day a number of girls and boys, from six to nine years of age, were having their sewing lesson in one of the sunny rooms at the college. The girls, it must be admitted, were a little more graceful than the boys in their use of the needle, but their brothers were said to be outdone in practical results. They certainly did "screw" a good deal, from their tongues, which they rolled visibly within their cheeks, to their toes, which were painfully held on tiptoe, during the entire five minutes required by a novice to thread a needle.

"Ouch!" suddenly exclaimed a little fellow in the front seat, who, with his leg doubled under him, his fingers clutching a piece of muslin, his forehead knotted and his mouth puckered in harmony with his thread, was a picture of absorbed industry.

His "ouch" meant that he had pricked his fingers—which he promptly put in his mouth—and as the children were growing a little tired the teacher told them to put their work away and gave them a little talk on the materials and instruments used in sewing. Her talk that day was on cotton, some pods of which she had brought as an illustration, and the questions ranged over geography, climate, labor, machinery and a great number of related subjects.

It was a noticeable thing that when the order came to put away the work it was the boys who said:

"Oh, please let us sew some more!"

As they grow older and take up the other forms of manual training the boys want the sewing left out of their curriculum, so that there are few older than twelve who belong to the thread-and-needle classes. But their work is, on the average, quite as good as the girls while they continue it.

Over in the annex the drops of blood which the boys shed in their sewing are atoned for by the cut fingers which generally follow a girl's first introduction to real edged tools. The superintendent, however, said the other day that in cases where the girls enter at the same age that the boys do he can see no perceptible difference in their work. In the first course, which consists of whittling and cutting thin wood into figures, joining and polishing them, the girls do as well as the boys. In the advanced work of wood carving they are often much interested, and do quite as well as the boys, provided they have had the same training. Otherwise they are not so strong and it takes some time to develop their muscles.

At the tables in the workroom stood a number of girls and boys wearing aprons of striped tickling, and cutting, sawing, drawing figures on wood, sandpapering and filling with energy and zeal enough to have convinced an observer of their interest in their work. The whirr of the machinery in the room below jarred the floor slightly, but the trained hand of a girl near the door was perfectly steady as she outlined a pattern of morning glories on a piece of hard maple. Then she picked out a gleaming chisel from the rack of tools in front of her and commenced to dig the wood out in little chips.

"My! but this is hard!" she said, as she paused to rest a moment.

Her neighbor glanced up sympathetically from her piece of work, her chisel slipped and—

"Ouch!" she exclaimed, as she stuck her finger in her mouth.

It was the echo of the little "seamster's" involuntary remark, and it really did seem as if boys who sew and say "ouch" and girls who whittle and say the same thing are pretty much of a piece.

At any rate, the teachers declare that boys and girls trained together do work which has always been considered individual to each separate class so equally well that you cannot tell a boy's stitches from a girl's or a feminine bit of whittling from that of a boy with generations of wiltliers behind him.—New York World.

Long Nursing.

It is exceptional in these days for a woman to properly nourish a child exclusively from the breast for twelve months. It is therefore exceedingly improbable that a breast will be adequate for sixteen months, unless food is given in addition. Of course there may be a rare exception, but in our experience we have never seen a child, as we considered, properly nourished on the breast for so long. The chances of the child would be, in fact, different, be better on good artificial food than on breast milk so old. Even if you change, good milk can be had almost everywhere with care, and with care it can be rendered safe for food. Trouble and anxiety do not count when the safety of a baby is in question. Further, if you really cannot get good milk there are good substitutes in the form of prepared foods, which may be used for longer or shorter periods, as necessary.—Babyhood.

Don't Wound Helpless People.

An out of town visitor, a most charming woman, was so kind as to observe, while we sat around a friend's lunch table, that we children had to have no "mandals" in our village; in fact, that our "society talk" was lacking in piquancy; in short, that we were "dull."

We smilingly accepted her commendation, together with its implications, but one of us started nervously as she added gayly: "Are you sensitive that you have no skeletons in your closets? Not one of you or yours ran off and married her father's coachman?"

The perturbation came by reason of the trim little waitress who stood at the speaker's elbow. She had been quietly absorbing the conversation, and now her cheeks were burning. One would say of the guests have felt had the class in which she belonged been spoken of in that tone. The remark was surely inopportune, to say the least, in the presence of a "coachman's" sister, as was this waitress—the sweetheart, too, of a coachman.

I have more than once been surprised, annoyed by the carelessness of visitors in their conversation before servants—the heedlessness of those who reckon themselves gentlefolk, and who certainly ought to take their obligations more seriously and thoughtfully.

The discussion of the "servant question" is in itself sufficiently tedious as a topic of talk, but it becomes unpardonable when a woman rehearses her domestic grievances in the hearing of a friend's maids. The very fact that the waitress can make no reply puts her in a position which any right minded person should respect.—Philadelphia Press.

Stone Rollingpins.

Among the most valuable of the stoneware utensils are the rollingpins, which seem to come nearer to solving the problem of a rollingpin than any other. A wooden rollingpin is certainly not all that could be desired. It is not cold, it is apt to become rough, and it is always an absorbent of grease, and needs to be repeatedly scrubbed to be kept clean. Paste cannot stick to a roller of stoneware, it is so highly glazed. It is nearly as cold as marble and far better, because it is lighter. The plate glass rollingpins which were introduced by some ingenious inventor some years ago, and which were intended to be filled with cracked ice in order to chill them, proved to be a failure.

As on any glass dish containing ice water, beads of moisture settled on the outside when the rollingpin was filled, and a drop of moisture, as every expert pastry maker knows, is sufficient to injure the best pastry. Yet the inventor builded better than he knew. So cool and smooth was his glass rollingpin that housekeepers speedily adopted it without the ice filling.

Why does not some ingenious inventor give us a rollingboard of enameled wood, something that is cold on the surface and not too expensive for universal use? Or has the art of enameling wood never been brought to perfection, like the art of enameling metal? A marble or slate board is heavy, and a marble pastry table is cumbrous and expensive for family use.—New York Tribune.

Milk for Children.

Milk is gradually being appreciated for its hygienic value, and contains all the elements necessary for the formation of bone and muscle. It is frequently prescribed by physicians as a remedy in various forms of illness. When pure it is of infinite service; when tainted it is positively dangerous. In one instance in a wealthy family, where a baby was slowly wasting away, a well paid milkman provided milk according to the once popular fallacy, "from one cow." A sample was analyzed, and each teaspoonful was found to contain, in round numbers, half a million bacteria. Immediately the cow was laid down that all milk given should be sterilized. Since then the child has become plump and healthy.

If such trouble can arise among the wealthy, how much more probable is its occurrence among the very poor, where sanitary precautions are unheard. The engaged in visiting the poor in cities reveal pitiful cases of poverty, carelessness and ignorance. Baby's milk is left uncovered all day long in the stifling atmosphere of one living room, placed with other food in a sink, which becomes the refrigerator for those who cannot afford ice, and here absorbs germs by the millions.

Condensed milk is, fortunately, a favorite food for infants among the poor. Though not a perfect food, it is sweet and clean, and will remain so if given a little care for a sufficient length of time.—Lippincott's.

The Lorgnette Girl.

What shall be done with this quintessence of graceful impertinence? She is usually not one bit nearsighted. The dainty tortoise shell toy she so deftly and affectively wields is either an instrument of coquetry, defense or cruelty.

Viewed as the former weapon, it is without equal in the entire arsenal of flirtation's weapons. A skilled coquette can do more damage with it than with the fan. As a means of defense against the impertinences of other women it is invaluable. A cold stare, a contemptuous sweep through it will put to rout an army of impudent women.

But as an instrument of cruelty, an instrument to wound, it is the chief excellence. The lorgnette girl can display the most finished insolence with her fragile plaything. She is quite capable of calling the attention of the public to the worn gown or mended gloves of her victim.

A favorite and systematic course of cruelty is to take her station at the door of an omnibus hotel at the hour when the omnibus is arriving from the station with its load of weary, travel stained passengers, and, surveying the line of forms woman as she alights. The lorgnette girl can be fascinating, she can be clever, but she has no equal in the power of brutality which can make a strong man quail.—Once a Week.

All for Good Luck.

If your sweetheart is giving you a ring for good luck, and you are to have the choice, let it be an oval moonstone surrounded with small, clear diamonds. This stone, more than any other, has the reputation of bringing happiness, and even if you do not consider this the ring itself will be found a most effective one, the diamonds bringing out the many colors in the moonstone and the moonstone, returning the compliment by increasing the brilliancy of the diamonds.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Cheap Disinfectant.

A disinfectant that costs very little and is perfectly odorless is made by dissolving a heaped teaspoonful of nitrate of lead in a quart of boiling water, stirring it with a stick until dissolved, adding it to a pailful of cold water. This is odorless and will not stain. It costs about three cents, and if it is thrown once a week down the bathtub, closet and stationary washbowl it will be money well spent.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

THE OX.

A Domestic Animal Every Part of Which Is Valuable.

The ox is a domesticated animal, and is to be found in every part of the world. In former times he was used as a beast of burden. In some countries even now he is used instead of the horse, and in every country in the world his flesh is eaten by man.

Every part of the ox is of value in these days. The flesh is eaten, the skin makes leather for shoes, the fat makes fine soap and candles, the hoofs make glue, the hair is mixed with mortar to make it adhere, the horns make combs and knife-handles, the bones are used instead of ivory and the fragments ground up for manure, and the tail makes the best of soup. Thus every particle is used up.

An Injudicious Friend.

A poor little rabbit, one fine summer day,
Went out for a walk, but he quite lost his way;
He foolishly wandered from out of his track,
And so he could scarcely tell how to get back.

The poor little fellow, as evening drew on,
And all the sweet sunshine had faded and gone,
Felt frightened and sad as a rabbit could be,
Till he heard a voice speaking from out of a tree.

"Pray, what are you doing down there on the grass?
Don't you know that a weasel may probably pass?
Why don't you climb up to the top of this tree
And shelter yourself with my children and me?"

"You say you can't do it? I think you're a man,
Your mother, I fear, has not whipped you enough;
But now that I look more diligently at you,
Such ears as you have never yet met my view!

"But stay! I see clearly the help they will be
In pulling you up to the top of the tree.
Oh! don't say a word and pray put away fear,
I'd be pained if a weasel should find you down here."

So saying, the squirrel by might and by main,
Tugged Bunny's long ears till he squeaked out in pain.

In tugging and squeaking some minutes were passed;
But the kind hearted squirrel grew breathless at last.

"I can't hold you longer, I fear you must drop;
I'll never have strength to hold onto the top.
But why don't you help me, you fat little goose?
Use your claws! Don't you know they were given you for use?"

"A kindness, I'm sure, you intended to do;
But, dear sir, I am not constructed like you!
Oh, don't let me fall!" squeaked poor Bunny Alas!
With a ponderous thump he fell down on the grass.

He got up as quickly again as he could,
And scampered quite smartly along by the wood,
Till, out of a su dden, the dear hole he spied,
And mother just washing her face by its side.

"Oh, mother!" he said, "only look at my ears;
I really have shed quite a pailful of tears.
I met with a squirrel as kind as could be—
He wanted me up to his home in the tree.

"I know that he wanted to save me from foes,
He feared that a weasel my young life might close;
But oh! his sharp claws, can I ever forget!
My ears! I declare they are both tingling yet!"

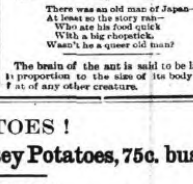
"My son, said his mother, as calm as could be
"A weasel's a bad sight for rabbits to see;
But sometimes, we life has come quite so an end,
We're tempted to say, 'Save me from my friend.'"

The Olive.

The olive in its wild state is a mere thorny shrub, but under cultivation it becomes a tree from twenty to forty feet high. The leaves are not unlike those of a willow—of a dark green color on the upper side and whitish gray underneath. The flowers are small and white; the fruit greenish, never larger than a pigeon's egg, and generally of an oval shape; this fruit being produced in such profusion that an old olive becomes a valuable possession to its owner. The oil obtained from the fruit is much used as an article of food in the countries where it is grown, and to a less extent in other countries to which it is exported.

Olives gathered before they are ripe are pickled, and in this condition are considered useful as a digestive. The wood of the tree takes a beautiful polish, and being finely grained and marked is much used by cabinet makers in the finer parts of their work. The olive is a native of the warmer temperate countries of southern Europe, where it attains to a great age.

A Queer Man of Japan.



There was an old man of Japan—
At least so the story ran—
Who ate his food quick
With a big chopstick.
Wasn't he a queer old man?

The brain of the ant is said to be larger in proportion to the size of its body than that of any other creature.

Not Very Lasting.

The friendship that exists between the different European countries is not very lasting. England and Turkey are friendly at present, but either or both of them may be seeking other allies before a week passes.

These diplomatic notes remind one very much of the note a bachelor who, wanting a wife, wrote to a young lady. He applied for her heart and hand, and wound up as follows:

"Have the goodness to send me a reply as soon as possible, as I have another young person in my eye."—Texas Siftings.

Mr. Riley was born in Bury, England, in 1819, the year of Queen Victoria's birth, and lived in his native place until he came to this country about forty-two years ago. He located in New Jersey, and ever since has been a resident in Union county. Mr. Riley retired from business twenty years ago, having made nearly $60,000 through dealings in real estate.

A Contemptible Form of Swindling.

Some of the workmen on a building recently erected on Netherwood avenue complain that the contractor swindled them out of their pay.

One man who did about eleven days work painting, said when he went to get his money he was told that he should have considered himself lucky if he would not be paid and that there was no law to compel payment.

The workman, in speaking of it said he had no desire to go to lawyer's fees to be had to submit. The owner of the building, it is said, has promised the men that he would see that they were paid.

Photographing Under Water.

It is quite possible to take photographs under water. In 1883 a submarine observatory was constructed by Signor Tonelli, at Naples, enabling visitors to see the bottom of the sea. It was a steel chamber, with plate glass floors and a cylapsing float to sink it to different depths. It carried eight persons and was illuminated inside by electric light, while telephones communicated with the shore. Of course it is quite possible to take photographs inside it beneath the water. Photographing under water has actually been carried out. Experiments were made in 1889 in the Mediterranean to ascertain how far daylight penetrated under water. In very clear water, near Corsica, and eighteen miles from land, the limit of daylight was found by means of photographic plate to be 1,980 feet.—Ex.

Miss Mills and Miss Gillem of North Plainfield are visiting at Plucknamin, N. J.

Miss Carrie Seager of Westfield is visiting Mrs. R. N. Wyckoff of West Front street.

Mr. Harry C. Lawrence of Poughkeepsie is visiting Mr. W. E. Knight of Duer street.

Mr. S. D. Townsend of Scotch Plains has gone to the Adirondacks for two months.

Mr. Charles Howard of Hartford, Conn., is visiting his father, Mr. C. C. Howard, of Carlton avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Conover of Elmwood place are spending several days with friends at Highbridge, N. J.

Mr. Harry Brokaw of Duer street, North Plainfield, returned to-day from a business trip of a week's duration at Boston, Mass.

The Holy Cross choir returned home Friday morning from their annual outing. The choir spent their vacation at Camp Townsend, Merwin's Point, Conn.

The Rev. Mr. A. H. Tuttle, an exceedingly popular divine and a former pastor here, will preach in the Crescent avenue church Sunday, both morning and evening.

Mr. Richard D. Pawsod, died yesterday, aged 45 years, 2 months and 27 days. The funeral services will be held on Monday at two o'clock p. m., from his late residence, No. 223 Grove street.

The Finderne correspondent of the Unionist-Gazette writes that cards are out for the marriage of Miss Bessie Dumont and Mr. Duncan Morgan of Plainfield, to take place August 23.

A regular French picnic party left Plainfield by stage, this morning. An enjoyable time is anticipated at Papiac (Boynton Beach.) Mr. and Mrs. P. M. French chaperoned the party.

Miss Blanche Fellows has been engaged to sing at the Brick Presbyterian church, corner Thirty-seventh street and Fifth avenue, New York City, during the months of August and September.

Mr. Elston French of Somerset street returned home yesterday morning from a very pleasant visit with the family of General Eli Long, at Pen Yan, N. Y. He started from here in company with Mr. George Wood of New York City, who is still enjoying himself in that favorite spot. General Long has a house on Grove street and spends his Winters here. His entire family are very popular.

Concerning the Rev. N. W. Cadwell, who is to occupy the pulpit of the First Presbyterian church, Sunday, the Westfield Leader for June 25, has the following telling of Mr. Cadwell's successful ten years in the ministry: "He spoke to a church that in 1882, scarcely numbered 250, but that now—making the next to the largest church in the Presbytery—is nearly 600 strong. The number of additions had been 476. One year brought 118, and at a single communion 90 were added. For six years past, every communion has brought additions, and although 145 have died (12 of these above 80) the church was never stronger. Its new $6,000 parsonage, and the modernized church and chapel, tell of the prosperity which in an increase of benevolence from $680 to $1,685, is told again. The pastor spoke with pride as he named the busy years. In addition to making some 8,600 pastoral calls, officiating at 45 marriages, and doing editorial, temperance, and mission work, he has been active in town affairs, is president of the County S. S. Association, and among his people is the true shepherd."

Why People Lose Weight in Summer.

To most persons the Summer season is a time of excitement instead of quiet rest, as it should be. With the approach of warm weather most people begin to lay plans for vacations and enjoyments, and in a little while have worked themselves into a state of excited anticipation. Not only this, but they undertake excursions requiring considerable travel, either by land or water, so that during the heated term they have completely departed from the quiet paths of life trodden so steadily all the rest of the year. Now, it is a well-known fact that the majority of people lose weight during the Summer. This loss is generally accounted for by the smaller quantity of food consumed, but the excitement incidental to vacations and travelling is as much responsible for it as the other. It is a question if our Indian Summer, the most charming season of the year, would not make a better vacation period for the majority of people.

A Hint to Property Owners.

This way of swindling is said to be frequently used by disreputable bose-painters.

They make lower bids than reputable firms, figuring on good material, could afford to make, and secure the contracts.

Painters are then hired and told to use the stuff given them and say nothing. The "stuff" in one instance was Paris green and kerosene oil.

The profuse use of kerosene oil makes cheap paint, which, however, has no body and loses lustre and color in a short time.

To Open Sept. 6.

The Plainfield Public schools will open Sept. 6. Professor Henry W. Maxson will be the Superintendent and supervising principal.

HAVE YOU BEEN SWINDLED?

One of the Ways Dishonest Clerks Cheat Both Customers and Employers.

In a talk with one of Plainfield's most progressive merchants recently, a NEWS representative was informed of one of the many ways dishonest clerks rob their employers and customers.

Said he "Here is one instance. While I was out some time ago a lady came in and bought a ham. It should have cost her but $1.18 at the most. She was charged $1.36. The clerk then made an entry in his book "two lbs. ham 36c." and pocketed the proceeds of his double theft.

The matter might have passed without my hearing of it, but that the customer, in speaking with another regular patron of our store, was informed that she had been over-charged. She at once came to the store and indignantly asked me what such a ham was worth? I looked at it and told her she probably paid $1.18 or $1.20. The clerk only acknowledged the overcharge when confronted by overwhelming proof of his dishonesty."

"Another clerk, whom I had trusted, collected bills at houses, overcharging a little here and a little there, so that his thefts amounted to the thousands. I think I made a mistake in not prosecuting him, as an example."

"The only way people can guard against such swindles is to watch the prices that are advertised on special goods, and when buying of clerks see that prices agree, and always get a receipt."

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Tariff Notes.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—The protective tariff, since it causes increased production, lowers prices on both sides of the Atlantic. Prices at home may remain a trifle higher than abroad, and still lower steadily. Domestic competition regulates the manufacturer's profits, and allows no advance over European prices beyond that made necessary by our higher scale of wages.

Meanwhile, all the advantages of trade and manufacture remain on this side of the water. America is kept for the Americans.

The free trade theorist is forced to admit that the abolition of protective duties would lower the wages of the class of mechanics. He seeks, however, to kill the damaging effect of this admission by claiming that as wages are lowered the cost of living will be less in proportion to wages than at present.

To accomplish the supposed reduction in the cost of living, it will be necessary to reduce the price of food products.

But the free trade theorist in talking with the farmer, tells him that free trade will open up to him the markets of the world, and that as markets enlarge and demand increases, the price of his food products will advance.

How simple and convincing these arguments are! The price of food products is not to be reduced to the mechanic, and raised to suit the farmer! Let the laboring man simply state whether he is a mechanic or a farmer, and he will be convinced by this method of reasoning that free trade benefits him and leaves the protectionist out in the cold.

If free trade is a panacea for the ills of laboring men, as its advocates claim, why is it that England has a larger number of paupers in proportion to the number of her population than any other civilized nation? The paupers of that free trade nation number 1,000,000, or 2 8-10 per cent of the total population, and require for their support an expenditure of $42,000,000 annually.

But alarming as this condition of things may seem, it is much better than the condition of our own working classes during the period when this country was experimenting with a tariff for revenue only. According to the third annual report of the New York Association for Improving the condition of the Poor, rendered in 1856, it appears that out of the 3,500,000 inhabitants in the State of New York, 261,152, or 7 4-10 per cent, were paupers. In Horace Greeley's paper, The Tribune, we get a glimpse of the condition of the people in New York City during the year 1858. It said: "Who is hungry? Go and see thousands of men and women, boys and girls, old and young, black and white, of all nations crowding and jostling each other, almost fighting for a first chance, acting more like famished wolves than human beings in a land of plenty, waiting till food is ready for distribution. Such scenes may be seen every day between eleven and two o'clock, around the corner of Orange and Chatham streets, where soup is given in charity to the poor, and soup and bread to others to carry to their miserable families."

Again, commenting on the cause of the people's misery, the same paper said: "We have supported European manufacturers and artisans and middlemen in the neglect, loss and destruction of our own men of industry and talent, of whatsoever kind, and that is the sole reason of our difficulty."

And now the advocates of a tariff for revenue only, ask American workingmen to try the experiment again.

Three Cows Killed.

Three fine Alderney cows belonging to Mr. Warren Ackerman of Scotch Plains, were struck by lightning Thursday evening and instantly killed. The cows were very valuable.

WHAT A LOCAL STORM COSTS.

Thursday Night's Storm Meant About $3,000 to the Telephone Company.

The mere statement, so often put in the sentence of a report "telephone connections burned out," after a heavy local thunder storm, does not bring to the mind of the average reader an idea of its meaning.

The storm of Thursday night, a prominent employe estimates, costs the Telephone Company at least $3,000.

Wires were broken down, and connections burned out between here and Elizabeth. A big tree fell on, and demolished the wires, between this city and Rahway.

The central station here was disorganized, and the cabinet at the Rahway station burned out. Then the smaller accidents, all costing time and money to repair, were numerous.

The use of the telephone is such a necessity that the comfort of employes is not to be thought of, and a damaging storm means night and day work to the men whose duty it is to keep the lines in working order.

Injuries and Fatalities by Railroads.

One of the last but not the least important of the State publications has made its appearance. It is the report of the railroads and canals of the State, and furnishes a statement of those killed and injured on the railroad. The law requires that a statement be made to the State Comptroller of all accidents, whether fatal or slight, the cause and the names of the engineers, conductors and crew. However, while the law requires this, and when having of clerks see that prices agree, and always get a receipt."

One of the best features of the report is that the reports does not contain the information sought for.

New Jersey has 4,146 miles of railroad track which is more to the area than any other State in the United States report. The study of the causes of accidents can be successfully carried out. In the period of one year covered by the report there were 1,300 accidents of all kinds; 1,229 persons were injured and 331 were killed or fatally injured. The greatest cause is that of track walking and the second is the coupler. By jumping on and off trains, commonly designated as boarding trains, there were 304 people injured, many of them fatally. The accidents caused by the coupling cars all apply to employes of the road, while two-thirds of those injured track walking are non-employes of the railroads. There has been a slight decrease in the number of accidents caused by coupling as compared with the two previous years. Only a few of these are fatal. Many of them consist in the crushing of the hand, which is a term for the loss of fingers. Railroads in this particular company, because its track from New York to Philadelphia is a favorite highway for tramps, the cause of 122 people being injured, nearly all of them fatally, and 32 injured by boarding the cars. Next to the coupler, walking along 94 were struck down while walking the tracks and 65 while getting off or on moving trains.

Passing in front of trains and being struck is greatly on the increase. There have been more accidents during the past year that happened in this way than in any previous year. On the New York division 85 people were killed and 488 injured in various ways. The Amboy division was the next highest by coupling, 39 accidents, one-third of them fatal, by track walking 17 by boarding trains, several of them being fatal. The total summary is 94 injured and 18 killed.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey killed 25 people and injured 328. The coupler was one of the principal agencies of mischief, 56 men being injured while coupling cars, 63 injured while track walking and 42 while boarding cars. The greatest number killed from those who were injured by walking the track or crossing in front of the cars. Many of the men killed at track walking were in an intoxicated condition and overtaken by the train. At least one-half of the number of accidents on this character can be attributed to liquor. Another fact shown by these detail reports, and this is one particularly along the shore line of the New Jersey Central people should be warned against, is that a train without first ascertaining whether there are any trains approaching.

On the Lehigh Valley Railroad Brook 15 persons were injured and 15 fatally injured. It reports no accidents by coupler.—Somerville Unionist-Gazette.

N. G. N. J. Shooting Match.

The following letter received this morning from Brigadier General Bird W. Spencer explains itself:

STATE OF NEW JERSEY,
DEPARTMENT OF RIFLE PRACTICE,
State Camp, near Sea Girt, N. J., Aug. 8, 1892.

1. The District of Columbia National Guard have presented to the National Guard of this State a trophy for rifle competition, to be known as the "Columbian Trophy." The same has been accepted by the Governor and Commander-in-Chief.

2. The competition therefor will be between one team of ten men each from the Regiments of the National Guard of New Jersey.

3. The match will take place during the meeting of the New Jersey State Rifle Association, September 5 to 10.

4. The competition will be under the same rules as that used to hold it for the period of one year, when it will become again subject to such rules as may be rendered to control of this department.

5. Each regiment will make four skirmish runs of twenty shots each, ten hasts, five advancing and five retiring, thirty seconds firing intervals at each halt.

6. The team making the highest aggregate score will be declared the winner at the competition.

7. In all particulars not herein named, the Regiment will be governed by the rules and regulations as prescribed in Circular dated July 20, 1892, relating to the Second Annual Rifle Competition, to be held on the State Rifle Range, Sea Girt, September 5 to 10.

8. The friendship and courtesy of the District of Columbia National Guard, exhibited in the presentation of this trophy, makes it eminently desirable and proper that each Regiment should participate in the competition.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Why is it that intense heat and intense mental irritation go, as it were, al[illegible] in hand? Strikes, riots, crimes, personal differences and so on appear to flourish during hot weather. In winter time people of bad habits quit stabbing and steal overcoats.

The private soldiers in the Russian army will have to endure another hardship. The government will furnish each man with four pocket handkerchiefs. Three million five hundred thousand will be required, and a special design of scenes from a soldier's life will be printed upon each.

An eminent doctor claims there is no physical reason why Mr. Gladstone should not live to be 90 years old. He is a striking example of what moderation and care will do toward the preservation of a strong constitution. His mental strength is no doubt due to the persistent and absorbing work of riding a "hobby." Something to devote one's energies to, to live for and to exclude selfish thoughts is an excellent preservative.

The vast army of friends of free education who are working for the public school celebration of Columbus Day believe there is a right and a wrong way of doing everything. They believed the right date to celebrate America's 400th anniversary was on Oct. 21, 1892, as that day on the Gregorian calendar of our time corresponds to Oct. 12, 1492, the date of the discovery on the Julian calendar. They brought congress to their point of view, the president signed the bill and Oct. 21, the true Columbus Day, will be observed by the public schools throughout America.

Sightseeing Guilds.

New York city had its laugh at the 35,000 Christian Endeavor people who recently convened in that city, but the country has laughed at the city with much better reason. The curiosity of the city people and the innocent surprise of the city papers proved that New York is singularly narrow and local in the range of its knowledge. Apparently few of the reporters knew that such an organization was growing rapidly and had held immense conventions elsewhere.

The mutual amusement and amusement has led to many suggestions for co-operative holiday traveling next year, somewhat like those so common in England, and managed from what is called the "Regent street center." By this plan 100, or even 500, people travel from remote shires and visit all the sights of London, from the tower to the park, Westminster abbey, parliament house and the British museum for less than half what it would cost them to go singly. If the party is very large it divides into groups for sightseeing. In fact, there are now regular touring guilds in London, Liverpool, Manchester and other cities.

These guilds are already organizing groups for the World's fair at Chicago next year, and the question very naturally arises, Why should not Americans be organizing in like manner? Of course there will be "excursion rates" and all that sort of thing from every part of the Union, and a large majority will prefer to go it alone, but there must be a million or so whose comfort would be promoted by organization, whether to visit the fair or tour elsewhere.

Electricity and Deafness.

Some of the newspapers have found something to wonder at in the fact that an elderly lady in a western city, although she had been for some time very deaf, discovered lately, on the occasion of taking her first ride in an electric car, that she could hear distinctly while riding. The experiment was tried again and again, some of her family accompanying her for the purpose, and was found to succeed perfectly.

The comments on the matter go to show that the lady's improved hearing is supposed to be due in some occult way to the agency of the electric force used in propelling the car. This is altogether an error. It is a fact well known to many persons afflicted with some forms of deafness, and to their friends, that while they are unable to hear any ordinary conversation in the quiet of their homes, or in any other comparative silence, they hear very well in a noisy street, in a rumbling train or in any other place where there is a loud, continuous, thunderous racket, sufficient to preclude conversation between persons whose hearing is perfect. The general, chronic roar seems to serve as a background to throw into audible relief, if one may so speak, the smaller sound of a human voice close by.

So it was not the fact that the deaf lady ran on an electric car that for the time improved her hearing, but that it was a moving, noisy car. The electricity had simply nothing whatever to do with it.

If the itemizers who have remarked on this occurrence, taking it for granted that the lady's deafness was curable by electricity, had reflected a moment, they might have saved themselves the blunder by remembering that Mr. Edison who lives, breathes, moves, has his being and says his prayers in an atmosphere of electricity, is as deaf as the late lamented Julius Cæsar.

NO BOYCOTT DECLARED.

It Is Not Deemed Necessary Yet to Order One on Carnegie.

THE PRODUCTION TOO RESTRICTED.

The Federation of Labor Says the Amount of Work Turned Out at Homestead Would Not Justify a Boycott—The Order Will Be Given When It Is Needed.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 13.—The executive committee of the American Federation of Labor spent a number of hours in conference with the Homestead advisory committee and the officials of the Amalgamated association. After the meeting President Gompers gave out the following statement:

"After a thorough investigation and review of the situation in Homestead and the other Carnegie mills, and after a conference with President Wiebe and other officials of the Amalgamated association, and on consultation with the advisory board of the Homestead men, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor do not deem it necessary at present to issue any boycott on the Carnegie products for these reasons:

"The amount of work now turned out in the Carnegie mills is of such a trifling, inconsequential character it would be sheer waste of effort to issue a boycott.

"Added to this the quality and small amount of the product turned out is so inferior it is hardly marketable and will result in a greater loss of trade to the Carnegies than would come from any boycott we might now impose. In fact the unmarketable character and small amount of work done is an efficient boycott against the Carnegie company itself.

"Should it be necessary to levy a general order in the future to let Carnegie products alone we will not hesitate to do so, notwithstanding the threats of the firm to use the conspiracy laws against us. Our declining to issue a boycott at this time does not prevent sympathizers with the struggling toilers from refusing to use structural iron, steel or nails and other products of the Carnegie mills wherever they locally feel inclined to do so, and at the same time every dollar of financial aid which can be raised should be given freely to help this struggle of brawn and brain, muscle and heart against the cold-blooded, grasping avarice of well protected manufacturers."

BOTH SIDES CLAIM VICTORY.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Aug. 13.—Today both sides are claiming victory. The strikers still maintain that the company has failed to skillfully operate its plant with nonunion men. In support of this argument they point to the fact that very little material has been shipped from the mill since the inauguration of the strike. On this point Treasurer Gaches, of the advisory board, said to a United Press reporter: "If the company really were making good headway they does it not ship some of it? When it does send out material made by its present force of workmen—material that has passed inspection—then will I believe they will begin to 'wink the other eye.'"

Superintendent Potter was seen a few minutes later. When told what Treasurer Gaches had said he smiled and replied: "Well, it's about time for him to begin winking. We have shipped twelve carloads of material this week, and every pound of it was made by our new men." Mr. Potter then went on to say that his present force of men are doing wonderfully satisfactory work; in fact, the schedule with which everything is being run has surprised him greatly. Six departments are now running full time, double turn. The 40-inch mill will be started and is operated without a hitch or break.

But the strikers will not believe Mr. Potter, neither will they accept as true the accounts written by newspaper men who visit the men daily. They believe, or try to make themselves believe, that it is impossible for nonunionists to fill the positions the strikers deserted more than a month ago. During the past week many of the men who were conspicuous figures around the strikers' headquarters have mysteriously disappeared. A United Press man asked some of the strikers what had become of their former companions and received this reply: "Oh, those fellows have gone back to work. It was impossible for them to be men; they got scared and deserted." This, coming from the strikers themselves, is a direct contradiction of Vice President Crawford's oft repeated statement that less than half a dozen of the old men have returned to work.

Hugh O'Donnell, Burgess McLuckie and T. H. Brown have left for Boston. O'Donnell, it is said, will remain in the east several weeks. In spite of all the reports to the contrary there is a disposition on the part of some of the members of the advisory board to keep O'Donnell from resuming his place at the head of that body.

Dissatisfaction with the Scale.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 13.—The dissatisfaction among the finishers over the manner in which the classification of the wage scale was effected between the manufacturers and the Amalgamated association conference committee, by which they were the greatest sufferers in the reductions agreed upon, a quite general and may yet result disastrously to the expectations of both manufacturers and officials of their organization. By many it is predicted that the settlement of the wage trouble is as far off as ever.

All of the lodges of rollers, heaters and others employed in the finishing departments held largely attended meetings yesterday, at which the "unwarranted liberty" assumed by the conference committee was emphatically condemned, the committee having agreed to the reduction against the wishes of two-thirds of the lodges on the list. The officials of the Amalgamated association hope, however, to bring the seaters into line between now and Monday.

Another Scale Settled.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 13.—The conference between the Western Flint Glass association and the workers has agreed on the scale, which is practically the same as last year.

THE IRON HALL SUIT.

Appearances Seem to Indicate That a Receiver Will Be Appointed.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 13.—Supreme Justice Somerby was on the stand in the Iron Hall receivership case. The testimony elicited was strong enough to lead the plaintiffs to believe that a receiver will be appointed. Somerby, although having supreme authority, admitted that he had never given bond until this suit was brought, and then only in the sum of $5,000, with a Detroit undertaker as security. This bond has not been approved and is not in force. Supreme Cashier Davis is under $50,000 bond, the witness said, but one of the sureties is dead.

Somerby admitted that the time for which the supreme sitting and officers had been elected (two years) had expired. He could point out no authority for the present body to exist, except a section authorizing a special call of the sitting. The witness did not know where any of the order's reserve funds, except $5,000 in this city, had been invested as required by the constitution. Accountant Davis had some transactions involving some $64,000, but Somerby did not know how this money was invested.

Continuing, the witness told the story of the Philadelphia bank, of which he is vice president and which now has $72,000 of the order's money.

He said that the reason $170,000 had been donated to the bank was to tide over the embarrassment of this bank. The money was taken from the funds of the order. If the receiver for the bank had been appointed it would have resulted in the appointment of a receiver for the order and its utter ruination. The supreme officer deemed it justifiable to donate this money.

It is the theory of the members of the supreme sitting that the $64,000 which Davis took to invest was dissipated by him and Dan W. Kneller, one of the plaintiffs, who was cashier. It is known that both lost heavily in wheat speculation. During the trial several members of the sitting called Davis outside and asked him if he would tell them where the large sum had been invested, but he replied that he had no time to talk.

LATE DECREES OF FASHION AND OTHER NOTEWORTHY MATTERS.

Corsets Affect the Eyes—A Striking New Paris Costume—Little Points on Prevailing and Coming Styles — About Colors That Harmonize.

The true oculist doesn't always prescribe glasses. For example, a young woman whose eyesight had become very much impaired was ordered, first of all to have ten or a dozen amalgam fillings drilled out of her teeth. She was told that she might take her choice between having the holes stopped up with gold and having all the teeth drawn. She was next ordered to stop wearing a corset, and next she was subjected to a course of treatment to allay a stomach trouble, a sort of mild dyspepsia. The doctor told her that, though glasses might give her temporary help, pathological treatment must be resorted to to produce a permanent improvement in her eyesight.

A New Paris Costume.

Here is a new and very striking costume from Paris, made of copper colored crepon. The skirt is plain, bordered in the hem with black lace and heliotrope rosettes. Medici collar, covered with heliotrope silk. Black lace going from left shoulder, forms dolman and makes oversleeve on right side. From crepon epaulettes hanging jet pieces on heliotrope ribbon. Bottom of waist trimmed with same lace and jet garniture as sleeves, leaving the sides open. From bow of belt hanging large ribbon to the bottom of skirt. White straw hat trimmed with heliotrope ribbons and flowers.

Martial Amusement.

CHATTANOOGA, Aug. 13.—Sensational reports come from Coal Creek regarding the conduct of Tennessee's standing army. The citizens charge that the soldiers amuse themselves by firing oyster cans loaded with mud from their cannons into the village and that the Gatling gun is fired recklessly into the town. The complaint has stirred up much excitement.

A Famous Trotter Drops Dead.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Aug. 13.—Harry Noble, a valuable trotting horse owned by W. S. Kirby, of Grandville, Mich., dropped dead here. He had a record of 2:17¼. His owners were offered $3,000 for a half interest in him a few days ago.

LIGHT ON THE MYSTERY.

The Bloody Ax That Killed the Bordens Has Been Found.

LIZZIE BORDEN PLEADS NOT GUILTY.

She Is Remanded for Trial Without Bail and Taken to Taunton and Locked Up in a Cell—The Accused Woman Preserves Her Air of Indifference.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 13.—The ax with which Mrs. Borden was killed has been found. That is the sensation of the day in the mysterious double murder case. The formal commitment of Miss Lizzie as the assassin of her father and stepmother ranks second in interest to the discovery of the murderous weapon.

It did not leak out till now that one of the four hatchets found in the cellar of the Borden homestead soon after the murder was the instrument with which the butchery was committed. Under the microscope it shows many spots of human blood. That it was carefully washed there is no doubt, for a bucket of water was found near it, and also three new towels, partially covered with blood. The water had been splashed over the cellar floor. The weapon also showed some long hairs, which matched those in Mrs. Borden's head.

No hatchet like the one in custody can be found in the local hardware stores, its greatest peculiarity is the claw on the side of the head nearest the handle. The handle is about 2½ feet long and the top of the head is about 1¾ by 4 inches.

It Fits Into the Cuts.

It is said that the head of the hatchet fits into the murderous wounds in Mr. Borden's head. The blade of the implement is represented as being very thin and very sharp, measuring about 5⅛ inches in the widest part. It is what is known among farmers as an oldfashioned thrashwood hatchet, except for the strange claw. A hardware man says that such hatchets are probably used in trimming by ship planking where spikes are driven, the claw being used in pulling out spikes.

When the police authorities were asked if such a hatchet was in their custody they would neither admit nor deny it. The matter with all other evidence is now in control of District Attorney Knowlton.

Certain clothes covered with blood, found in the cellar where the hatchet was found, are said to have an important bearing on this part of the case.

Marshal Hilliard said there was a great deal yet to be proven before the crime could be finally fastened upon Miss Borden. Much had been charged, but for all that he could see the trial would be long and tedious. Medical Examiner Dolan says that a great deal will depend upon the accuracy of the medical examination of the bloody body and the analysis of the parts sent to Boston. Affairs are more quiet in police circles than for many hours. There is the report of an unsuccessful search made in the Chace hill woods ponds, which, according to the statement of a man named Ward, contained the ax of the crime. Officers Doherty and Harrington found nothing suspicious there.

Lizzie Borden Arraigned.

When court was opened Lizzie Borden came in on the arm of Rev. A. E. Buck, the white haired missionary of Central church. She wore a tailor made gown of dark blue and a black hat trimmed with black polka dot crape. She had no veil. She was more self possessed than at any previous time, and her steellike and almost painful severity of countenance relaxed a trifle. She was careless and indifferent to her surroundings and whispered leisurely to her counsel, A. J. Jennings. The latter filed a motion to dismiss the complaint upon the grounds that the judge, being the same person who presided at the inquest, was not competent to pass an unbiased opinion at the preliminary trial; further, that the inquest was still in session.

District Attorney Knowlton offered a demurrer, which was sustained, and then he asked that the prisoner be called upon to make her plea to the complaint. Her lawyer offered a plea of not guilty, but the judge refused to accept it, and ordered the clerk to proceed with the usual custom of the court. The clerk asked Lizzie to stand up and answer to the charge of murder.

She Pleads Not Guilty.

She did so in a firm toned voice and with stress upon the "not." Mr. Jennings arraigned the police for conducting the inquest in private and for denying him the right to attend and protect her from useless questions. A wordy war between the two lawyers lasted for half an hour. Jennings announced that his client was ready and anxious to proceed to trial at once. The state asked for a continuance until Aug. 22, which was granted.

The district attorney informed the court that he wished John V. Morse and Bridget Sullivan placed under bonds to secure their attendance at the trial, as he looked upon them as valuable witnesses. They were ordered to give security in $300 each, which they did, with Almy & Milne, proprietors of The Daily News, as their bondsmen.

When Lizzie Borden was ordered to be committed without bond to await the trial, She arose, and with ever faithful Minister Buck passed out under police guard. A closed carriage conveyed her and her sister Emma to the depot, where a train was boarded for Taunton. She was in custody of the chief of police. This closed the first legal act in this stirring tragedy.

In Jail at Taunton.

TAUNTON, Mass., Aug. 13.—Miss Lizzie Borden's entry into this city was in the form of a public ceremonial. The excitement was high. Arriving at the Central Passenger station, Miss Borden was escorted to a carriained hack by Mr. Buck and City Marshal Hilliard, Detective Seaver acting as guard and clearing the way. The only sign of interest she manifested on the trip from Fall River was when Taunton was reached, when she aroused from her lethargy for a second, then dropped her head on her hand and closed her eyes.

Arriving at the jail, she was at once placed in a cell, the minister conducting her to the door and Marshal Hilliard seeing that the door was properly secured.

Mrs. Wright, wife of Sheriff Wright, an old friend of the Borden family, hurried to the cell with a glass of water, which the prisoner eagerly drank. When Miss Borden entered the jail office her face was composed and there was no sign of consciousness given as she passed toward the corridor, apparently seeing nothing and noticing no one.

The sheriff stood by the inner door, and he was affected almost to tears as he saw the daughter of his old friend passing to apartments usually occupied by the most degraded females. Minister Buck emerged from the corridor white and agitated and not disposed to talk.

FOOD FOR THE SHARKS.

A Vessel's Crew Murdered and Then Tossed Overboard.

PIRATES PLAY THE ROLE OF DEMONS

The Assassins Were Two Brothers and the Cook of the Schooner Polly J.—A Quarrel Lands the Leaders in Irons and on Their Way to Just Retribution.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 13.—Full details were received today by the brig Galilee from Tahiti of the foulest case of murder and piracy known in the South seas for many years. The old California schooner Polly J., which served for years as a pleasure yacht for King Pomare of Tahiti, was recently sold at the king's death and christened the Niulony. She was fitted out by merchants of Papeete for a cruise among the South Sea islands.

The vessel was loaded with goods for trade, and besides there was $5,000 on board wherewith to buy copra and pearl shell. Captain Castella was in command, the mate was a man named Roedique, the supercargo was Willie Gibson, the cook a Kanaka from the Island of Moala, and the remaining four of the crew were Kanakas. The captain was not well known in Tahiti, but everybody knew Roedique.

He is a man of splendid attainments, and can speak English, French, German and all the dialects of the South seas. He has a brother who has been a trader in the Kingswell group. Both men are exact counterparts of Chase, the villain in Stevenson's "On the Beach at Falesa."

Fed Their Victims to the Sharks.

On the night before the vessel was to sail from Papeete she disappeared. The owners were worried and sent out a gunboat, but the search was fruitless. Finally they learned that she was trading in the Paumotu group. From Paumotu the schooner went to the Kingswell group, and there Roedique's brother was taken on board as a passenger. Then the devilry began.

The two brothers determined to seize the ship, cargo and $5,000 in treasure, and in order to do so got Moiai, the cook, to help them. As they were nearing the Marshall group the cook put poison in the food of the four men, and they died in terrible agony. The Roedique brothers stood over them, watched the death struggles of the four men and chuckled because there was no outcry.

Moiai hid himself in the galley, and the brothers proceeded to finish the job. Captain Castella and Supercargo Gibson were sitting in the cabin eating their dinner. Mate Roedique entered the room, his brother following. The mate walked up to the captain and his brother to the supercargo. Like clockwork two pistols were drawn, two shots sounded like one, and the brains of the captain and supercargo mingled on the dinner table.

The mess was cleared away, and the brothers ate their dinner while the cook steered the ship. After dinner the six bodies were thrown overboard, and the Roediques seemed to enjoy watching the sharks making their dinner off the dead men.

Arrested and in Irons.

Several islands were touched at, and on all of them the three men had a good time. Money was the object, and they had the ship. After dinner the six bodies were thrown overboard, and the Roediques seemed to enjoy watching the sharks making their dinner off the dead men.

Moiai, after money was refused him, went on board a Spanish man-of-war in the harbor, told his tale, and before long the two brothers were in irons and a crew from the man-of-war was in charge.

On board were found $3,000 in cash, sixty tons of copra and one ton of pearl shell, so that the men must have spent $2,000 in about three weeks. When the Galilee left Tahiti the schooner was on her way to Papeete, and the next news that came from there will tell the fate of the brothers.

The Roedique brothers, it was ascertained, are escaped convicts from New Caledonia. They gained their liberty at Noumea about two years ago and reached Australia in a small boat. From Australia they went to Cape Colony, then to the Sandwich Islands and finally to Tahiti. They are men of fine education, but hardened desperadoes, who have probably committed similar crimes to the butchery with which they are now charged.

Want Buchanan Re-elected.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 13.—Friends of Governor John P. Buch nan have sent out a secret circular in which it is urged that "in view of the unprecedented and proscriptive measures put by a few men now manipulating the so called Democratic party of Tennessee," a meeting be called at once to endorse the governor for re-election. The opinion is freely expressed that the governor has committed political suicide by commuting the death sentence of Colonel King.

Turf Editor Love Robbed.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Allen Lowe, turf editor of the Boston Globe, reported to the police that a thief entered his room at the Powers and stole a valuable diamond stud and $600. Most of the $10,000 received by Mr. Lowe for his stallion on Tuesday, and which the thief was probably after, had been deposited in a bank.

A Whole Family Shocked.

ABBOT, Tex., Aug. 13.—Lightning struck the house of R. H. Williams, shocking the whole family in a horrible manner. A six-year-old boy was instantly killed and another boy and girl were so badly burned that they cannot live.

THE TORY GOVERNMENT OUT.

History on Its Way to the Queen with the Resignations.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Lord Salisbury left London on a special train for Portsmouth, whence he embarked for the Isle of Wight, the object of his journey being to tender to the queen, at Osborne house, the resignation of the Conservative ministry. The members of the cabinet had met and formally agreed to resign. Most of the ministers have left town.

Mr. Gladstone will escape one journey to Osborne house, the queen having conveyed her command to him to form a ministry by General Sir Frederick Ponsonby, her private secretary, who visited Mr. Gladstone to execute his mission. Mr. Gladstone will, however, go to Osborne house on Monday to fulfill the usual custom of kissing the hands of her majesty.

Surmises are rife regarding new ministerial combinations. Among the most striking reports finding credence in official legal quarters is one to the effect that Lord Herschell will become governor general of India, that Lord Chief Justice Coleridge will become lord chancellor, and that Sir Charles Russell will become lord chief justice.

Lord Herschell's transference from the bench to the tremendous political responsibilities of the vice royalty of India would be incredible but for the known fact that he has long desired to be a prominent figure in the political arena. He has the highest opinion of his own qualities as an administrator, and if the report be accurate he must have convinced Mr. Gladstone of his worth, but his appointment will cause a shudder of apprehension through the country in view of the critical position of Indian-Russian relations.

Until Tuesday, when Mr. Gladstone returns from Osborne house, the exact composition of the cabinet will remain unknown.

THE ENCAMPMENT ENDED.

Grand Commander McCurley Announces His Appointments.

DENVER, Aug. 13.—The last session of the grand encampment of the Knights Templars of the United States only lasted three hours, and the body adjourned to meet again on Aug. 27, 1895, in the city of Boston.

The session was taken up by reports of committees and routine work. The installation of officers took place just before the closing of the encampment. The names of the officers appointed by the grand commander were given out and were as follows: Grand standard bearer, W. B. Melish, of Ohio; grand sword bearer, George C. Connor, of Tennessee; grand warden, John A. Sloan, of Missouri; grand prelate, Rev. Joseph N. McGrath, D. D., of Illinois.

The committee on jurisprudence was also appointed and consists of the following members: Sir James F. Hopkins, of Pennsylvania; Sir John Q. A. Fellows, of Louisiana; Sir John W. Fellows, of New Hampshire; Sir John C. Smith, of Illinois; Sir F. J. S. Gorgas, of Maryland; Sir John Frizzell, of Tennessee, and Sir John H. Root, of Arkansas.

Last night the local Knights Templars' reception committee entertained and banqueted the grand encampment. It was a magnificent affair and was served in the Brown Palace hotel. There were 350 guests at the table. The festivities began at 8 o'clock and concluded at 4 o'clock this morning.

Arrested and in Irons.

Several islands were touched at, and on all of them the three men had a good time. Money was the object, and they had the ship. After dinner the six bodies were thrown overboard, and the Roediques seemed to enjoy watching the sharks making their dinner off the dead men.

The Pamir Trouble Growing.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—A dispatch to The Standard from Tien-Tsin says: "The extreme heat is worrying. They have returned to the Kingswell group, and while on a drunken debauch the brothers and Moiai had a quarrel.

Moiai, after money was refused him, went on board a Spanish man-of-war in the harbor, told his tale, and before long the two brothers were in irons and a crew from the man-of-war was in charge.

On board were found $3,000 in cash, sixty tons of copra and one ton of pearl shell, so that the men must have spent $2,000 in about three weeks. When the Galilee left Tahiti the schooner was on her way to Papeete, and the next news that came from there will tell the fate of the brothers.

The Roedique brothers, it was ascertained, are escaped convicts from New Caledonia. They gained their liberty at Noumea about two years ago and reached Australia in a small boat. From Australia they went to Cape Colony, then to the Sandwich Islands and finally to Tahiti. They are men of fine education, but hardened desperadoes, who have probably committed similar crimes to the butchery with which they are now charged.

France's War.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—The Times prints a dispatch from Tangier to the effect that each Moorish minister who helped influence the sultan against signing the commercial treaty with England has received from the French agent a present of $10,000.

WORKMEN CRUSHED.

Two Killed and Twelve Injured by the Collapse of a Building.

PORT ORANGE, N. J., Aug. 13.—As the result of a terrible accident which occurred at the little mining village of Ogden, N. J., fifteen miles from here, one man is dead, two are momentarily expected to die, and nearly a dozen more are seriously, some fatally, wounded.

The accident occurred at the works of the New Jersey and Pennsylvania Ore Concentrating works. A large building under process of construction, on which along twenty men were engaged, collapsed suddenly by the breaking of a derrick with which some heavy timbers were being hoisted into position. The timbers fell on the partially erected building, and in a moment the whole mass had fallen, burying under it the whole gang of workmen.

The works include several buildings, in which over 100 men are employed. All work in the works was at once suspended and arrangements were made for extricating and caring for the dead and wounded.

Two men were taken out dead and twelve workmen were removed from the ruins, all seriously wounded. Families of men known to have been employed in the works gathered around the ruins, and the work of the searching party was accompanied by moans and cries of sorrow from women and children.

The searchers were directed to the wounded in many cases by their moans and cries. Thomas A. Edison, who spends much of his time at the works, personally superintended the work of rescue.

The dead so far as known are Charles McConnell and an Italian laborer, name unknown.

The injured are William Rock, Ezra Zarch and a man named Pierce. The other injured persons are Italians, who speak no English and are known only by numbers. The victims were taken to St. Joseph's hospital, Paterson.

Science Progress

A SCIENTIFIC TRICK.

Depending on Dexterity and the Operation of Natural Laws.

The experiment depicted in the accompanying cut is not, strictly speaking, a feat of balancing. The two glasses here shown are maintained in their curious position on the third by two slender rods of wood, say the wooden portions of a couple of penholders. The glasses used should be of the tall, tapering pattern formerly used for champagne. We place one of them upon the table; then, taking a second glass, we introduce one of the rods of wood within it, and try it in various positions, with its inner end against the side of the glass, until we find that we can maintain the glass in a horizontal position by means of the rod of wood without any additional support.

This done, we place in an upright glass the opposite end of the rod, and vary the degree of its inclination to the glass until we find that it catches against the sides and holds fast, the upper glass being thereby supported as shown. We take care meanwhile to keep the other hand on the foot of the glass which is on the table, otherwise the weight of the second glass—the center of gravity of the combination—lying so far outside its base, would naturally upset it. By placing a second rod in the lower glass and hanging the third glass onto this we re-establish the equilibrium and may then safely leave the combination to support itself. The experiment as here described is within the reach of everybody. It is quite possible, with three rods and a little extra skill, to make one glass support three others in the same way.

Improvement in the Trombone.

The trombone has always seemed an incomprehensibly stupid instrument to the uninitiated. It has hitherto been impossible to "mute" the trombone. Cornets, horns and trumpets have all been muted, either by the intrusion of a wooden plug into the bell or, in the case of the coach horn, by partly closing the bell with one of the hands of the player. In the trombone the bell is not only too far away to be muted in this manner, but the whole structure of the instrument makes such an operation impracticable.

An exchange says, however, that the problem has been solved by an invention known as the "echo attachment." A piston placed just under the hand used in holding the trombone can be depressed by a touch of the middle finger and is returned by a spring the moment pressure is removed. The effect of lowering the piston is to switch off the air current into a long and tortuous tube, the same length as the main body of the trombone. This terminates, not in a bell, but in a curious, irregular cone, so that the sound is not "blared forth," but only "gently tooted." The echo attachment is so arranged that the whole of it is hidden by the bell of the trombone when the player faces the audience. By its aid seemingly distant music can be produced in the front of the orchestra without the chance of hiding the trombone behind the scenery.

THE HOUSEHOLD

DECORATIVE NEEDLEWORK.

Attractive Fashionable Embroidery. Summer Screens, Quilts, Etc.

Pompon work is ordinary embroidery, with the pattern accentuated by the introduction of silk pompons sewed on the silk, cloth or cotton foundation. The pompons are generally of light, pretty tints, and the result is quite charming, especially when gold is introduced.

Rococo work is embroidery in silk, wool or flax thread, the pattern raised by disks laid on the ground fabric before the work is commenced. Mantel borders and cushions look well in the rococo work.

White linen embroidery is applied with admirable effect to pillow shams and the upper sheet, to teacloths, nightgown cases, table centers, toilet covers and doilies. Cyphet lines, the patterns Imitation of Greek lace, often edge the cloths, and the embroidery combines well with drawn thread work. The toilet covers are mostly narrow strips, serving also for table centers if the length be suitable.

Many low wooden screens filled in with embroidered silk or gathered art muslin are placed in front of the fireplace. Some are twofold, others only oblong. These are occasionally covered with kilted silk, a spider and web worked over the kilting. The papillo is the name of a new fire screen, made of crinkled paper, usually employed for lamp shades. It is formed into a huge butterfly.

A capital carriage bag is in the shape of a wide, long purse, with rings made of satin sheeting, and a most comfortable arrangement. Others are made in netting, so that they expand when in use and reduce to a very small compass otherwise.

An embroidered linen quilt of uncommon design, recently exhibited, was of cream linen, and the work was done principally in shades of blue, red and white, linen threads being used. Bordering the square center pattern was an insertion of Cluny lace, beyond this came a bold design carried out in the same colors, and the quilt was edged with broad Cluny lace. A large cushion to correspond accompanied it.

A portiere of deep blue cloth was decorated with a border on one side at least half a yard wide, of white linen, on which was a handsome design done in shades of green and terra cotta. A dainty cot cover was powdered with bunches of harebells.

A lovely small table cover was made of gray-green satin, embroidered with a bold, free design of conventionalized flowers, executed in a very light style with pale pink silk.

Purse of Peas or Green Beans.

Take one quart of green peas or two pint cans, one tablespoonful of butter, one bay leaf, two cloves, one pint of milk, one pint of water, one tablespoonful of flour, one onion, one sprig of parsley and salt and pepper to taste. Wash the pease in cold water; then put them in a saucepan with the water and boil twenty minutes. When done they should be almost dry. Press through a colander. Put the milk on to boil in a farina boiler. Add the bay leaf, cloves and parsley. Rub the butter and flour together until smooth. Strain the milk into the peas, then return to the farina boiler, stir in the butter and flour, and stir continually until it boils and

GOOD HEALTH

IN THE SICKROOM.

Unconsidered Trifles That Are of Importance to the Patient.

"Is there anything I can do for you?" is the question almost invariably addressed to an invalid, and if the latter were to speak from the palace of truth the reply would often be: "There is not much that you can do—but much that you may leave undone. First, do come in less noisily—shut the door after you; sit or stand in front where I can see you without straining the muscles of my neck, and above all do not shake the bed. Pain is bad enough, but worries are far worse."

Not one in a hundred knows how to behave in a sickroom, so as to leave the patient no worse for the visit. This may sound a very sweeping assertion, but fit is borne out by experience and may be applied to professed nurses as well as to unprofessional friends. But suppose some one calls—one of those (of whom many are happily existent) whose presence is "welcome as the flowers in May," who comes in with a smile, speaks softly, listens with sympathetic ear to all the tale of woe and is able to suggest many little things to make matters more comfortable.

Nothing is so irritating as to see from your bed crooked blinds, dirty cups or glasses, or tables littered with unnecessary trifles. One of the first duties in a sickroom is to move all knickknacks out of the way, never leaving a thing in the room when done with, especially any evidence of food or drink. Flowers may be in the room by day, but should be removed at night, and should always have the lower leaves stripped off the stalks before putting them in the vase. It is these leaves left in the water, which make it so disagreeable, especially in the case of mignonette, asters and wallflowers. Hyacinths, daffodils and all flowers with juicy stalks soon make the water unbearably nasty.

After the patient has been washed, had breakfast and been generally tidied, the door of the room should be fastened and left open to air it. This can be done even in winter if there is a fire. A few drops of eucalyptus oil, Sanitas or toilet vinegar poured into a saucer and left to evaporate are very refreshing.

Then there are many small things that are great comforts. Green blinds for instance (only those who have tried them know the rest that they are to weary eyes), a loose shawl in bed to tuck into odd corners, and in case of serious illness the reels in the scuttle each wrapped in a piece of paper to save the noise of tongs or scoop. It would seem superfluous to add that the nurse or attendants should waggle about and a dress that does not rustle, were it not that even trained nurses have been known so sin in this matter.

The Care of Little Children's Ears.

The greatest care is necessary in washing the ears of little children. They should be washed outside, and on the inside only so far as the finger, wrapped in a soft towel, will go. The practice of forcing a hairpin or any other hard instrument into the ear passage is fraught with danger of injuring the membrane, causing permanent deafness. Earache is a malady of childhood and causes most distressing pain. The simplest remedy for it is to fill

ELEGANT LETTER WRITING.

A Distinct Social Function of the Successful Society Woman.

The ability to write a really elegant letter is a graceful accomplishment well worth the acquisition of the educated woman, and Harper's Bazar remarks concerning it: "As society is carried on at present, notes and letters must be frequently exchanged—notes of invitation to various occasions, notes accepting or declining invitations, notes of congratulation, of condolence, of inquiry, of regret, of ceremony. In fact, the writing of letters becomes a distinct social function, and occupies no small portion of a woman's morning, if she goes about at all or keeps pace with the engagements of her set.

"To write a good business letter, straightforward, courteous, direct, comprehensive and winning, requires not only a special talent, but a special training. The number of persons whose business letters are models of brevity, clearness and politeness is always limited, perhaps for the reason that almost everybody is sure that the thing is perfectly simple, and remains in this conviction until he attempts it for himself. To write a business letter the greatest conciseness, in connection with the most unfailing urbanity, is a sine qua non.

"In a letter of friendship, on the other hand, there is opportunity for graceful diffusiveness and the air of charming persiflage which befits the conversation of persons in a drawing room. A bit of compliment, a little fun, a little exaggeration are not amiss in the friend's letter to her friend.

"The dress of a letter is a matter of importance. One should have on hand a supply of note paper of different sizes, with envelopes to match, avoiding all eccentricities of shape and tint. Plain white paper of good quality is always satisfactory to the requirements of good form. A fad of the hour has permitted women to write an illegible scrawl, but the sooner this goes out the better."

Business Is Business.

A good story is told of a New York millionaire who was caught on a surface car without change in his pockets. He went to the conductor quietly and explained his situation, and ended by saying:

"If you're a smoker, perhaps you will not object to pay my fare and take its value in this way."

Here he drew from his cigar case a fine after dinner Perfecto and offered it to the conductor.

"All right," said the latter, "but 'bis is bis.' The fare is five cents, and you'll have to give me two of them."

The passenger laughingly complied, as he thought the humor of the affair, intentional or not, deserved recognition.—New York Tribune.

A TELEGRAM'S SAD TALE.

MR. REYNOLDS LEARNS THIS MORNING OF HIS SON'S DEATH.

Frank Reynolds, a Plainfield Scholar, Drowned, Saturday Afternoon, in Maine.

The sad news of the death, by drowning, of Frank Reynolds, of Jackson avenue, North Plainfield, Saturday afternoon at Augusta, Maine, was received in this city yesterday.

The deceased was about eighteen years of age and was very popular with his associates. He was next to the oldest son, Mr. Reynolds, cashier of the National Park Bank, New York, and with Mrs. Reynolds and the eldest son, Stacey, were spending Sunday at Jamaica, L. I.

The youngest son, Walter was with Frank summering in Maine.

Saturday afternoon Frank went in swimming in Cabbosseconton Lake, was taken with cramps and drowned. His body was recovered later.

His distracted brother telegraphed to the New York bank to the father.

Mr. Reynolds was absent when the telegram arrived.

Mr. Phillips, cashier of a private New Bank, where the eldest son is employed, learned of Frank's death and with another friend went to Jamaica to try and find the bereaved parents. They were unsuccessful and Mr. Reynolds first learned the heart-breaking news when he reached the bank this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds are now on their way to Maine. The family burying ground is in Massachusetts.

The deceased was a graduate of the North Plainfield Public school, class of '91" and would have graduated next year from the Plainfield High School.

PERSONAL.

Miss Lulu Lewis of Central avenue, is at the Sylvan Lodge, Avon-by-the-Sea, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Conover and daughter of Elmwood place are spending a week at Jersey City.

Mr. Bergen Carter of East Front street street has returned from a two weeks' sojourn at Stanton, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Meyer of this city are at Avon-by-the-Sea, N. J. They are stopping at the Avon Inn.

Mrs. and Mrs. A. W. Kleinecke have gone to the Marion House, Lake George, for the remainder of August.

Mr. Chas. VanMiddlesworth of Elmwood place has been spending several days with relatives in Elizabeth.

Daniel V. Collins, a popular employe of Scott Press Works, died at his home in Scudder Plains yesterday. The notice of the funeral is published elsewhere.

Mr. James Carson and Miss Sadie Jones, both of this city, were married Wednesday evening last at the home of the bride's parents, Chatham street, North Plainfield.

Mr. Newman, of Brooklyn, brother of Mr. Mc. Newman of this city, has just had published a song, the music of which he composed, entitled "I know a flower." The melody is beautiful. Mr. Newman is a talented musician and usually devotes the spare time he has from his real estate business to playing on either the piano or organ.

BREVITIES.

—Two men came to blows on Front street the other evening over the merits of a Dunellen boarding house. There were no arrests.

—A young man while riding over the mountain yesterday collided with a farmer's wagon, and, it is said, was quite seriously injured.

—Mrs. Waldron of Dunellen, who was charged by the Dunellen weekly with misdemeanor, is spoken of very highly by people who know her. She has resided, they say, in Dunellen for six years, and they attribute the disturbance to her husband.

—Lovers of minstrelsy anticipate a minstrel treat when Gorhame' Minstrels appear. The company is the strongest in every way that has ever appeared here, and their performance is entirely new, novel and refined, discarding all worn out ideas. See advertisement.

—Probably a good many papers will this week print an advertisement which is being sent out by an advertising agency in New York, setting forth what purports to be a guessing contest. The "guesses" are so palpably apparent that the offering of cash prizes to the successful guesser is brazen in the face of it. Whenever anybody offers you twenty dollars for one it is not safe to invest the one. Give this guessing contest the go-by.

CHIEF DOANE WAS THERE.

An Incipient Fire at Shaw's Drug Store Squelched.

A bapthn explosion started a fire at Shaw's pharmacy at about ten o'clock this morning.

The alarm of fire brought out the department but the prompt action of Chief Doane, who was on hand at the time of the explosion and put out the fire, made the aid of the department unnecessary.

The Gallant Crescents.

Wednesday the New Brunswick baseball team will play the Crescents on the latter's grounds. The game will be called at four o'clock.

Tuesday will be known as "Ladies' Day" and the representatives of the gentler sex who attend will be admitted free.

A FEW ACCIDENTS.

DUE ALREADY TO THE TROLLEY CAR.

A Ten-Year-Old Hero's Brave Act.—A Young Lady Badly Injured in a Smashup.—A Truckman's Wagon Damaged.

Sunday afternoon Miss Edith Arrowsmith and her ten-year-old brother, Fireman, and Miss Renie Warner, all of South Plainfield, were driving on Front street. A trolley car came along and the horse drawing the carriage, becoming frightened, started to run away.

At almost the first plunge the animal fell, breaking the shafts, upsetting the wagon and throwing the occupants headlong to the ground.

Firman, the ten-year-old boy, was at the bottom of the heap, but, boy like, was uninjured. With rat like agility he wriggled out, and with great presence of mind, ran to the horse's head, and stopped its frantic plunging.

A crowd quickly gathered and assisted the young ladies.

Miss Warner was badly injured about the head and body, and through the aid of a sympathetic bystander was carried, bolstered up with pillows in a carriage, to her home.

Miss Arrowsmith escaped with slight bruises.

The bystanders, after the accident, in admiration of the pluck shown by the boy, picked him up and carried him around for all to look at.

HIS WAGON-WHEEL WAS DEMOLISHED.

Peter Van Arsdale, a truckman, was driving a horse Saturday afternoon that was not educated up to trolley cars.

When one gibbed by the horse it sprang forcibly backward and pushed the wagon to which it was attached against another wagon standing by the curbstone.

Mr. VanArsdale's wagon wheel was "dished."

NEW SOUTH WALES.

The Land Mayor Saunders Considers a Model for Wage-Earners.

In his Free Trade speech at a Democratic mass meeting in this locality a few weeks ago Mayor Saunders referred to New South Wales as a land where the principles of Free Trade were practiced, and it was compared to the adjoining highly protected colonies greatly to the disadvantage of the latter.

We were told that in New South Wales wage-earners were well paid, and all fines of business were in a highly prosperous condition, all as a result of Free Trade.

It seems strange, but it is nevertheless true, that these statements, which happened to be presented to an audience largely composed of wage-earners who ought to know better, were, according to accounts, heartily applauded, as proof conclusive that the Democratic fallacy of Free Trade was the thing for the wage-earners.

It is strange that any body of men as intelligent as the average wage-earners in this country are supposed to be could be fooled by any such nonsense. They could not be, if they would do a little thinking on their own account regardless of the claims of this party or that party.

It would seem to be safe enough for a gentleman like Mayor Saunders to make such statements without fear of contradiction. He, of course, believed them true. But lo! a NEWS reader in Westfield happened to know something about the Free Trade champion Edmonds, and in two masterly communications in THE NEWS showed that the Mayor's statements were the very reverse of the truth. It throws discredit on whatever else the mayor may utter—on this question at least.

And here is something more from the New York Sun of yesterday, about that same New South Wales. Let every wage-earner who thinks Free Trade such a boon read it carefully.

SIR G. DIBBS IN CANADA—THE LORDLY AUSTRALIAN RATHER COOLLY RECEIVED THERE —SOME OF HIS COMPARISONS BETWEEN AMERICA AND NEW SOUTH WALES EXCITING AMUSEMENT—A TICKLY COMMUNISTIC ORATOR.

MONTREAL, August 13.—The conviction is forced upon Canadians that Sir George Dibbs, the Premier of New South Wales, who recently passed through Canada on his way home from London, is an all-around boomer of things Australasian, and especially of the true state of affairs in the colony of which he is the Prime Minister. This opinion, too, is evidently shared by the members of the Canadian Cabinet, for that body neglected to have representatives at Ottawa to meet the Australian Premier when a day or two ago he arrived there, for the alleged purpose of arranging cable and steamship matters, but Chamberlain of Canada did.

While in Montreal Sir George, when he could spare a few moments from his abuse of the American people and their institutions, devoted them to representing New South Wales as a veritable Eldorado. As compared with New York Premier Dibbs said Melbourne and Sydney were far and away ahead of the American metropolis in a great many essential respects. To-day the Echo, a local weekly paper, published a letter from an Australian correspondent, which says:

"Since last writing you things in Victoria have become terrible. The labor market has become glutted and men and women are selling their labor, in some cases for less than 2s. 6d. per spoon. Over 6,000 persons are out of work in Melbourne alone. Processions of unemployed, both men and women, some of the latter with babies in their arms, every day parade the streets, and torchlight processions at night, and in every possible way they can conjure up try to force the government to find employment for them. In West Melbourne, Dr. Maloney, member of the Legislative Assembly, has erected a large tent to shelter those who are homeless, and I can tell you there are hundreds of families who have passed the winter in his kindness. Besides these there are lots less fortunate who sleep on the banks of the river Yarra with nothing but an old bag to cover them, while some who are still worse off have to be contented with a few old newspapers. These are facts, and are not in the least overdrawn. People are evicted by the wholesale, and their effects taken to the auctioneer's to sell to pay for rent to fill the greedy landlords' pockets."

The letter continues: "Now that the Ranaka (black labor) bill has passed the Queensland House we will expect soon to see hundreds of these very undesirable people over here competing with the already underpaid white labor. Melbourne cable tram-way shares that were selling in the boom years at 69 8s. are to-day on the market at 16s. and cannot find a buyer. Men who were in 1888 worth thousands of pounds are to-day, lots of them, almost penniless. Business failures are recorded by the hundred every week."

The Echo's letter has created a great deal of surprise among business men and others who met Sir George Dibbs and listened to his glowing description of the Pacific colony. Especially is this the case among the members of the local Imperial Federation League, who were led to believe that business relations between New South Wales and Canada would be greatly extended in consequence of Sir George's Canadian tour.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

A Rare Instance of Extemporaneous Wit.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—Several years ago, when Avon-by-the-Sea was known as Key East, the writer followed the throng, one Summer morning about eleven o'clock, into the large tent within the grove of the Sea Side Assembly to hear the humorist, Robert Burdette, lecture on Wit and Humor. The crowd within the tent and outside of it had gathered from different places up and down the coast, but each one had come anticipating a strong laugh, a long laugh, and a laugh altogether. Then it was announced that the train on which Mr. Burdette was coming, from a long distance, had failed to connect and that he did not seem appear the lecture would be postponed. We watched patiently for a short time, peering amid the short pines for the short humorist, but he did not come. Meanwhile the choir was asked to sing Little Johnnie Horner and while they were singing the Rev. Dr. Deems came upon the grounds to make the arrangements for the School of Christian Philosophy, which was soon to meet there. He was called to the platform and told that he must help these disappointed people and at least take his turn some. The good natured divine consented and the following is his address as recalled now from memory, and the recollection will have some imperfections. The choir closed with "that a new boy am I." The doctor said: Ladies and Gentlemen—What a brave boy I must be to attempt to take Mr. Burdette's place. Well, never mind, I may some time get him in my debt yet. I may have to lecture some day and the train may not connect and he may get in the woods. I have just been thinking, while the choir was singing the last few lines which I have just heard, that I will try and tell you

HOW TO BUILD UP A LECTURE.

The first thing is to have a subject and something to say on it, and plenty of time to systematize your thoughts. My subject is:

LITTLE JOHNNIE HORNER

I shall treat it first—Genealogically. It is a very grave question how the family name Horner arose. Here is a fine opportunity for speculation, a useful element in lectures. (By this time the audience was in good humor.) Perhaps some of the Horners had a pair of horns over the shop and dealt largely in the meat business. Perhaps on some great occasion some one of the family line blew some great horn. Perhaps some other Horner struck a horn or two. But its a foggy question and I will return to my subject and treat him secondly—Historically. All the great authorities agree in placing him in a corner. Here I would branch off or try to if I were not in a church and explain that I would show that a corner is an angle. Here I would explain the great benefits of mathematical study. I would then dilate a little on the peculiar shades of of honesty and dishonesty on corners in wheat, etc. But, just at this point, would say a few words on the home instinct. Each man likes to have a little corner that he can call his home. Here I would return to my subject, Johnnie Horner and treat him thirdly—Pathetically. The lecture should have something pathetic in it. Now the text says (and the Dr. here assumed his best pathetic tones) that Johnnie put in his thumb and pulled out a plum. This proves conclusively that he was not meaning any else, like a poor, poor, poor boy had no fingers, and only had one thumb. Well now, friends, suppose Johnnie had put in you ought to have a little more than

EDITORIAL NOTES

Long Campaigns versus Short Ones.

There is a growing conviction in the United States that we have too much politics, and since the recent campaign in Great Britain many leaders of thought have declared that our campaigns should be greatly shortened. Just think of it! The Salisbury parliament was dissolved on June 28. The elections were ordered for the first three weeks of July, and the writs directed the assemblage of the new parliament on Aug. 4.

In less than six weeks the government of the United Kingdom is completely changed. The latest expressed will of the voters takes effect in a change of policy in less time than is employed in this country in selecting the delegates to a national convention. The campaign now in progress and already heated must grow hotter and hotter with the perfect day—four months of party warfare. Then, if a new man is elected, seventeen more weeks must pass before he takes the helm, and ordinarily a congress does not even convene till thirteen months after it is chosen. The inevitable result is that elections in this country degenerate into mere questions of money and endurance.

But there is another side to the question and a very important one. "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," and it is quite possible that if Americans did not maintain the habit of discussing political questions frequently there would be evil results. Most assuredly frequent elections make men more tolerant of political differences. Here, for instance, are two men who vote together in the spring elections (in village or township) and on opposite sides at state and national elections. They cannot afford to quarrel seriously.

The educational effect is also important. Go through the rural regions of any "close state" and you will observe that every scholarly young man is called into action early. The people feel that they have a sort of right to the services of the educated. The young student, the young teacher and the young lawyer are expected as a matter of course to "take the stump." The effect is excellent. So, take it all in all, there is no need to hurry in making a change.

It Appeals to the Nation.

The national public school celebration of Columbus day has gained ground steadily since the first proposal for such an observance of America's fourth centennial was made public. It is not hard to discover the forces which have given to this movement the unusual publicity it has attained. It was apparent from the first that it had in it the elements of great success.

It aimed to dignify the one characteristic American institution and bring home to the thought of every citizen what this northern continent owes to free education.

Although the suggestion was first made over a year ago, yet no steps were taken to organize a national movement until last February. This initial effort resulted in the appointment of an executive committee by the American superintendents of education at their meeting in Brooklyn.

Several more weeks elapsed, and the first official message announcing an organization of forces for the national Columbian public school celebration of Oct. 21 was not published until March 31. Today the purpose, aim and scope of the movement is known throughout America.

The practicability of the enterprise received almost instant recognition from thousands of friends of free education. They saw at once that it had a solid meaning and a true purpose. It would impress upon 13,000,000 youthful minds the benefits of free and universal education, and would give before the people a merited prominence to the institution in which is the hope of the future.

Fin de siecle charity is farreaching, and besides providing the actual necessities for the poor it strives to educate and refine this unfortunate class. The People's palace of London is one of these practical charities. It feeds the hungry and reforms the wicked by teaching them the beauty of work. The books, the concerts and other refining influences are also moral factors. Under this same head may be included the present free loan exhibition in New York city, which included more than a hundred real works of art. The title of each picture was given, with a biography of the artist, and criticism which was of assistance in educating the artistic appreciation of these men and women, who rarely have an opportunity of seeing a good picture.

It would seem that the closer the modern inventor imitates nature the more successful he is. For example, the "whalcback" vessel is the most perfectly adapted sailing vessel ever made. Its shape allows a greater speed and it adapts itself to the roll of the ocean much better than any other. When the mechanism of the bird's flying apparatus is discovered we may look for the perfected flying machine.

This political campaign will afford many opportunities to study that curious mental phenomenon known as hero worship.

RIOTERS PLY THE TORCH

The Striking Switchmen at Buffalo Resort to Violence.

CARS BURNED AND SMASHED UP.

They Also Attempt to Ditch a Passenger Train, and It Was Almost a Miracle That There Was No Loss of Life—The Strike Spreading.

BUFFALO, Aug. 15.—The second day of the strike of railroad switchmen was marked with several acts of lawlessness. Cars were set on fire in the Lehigh Valley yard. Other cars were set loose to run down an inclined trestle, causing a wreck. An incoming train was boarded by men on the watch for "scabs" and about fifty men were driven from it. Several men were assaulted during the day. More trouble is feared and there are rumors that the strike will spread. Altogether the situation seems critical.

Somebody, supposed to be the strikers, started three fires simultaneously in different parts of the Lehigh Valley freight yards at East Buffalo. An alarm was sounded and the fire department and the entire reserve force of police were quickly dispatched to the scene.

It was a well planned and well executed plot, as the fires were started where the cars were thickest; no hydrants from which water could be obtained, and at a time when the yards were deserted. Eighteen freight cars, loaded with merchandise, and two passenger coaches, together with two office buildings, were completely destroyed.

Trains Wrecked.

A train of fifteen coal cars which was standing on a coal trestle was started down the incline and crashed into an engine at the bottom, wrecking it and a water crane. Four freight trains on the Lehigh Valley have been derailed in the Lehigh Valley yards. Eight cars were also wrecked on the Erie.

The excitement caused by the fires and wreck had nearly cooled down, when it was started anew by the boarding of the Erie train by the strikers at the William street crossing.

As the train stopped a number of men got aboard and drove something over a carload of men from the cars. The supposed "scabs" ran or were driven in every direction. One at least was badly hurt and removed to the hospital. His name is Henry Shrader. When the incomers had been scattered the strikers let the train go on its way.

While at the hospital Shrader was very anxious that Superintendent Brunn, of the Erie, should know of his condition, saying he and his men had been sent for from New Jersey to take the places of the strikers. His injuries were not serious, being only a few scalp wounds and a badly kicked shin.

Tried to Ditch a Passenger Train.

Many switches were turned, and to avoid danger the engineers of all trains were given positive orders to run carefully through the Buffalo yards and watch for open switches.

A train of perishable goods on the Buffalo and Southwestern division of the Erie was bound for the yards between Seneca street and the Western New York and Pennsylvania crossing and the pins pulled from every car, stalling the train. It was something over an hour before the train could be moved into the yards.

The violence of the strikers reached its highest point when an attempt was made to throw a train loaded with passengers into the ditch at the Erie yards in Cheektowaga. That there were no serious results in loss of life or at least injury to some of the passengers is marvelous.

All city bound passenger trains were obliged to make the run from Lancaster to the city over the eastern track, owing to the blockading of the west bound track by two loaded freight trains which had been brought to a stand-still by the strikers and left disabled on the main track.

The Hornellsville accomodation train, No. 17, reached the William street station, where it was to back up and take the west bound track to make the remainder of the run into the city. Before the train could be brought to a stop, however, and while still moving at a rate of three or four miles an hour, the switch directly opposite the telegraph station was pushed back and the train was sent crashing over the tracks sideways.

Another Fire Started.

There were four coaches on the accommodation, and all were crowded with passengers, many of them standing on the platform at the time. The engine stuck to the track, but the baggage car was thrown diagonally across the space between the main track and the side track into which the switch opened. The first coach was away over to the side of the baggage car and partially on the side track. The last three coaches did not leave the track, and after a delay of about half an hour they were backed on to the west bound track and brought into the city.

The excitement over the wrecking of the train had not died down when the strikers had a new sensation ready. Another fire was started among a number of standing Lehigh Valley empty freight cars about half a mile from the city limits. After the destruction of about twenty-five cars the flames were subdued. The whole police force has been ordered on duty and the situation is hourly growing worse.

The roads which will probably be tied up next are the New York Central and West Shore. Action on the question of striking on these roads may possibly be taken today. The strike on the Erie and Lehigh Valley lines has extended to Waverly and Sayre on the Lehigh, and the traffic on that line is at a standstill. A train of beer stands on an Erie siding there, the switchmen refusing to allow it to be switched to the Lehigh tracks to complete its destination. The division superintendent of the Lehigh has telegraphed to Owego for the sheriff to come to his aid, although the men are making no demonstration.

Erie Men to Go Out.

It is expected that the Erie men will also go out and the traffic all through those towns will be at a standstill. The men are noncommunicative and their future movements are unknown.

The position of the other railroad orders toward the strikers is a subject of considerable interest. The Switchmen's Mutual Aid association, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Men, the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors up to a year ago were in a body known as the Federation of Railway Employees. On account of the action of the trainmen in taking the place of switchmen on the Burlington this body was practically dissolved. This leaves the switchmen practically acting alone, but as the Brotherhood of Conductors and Brotherhood of Trainmen also have grievances, they have promised to join the switchmen in their fight.

JOHN G. WARWICK DEAD.

He Was the Man Who Defeated Major McKinley for Congress.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—Congressman John G. Warwick, of the Sixteenth Ohio district, died in this city at 9:30 o'clock last night. Mr. Warwick's death had been expected, and there has been away all the members of his family were at his bedside. The remains were taken to Massillon, O., his late home, this morning over the Pennsylvania railroad. Funeral services will be held Thursday. The following committee accompanied the body: Senators Brice, of Ohio, and Hill, of New York; Congressmen Hare and Donovan, of Ohio; Caruth, of Kentucky; Catchings, of Mississippi; Heard, of Missouri, and Bynum, of Indiana.

J. G. WARWICK.

Mr. Warwick was serving his first term in congress, having been elected by the Democrats (in consequence of the change in the boundaries of the district) to succeed Major McKinley. He received 20,059 votes against 19,757 for McKinley. In the house he was the chairman of the committee on enrolled bills. Mr. Warwick was sixty-two years of age and was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, on Dec. 25, 1830. He came to the United States in 1850, and has since been largely interested in milling, mining and farming.

FASHIONS

FRILLS OF FASHION.

Little Suggestions in Regard to Prevailing and Coming Styles.

The latest thing in French shoes is patent leather with red heels.

Indian cottons, in their bright hues and patterns, are extreme novelty for shirts and blouses and even for loose vests.

Camel's hair and English serge in blues and deep reds, dahlia and Vandyke browns will be among the early fall materials.

London furriers announce the furs for the coming season to be unplucked otter, the three kinds of fox, sealskin and Russian sable.

Coat basques cut off at the waist and prolonged in coat tails at the back, are being made up in heavy and serviceable material for early autumn wear.

It is said by those in authority that the fashionable coat of the future will be the long redingote, cut double breasted, with wide Directoire revers, big buttons, and a double cut triple cape.

A fancy button to be used this fall is a large ornamental circle, covered with tan, kid or leather, with a medallion of white lace in the centre. They are to be used on white or black coats.

Women with oval faces, and, unfortunately, many with less classical contour, have adopted a fashion of rolling the hair back to the head and tucking a ribbon in and out of the coils to tie in two pointed ends on top.

Among the colors adopted by the Paris syndicate for fall are "Coquelicot," a bright brick red; "Angeligue," a pale apple green; "Paradis," bird of Paradise yellow; "Diavolo," a bright cinnamon shade; "Egyptienne," a brownish yellow; "Trianon," faded crushed raspberry, and "Eminence," a deep red purple.

THE GIRLS WERE ABDUCTED.

They Were Drugged, Taken to Philadelphia and Then Deserted.

CHESTER, Pa., Aug. 15.—The missing young women—Lizzie Mellor and Emma Blizzard—who mysteriously disappeared from their homes in this city on Wednesday evening, arrived home yesterday. They reached Media in a dazed condition and stopped at the residence of Charles Matthews, a brother-in-law of Miss Mellor, who brought them to Chester.

The girls claim they were drugged by two men whom they met at Lincoln park, and after missing the last boat for Chester were taken to Philadelphia and forced to enter a cab. Instead of being driven to the Broad street station, the girls were taken to a strange hotel, where they were afterward deserted by their abductors. Miss Blizzard bears the marks of her male escort's fingers on her throat, and both girls are prostrated at the Mellor residence. A physician says they are suffering from hysterics. The parents will prosecute the abductors.

The Search for British Gold.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—The searchers for the $5,000,000 in guineas that went down in the British frigate Hussar off Port Morris in 1780 have struck pay mud at last. A single guinea of the date of 1778 has been brought up in the monster dredge, and that fact, taken in connection with other events of the search that have happened during the last few days, makes it at least possible that a discovery of the long lost treasure in bulk may be made at any time.

Rask Will Not Accept.

VIROQUA, Wis., Aug. 15.—Secretary Rusk was interviewed at his home here as to the possibility of his being a candidate for governor. In reply the secretary said: "I have served my time in that position, and I am duly grateful to the people for their continued confidence and favor. The mention of my name in that connection at this time is without my consent and against my wishes. I will not accept the nomination."

Canada Reasserts Its.

MONTREAL, Aug. 15.—An official statement is published to the Canadian government organ today declaring that an assurance will at once be given to the United States government that the present system of rebates on canal tolls on grain coming through the St. Lawrence will be abolished at the end of the present season.

The Biggest in the World.

MOUNT WASHINGTON, N. H., Aug. 15.—The big electric search light which has been placed here recently was put to its first real time last night. Although the atmospheric conditions were unfavorable the light is pronounced a success. It is the largest search light ever built and is of 100,000 candle power.

Lieutenant Macdonald Saved Him.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Lieutenant Godfrey H. Macdonald, aid-de-camp on General Howard's staff, jumped overboard from a propeller at midnight and rescued a man from drowning, and in doing so nearly lost his own life.

GIANT CHURCH STRIDES

Peculiar and Interesting Data from the Last Census.

THERE ARE 150 DIFFERENT BODIES.

The Twenty Million Communicants Own 142,256 Churches, Which Are Worth, in Round Numbers, $651,000,000—The Colored Organizations Swelling.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—Superintendent Robert P. Porter makes public the preliminary figures of the church statistics of the eleventh census, which are both curious and interesting. There are shown to be in the United States nearly 150 separate and distinct church organizations holding to widely different creeds, varying greatly in practices and representing all possible variations of church polity.

There are a dozen different branches of the Presbyterian family. There are some denominations that will answer only to the simplest, most indefinite title—for example, the Brethren. There are various churches that claim to be simply Brethren. Four of these are branches of what are popularly called Plymouth Brethren, but they do not own the title "Plymouth," nor is there any designation which they have adopted by which these four bodies of Plymouth Brethren may be distinguished from other brethren. There are two Reformed churches, known as the "Reformed Church in America" and the "Reformed Church in the United States."

Some Peculiarities.

Some of the denominations were never numbered before, and it required the utmost powers of persuasion to induce them to submit to the process. Sects have been found and enumerated who claim less than 100 communicants. Here are seven sects which altogether number now only about 4,000 persons, and yet own church edifices worth $70,000: Shakers, Amanuites, Mennonite, Harmony, Separatists, New Icarian and Altruists. All societies observing the communal life, whether founded on a religious or secular belief, are embraced in the returns. Two of these societies are not religious, the Icarian and the Altruist, but are organized to apply a social principle.

After the seven great denominations—Congregational, Lutheran, Methodist, Presbyterian, Roman Catholic, Baptist and Episcopal—have been accounted for, the other 134 religious associations represent less than 15 per cent. of the church edifices and less than 11 per cent. of the aggregate value of church property.

Some of the subdivisions of the Baptist churches are peculiar. The uninitiated person thinks it difficult to define "the difference between the Seventh Day and the six principal Baptists, between the Madhead Baptists and the River Brethren, between the Primitive and the Free Will, between the Original Free Will and the old Two Seed in Spirit, between the General and the General Free Will. Besides these there are also the Regular South, Regular North and the Regular Colored Baptists. The Society of Friends are divided into the Orthodox and the Hicksite, the Wilburite and the Primitive branches. These divisions were originally seen different branches of the Lutheran church in this country.

Churches and Their Wealth.

The following table shows the number of churches in the United States today as compared with forty years ago:

Denominations.	1890.	1850.
Congregational	5,106	1,674
Lutheran	7,231	4,046
Methodist	54,534	14,894
Presbyterian	14,796	4,824
Roman Catholic	9,251	1,222
Baptist	48,495	12,150
Episcopal	4,712	1,417
All other	3,542	2,471
Total	98,163	142,256

The value of church property for the same period is as follows:

Denominations.	1850.	1890.
Congregational	$ 7,867,915	$ 36,845,427
Lutheran	2,850,000	34,218,754
Methodist	14,816,148	130,018,059
Presbyterian	12,796,000	98,676,775
Roman Catholic	9,251,756	118,303,516
Baptist	11,401,167	60,068,529
Episcopal	12,784,270	75,506,291
All other	15,500,566	66,777,080
Total	$87,446,371	$631,221,341

In point of number the Methodists stood first in 1850 and still retain the position. Nearly one-third of all the church edifices belong to the Methodist church, while the Baptists can lay claim to more than one-quarter. Relatively speaking, the Episcopal church retains about the same position as the other denominations as it did in 1850. On the other hand, the Roman Catholic church has advanced considerably, from a trifle over 2 per cent. of the total number to over 6 per cent. In point of value, however, the Catholic church has made still greater strides, from an ownership of 10½ per cent. of all the church property to an ownership of 18¾ per cent. In this respect the Catholic church now ranks second in importance, being exceeded only by the Methodist church, which returns a trifle over 20½ per cent. of the total value. In 1850 the value of church property of four denominations—Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist and Episcopal—outranked the Catholic church in this respect.

Twenty Million Church Members.

According to the returns of the Eleventh census, the number of communicants in five principal religious denominations for which the statistics have been completed are as follows:

Denominations.	No. of Communicants.
Congregational	526,172
Lutheran	1,349,314
Methodist	4,589,775
Presbyterian	1,277,854
Roman Catholic	6,257,000
Total	14,000,115

The communicants of the Baptist and Episcopal with those of other denominations will bring the aggregate up to about 20,000,000 in all.

The statistics of the colored denominations likewise show great progress. Their denominations are divided into Regular Baptist, Primitive Baptist, African Methodist Episcopal, African Union Methodist Protestant, African Methodist Episcopal, Zion, Colored Methodist Episcopal, Evangelical Missionary church, Cumberland Presbyterian, Disciples of Christ, Roman Catholic, Protestant Episcopal, Methodist Episcopal South, Methodist Protestant, other colored Methodists and Congregationalists. They have a total membership of 2,379,160 and own church property valued at $123,406,000.

A THEORY OF INSANITY.

Fall River Police Think Lizzie Borden Is Demented.

SEARCHING AFTER AN ACCESSORY.

The Officials Still Reticent and in Secret Consultation—The Supposed Bloodstains on the Axe—A Bitter and Determined Legal Fight is Anticipated.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 15.—The statement that the police are looking for an accessory after the fact in the Borden murder is partially confirmed by the fact that the receiving tomb at Oak Grove cemetery is still guarded night and day. The day after the block burial, with which the police deceived the women who attended it in the role of chief mourners and chief suspect, they detailed men to guard the receiving tomb in which the bodies were placed to await the second autopsy. Since the second visit of the surgeon the vigilance has never been relaxed for an instant. One man still guards the house itself, though there is no one beneath its roof except John W. Morse, who is under $500 bail, and Emma Borden, whose testimony is not considered of importance.

A statement given wide publicity was that the substance found on the handle of an axe taken from the Borden cellar had proved under a microscope to be blood, and that it was identical in composition with that which stained the lounge and carpet where Andrew Borden's body lay. This is merely conjecture. Professor Wood has made no report on the subject of stains. Medical Examiner Dolan positively denies that he has heard a word from Professor Wood on the subject. To him the report would come if it had come at all.

A Great Legal Fight.

But that reason the medical examiner says the stories to the effect that this damaging evidence has been completely established are purely imaginary. The reiterated statement that a hatchet found had been fitted into the wounds in Mrs. Borden's skull is equally foolish.

The defense would be strong enough in any case, but if it could be established that the axe which is now so slightly marked by blood had been placed in the wounds its value as evidence would be gone in a twinkling. There is half a million of money in Andrew Borden's name. The others of the family connections are worth from $150,000 to $250,000. What money can do to save the name of the family and the life of one of its members will be done.

Andrew D. Johnson, the prisoner's counsel, was never known to waive an examination. He will fight from the start. The inquiry will be resumed on Tuesday. The chief witnesses yet to be heard are Professor Wood, who is the state analyst and microscopist in the present case, and Medical Examiner Dolan, whose testimony will supplement that of Professor Wood in fixing the time of death and the interval elapsing between Mrs. Borden's death and that of her husband.

A Double Hold on Lizzie.

The inquest, after one session, will not be adjourned from day to day until the date of the prisoner's examination. By proceeding this way the state will be able to take an advantage of any new evidence which develops in the interval.

The wording of the warrant on which Lizzie Borden was arrested shows the keenness of the district attorney, as it is a constitutional provision that the life of no person shall be placed in jeopardy for the same offense. Here was a double murder. The warrant only mentions the killing of Andrew J. Borden alone. It does not even take cognizance of Mrs. Borden's death. By this provision the state secured a second hold upon the prisoner. It provides for all emergencies. It is possible that the evidence in hand, circumstantial in nature as it is, might not warrant the court in holding Miss Borden for the grand jury. She might escape through the legal technicality loophole. In either case she would be rearrested and charged with the murder of her stepmother.

The warrant on which she is now held was based on the murder of the old man, because most of the evidence bore more directly upon that crime. The facts that Mrs. Borden was killed an hour before her husband, Bridget Sullivan was in a position to have seen any stranger had he approached or left the house during that time, and that Lizzie was then alone in the house with her stepmother, afford ground for strong suspicion, but for little else.

Consulting in Secret.

The door of the guest chamber was closed, and did not disclose its secret until after the father's body had been found in the sitting room below. If there was any noticeable noise during the tragedy it must have been supposed to originate in the case of Mrs. Borden's death, for she, the surgeon believes, was standing before the north window when the assassin struck the first blow.

No one believes her fall, though she weighed more than 200 pounds. The circumstantial chain is stronger in the case of Mr. Borden's death. The case as it develops—the preliminary examination will find bearing—may disclose evidence bearing upon Mrs. Borden's death. Such testimony will be competent for the state to use should it become necessary to convict the prisoner on a second charge of murder.

The police were in consultation for hours arranging the evidence already in and that yet to come. They are still working on one or two outside clews. The case is likely to prove one of the most notable legal fights in the history of the state.

It is upon secret in police circles that the state officers believe that Miss Borden was insane at the time of the murders, if she committed them.

A Crazy Man's Crime.

CAREY, Ills., Aug. 15.—A stranger met Howard Fuller, the sleuth, on his death with a razor and then threw himself under a train and was mashed dead. He was evidently crazy.

His Life Had Been Threatened.

LOUP, La., Aug. 15.—E. W. Curry, member of the Democratic state committee, shot and killed William F. Ellis, a tough citizen, who had repeatedly threatened Curry's life.

MINERS APPLY THE TORCH.

More Rioting in Tennessee—Convicts Released and Terror Reigns.

KNOXVILLE, Aug. 15.—Bloodshed, the torch and riot have resumed sway in the mining districts, and a reign of terror has set in that may culminate in fearful loss of life. The free miners at Tracy City burned the stockades there and sent 300 convict miners away on a train which they stole and placed in charge of Deputy Warden Burton and twenty-five guards. Between Sewanee and Mont Eagle the convicts cut the train in two and ten or fifteen made a break for liberty. Several shots were fired. Matt Wilson (white) was killed and Tom Smith (colored) wounded. Six or eight made good their escape. The train was held at Cowan until orders to come on were received from Nashville.

It is feared that the Inman mines will be attacked, and the guards who brought the Tracy City convicts here have been sent flying there. Governor Buchanan is very nervous and anxious over the Inman convicts, some 400 in all. He is waiting to hear from the sheriff of Grundy county, who fired that he would probably call for troops today.

Governor Buchanan said: "I am tired of this foolishness, and I am going to put a stop to it for all time. I am going to issue a proclamation offering a big reward for the leaders if nothing else happens, and if anything else does happen, then upon their heads I will hurl the swords of the Tennessee National guard."

Only the Beginning.

Tom Carrick, the leader of the miners, says that this is only the beginning; that the miners had been imposed on by a standing army, who insulted them with their airs, and that soon the flames shall crackle in the stockades at Inman and Coal Creek.

The miners have held meetings every night for a week past in the valley, and have sworn that the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railway company shall not operate the mines in that region again. They swear also that the state shall take its convicts away and only free labor can operate the mines if they are ever reopened.

Another reason for fearing an attack is that the labor unions all over this section are better organized than ever, and are urging the men who sympathize with labor to withdraw from the militia. This is having the effect to keep some men from volunteering, though there have been few if any desertions. But this action of the labor unions encourages the miners to believe that they will be supported, and that the state cannot materially increase its force if it should become necessary.

There is much anxiety here about Coal Creek and Oliver Springs. Whether the leaders can control the mob or not remains to be seen. The largest military companies in the state are under arms awaiting instructions from the governor and the adjutant general.

Two thousand trained soldiers can be put in the field at once if hostilities begin. A dispatch from Coal Creek states that all is quiet there, but the miners are at arms and alert for any attack. At Oliver Springs 500 convicts are at work and there are few guards.

The leading miners say that unless something is done there is great danger of bloodshed.

Landed to Be Arrested.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—T. De Burgh, alias E. T. Burke, arrived from Liverpool, charged with swindling a London jeweler out of $300 worth of diamonds by passing worthless checks. He claims to be a resident of Buffalo and was very indignant at his arrest. His wife, a handsome woman, was on the wharf to meet him, and sobbed bitterly at her husband's misfortune. The jewelry was found on his person.

Brothers Fight a Duel.

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 15.—It is reported in this city that a duel was fought yesterday at Woodstown, Salem county, between John Graves and William Graves, both men are brothers, and, it is said, fought the duel over a young woman with whom both were in love. The weapons used were pistols. Both men are said to have been wounded.

A Mining Camp Wiped Out.

SILVERTON, O., Aug. 15.—The entire town of Red Mountain, a lively mining camp a short distance from here, was wiped out by fire. The total loss is estimated at $275,000, with but little insurance. The fire started a short time before daybreak and was the work of an incendiary. The town had no fire apparatus and the flames had full sway.

Dr. Taylor to Leave Hartford.

CAPTAIN MILLER FOUND.

Discovered in a Field Fearfully Bruised, Almost Naked and Incoherent.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Aug. 15.—Captain Harvey Miller, for whom all Middletown has been searching since last Friday morning, was found at 8 o'clock last night in a pasture field belonging to J. C. Marvin. He was fearfully bruised and scratched and was lying on the grass without raiment, save a shirt. He is alive and will probably recover.

When Mr. Marvin approached him he recognized him and asked to be taken home, also for food. Mr. Marvin summoned aid and drove the rescued man to Rockfalls, where medical aid was summoned. Miller is conscious and able at times to talk, but much of his talk is incoherent, and he is entirely unable to give an intelligible account of his wanderings since Thursday night.

WORKMEN CRUSHED.

Two Killed and Twelve Injured by the Collapse of a Building.

PORT ORANGE, N. J., Aug. 15.—As the result of a terrible accident which occurred at the little mining village of Ogden, N. J., fifteen miles from here, one man is dead, two are momentarily expected to die, and nearly a dozen more are seriously, some fatally, wounded.

The accident occurred at the works of the New Jersey and Pennsylvania Ore Concentrating works. A large building under process of construction, on which about twenty men were engaged, collapsed suddenly by the breaking of a derrick with which some heavy timbers were being hoisted into position. The timbers fell on the partially erected building, and in a moment the whole mass had fallen, burying under it the whole gang of workmen.

The works inside several buildings, in which over 100 men are employed. All work in the works was at once suspended and arrangements were made for extricating such cases for the dead and wounded.

Two men were taken out dead and twelve workmen were removed from the ruins, all seriously wounded. Families of men known to have been employed in the works gathered around the ruins, and the work of the searching party was accompanied by moans and screams from women and children. The searchers were directed to the wounded in many cases by their moans and cries. Thomas A. Edison, who spends much of his time at the works, personally superintended the work of rescue.

The dead so far as known are Charles McConnell and an Italian laborer, name unknown.

The injured are William Rock, Ezra Zarch and a man named Pierce. The other injured persons are Italians, who speak no English and are known only by numbers. The victims were taken to St. Joseph's hospital, Paterson.

SOME ODD STORIES.

INTERESTING INCIDENTS RELATED BY MAJOR A. R. CALHOUN.

How Allan Smith Suffered from the Treachery of a Fellow Miner and Was Rescued from Death's Door by His Sweetheart—A Perilous Adventure.

It had been raining for a week at Jack son's ranch in the Wet mountains, southwest of Canyon City. Four miners lonied out at the rain and felt much of it that leaked through the roof of their rudely constructed hut. Near by, Sparks creek, usually clear, shallow and lazy, was a roaring yellow torrent.

"Two more feet and the erik'll be up to the cabin," said young Allan Smith, as he entered and shook himself like a hound after a swim.

"Did you ever see sich rain?"

Sim Jenks did not expect an answer to this question, and so did not feel offended at the gloomy silence of his comrades.

"What makes it so bad," said Dick Gross, a fat, hoary set man, with a husky voice and a red face, "is that our grub and drink ain't ekal. I could eat all the feed on hand and then feel holler; but there's drink enough, sich as it is, to supply all creation and have some to spare."

HE SAW THE GLEAM OF A KNIFE.

"We can do nothing now till daylight, then we must try to climb the cliffs and get over to Hemphill's; that's the nearest place to find grub," said Allan Smith, as he tried to trim the sickly yellow lamp, fastened to a projection of the clay chimney.

Had Hemphill's much been farther off, or had there been closer places of refuge nearer, still it would have been the first place to suggest itself to young Smith's mind, for Sol Hemphill and his wife always made him as welcome as their own boy, now away to the Twin lakes, and the pretty face of Lucy Hemphill always glowed with a more than friendly light when he was near.

"About gittin up them cliffs, Allan, let me say it ain't in any Rocky mountain sheep to climb up 600 feet of jagged, slippy wall; and if a big horn couldn't make it, how can I?" and Dick Gross, with a lugubrious expression, looked at his short, fat legs.

"We've got to leave here, and that right off! See! the water is up to the door!" shouted a powerful, middle aged man, who up to this time had been sitting in moody silence.

"You are right, Bulger; the logs are shaking. Let everything go but what can be carried without trouble," said Allan Smith, as he strapped his pistol belt about his waist.

Bulger secured the buckskin bag that contained the washings of the past six weeks, while Dick Gross made a pillow for the bag containing their limited supply of bread and meat. Sim Jenks thought there was no need of loading himself down with anything, so he threw his pistols, rifle and mining tools into a crevice in the rocks back of the cabin.

Already the water was knee deep in the cabin. To help each other and to keep from parting in the inky darkness they held on each to a rope. Jenks going ahead as guide and Allan Smith bringing up the rear.

They had but just left the cabin when it went down with a crash. On through the inky darkness, stumbling over slippery rocks, they kept till they reached the dreaded cliffs which walled in the valley. At the foot of the cliff roared a torrent that a half mile farther down leaped into the profound canyon of the Arkansas.

Bulger was just ahead of Allan Smith. The latter slipped in the ascent, but before he could recover, by the light of a lightning flash that darted down, he saw the gleam of a knife; the next instant the young man was rolling down the cliff with the severed end of the rope in his hand.

He struck against a loose rock, which broke his fall in part, and the rock slipped from its moorings and went thundering down to the torrent beneath. Clinging with desperation to a slippery point that overhung the yeast of waters, Allan Smith had time for a world of whirling thoughts.

He felt sure that Bulger cut the rope. What he had long suspected he now plainly saw. The man hated him, and that hatred had its foundation in Lucy Hemphill's rejection of Bulger a year before.

Gradually Allan's hold on the rock loosened. He fell sheer down, with a prayer to heaven for mercy on his lips.

The others struggled up through the crevice, guided by Jenks, and at length stopped for breath on a little plateau 600 feet above the flooded valley. They discovered that Allan Smith was missing—at least two of them did. Bulger appeared to be as much alarmed as the others for the fate of their comrade, but it was not a time for regrets. They waited on the plateau till morning, when the rain turned into snow and the men were chilled to the bone.

Sim Jenks, who had behaved so nobly the night before, was stiff in every muscle and his hands were cut by contact with the rocks, while Dick Gross, hungry and exhausted, declared his inability to go on.

Telling Jenks and Gross to stay where they were while he went off to look for the trail, Bulger examined his pistols and rifle with unnecessary care, his companions thought, and then started off.

"I don't much like the way Bulger's actin," said Gross when the man was out of hearing.

"And it's my opinion that he's a cussed murderer," replied Sim Jenks, as he exhibited the end of the rope that had been cut.

The friends were still looking at the rope when bang! bang! bang! came the report of a pistol from the rocks above, and the two men fell bleeding on the little plateau. Bulger was now the undisputed owner of all the gold in the bag.

Allan Smith was a powerful swimmer and he did not lose consciousness when he struck the water. When he did lose it, or what followed his wild swim and what seemed like death in the darkness, he never could tell.

When he came to he was under the trees near Jackson's ranch. A fire burned near him. He was lying on blankets and Sol Hemphill and a neighbor were standing near. There was a soft hand on his forehead, and looking up he saw Lucy Hemphill's beautiful face bending over him.

Sol Hemphill explained how about 2 o'clock the night before his daughter cried out in her sleep that there was danger to Allan Smith in Jackson valley. She dressed and insisted that her father should saddle two horses, and carry along blankets and provisions, and she further insisted on going with him. At daylight they reached the valley and found what seemed to be the dead body of Allan clinging to a log when the flood had gone down. They soon found there was life in him.

As soon as Allan could speak he asked about his companions. That afternoon Sim Jenks and Dick Gross, both badly wounded, were brought down to the ranch-house camp, and the next day all were taken over to Hemphill's.

Two years afterward Allan Smith, on returning from a summer hunt in the mountains, said to his wife, as he exhibited the articles:

"Lucy, I found these rusty pistols and this bag of gold dust on the body of a skeleton over near the Puntia pass. The pistols once belonged to Badger. The gold will go to Sim Jenks and Dick Gross. Wish it for me, you say? My darling, am I not rich in having you?"

A Bachelor's Sermon.

Howard Somers is a well known New York lawyer and a good fellow, though until a few months ago it was thought he was a confirmed old bachelor. I recently dined with him, and afterward the conversation turned on an extension of woman's rights, of which, I must confess, I am a strong advocate.

"Woman's rights!" roared Mr. Somers, and he laid down his cigar, pulled down his waistcoat and pulled up his shirt collar. "Why, sir, women have now more rights than men, and still they are not satisfied, and they will not be satisfied so long as a man has a right left. I see you smile at this, but, sir, I am right, entirely right. And, by Jove! I often wish I was a woman.

"Here in the state of New York her legal status is better than mine, excepting the doubtful right to vote. Why, sir, women are free to marry or make wills at an age two years earlier than men. If she marries her property is hers, free from her husband's control. Her earnings are her own, and if her husband does not support her she can jerk him before a court and keep him in jail till he has given security to provide for her; and all this time she need not contribute one cent to her husband's support, even if she is rich and he is destitute. A husband cannot sell real estate without his wife's consent, while she can sell her own real estate without consulting him.

"The husband cannot deprive the wife of a life interest in one-third his estate, while she, is free to will her property as she pleases, nor is she required to leave him a cent of money or a foot of land.

"Further, sir, the New York husband—and this is so in nearly every state—is responsible for the wife's misdemeanors. If she commits an assault or a trespass, the husband must pay the bill or go to jail. The wife cannot be imprisoned in any civil suit, while the husband has no such exemption, even where the wrong is of her doing.

"Such being the state of affairs, sir, I ask you if it is not time we downtrodden men got up and demanded our rights. As a matter of fact, the man in this state has no rights compared with a woman's."

After hearing this tirade, the truth of which I could not deny, I became more and more convinced that my friend Somers was, if not a woman hater, destined to continue a life of single misery. Great, then, was my surprise on receiving last week cards announcing the marriage of my friend Somers to a young widow lady of whom I had heard much, and who was reported to be beautiful and accomplished.

Yesterday I met Mr. Somers on Broadway, looking ten years younger and seemingly as happy as a man well could be. I congratulated him on his marriage and then jokingly reminded him of his bitter sermon on the unusual privileges of women.

"Oh, that's all right," he said in his cheery way. "I still stick to what I said. I took good care not to marry a native of New York state, where the wife has more privileges than the husband. You must meet Mrs. Somers; she's a splendid woman and a true Westerner, born in a place where the status of man and woman is as it should be, and I am going to live in her old home."

"Where is that?" I asked, quite sure that Somers was going abroad.

"Oh," he responded, "her estate is over in Jersey."

A Popular Bore.

They tell this story in the London clubs of Vernon Harcourt, the "Historicus" of the London Times:

Four gentlemen met at the club one evening when the conversation turned to the subject of bores. Each one of the four declared that he knew the most disagreeable man in the world. The dispute becoming animated, it was agreed that the four bores should be brought together at dinner.

"We shall dine at the Star and Garter next Thursday," said one, "and there each man is to bring his own particular bore, so that we can see him and compare him with our own."

The day and the hour arrived and three carriages, each having but one occupant, drove up to the door of the famous inn.

Three of the four gentlemen had been disappointed in their man by a previous engagement.

At length the fourth carriage appeared and out of it stepped Harcourt.

The three men who had preceded looked at each other in surprise, then all exclaimed, "By George! here comes my bore!"

The four had but one man. Harcourt was not let into the secret, and if he had been his conceit was such that he would have regarded it as a practical joke.

Colors of Business Signs.

In signs there is a great deal in choosing colors that will strike the eye and allow the lettering to stand out boldly. White letters on a blue ground have been found to work the best perhaps. A well known patent medicine and a familiar cleaning compound are assiduously advertised in those colors, which have also been adopted by the elevated roads. The latter formerly used white lettering on a green background, a decidedly poor combination, which was soon abandoned.—New York Times.

PORTRAITS OF COLUMBUS.

The public school pupils, who are going to have the lead all over America in the celebration of the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus, are already asking how Columbus looked.

Many leading American publications have recently contained timely articles on the great discoverer, and the variety of portraits which has accompanied these articles has been surprising.

By the highest authorities it is conceded that there is no likeness of Columbus whose claim to consideration is indisputable.

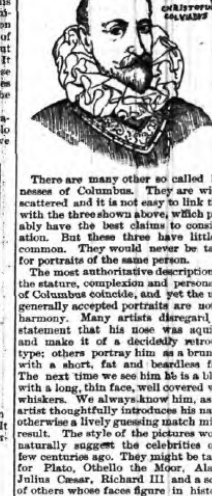
From Oviedo and his own son Ferdinand—two persons who knew him—we have descriptions of his appearance, upon which must be based our judgment of the alleged portraits.

From them we learn that his face was long, neither full nor thin: his cheek bones rather high; his nose aquiline; his eyes light gray; his complexion fair and high colored. Up to the age of thirty his hair was of light color, but became rapidly gray after that age. It must be admitted in the face of these details that not one of the portraits gives very positive evidence of presenting the great discoverer as he lived.

The earliest claimant for consideration is a wood engraving by Paolo Giovio, published in 1575, which we give.

Next in point of antiquity is the engraving called the De Bry portrait. It shows a head covered by a three cornered cap, the face being short and broad and having the characteristics of the Dutch in a marked degree. It does not correspond with the best authenticated descriptions. De Bry claimed that the original canvas from which it was taken was painted from life, by order of Ferdinand, the king.

Jomard published in 1845 a portrait in support of a Titianesque canvas, which he had obtained at Vicenza. This picture bore the inscription "Christophorus Columbus." He claimed that the features were in accord with the description of writers contemporaneous with Columbus. The pointed beard and Plemish ruff he accounted for by assuming that they were the additions of a later hand. These and other accessories, however, prevented the acceptance of Jomard's views.



There are many other so called likenesses of Columbus. They are widely scattered and it is not easy to link them with the three shown above, which probably have the best claims to consideration. But these three have little in common. They would never be taken for portraits of the same person.

The most authoritative descriptions of the stature, complexion and personality of Columbus coincide, and yet the most generally accepted portraits are not in harmony. Many artists disregard the statement that his nose was aquiline and make it of a decidedly retrousse type; others portray him as a brunette with a short, fat and beardless face. The next time we see him he is a blond with a long, thin face, well covered with whiskers. We always know him, as the artist thoughtfully introduces his name; otherwise a lively guessing match might result. The style of the pictures would naturally suggest the celebrities of a few centuries ago. They might be taken for Plato, Othello the Moor, Alaric, Julius Cæsar, Richard III and a score of others whose faces figure in history. Even a composite of the many portraits could not blend or unite in one the discordant conceptions which we see every day. We must know Columbus by his deeds, and not by his pictures.

There are 216,330 school houses in the United States and only 83 per cent. of them are in cities. This is a striking illustration of the economy possible in a lense population. Every one of these schools should be represented in the national Columbian public school celebration of Columbus Day, Oct. 21.

A Fatal Illusion.

A philosopher had the following inscription carved on the door of his garden: "This garden shall become the property of the man who can prove that he is perfectly contented."

One day a neighbor came and said, "I have come to take possession of the garden; nobody in the whole world, I can truthfully say, is more content and happy than myself."

To which the philosopher phlegmatically replied: "You are laboring under a delusion, sir. If you were thoroughly contented you would not covet my garden."—Mondo Umoristico.

A Revelation.

Young Mr. Yeerwed had been garing for a long time at the antics of his little three-months-old baby. The child was sans hair, sans teeth, had a red face and a frightful yell, but she was his child and he loved her. At length the little one looked up and laughed, and the overjoyed Yeerwed, turning to his wife, ejaculated, "By Jove! Maud, it actually seems as though baby was almost human."—Harper's Bazar.

BREVITIES.

—There seems to be an unusual number of runaways now-a-days.

—The temperature of the water along the New Jersey coast has averaged about 70 degrees through August.

—A girl out west died from chewing the ends off a box of matches. Verdict of the Coroner's jury: "Died of a light heart."

—A man known about town as Texas struck a drunken man named Krimey on Front street, opposite Somerset street, at noon to-day for calling him names. There were no arrests.

—A colored woman became almost hysterical at the camp meeting recently. She was "touched" and gave vent to her religious enthusiasm in such a marked way that friends took her home.

—The quickest way to learn a woman's feeling toward you, remarks an observant exchange, is to slyly kiss her. If she gives you a little slap you've got her; if she hauls off with you, you haven't.

—But if a workman at Asbury Park rolls up his shirt sleeves he must first provide himself with a certificate that he is going to work and not going to bath. If he don't he is liable to be mobbed by the police.

—Louis A. Savacool, a Warren county farmer, reports among his crops 135 tons of hay from seventy acres, 4,000 sheaves of wheat from eleven acres, and about 3,300 sheaves of oats from twenty-five acres. Farmers in this section also report good crops.

—Two young wheelmen ran into each other in front of Laine's barber shop on Park avenue this morning. One of the lads had under his arm a five-pound box of candies, which were instantly distributed over the roadway. He recovered part of the box and a handful of marshmallows.

—A communication has been received from "D. A." regarding an article published as a warning to purchasers. The business man referred to, while calling attention to the thefts of a dishonest clerk, never intended to even hint at such a state of affairs being general, but merely to give good business advice to patrons.

—The 16th, 17th and 18th of August, says a weather prophet, will show another oppressive warm wave, which, unless it breaks into violent storms, will continue and increase in heat, but change heat and drought about the 23d and 23d. At these dates storms will appear. More rain than before in August is promised from the 27th to the last. Much relief from heat will follow these closing August disturbances.

—Black knot on plum and cherry trees is easily noticed. If the diseased parts are cut away, they should be burnt, as the spores will ripen on the ground as well as on the limbs of the trees. Painting the tree with linseed oil is claimed to be a preventative, but the frequent spraying with copper solutions have given good results. The kerosene emulsion is excellent, but kerosene is liable to destroy the trees also.

—The following is said of the minstrel troupe which is to perform here as advertised elsewhere. Gorman Minstrels attracted a very large audience to the Grand Opera House, last evening, this being their first visit in this city. The company that the Gorman boys have gathered around them is a very large one, most of them being young, full of life and eager to please. In a word it may be said that Gormans' Minstrels come here almost as strangers, but they will go leaving a host of friends behind them, as the company comes nearer being a first class minstrel show than anything seen here in a long time—Pittsburgh Leader.

—The New Jersey Central ferryboat, Central, which left her Liberty street slip for Communipaw at half-past seven o'clock yesterday morning, broke her shaft in midstream and she floated helplessly for nearly an hour. There were two hundred passengers on board, many of them anxious to get away on the morning trains. The Central was finally towed into Communipaw. The boat was then hauled off for repairs. Passenger traffic over the Reading and Lehigh Valley lines was delayed more than an hour by the accident.

—The Junior Order United American Mechanics of New Jersey are making extensive preparations for "American Day," which will be celebrated this year on Wednesday, August 17, at Asbury Park. The programme is arranged to include a mammoth parade of the fast-growing patriotic order. There will be no speech-making, as on former occasions. The parade will take place in the afternoon, and as nearly all the hundred and twenty-five councils in New Jersey will participate, the procession will be an imposing one. It is expected that fully 30,000 visitors will participate in the celebration.

—The Central Railroad Company will sell at Sheriff's sale, on August 29th, between the hours of ten and four, at the freight house, Elizabeth, all the unknown pieces of uncalled-for baggage that accumulated in the old union depot during the thirty years of its occupancy. The sale includes 200 hundred trunks, boxes, bags and valises of all shapes and sizes, nearly 600 umbrellas and canes of all descriptions, a large number of small parcels picked up in trains where they had been left by careless passengers and parcels for afterward. The sale is peremptory, and is made by order of President Maxwell, of the Central Railroad.

Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Fenton, Jr., and family of Rockview avenue have returned from Seabright, N. J., where they spent the Summer.

Mr. John Bremmer of Harrison street North Plainfield, returned yesterday from Europe. He reports very cold weather during his stay.

Mr. George W. Morrison of THE NEWS is spending a brief season at Avon, where his sister, and a large circle of Plainfield friends have been nearly all Summer.

"The City of New York" brought over on its last and record making trip a passenger whose shoe is in the city of Plainfield. The passenger was Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh.

Mr. Samuel J. Moore, Poughkeepsie's leading shoe dealer and foreman of Phoenix Hose Company No. 1 of that city, is visiting his friend, Chief of the Fire Department, T. O. Doane of West Fifth street.

Chief Ranger Samuel Lewis, De Witt Frazee, Lewis Kane and John Kelly, Jr., members of the Ancient Order of Foresters of this city, by invitation joined the Round Brook Foresters and took part in the big parade of the order yesterday in Newark.

The friends of Mr. Robert E. Spooner, formerly of this city, but now of Brooklyn, were pleased to see him in Plainfield, Sunday. It was their first knowledge that he had recovered from the effects of an almost fatal accident which happened some time ago.

The following telegram has been received from Chicago:

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—Colonel Elliott F. Shepard, of New York, has written to the World's fair directors, offering one dollar each, or any coins which the directors may name, for the first 10,000 souvenirs delivered in New York. The directors replied to Colonel Shepard that he will receive the first coins if he is the first to get in his check in payment for the amount he wants at one dollar per coin.

That Fever Case.

Health Inspector M. Marvin Dunham, when seen yesterday by a NEWS reporter regarding the scarlet fever case in Stiger's Alley, an account of which was published in Monday's NEWS, said, "the place has been thoroughly fumigated and all danger, I think, guarded against. My opinion is that the disease was spread by some boy, of a poor family, who had a slight attack, recovered and went around as usual. That class seldom get proper medical assistance."

Three Cars Thrown Down an Embankment.

Three freight cars, part of a train attached to Central Railroad engine No. 107, were derailed and thrown down an embankment at South Branch, N. J., yesterday. The accident was caused by a broken axle. No one was injured.

The wrecking car was called out today to pick up the cars.

Matters of Law Before Justice Nash.

The case of Monk vs. Vail, on contract, is returnable August 22.

The case of Bradley and Currier Co. vs. Noel is returnable, August 22.

The sale of Babbitt's goods to satisfy a tax claim, was, by request, adjourned one week.

—A piteous tale of woe, told by a woman carrying an infant, has been used as a lever to work on the purses of Elizabeth people recently. Investigation proved that the woman was a fraud. She may visit this section of New Jersey next.

A RUNAWAY LAST EVENING.

A Father and Two Sons Thrown Out. The Phaeton Wrecked.

Last evening as Mr. Lovejoy of Dunellen was taking his two little boys out for a drive, his horse took fright on Front street, it is supposed at the headlight of a locomotive, and ran away, overturning the phaeton, and injuring Mr. Lovejoy. The boys, although thrown under the vehicle, which was wrecked, escaped unhurt.

Mr. Edward Sebring, who happened to be out driving in the vicinity in his carriage, took Mr. Lovejoy home. Dr. P. J. Brakeley, who was summoned, found no bones broken, but one shoulder was severely sprained. Suitable remedies were applied.

Mr. Lovejoy was unable to leave his home to-day.

CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE.

The Borough May Some Day Have a Big Bill to Pay.

On Greenbrook Road, between Grove street and the bridge, is an uncovered culvert about three feet deep which is, at night, a constant menace.

Some time ago the attention of the authorities was called to it, but nothing has been done.

The other evening, a farmer driving homeward, turned his wagon in a little too far and the wheels slipped into the unguarded ditch, fortunately without damage. By the aid of near-by residents he was helped out of his difficulty.

Unless the place is suitably protected by a stone cover or a fence, some day a serious accident may happen laying the Borough or county open to a suit for damages.

POLITICAL POINTS.

The Democrats of North Plainfield are working hard to get up enough enthusiasm to have a meeting. A call has been posted for some weeks and it is now fondly hoped enough of that necessary "enthuse" has been spread to bring out a few Democrats this week.

It is stated that the Central New Jersey Herald, published in Elizabeth, will soon have a penny edition. On sale principally at Elizabethport, to continue, at least, until the Presidential campaign is over. There is only one penny paper in Elizabeth, the daily Leader, and it is independent in politics. Its proposed rival is to be strongly Democratic.

The Republicans of Elizabeth have leased the old mansion of Dr. Chetwood on Broad street there, and will convert it into a political headquarters for the campaign. It comes high, but John Kean, Jr., the wealthy Chairman of the State Republican Committee, and a promising aspirant for the Governorship, will foot the bill, as he is bound to have a suitable place for the clans to assemble where the work of pushing along his boom can be industriously prosecuted. The building will be handsomely fitted up, and will be taken possession of before September 1.

Respecting the Street Railway.

Common Council ought to see that the city gets some compensation for the use of its streets, by the Plainfield Electric Railway. If the Railway company is doing such a fine business as we are told by the Press, it can easily pay five per cent. rental for receipts, as was provided in the ordinance when the company originally applied for a franchise, but which the combine struck out, giving the city nothing. The company claimed that it did not expect to pay except upon the five cents. If this were so it would indicate that there was no crying necessity for the trolley, at least, although some safe and rapid system is needed. But in any event the city ought to be reimbursed for the use of its streets as other cities are.

Provision ought also to be made to have the company protect the city from suits for damages resulting from the injuries to person or property caused by the trolley, in some cities these injuries amounting on an average to three per week.

And before any franchise is granted the way in which the streets have been left by the company ought to be investigated. According to reports there has been some very crooked work, which is to the injury of the city.

Of Interest to Wheelmen.

Sanctions have been granted to the following clubs to hold race meets: Elizabeth Athletic Club, Elizabeth, N. J., Sept. 5; Maryland Bicycle Club, Baltimore, Md., Sept. 21 and 22; Columbia Wheel Club, North Attleborough, Mass., Aug. 27; Rutherford, N. J., Sept. 5; Rockville Wheel Club, Rockville, Con., Sept. 3; Rover Bicycle Club, Tonawanda, N. Y., Sept. 1; Batavia Wheelmen, Batavia, N. Y., Aug. 17.

Zimmerman, the speedy New York bicycle rider, rather overestimated his ability at the second day's meet of the Toronto Bicycle Club. In the half mile he was handicapped twenty yards, and of his own accord added ten yards more to the handicap, and came in second, two yards behind Hyslop of Toronto. Zimmerman's time was 1.05 2-5.

The mile open was won by Zimmerman in 2:24 3-5. C. J. Iven of Rochester won the one mile, 2:50 class, in 2:42 3-5.

—Marsh, Ayers and Co. have an announcement of special interest to bicyclers.

THE ONE DAY IN THE YEAR

The Famous "Salt Water Day" of the Farmers.

Last Saturday was "Salt Water Day" for the farmers and back-woodsmen of Monmouth, Middlesex and Ocean Counties. From time immemorial the day has been observed and its advent is looked forward to with as much interest as Fourth of July, Christmas or New Year's Day.

The day was selected by common consent as the particular Saturday during the Summer when the farmers could take a holiday without interfering with any important work. Haying and harvesting are now over, and with part of the money realized from the sale of the farm products the farmer takes his family to the seashore to enjoy the usual picnic. It is called by some "Big Sea Day," and the name is no misnomer. Sea Girt is the popular resort for the farmers of the nearby counties.

The first instalment came at 6 o'clock Friday night, and from that time until noon next day a steady stream poured into the camp. Every road leading to the beach was thronged with all sorts of rigs packed full of people, with a bag of provisions for the horse tied underneath the vehicle and a basket full of victuals stored away in the wagons. It was a curious sight to see the long procession making its way to the camp, and the native and city folk turned out by the thousands and looked at the novel parade.

At early dawn the camp showed signs of life, booths and fakirs' stands were erected, and by nine o'clock everything was in full blast. Three thimble-riggers came to grief. They carried on their gambling operations so openly and swindled the unsuspicious farmers out of so much money that they were arrested, but were subsequently released.

The most interesting event of the day was the dip in the surf. The old canvas top prairie schooners were converted temporarily into bath-houses, where the women folks changed their every-day costume for an old calico dress. A pair of trousers and a shirt constituted the men's attire. After the dip there was dancing. Late in the afternoon the campers gathered up their traps, harnessed their horses and by six o'clock were on their journey homeward.

Many Plainfielders were noticed among the crowd of spectators who always attend when these happy farmers take, as some one said, "their annual wash."

A TIMELY QUERY.

A Chance for an Enterprising Church to Take the Lead.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—The bad treatment Mr. Fountain's wheel received on Sunday, while he was teaching his class at Hope chapel, brings to mind the wise forethought of that church in Connecticut which has provided a secure place for the wheels of those members of the congregation who finds that a cycle facilitates their attendance upon the services of the church and Sunday-school.

Which of our Plainfield churches will take the lead in this innovation here?

The young athlete has been wearing the suit all season at other resorts and had experienced no difficulty on account of its "immodesty." Mr. Forst had intended spending the balance of the summer there, but this episode was too much for him, so he packed his grip and left.

A WILD WEST IN NEW YORK.

Steers Get Loose and Many People are Hurt.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16th. (Special.)—About nine o'clock this morning a steer got out of the Rothschild cattle yard at Forty-fifth street and First avenue. He rushed into the street, and becoming alarmed at his surroundings, started down First avenue. Policemen pursued and wounded it. A crowd collected and the steer charged it.

Edward McGowen of 543 West Fifteenth street was caught on its horns and tossed in the air. He was gored in the right side, and when he fell his head was badly bruised.

He also received internal injuries. McGowan was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital, where, it was said, he is in a precarious condition.

Several children were also reported hurt.

A bystander cut the animals throat.

Soon after this steer got loose, three others broke out from the same yard and went galloping across town.

One turned down Carmine street. At Bleecker street Policeman McDonald tried to stop him and had a narrow escape from death.

The steer made a lunge at him, ripped his coat of his back, and went on down the street with the policeman's blouse hanging on his horns.

Later the steer was killed.

LABOR TROUBLES.

The Striking Switchmen Confronted by Militia.

BUFFALO, N. Y., August 16. (Special.)—At any moment there may be a serious conflict between the striking switchmen and the 74th and 65th regiments of the 3d Brigade, which were called out last night and which went into camp at three o'clock this morning, among the cars in the Lehigh yard at William street just outside the city line.

Since yesterday morning the strikers have been drinking heavily, and are in an ugly, bloodthirsty humor. They know that at least two train loads of Reading men have been run into the city to take their places, and they threaten riot if the new men are put to work.

Opened a Rival Post Office.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 16, (Special.)—Deputy Marshal Buckley has gone to Dousman, Wis., to arrest C. H. Neff for a curious offense. Neff is a blacksmith and has a shop opposite the Post Office in that town. He and Postmaster Reid got into a difficulty, and to spite the official Neff established a rival post office. This he did by placing a box in his shop and inviting his friends to place their letters in there. Twice a day he carried the letters to the train, thereby cheating the Postmaster out of his cancellation fees.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Chicago in 1856.

In Putnam's Monthly for June, 1856, there is a well written paper on Chicago which is now of value as material for history, and is really quite funny as a piece of unconscious humor. Superlatively unconscious, if one may say so, for the writer evidently meant to be impressively serious, but he ventures on prophecy and points out some evils which may become serious if allowed to go unchecked.

He is astounded that a city of 90,000 people should have sprung up there in one generation; he ventures to guess that the newly discovered stone "on the line of the canal" (Joliet marble) will prove of great advantage if the city continues to grow, and assures his readers that there really are in the city 9 omnibus routes, 16 newspapers, 60 clergymen and 220 lawyers! He then warns the people of certain dangerous tendencies, winding up with these words:

Speculation and too great eagerness to get rich, with a lack of those healthful restraints which exist in an older community, have combined to weaken the moral sense of the people in regard to business transactions. There is a leniency exhibited toward sharp bargains, under the coloring and actual misrepresentation, which, if allowed to go unchecked, will by degrees destroy that vital morality which is indispensable to the prosperity of a commercial state.

Even then thirteen lines of railroad might be said to center in the young city, though not nearly so many entered it. In 1850 it had a population of 29,963, and that of 90,000 for the winter of 1855-6 (when the writer in Putnam was there) is only an estimate—nearly correct, probably, for in 1860 it was 112,172 and in 1840 it had been but 4,470. Even in 1856 Chicago claimed to be "the first grain market in the world, the first lumber market in the world and the third city in the Union in postoffice revenues."

Probably the claim was correct, for in the calendar year 1855 Chicago received 20,067,702 bushels of grain, packed 80,-293 hogs and received 306,647,401 feet of lumber and 158,647,250 shingles. In its first tax year the city's valuation was but $1,667,445, and our author was very properly astonished to learn that in 1855 it was $36,922,893—possibly the valuation of one of the leading wards of today. It is scarcely necessary to add that he found the going very bad, even on the principal streets, and discovered that the city was built on a "peculiar sort of black, fat mud," which, he added, "it is hardly necessary to describe to English readers." He was sure, however, that there was nothing like it in London. Verily, there was not.

He ventures to predict that tunnels will be put under the Chicago river, but the place "must ever remain the city of bridges." If it continues to grow it will "some day rival Venice in this particular." "Stone is as yet too expensive for pavements, and so the sidewalks and carriageways are planked; the planks actually float and the carriages send up jets of water." And in the line of eating, at the Briggs House he found "prairie chicken, whitefish, venison and wild goose so common that they scarcely deserve notice." He also tried the amusements, and was highly entertained by "North's circus and Mr. Neafie's appearance in 'Jack Cade.'"

Such was Chicago in 1855-6. Today the city has at least 1,200,000 inhabitants. The story of its growth in other lines would not be repeated. Rhetoric is badly out of place. The plain figures are more eloquent than the most impassioned eulogy. Chicago is indeed the wonder of the modern world. No other city ever grew so rapidly for so many years, and so far as human eye can see it must continue to grow at nearly the same rate through its second half century, for the country naturally tributary to it has but begun to develop.

That "uneasy lies the head that wears a crown" is shown by the following curious list, which appeared in the New York Recorder: "It appears that 364 have been ousted from their thrones, 108 have been condemned to death and executed, 31 have committed suicide, 34 are on record as having been placed under restraint in consequence of having become insane, 123 have been killed in warfare, 25 have been tortured to death and 231 have been officially declared to have been assassinated. The number of monarchs who are suspected of having been assassinated is infinitely greater."

A colored man in Newark, N. J., paid the penalty of politeness thus: He sat between two ladies in a street car, when he was seized with an uncontrollable desire to sneeze. Not wishing to offend them, he stuck his head out of the window and struck it against a pole supporting the electric light wires. He was knocked back into the car senseless. The same blow, physicians say, would have killed a white man. This is according to the law of compensation perhaps.

The Chicago Tribune gives pictures of some of the many storied buildings that pierce the sky in that city. These immensely high structures are becoming a necessity in the large cities, but how monstrously ugly they are! Is there not artistic architectural talent enough in America to plan a sixteen story house that shall not look like a shoebox set on end?

SOLDIERS UNDER ARMS

OVER 200 CARS HAVE BEEN BURNED

The Mail Trains Are Stalled and the Federal Government Has Been Notified—Several Assaults Made—The Situation Is Becoming Extremely Critical.

BUFFALO, Aug. 16.—Two regiments of state troops have been ordered out to suppress riotous demonstrations here consequent upon the switchmen's strike. They are resting on their arms, ready to respond at a moment's notice.

Passenger trains arriving are carefully inspected by strikers, who go through the cars inquiring of each passenger whence he came, whither he is going and what his business is. Trains of freight cars have been fired and strikers have mocked those who strove to quench the flames. Travelers have been robbed, though it is said that the robbers are not strikers, but lawless men who have taken advantage of the situation.

Perishable freight is no longer received at some points along the lines affected. The railway authorities express determination to continue the struggle, and the switchmen manifest equal determination to carry their point.

Mail trains have been stopped and the government has been notified, which adds to the seriousness of the situation, and scenes of further violence are feared. The hospitals are all in readiness for emergency calls. Every ambulance in the city stands in front of the hospitals ready for service. The full force of surgeons has been ordered on duty and is in the hospitals in waiting.

Forced to Quit Work.

A party of strikers set fire to twenty empty cars on the Erie tracks at Cheektowaga, a mile beyond the city line. In all about 250 cars have been burned. The strikers held a meeting at Tracy City behind closed doors. No information was given out. Grand Master Sweeney was present, and it is reported that he censured the men for their recklessness in destroying property.

Sheriff Beck met with poor success in answer to the call for deputies at 40 a day. They deserted as fast as they reached East Buffalo, and the sheriff decided to call out the militia.

The sheriff and Chief of Police Morgenstern visited the scene of the strike and gave instructions to their men. There is no possible doubt now that the strike is a serious one, and that the strikers will stop at nothing to compass their ends. The policy of the strikers seems to be to stall trains by sidetracking them, delay them by pulling pins, and wreck them, if possible, by letting them run into open switches. The strikers are said to be ready to adopt any methods of attack calculated to delay or stop trains and block the traffic of the road.

The Situation Worse.

The situation at the Erie yards is worse, if anything, than yesterday and the day before. The switchmen's grievances have gone out, and only Mr. Barrett, the general yardmaster, remains on duty. "There is not a wheel moving in any of the yards," said one man. But this can hardly be taken literally, as many passenger trains are moving. What was meant by the expression is that no freight trains were being moved and that all the switching engines were tied up. That seems to be the fact, for there are at least twenty-five switch engines in the yards that cannot be stirred. Every now and then one of them is moved back and forth along the track to show that the switchmen do not hold complete sway.

At least 900 men, switchmen, assistant yardmasters and others are out. These are confined entirely to the three roads on which the strike originated, but it is more than likely that men on the roads will join in the strike.

A quarter of a million dollars' worth of property is spoiling in the thousand or more cars which cannot be moved. The cutting of the wires and poles has seriously affected the train dispatcher's business, and he now has linemen at work repairing the work done by the strikers. All the wires which run into the Erie depot, of which there were at least a dozen, are down, and it will be several hours before communication can be established again between the disconnected points.

A message from the head office of the Philadelphia and Reading road in this city states that the road will issue a formal announcement of a reward of $5,000 for information leading to conviction of any person injuring its property or interfering with its employees in the discharge of their duties.

Several Assaults Committed.

Several more or less serious assaults were committed by strikers. Charles A. Horsley, of 328 North Division street, was working in the Erie yard. The strikers told him to desist, but he refused. A striker beat him on the head and face with a coupling pin. He was taken to the Emergency hospital. Four men were arrested for the assault.

Henry Schrader, of Port Jervis, who acted as conductor on a train bringing workmen from the east to take the strikers' places, was badly beaten. As the train came into the yards it was boarded by the strikers, and Schrader was at once recognized. He was knocked down with a coupling pin and then kicked about the head, face and neck.

Conductor Nevells, of Elm street, was ordered out with an east bound train. As it was leaving the yards he ran into an open switch, and cutting the train in two Nevells took the engine to run to the shops for the wrecking office. Upon his return he was struck with a pin and knocked senseless.

Frank Gilday, a brakeman on the Erie road, was attacked by a gang of strikers in the yards this morning. He was struck on the head with a coupling pin and received a severe scalp wound.

Sweeney Frowns on Violence.

Frank Sweeney, grand master of the Switchmen's Union, was seen, and in reply to questions he said:

"I believe in fighting fair. I do not believe in injuring property nor in assaulting men, nor in any lawless act. We can do the roads harm enough by withdrawing our men. The stalling of freight cars does a great deal more injury than the burning of a few cars. These lawless acts are not countenanced by me nor by the local leaders of the strikers. At the meeting of the strikers at Gaenzel's hall on Saturday I advised the men to be peaceable and to win the strike on its merits. They promised to do so. This morning they assure me that they have taken no hand in the lawless acts, but that others whom they could not control are responsible for what has been done."

Mr. Sweeney said that the Erie and Lehigh switchmen had not been treated in such a way as to keep them in good humor. Their advances had been spurned by those in high authority.

"The matter could have been easily settled," Mr. Sweeney said, "if the officials had consented to a compromise with the men, but instead they tried to bulldoze. I don't believe in bulldozing on either side. The officials should not resort to it and neither should the men.

"I strongly disapprove of the strikers injuring the property of the companies or attacking the men who have taken their places, though I claim the right for the strikers to reason with nonunion men, and by peaceable means to try and persuade them to keep away."

"Will you remain here for some time?" was asked.

"Yes, I will stay awhile, but I cannot tell how long. I am here in an advisory capacity and will watch the situation closely. I hope there will be no more lawless acts. They block our efforts and do injustice to the cause of the strikers."

MOB LAW IN TENNESSEE.

A Bloody Battle Expected Between the Miners and the Troops.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 16.—The East Tennessee miners are again seeking vengeance. About 350 of them, heavily armed, marched into Inman, a little mining town in the Sequatchie valley, about a hundred miles from Chattanooga. Citizen packed up and fled. The mob went to the coal mines and captured the seventeen guards, marched them to the stockades and put them under guard. The 272 convicts who were at work were then taken to Victoria, a little village nearby, packed in box cars and sent toward this city.

Governor Buchanan telegraphed the sheriff of Marion county to summon a posse and prevent the burning of the stockades.

The sheriff telegraphed to the governor in reply that he was helpless and could do nothing. The governor has not indicated what further action shall be taken, but says he will go to the full limit of the law. He can only order out the troops when called upon by the sheriff, and the members of the military must be sworn in by the sheriff as civil officers.

A Bloody Battle Expected.

Trouble is expected at other mines, and the whole of East Tennessee is in a state of high excitement. The miners at Tracy City pulled the coke ovens out of the ground and destroyed them, which causes untold damage. They say that the mines shall never again be operated unless by free labor.

Tom Corrich, who led the miners in Tracy, was leader of the same crowd at Inman. Coal Creek, it is said, is their next objective point. A bloody battle is expected, as the 300 soldiers at the garrison will fight.

Attorney General Norman has gone to the valley, and all the military in the state are under arms, awaiting orders.

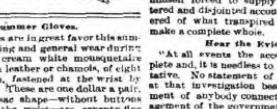
The 250 convicts released at Tracy City on Saturday night are still there under guard in a special train and were marched to the penitentiary. Five of the convicts attempted to escape. Matt Wilson was killed and John Smith fatally wounded. The other three were recaptured. The convicts released at Inman yesterday are now on a train at Nashville and will arrive tonight. The penitentiary is crowded with 1,400 convicts now, and the governor says there is no place to put them.

Keetive at Homestead.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 16.—The locked out men at Homestead are somewhat restive. Some of the idle men at the nonunion mill and the militia fired several shots to scare them away. Epithets were exchanged over the fence between the strikers and some of the millmen, also between strikers and some men at work on the new houses for the nonunion men.

Miners Threaten Destruction.

HAZLETON, Pa., Aug. 16.—About 500 miners have struck, and threaten destruction to the company's property and serious trouble is apprehended.



Summer Gloves.

White gloves are in great favor this summer. For outing and general wear during the day are worn white mousquetaire gloves of wash leather or chamois, of eight button length, fastened at the wrist by three buttons. These are one dollar a pair, and those of sac shape without buttons and close at the wrist—are seventy-five cents. All such gloves are bought one or two sizes larger than kid gloves, and are worn loose on the hands. White undressed kid gloves are chosen for evening full dress wear in various lengths, either in eight, twelve, eighteen or twenty-four button lengths, as may be required to make them meet the sleeves of the dress.

Very light tints are used among colored gloves. For dressy day wear, for calling in the afternoon and summer receptions, dressed kid gloves are worn in very light pearl tints, with slight self colored embroidery on the back. These are closely buttoned at the wrist by four buttons, and cost $2.50. Undressed kid mousquetaire gloves gloves in light tan and gray shades remain in favor for church and street wear. Black stitching on the back of light gloves is still worn, but that done in less conspicuous self colors is preferred.

For croquet, tennis and traveling, dark gloves of heavy kids, with close wrists fastened by four buttons, are chosen by many instead of the wash leather outing gloves. These gloves are tilburyed—faced inside the hands—with lighter leather for lady wheelmen and for horsemen, and are finished with four large brass buttons. For steamer wear are soft leather gloves with brown seams. These are of stylishly heavy leather, with soft finish like that of undressed kid, and are in light tan, gray and dark reddish brown shades.—Harper's Bazar.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 16.—The steel works at Stowe, near Pottstown, will, it is said, double its force and run on double time from the 25th inst.

MISS BORDEN'S ARREST

Marshal Hilliard Says There Is Ample Cause to Justify It.

THE ACT WAS CALMLY DETERMINED

She Was Not Imprisoned in Haste Nor Without a Full Understanding of What Her Incarceration Means—Sympathy for the Accused.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 16.—City Marshal Hilliard was shown about fifty editorials clipped from various papers published in New England during the last few days. Most of them reflect a belief in Miss Lizzie Borden's entire innocence of the crime charged against her, and assail the Fall River police for prolonged delay in the case and for directing their efforts wholly toward proving Miss Borden guilty. Marshal Hilliard read most of the editorials carefully, and flushed once or twice when his actions were criticised pointedly. He spoke warmly, and said it was about time out of town people suspended judgment on Lizzie Borden and her arrest by the Fall River police.

"I started," he said, "on an outside clew within half an hour of the discovery of the tragedy on information furnished by members of the family. I have chased down more than a hundred outside clews within ten days. My officers were as skeptical as I was about who committed those crimes, and it was not until all the evidence was in that action was taken. You and every other citizen must remember that the newspapers have not given anything near the facts disclosed at the inquest.

"This case will depend on circumstantial evidence wholly, and the people's interest cannot be subserved by throwing the evidence into the hands of the defense until a hearing or trial takes place. You and the public may rest assured of this fact: The district attorney and myself are satisfied that the public authorities have ample cause for holding this girl, and she has not been imprisoned in haste nor without a full understanding of what her arrest means."

The Borden Family Honor.

A great deal has been said in out of town papers about the cruelty of detaining a finely bred and sensitive woman, as Miss Borden is. One of the greatest complaints that has been made against the administrator of police affairs has been that he was too easily moved by the feelings, too sentimental to be a police officer. That he has a very kind heart and a courteous manner is acknowledged by all the members of the Borden family, and they do not blame the authorities for the harshness of the arrest.

A great deal of nonsense is being published in connection with the case about the Borden family honor. It is to point the most important member of the Borden family said for publication: "The honor of the Bordens, whose names are so closely allied with the honor of the state, is not to be affected by a police suspicion, perhaps resting justly, on Miss Lizzie Borden. No true Borden has ever placed a stumbling block in the way of the law, and no member of my family will in any way hamper the police in their investigation. The statement that $1,000,000 of Borden money will be used in balking the authorities is untrue and ill advised."

The Fall River Globe says editorially: "There is a strong disposition on the part of a great many people to condemn the district attorney for ordering the arrest of Lizzie Borden on the questionable assumption that he lacked sufficient evidence upon which to base a presumption of guilt. This criticism is based largely on the strength of what has been given by the press as a full account of the evidence elicited at the inquest.

"It is hardly necessary to say that the published stories of the proceedings are very incomplete and fragmentary, perhaps some of them mythical, and a great deal may have been colored according to the fancy or imagination of the reporter who had found himself forced to supply links in the scattered and disjointed accounts he has gathered of what transpired at the inquest to make a complete whole.

Hear the Evidence.

"At all events the accounts are incomplete and, it is needless to say, not authoritative. No statement of what transpired at that investigation bearing the indorsement of anybody connected with the management of the government side of the case has been published. The latter have persistently declined to be interviewed on the subject and have refused to be led into an admission or denial of the correctness of what has been published.

"Taking such evidence, therefore, as has been printed as a basis on which to insist on the guilt of the accused or to condemn the action taken by the district attorney, it is manifestly unjust to both parties. It is an instance of where a little knowledge is a dangerous thing, and in view of all this fact's conclusions are to be deprecated. Many new facts have transpired since the arrest to indicate any change in the situation favorable or unfavorable to either side, and unless some should we can only repeat what we have already advised—that there should be a suspension of judgment until the prisoner has been granted its case before a judicial tribunal, after which the public will be able to discuss the matter intelligently. In advance of that it is difficult to understand what value can be put upon any opinion which individuals may form."

Christian Endeavor Sympathy.

The following was sent to the Taunton jail this morning:

We, the members of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, desire to extend our sincere sympathy with her in her present hour of trial, and our confident belief that she will soon be restored to her place of usefulness among us.

The most important subject of talk in town is that relating to the prospects of securing an impartial jury in the hearing for Miss Lizzie A. Borden next Monday.

The evidence submitted at the hearing will be of a positive nature, based on statements made by Bridget Sullivan relating partially to Miss Lizzie's manner before and after the crime, her instructions to the servant to wash windows in remote parts of the house; also her conduct toward her stepmother during the past six months.

THE ARENA OF POLITICS

Clarkson Postpones the Republican League Meeting.

THE VICE PRESIDENTIAL SITUATION

Weaver, the Third Party Leader, Says Field Will Surely Be Elected and Tells the Reason Why—Buchanan Bolts the Democratic Party in Tennessee.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Politicians here were considerably surprised by the fact that James S. Clarkson, of the National League of Republican Clubs, has sent out notices all over the state to the effect that the convention of the State League of Republican Clubs, which was to have been held at Buffalo, Sept. 1, has been postponed until Sept. 15. The postponement was decided upon at the meeting of the national executive committee of the Republican party last Friday. The following is the notice:

HEADQUARTERS REPUBLICAN NATIONAL LEAGUE,
NEW YORK, Aug. 15, 1892.

The date of the Republican National league convention, which heretofore for Buffalo, Sept. 1, is hereby postponed until Thursday, Sept. 15. This postponement, which is done with the concurrence and advice of Chairman Carter and the national committee, is made because the earlier date would prevent the attendance of a large number of Republican clubs in the western states, where the harvest of the various crops will not have been finished by Sept. 1.

By the middle of September the party will have perfected its organization in all portions of the country, many new clubs will have been organized and a much larger number of campaign marching and uniform clubs will be able to attend the national convention.

The cooler weather of the later date will also be more favorable and indues a larger general attendance than a convention held in the closing days of August.

The national committee of the league calls upon all subordinate clubs to join actively in stimulating the organization of marching clubs to the end that a rivalry between the different state organizations in the number of clubs sent to the national convention may make the pro ceedings at Buffalo more interesting and enable it to give a still greater energy to the important campaign now in progress.

J. S. CLARKSON,
President National League.

THIRD PARTY CAMPAIGN.

Weaver Tells Why Field Will Surely Be the Next Vice President.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Dr. C. W. Mc-Cune, chairman of the executive board of the Farmers' Alliance, who is directing the campaign of that organization as far as it is controlled from that city, has figured out to his own satisfaction that whatever may be the fate of Weaver, the Alliance candidate for president, Field, their vice presidential candidate, can count his calling and election sure.

"I feel," said Dr. McCune, "that Field's election is practically assured. He is bound to be elected if the election of the president is thrown into the house, which is very likely to happen. The house would of course elect Mr. Cleveland to the presidency. Then the senate would have to select the vice president from the three candidates who had received the highest number of votes at the polls. The constitution prohibits the president and vice president both coming from the same state, and the house having chosen Mr. Cleveland first, Mr. Field would be rendered ineligible. The senate would therefore be compelled to choose between Mr. Stevenson and Mr. Field, and there is little room for doubt that they would select the latter."

Will Control Congress.

The People's party managers claim that at the very lowest calculation they will have 100 members in the next house. In addition to a number of Republicans and Democrats who will be pledged to Alliance or People's party principles. They expect to dictate the selection of the next speaker and direct the policy of the house.

All the People's party and Alliance managers in Washington deny the story that they have a secret, oath bound order known as the "Band of Gideon." It is regarded as a hoax, probably founded on the negro ministers' song which has the "Original Christies" made popular fifty years ago, "If you belong to Gideon's band, then here's my heart and here's my hand." Mr. Loucks, president of the National Farmer's Alliance and Industrial union; Congressman Jerry Simpson, of Kansas, and other prominent lights in the People's party repudiate knowledge of any such organization within their ranks.

POLITICS IN DELAWARE.

Two State Conventions and a Host of Minor Matters This Week.

DOVER, Aug. 16.—This week at the state capital will mark the beginning of the campaign in Delaware. Today the Democratic state convention is being held. On Wednesday evening the Republican State league will meet in fifth annual convention and on Thursday the Republican state convention will take place. The Democrats will nominate a congressional candidate and three presidential electors (one from each county —New Castle, Kent and Sussex) and choose a state central committee. The Republicans will nominate a candidate for congress and the electors, and the State league will elect officers, a state executive committee by districts, four delegates to represent Delaware at the National league convention to be held in Buffalo, Sept. 1, adopt a platform and organize for active business.

Presidential Electors.

By virtue of a party rule the Democrats will nominate Congressman John W. Causey, who has already served for two years. There is some uncertainty as to who the Democratic presidential electors will be. Hon. Thomas F. Bayard is mentioned as New Castle county's representative, as is also Colonel Harry A. Nowland. Samuel W. Hall is looked upon as Kent county's choice, while ex-Congressman Edward L. Martin is regarded as the possible Sussex county elector.

Rev. Jonathan S. Willis, a Milford Methodist clergyman, who is known as the "preacher politician," will probably be the Republican congressional nominee. J. Francis Bacon, of Georgetown, and Dr. George W. Marshall, of Milford, are also in the fight. Colonel Henry J. Dupont will be the Republican presidential elector from New Castle county, and Joseph D. Wurtbaker, of Kent, and Josiah Marvel, of Sussex, are spoken of as the other electors.

The Democratic convention will have 188 delegates, while the Republican convention delegates will number 160. Colonel William H. Stevens, of Seaford, and General James H. Wilson, of Wilmington, the respective chairmen of the state central committees, will call the conventions to order.

Buchanan a Candidate.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 16.—Governor Buchanan has announced himself as an independent candidate for governor. He says he loves the Democracy, but the citizens have called on him to run and he will do so.

GLADSTONE VISITS THE QUEEN.

He Submits to Her Majesty the Names of the Members of His Cabinet.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The Daily News, while acknowledging that no authentic news of the composition of the new cabinet can be obtained before Mr. Gladstone's return from Osborne House, gives the following list, which, it says, is correct probably in every particular: Premier and first lord of the treasury, W. E. Gladstone; lord chancellor, Lord Herschell; chancellor of the exchequer, Sir William Harcourt; foreign office, Earl of Rosebery; home office, H. H. Asquith; war office, Campbell Bannerman; admiralty, Earl Spencer; chief secretary for Ireland, John Morley; president of the board of trade, A. J. Mundella; local government board, Henry Fowler.

Mr. Gladstone visited the queen at Osborne yesterday. After Mr. Gladstone had partaken of luncheon the queen gave him audience, when he submitted the names of the members of his cabinet.

The queen's dinner guests at Osborne House included, besides Mr. Gladstone, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Connaught, Princess Henry of Battenberg and the Earl of Ducie. Mr. Gladstone left Osborne House this morning.

Loaded with Dynamite.

HUDSON, Mich., Aug. 16.—Jennie Tabor, of this place, who was arrested because her younger brother discovered twenty dynamite cartridges concealed about the house, has made a startling confession. She said she was going to blow up the house, together with her brother and sister, to secure the whole of her dead father's $5,000 estate. She says that she was instigated by her lover, William Meirs, who also recently compelled her to go with him and rob George Goodwin's residence, and with the money they got bought the dynamite cartridges.

A Chief of Police Accused.

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 16.—Chief of Police Harry C. Eldredge was charged at the meeting of the city council with receiving money from keepers of a half dozen notorious resorts for "protection." Testimony was submitted to the effect that he had personally called at the resorts and demanded sums ranging from $50 to $300. The council suspended the chief pending further investigation.

Cruel Father Bill.

GRAVESEND, L. I., Aug. 16.—W. C. Daly, better known as Father Bill, the great turfman, was arrested charged with brutally beating James Keefe and William Houlihan, two boys apprenticed to him to be made jockeys. The boys were so badly bruised that the justice refused bail.

Searching for the Abductors.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 16.—The father of Irene Blizzard and the sister of Eliza Moler, the young women who were abducted from Chester and brought to this city, have reported the matter to the police, and the young men who are alleged to have drugged the girls are being sought for.

Suspected of Killing His Father.

AUSTIN, Aug. 16.—A. H. Ashe, a prominent and well to do farmer, was found dead on the highway, his body riddled with buckshot. His son, twenty years old, has been arrested, suspected of having committed the crime, as he had been making threats to kill his father.

Fifty Thousand Acres Ruined.

FARGO, N. D., Aug. 16.—A careful survey of the ground swept by hail on Friday in the vicinity of Argusville and Gardener shows that the probable loss will be nearly 750,000 bushels, over 50,000 acres being a total loss.

Surprised Pig.

Little Pete never intends to mistake things, but his very figurative imagination sometimes gets the better of his facts. He starts out to tell something which is perfectly true, but before he is done he has generally drifted off into some picturesque exaggeration. The other day he exclaimed to a companion:

"Just think, Billy! Out in Chicago they aren't going to be content to the pigs any more when they kill them. They're going to chloroform them."

"How do they do it?" asked Billy.

"Why, they just put a sponge in front of the pig's nose and he goes right to sleep, and when he comes to himself he says, 'Why, my ham's gone!' And by and by he says, 'Goodness! Somebody's sawed my leg off!' and then he finds out that he's all cut up!"—Youth's Companion.

Badinage.

(These three girls are exchanging confidences, and telling each other what sort of men they like best.)

First Girl—I like a man with a past. A man with a past is always interesting.

Second Girl—That's true; but I don't think he's nearly so interesting as the man with a future.

Third Girl—The man who interests me is the man with a present.—Judy.

CUTE YOUNG FOLKS

THE TOY CIRCUS.

In Which a Wooden Horse and Dutch Dolls Play Conspicuous Parts.

After the children went to the circus all the toys in the nursery were made to play at circus riding. The Dutch dolls liked it very well, it suited their figures, and the spotted horse said "he was made for the life." The Jack-in-the-box made a splendid clown, though he never made any jokes when the children were there.

PERFORMERS AT THE CIRCUS.

But the wooden soldiers thought circus riding a very undignified game and never unbent sufficiently to take any part in it. The youngest soldier hated it more than the others. He could not bear to see the prettiest Dutch doll playing a game in which he had no part, and so ran away and hid under the fender. The housemaid found him next morning, but his sword was lost. The other soldiers tried him for a deserter, but the matter all turned out well, for he married the pretty Dutch doll.

The Shoe of Content.

Have you heard that old saw of the Persians,
That saying both witty and true,
"The whole world is covered with leather
To him who is shod with a shoe?"
Fine caskets of kid or morocco,
Great stately boots armed with steel,
The daintiest, jauntiest slippers,
Coarse brogues tumbled down at the heel—
What matter the differing fashions!—
The richest and poorest of you
Will find the whole world clad in leather
As soon as you put on your shoes!
Before, it was cold and uneven,
Rough pebbles and sharp bits of glass,
Now, pressed a smooth carpet or even pavement
Wherever it please you to pass.

But ah! there's a maid—have you seen her?
A little maid cheery and sweet,
Who daintily trips, yet I see not
What leather she wears on her feet;
For I know by her sunny eyes' sparkle,
And by the calm curve of her mouth,
And by the kind grace of her manners,
Like warm breezes from the south,
I know that wherever her foot falls
On loving task speeding or sent—
The noblest one by laugh, bell I care not—
She is shod with the shoe of content!

Just whisper the secret, I pray thee;
Come, what is the shop and the street,
And where is the cobbler who fashions
Such beautiful gear for the feet?
I'll go and I'll offer a treasure
Will make him laid down shoes chime,
If only two shoes—somewhat larger—
Like your little shoes, can be mine.
And then I will don them, and leaping
Off over the world will I go,
Off over my feet and my worries,
Off over my evil and my woe,
And loudly to all limping grumblers
My shoemaker cheer shall be sent:
"The whole world is covered with gladness
To him who is shod with content!"
—Congregationalist.

Caught in His Own Trap.

A half starved fox, who was rambling near the seashore, happened to espy a party of young crabs just coming out of the water. "Delicious morsels!" exclaimed Reynard, smacking his lips. "I would not have missed this rumble for anything. Here am I with an empty stomach, and I feel sure my quick witted brain is more than a match for all the dull, thick headed crabs in the sea." So saying, he skipped lightly toward the crabs, which extended their claws when they saw the four footed creature approaching.

"Not so fast, my good fellows," cried the fox, in a courtly tone. "I only wish to make your acquaintance. The truth is, I came down to the seashore on purpose this morning, and have traveled without par taking of any breakfast in order to get a glimpse of your elegant persons."

"Ah!" exclaimed the crabs; "my dear sir, your fine words sound very sweet to us crabs, for we have never been admired before, and most creatures in the sea shun our acquaintance instead of seeking it. But let us give you a word of warning; do not come too near the sea, for the tide is just coming up, and unless you can live under water as we can you will soon be drowned."

"Ha!" thought the fox; "these silly crabs are not so stupid as I thought, for I see they wish to get rid of me; however, I will not leave them, come what may, till I have made a meal of them." Immediately acting on this thought, the crafty beast crept toward one of the crabs, when a tremendous wave came and swallowed up the whole party of crabs and fox. The crabs were accustomed to this and delighted in the briny bath, but not so Master Reynard, for in a few moments he was choked and the whole party of merry crabs had the pleasure of dining on his welcome carcass.

Moral—Sly persons are frequently caught in their own nets, just as the fox was.

The Brook.

I slip, I slide, I gloom, I glance
Among my skimming swallows;
I make the netted sunbeam dance
Against my sandy shallows.

I murmur under moon and stars
In brambly wildernesses;
I linger by my shingly bars;
I loiter 'round my cresses.

And out again I curve and flow
To join the brimming river;
For men may come and men may go,
But I go on forever.
—Tennyson.

THE CURIOSITY SHOP

THE NOBLE OPAL.

A "Thirsty" Stone of Wonderful Play of Color and Iridescent Loveliness.

Unlike the other "noble gems" the opal is not a crystal. "Unworkable quartz" it is called by those who know the proper nomenclature of things mineralogical, and its composition varies from 82.75 to 95.82 of pure silica. What causes the wonderful play of color and iridescent loveliness which gives this beautiful gem its value is still not quite determined. Some say the play comes from water which is inside the stone; some from flinks of air; others again from fissures and cracks, and no one really knows. Anyway, it is a "thirsty" stone, and when it grows a little dull and dim it is asserted that it can be brought back to its full beauty by letting it drink.

There are several varieties of opal, and therefore several degrees of merit. The precious or noble or oriental opal is the supreme. This has all the color, and when these colors are broken into spangles it is then called the Harlequin opal. Then comes the fire opal, or girasol, with hyacinth red and yellow reflections—the former comes from Hungary, the latter from Mexico. The common or semiopals are nonopalescent. The hydrophane or Oculis mundi is nontransparent, but becomes so by immersion in water or any transparent fluid. The opal jasper or wood opal is the petrifaction of wood, opalescent, but without the coloring which makes the "noble" gem so precious.

The ancients prized the opal as they prized diamonds and pearls, and the story of the senator Nonius is well known—how he went into exile rather than part with his beautiful opal, valued, according to one authority, at $300,000.

All sorts of superstitions have gathered around the opal, and to this day it is considered an unlucky stone. Woe to the bride expectant who receives this stone as her engagement ring! But formerly, when precious stones had their functions more precisely formulated than now, this lovely gem was said to "recreate the heart, to be a preservative against poison and aerial contagion; to banish sorrow, prevent faintings and to cure the heartache and evil affections."

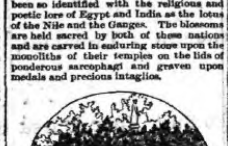
There are also black opals, which are very rare. They come from Egypt, and "have the glow of the ruby seen through a vapor, like a coal ignited at one end." The opal is exceedingly soft and requires the greatest care in manipulating. It hardens and also diminishes in size when first exposed to the air, but at all times it has to be treated with tenderness and care, else it will lose in luster and value and perhaps polish of surface. As it stands it is one of the loveliest of all stones, with the purity of a pearl and the luster of a diamond. It goes best with diamonds.

The Four Color Quadrille.

The first quadrille was danced after the great French revolution made quite a sensation at the court of the First Empire. It was got up by Despreaux, the dancing master par excellence, so his divided his dancers into four sets of eight performers, all arrayed in superb costumes, representing four different colors. Every lady donned a Spanish dress in white crape, enriched with silver embroidery, the distinctive shade being displayed by the trimming, which consisted of a puffed rucking in crape, with which strictly harmonized the jewels. Thus diamonds sparkled on pure white, rubies on red, emeralds on green, sapphires or turquoise on blue. This beautiful attire was completed by a jaunty toque in black velvet, flanked with two white feathers. It was also adopted by the cavaliers, whose white velvet coats were relieved by a waistcoat harmonized at the side and matching the color chosen by their fair partner.

The Lotus.

No flower in the history of the world has been so identified with the religious and poetic lore of Egypt and India as the lotus of the Nile and the Ganges. The blossoms are held sacred by both of these nations and are carved in enduring stone upon the monoliths of their temples on the lids of ponderous sarcophagi and graven upon medals and precious intaglios.



EGYPTIAN LOTUS IN SHAW'S GARDENS.

The wise men of Egypt believed that water was the origin of all things, and that the lotus, as it disappears beneath the waves of the Nile, is typical of Kheprs, or the sun, forever dying and always being born again. The petals closing at night and folding never ceases until the blossom perishes and the seed vessels are formed.

The flowers offer a great diversity of color and size, white, crimson, blue, pink and yellow. They often attain to the height of five feet, varying with the depth of the water on which they float. The lotus is sacred to Buddha in this country, notably in Central park and Union square, New York, and in Shaw's gardens, St. Louis, according to Vick's Magazine, from which the accompanying cut is reproduced.

The lotus is as abundant in India as it is in Egypt. According to Buddhistic mythology Brahma was borne across the unfathomable abyss seated upon a gigantic lotus flower, which was also emblematic of absolute and perfect purity. The ancients entertained the belief that by eating of the fruit blissful rest, immunity from care and forgetfulness of friends and country was the result. Homer, in his Odyssey, recounts how the followers of Ulysses partook of the seductive fruit and became oblivious of their past. Herodotus designates a nation dwelling upon the coast of Africa as Lotophagi, or lotus eaters.

Shooting Stars.

Shooting stars have given rise to many strange beliefs. According to a sentimental legend current among the Lithuanian peasants, there is attached to every new born child an invisible thread, which thread ends in a star. As soon as the child dies the thread breaks and the light of the star is quenched as it falls to the earth. Another version of the same legend says that every one has his light in heaven, which, when he dies, goes out, and in its place a new one makes its appearance, as there are constantly being born.

CLEANING PAINTED SURFACES.

Some Suggestions That are Worth Making a Note of.

The neat housekeeper delights in having both painted and unpainted portions of the room look neat and clean. But often there are many preparations of red, but most of these contain soda, which make the hands rough and sore. Though they will remove the dirt, they also take the paint, if applied too strong, and, even when used in moderate quantities, the gloss of the paint or varnish is greatly deadened. For this purpose, use only old soft soap, as they contain little soda. If they leave the hands soft and smooth, they are suitable for cleaning paint. Before washing woodwork, dust it thoroughly, especially about the doors, mantels, and windows. In washing, always use two cloths, and no cloth is better than old flannel. Have a pail half full of hot, soft water, dip one cloth in the water, rub on some good soap, fold the soap inside, wring out the cloth so the water will not drip or run down on the paint, paper, or wall, rub briskly over a small surface, wring the washcloth dry as possible, wipe the washed surface, then take the other or clean cloth and rub the surface dry. The same process applies to painted walls and ceilings, only, being large and unbroken surfaces, greater care should be exercised, or streaks will remain.

In washing windows, always avoid the use of strong soap. An actually dirty appearance after washing injures the putty more than the whole year's action of rain, sunshine, and frost. If soap is used, let it be of the best. Use it quickly, rinsing thoroughly as soon as the washing process is completed.

Always clean the floor thoroughly before cleaning the walls. To prevent water spattering on the walls at cleaning time, set the pail on a piece of carpet, which will absorb the spilled water, and make the whole operation more business-like and comfortable, if there is such a thing as comfort in house cleaning.

Coffee Fritters.

Cut some stale bread into neat and rather thick slices, and soak them in very strong, freshly made coffee.

Beat up the yolks of one or two eggs (according to the amount of fritters you wish to make), flavoring them with a little sugar and a few drops of strong coffee; brush the slices of bread with this, and fry at once in hot oil or butter; when just crisp and a light golden-brown tint, lift them out, drain them well, and serve at once, sprinkled with sugar.

Of course, all crust should be removed from the bread, and the coffee should be freshly roasted and freshly ground and of very good quality if the fritters are to be a success. The outside should be just crisp enough to eat short, though the inside should be soft and very strong of the coffee.

A Dainty Dish.

A dish of anchovy and toast is very easily prepared and is very palatable for supper, providing there is anchovy butter in the house, a little dainty which may be easily prepared and kept on hand. To make the butter mix a tablespoonful of fresh butter with a teaspoonful of anchovy essence. Cut six slices of good home-made bread, toast them a delicate brown and lay two anchovies, cut in half, on each slice after buttering the toast with anchovy butter. Place the toast in the oven (in order that the butter may melt) for about two minutes. Serve the toast on the daintiest little porcelain dish you have, with a folded doily under it. The toast looks very pretty cut in triangular pieces, diagonally across from corner to corner.

Orange Ice.

A very nice orange ice is made in this way: Put a quart of water and three-fourths of a pound of sugar in a porcelain-lined saucepan over a moderately hot fire. When it has boiled ten minutes remove it from the fire and let it stand until it is perfectly cool. Squeeze the juice from a dozen oranges and four lemons.

Keep the rind of an orange with a pint of sugar, and after the juice of the lemons and oranges has been strained add it, together with the lump of sugar, to the boiled sugar and water, and, after stirring all thoroughly together, freeze the same as ice cream.

DAINTILY ATTRACTIVE CURTAINS.

How Women Can Improve the Looks of Their Rooms.

The woman who has artistic ability has no compensate for the slimness of her purse is never more successful than when she is arranging the draperies for her summer rooms. Window-curtains of unusual daintiness and pretty effect were made by such a woman the other day, says the New York World.

Fine cream-colored chenille cloth was bought for eight cents a yard, which was to be used for bath curtains. The deep hem across the bottom was outlined with three rows of gilt thread. Oe-eyed daisies, bright yellow ones, with their dark brown centres, were painted with water-color paints here and there over the curtain, which hung in graceful folds from a brass rod. The side was caught back with a cord formed of twisted gilt thread. The curtain was light and airy and of just the shade to temper the glare of the sun.

Home-made curtains of white French lawn are pretty. Dainty ones have a design of forget-me-nots painted across the bottom. At each side they are held back with a bias and white ribbon cord formed in a full bow, which is fastened to the curtain by a ribbon rosette.

Curtains with narrow ribbons run through a deep hem at the bottom are also new and pretty.

To Launder Cretonne.

Cretonne draperies, as a rule, are either sent to the professional cleaner or else ruined by home washing. A sample of the cretonne should first be washed in salt and water or in ox-gall and water to set the color, and then be dried in a dark room. None of the ordinary grades of soap should be used. The greatest risk in fading lies in the drying, and a dark room should always be used for this if possible. If the colors are not too bright this method will insure satisfaction.

The Picnic Basket.

To pack a picnic basket so that nothing will break, first put in the cups, saucers, china, glass, &c., with the napkins and towels between and the tablecloths on top; then fit in tins, coffee-pot, &c.

For a summer picnic, cold roast chicken, cold baked ham, veal loaf, sardines, mixed sandwiches, French rolls, pickles, strawberry watermelon, cakes, coffee, lemons for lemonade, and raspberry vinegar will be a nice menu.

How the Engagement Was Broken.

"Where are my suspenders, maw?" shrieked a Jefferson avenue belle to her mother across the up stairs hall.

"Your father borrowed them while I mended his," was the answer.

"I can't find my four-in-hand tie."

"Your brother Tom wore it last night—you will find it in his room."

"But, maw, where's my silk yachting shirt?"

"Algy wore it to the regatta."

There was a brief silence. Then the voice wailed across the hall again:

"Maw, I can't find my riding trousers."

"Charles has them on," was the response.

Then a tired looking young man who had been waiting unannounced in the hall below rose and softly stole away.

"She might want my boots next," he said wearily, and no one knows why that engagement is off.—Detroit Free Press.

Glad to Get Home.

His linen coat he dons today,
Likewise his linen vest,
And to the country takes his way
To get a rest.

Two weeks hence to the town he flies,
Denuded of his pelf,
And tells the folks he has died
To rest himself.

—The case of the City of Plainfield vs. Mr. Kiely was adjourned to August 24.

—Several stage loads of young people of St. Mary's school left for a day at Sewaren this morning.

—The annual convention of the New Jersey State Firemen's Association will be held at Trenton, on September 28.

—Mr. Wm. A. Coddington went to Manitoulouing, N. J., to-day to argue the case of Joseph C. Moore vs. Dr. Paul.

—Manitonomo Tribe No. 118 Improved Order of Red men of this city will work the "Warriors' degree on Friday evening.

—About 100 persons were left behind this morning on the Jr., O. U. A. M. excursion. The train left at 7:45 instead of 8 o'clock.

—The water of the brooks are so low in South Plainfield that the locomotive engines, which are usually supplied by this means, have to go to Bound Brook or Newark.

—"Sam" Bedden and dog catcher Frisbee had a little misunderstanding over a dog to-day. "Sam" got stabbed and from personal remarks came to blows. He was arrested and fined three dollars.

—William Black, the novelist, does all his writing in a room at the top of the house. A good many literary men in all times have had a similar experience. The difference is that Mr. Black writes in an attic room from choice.

—It has been the custom to macadam only the center of Plainfield streets. Now that the center is given over to the street railway, other vehicles can take to the mud, unless the railway is required to macadam from curb to curb to make up for what it takes from the city.

—Although Elmira has had two minstrel shows within a short time, the popularity of the Germania did not fail to draw a large audience at the opera house on Saturday night. Their admirers were not disappointed, for their show was one of the best entertainments in minstrelsy ever seen in this city. There was not an ole feature in the whole programme. The Germans have an excellent show and are deserving a season of great success.—Elmira Advertiser.

—A very prominent horseman writes the following: "On every horse will be found on the inside of each forelegs, a dry, gray wart about the size of a silver dollar, apparently of vegetable nature, although it has its use. When the weary, over-taxed animal, sweating at every pore and covered with foam, can reach down and rub with his wet nose this always dry, hard substance, he is instantly refreshed with an odor like geranium.—Exchange.

—A man in Newburg claims that while the fire at work on the steeple of Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church in that city, and very near the top, his watch slipped from his hand, slid down the steeples the roof of the church and thence downward to the ground. When the watch was picked up, it was keeping time as usual. Some morning when he picks this watch up from the top of the bureau he'll put it in his vest pocket and it slips out his hand and falls a distance of three inches, he'll find it so badly wrecked that it will take a two-dollar bill to get it repaired. — Middletown Press. The "keeping time as usual" is noticeable, however.

—Plainfield's Street Railway Company may be a model trolley system. It is to be hoped it continues so. But whether it is needed in Plainfield, but how the method now in use is viewed elsewhere may be judged by the following clipping: The trolley system of street car propulsion has proved enough in the seeds to buy its way into every city in the country, and every independent honest newspaper is cursing the trolley system as cheap and hasty way of destroying public streets and enriching the street railway speculators. — Trenton Daily True American.

—The disease at Helmetta, N. J., which was first thought to be cholera, has abated. There are no new cases, and all the old cases are doing well. There is quite an epidemic at Jamesburg, a village a short distance from New Brunswick. There are seventy cases, and two have resulted fatally. One was the case of a boy who was convalescent, but foolishly drank a glass of root beer on Sunday and died soon after. There are also ten cases at Spottswood, but Drs. Rives and Zandt hope to prevent the disease from spreading.

—He is the most profane man in one of the big insurance offices. Never mind his name; some of you know him. When a piece of paper blows off his desk he swears a way that must make the recording angel weep. When you hear the windows rattle with his profanity, you may assume that his pen is sputtering, or that his pencil has broken its point. The other day the fellows in the office heard him say "Gentlemen!" They could not imagine anything small enough to justify so mild a comment, and they all went to investigate the trouble. They found that an immense inkstand on his desk had upset and utterly ruined his new white flannel trousers. His customary vocabulary had failed.—Hartford Post.

To Widen Front Street.

A petition has been signed by the owners of property on the easterly side of West Front street, from about opposite Muhlenberg Seminary to Central avenue, asking that an ordinance be passed to widen that portion of Front street two feet by setting back the curb and the fence line. This will give more room for vehicles to pass between the curb and that side of the street railway.

This is very much needed, since as the street is surrendered to the railway, extra precaution ought to be taken to guard against accidents.

New Silk Factory for Elizabeth.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

SPECIAL MEETING HELD LAST EVENING.

The Tax Rate $2.20 this Year.—The Street Railway to be Extended. A Special Meeting at which Interested Property Owners May Speak to be Held.

A special meeting of the Plainfield Common was held in the Council rooms last evening, President Ginna in the chair.

The meeting was called to order at 8.15 o'clock.

Mr. Marsh moved that, in the absence of the regular clerk, Mr. Angleman be appointed to take his place. Carried.

The roll call showed Messrs. Bird, Case, Dickson, Fisk, Frazee, Ginna, Gallup, Johnston, Marsh, See and Weber present.

The reading of the minutes was by motion, dispensed with.

Mr. Marsh moved that the regular business be dispensed with and the assessors tax-books be examined. Carried.

President Ginna said their would be a recess of ten minutes while the books were examined. Business was resumed at 8.35.

The Assessor's books, having been examined by the committee before the meeting, the second examination by Council was, as Mr. Marsh said, "a farce." The books were found, as usual, correct, and a resolution to that effect was passed unanimously.

A LOWER TAX RATE THIS YEAR.

The tax rate was fixed at $2.20, as against $2.22 last year.

The clerk then read a petition from some one who wished to build a frame addition to his building. A hand passed around the time, and the noise proved too much for the reading. Even the president could not make out what was said. Later the petition was found to be from Mr. Pliny Fisk.

Councilman Frazee presented a petition from Mr. N. H. Gutman, leader of the Plainfield Cornet Band, who wanted to give OPEN AIR CONCERTS IN PLAINFIELD'S PARK.

The petition was referred to the Committee on Police with power.

A petition from W. C. Lounsbury and others for a crosswalk at the intersection of Plainfield avenue and South Second street was read.

It was referred to the Street Committee with power.

A petition from the Street Railway Company for permission to build a power house, was referred to the Fire and Building Committee.

A petition from Mr. David S. Pope of Sixth street for permission to build a one story frame building was read, and permission granted.

THE STREET RAILWAY TO BE EXTENDED.

A petition from the Plainfield Street Railway for permission to extend its tracks along East Front street to Pence street, down Pence street to North avenue and 300 feet along North avenue, was then read. It was placed on its second reading.

Councilman See moved that a public hearing of Council be given all interested in the proposed extension. The resolution was adopted, but as the next meeting night of Council comes on a holiday and there is a question as to the legality of business done then, after some discussion, a resolution was read and adopted that a special meeting be called by the president for Tuesday, Sept. 6th, in the Council rooms.

A petition, liberally signed by property owners, for the widening and opening of Sycamore street, was placed on its second reading. Councilman Bird voting "no."

COUNCILMAN FISK MAKES ANOTHER IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.

Councilman Fisk called the attention of the Council to the fact that the redeemed bonds for $7,500, issued when the Fire Department was introduced, and paid off at the rate of $1,000 per year, were still in existence, laying in some drawer or safe. He offered a resolution that the city clerk be authorized to secure the bonds and destroy them in the presence of the Mayor and members of the Council. Carried unanimously.

Adjourned at 9.10 o'clock.

Base Ball Notes.

The managers of the Central N. J. League did not hold a meeting last night, as was expected, owing to the lack of a quorum.

To win the pennant the Crescents will be obliged to win all but one game of the remaining five which they will yet play. And two of those five are battles with the West Ends. So far this season these teams have met four times and the Plainfield boys have lost three of these contests. Taking these averages into consideration the chances of Somerville to win the coveted rag are as great if not greater than those of Plainfield—Elizabeth Journal.

PERSONAL.

Policeman Patrick Kelly left town today on his vacation.

Mr. Seely Edsall, is now at the Mansion House, Alburg Springs, Vermont.

Mr. Hodge, of this city is spending a few weeks at Somerville.

Miss Mary Cox of Trenton, N. J., is visiting relatives on West Fifth street.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Adams of this city are at Prattsville, Greene county, N. Y.

Mrs. Richard Boyce, son and daughter, of Somerset street, are at Sunset Hall, Asbury Park.

Mrs. and Miss Dunn of Broadway returned from an enjoyable outing at Bermuda, N. J., yesterday.

Mrs. Edward Terry of Race street, North Plainfield, is spending two weeks with relatives in Newark.

Miss Renie Warner who was so severely injured in the accident Sunday, is still suffering from her hurts.

Miss M. Shaffer of Chatham street, North Plainfield, is spending several weeks at Asbury Park.

Dr. Frank Clawson of this city started yesterday for a vacation at Oneida Lake, New York.

A mother's meeting conducted by Mrs. Fernald will be held in the W. C. T. U. rooms Thursday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

Mr. Peter P. Dumont and wife of Crescent avenue start to-morrow for Warwick, Orange Co., N. Y., for an outing of a week or so.

Mayor Gilbert and wife started to-day for a two weeks' vacation in Connecticut. During the Mayor's absence, Councilman Ginna as President of Council will be acting mayor.

Mr. Henry Liefke of West Front street, who went to Denver a short time ago, returned Monday. Messrs. Manning and Sebring, who were in the party, have gone to California.

Miss Bridget Harkins, formerly of this city, but now a resident of Brooklyn, was married yesterday afternoon to Patrick Connelly, a coachman employed by Mr. George H. Burgess, of No. 209 Central avenue.

Ex-Councilman Fred. Slater and wife of Jackson avenue, whose home was struck by lightning during one of the thunder storms of last week, and considerably damaged, returned last evening from their outing at Moscow, Pa., where they were when the damage occurred. Mr. Slater's mother and Miss Moore the daughter in the house when it was struck, have entirely recovered from the shock. Mr. Slater says that not only was the gilding on the picture frames in the parlor turned black, by the electric visitation, but also the gilt of the wall paper.

STATE NEWS

The Essex County Cricket Club has been formed with some young and promising players. They would like to arrange matches with second clubs. W. Shortman of 118 Dikkurson street, Newark, is the secretary.

John Ballantine, aged 46 years, of 348 Warren street, Newark, while sitting in a second story window at his home, fell to the street below and was instantly killed. He has been an invalid for some time, and was only a short time ago released from the hospital, and was on a fair way to recovery.

C. H. Munday, a member of the New York Produce Exchange, who lives at Hillsdale, N. J., has a registered Jersey cow, which he retained for her excellent milk-producing quality when he sold his herd. During the last few weeks there was a falling off in the quantity of milk given by the cow which could not be explained. Until last Saturday morning, when Daniel Post saw a white dog, well known to the neighborhood, licking his breakfast from the cow's udder.

A COOL, BUT CARELESS, BICYCLIST.

Riding under Difficulties, he Collides with a Horse.

Miss McLaughlin and her niece, Miss May McLaughlin, both of Somerset street, North Plainfield, stopped their carriage on Front street near Park avenue yesterday afternoon, and Miss McLaughlin got out to do some shopping.

A bicyclist came out of Barnes' store, with a box of cream in his hand, and succeeded in mounting his bicycle, which was leaning against the curb stone near by.

The bundle made him awkward, and the wheel, after several decided curves, collided with the horse.

The animal is naturally gentle and kind, but the blow from the bicycle, bicyclist and box of cream, proved too much for equine stability, and the horse proceeded to run away with the team.

It would have trampled the fallen rider, and the accident would probably have resulted in a disastrous runaway, but for the cool-headed action of the unfortunate wheelman. Mr. Richard F. Stevens of Bank street.

He regained his feet, and, disregarding his bicycle, sprang for the horse's head, and soothed the excited animal to quietness. Then he pulled out his damaged machine and ruefully wheeled it off.

He lost his cream.

Bicycle Notes.

Entries have been made, at last, for the 25-mile bicycle road race. Among the riders who will compete are Messrs. N. W. Pike, C. W. Maltby, and Geo. Mabon.

Chief Grant, desiring not to be too harsh on bicyclers, and give them plenty of warning, has a notice elsewhere. It would be well for all bicyclers to heed it, as it is intended to enforce it strictly after the present week. The ordinance has been disregarded too much for further forbearance.

THE TAX LEVY FOR 1892

COMPARISONS WITH FORMER YEARS.

The Rate $2.20 this Year Against $2.22 Last Year. — Where Much More Money Can be Saved Tax-Payers.

Notwithstanding that the city is handicapped by being compelled to pay for much of the extravagance of the old council, which by the present city Council that it is enabled to bring the tax rate down to $2.20, although that yields over $5,000.00 more that last year, according to the following figures which were obtained originally from the assessor's books.

The expenses of the Fire Department have been greatly increased since the introduction of fire-hydrants, which make needless so many fire-engines and houses. A large saving could be made in this direction.

Miles of streets, through unlnhabited and unfrequented marshes and cedar fields, are provided with lights beyond all reason, entailing a needlessly large outlay of public money each year to pay for them. There could be considerable money saved in this respect without impairing the practical efficiency of the electric lighting system.

There ought to be some radical changes made in the present method of macadamizing streets. If they are to be surrendered to the railway company, it is not right that the taxpayers should be taxed to macadamize the portion used by the company to the neglect of the only portion left for use of other vehicles.

The railway company ought to be required to pay for macadamizing the portion it uses, and relieve the city of that much expense, leaving the money to macadam outside the tracks to the curbs.

These are only three of several items where large savings can be made, and which it is hoped the Council will reach in due season. It has shown a commendable disposition in that direction, and in another year may be able to reach the figures which prevailed before the days of combine rule.

Of the $145,300 to be raised, $88,365.12 are for county tax, and $16,190.40 for State school tax. Most of the latter is refunded, but as an offset there is an extraordinarily large special school tax, which swallows the great bulk of all the taxes for city purposes. For general purposes the city is allowed to raise one-half of one per cent. on the valuation, which this year would amount to $90,000.

Half Way to the Moon.

The various governments of the world own together 880 cables, having a total length of 14,480 miles and containing 31,560 miles of conductors. The French Government, which takes the lead as to length of cables, has 3,460 miles in fifty-four cables. As to number, the Norwegian Government comes first, with 393 cables, having a total length of 948 miles. Finally, as to the length of conductors, the English Government comes first with 5,468 miles of conductors, divided among 115 cables, having a total length of 1,558 miles.

Private companies to the number of twenty-eight own 266 cables, having a length of 126,496 miles and containing 127,682 miles of conductors. The French companies, only two in number, the Compagnie Francaise du Telegraphe de Paris a New York, and the Societe Francaise des Telegraphes Sous-Marins, have eighteen cables with a total length of 7,349 nautical miles. The most important of the private companies is the Eastern Telegraph Company, which operates seventy-five cables, with a total length of 25,347 miles.

The total number of cables in the world is 1,185, with a total length of 165,-944 miles and 169,193 miles of conductors. This is not sufficient to reach to the moon, but would extend more than half way there.—Electrical World.

GAMBLING AT NETHERWOOD.

New York Card-sharps Cheat Guileless Jerseymen.

Almost every night a group of men meet in a barn at Netherwood and spend a good part of the night and a greater part of their slim capital in gambling. Poker is the favorite game.

Recently some New York card-sharps, learning of the habit, quite accidentally dropped in and took a hand. They played fair for a time and then by skillful cheating won all the money the other players, mostly coachmen and mechanics, had.

One man lost five dollars, a big sum for him, and the loss of which may have meant almost starvation for his family at home.

It Will Cost More Now To Get In.

The Plainfield Camera Club, at its meeting last evening, decided to change the constitution, increasing the initiation fee for new members to $5, and making the dues $2 per quarter instead fifty cents per month.

THE TALE TOLD BY CRABBERS.

A Battle Royal Between a Groundhog and a Dog.

Two elderly gentlemen of this city, and a dog, started in the early dawn of yesterday in a buzzy upon a crabbing expedition. The intention was to drive to the nearest bit of salt water.

It seems, however, that they deceived themselves in some curious manner as to the proper roads, and instead of traveling toward the sea they went over the mountains. This slight mistake is charitably laid to sign-posts.

On the way a ground-hog crossed the road.

The old gentlemen saw a chance for sport, and the dog was set upon the ground-hog, and a rough and tumble catch-as-catch-can battle ensued.

Finally the dog succeeded in killing its opponent, but at the cost of its own life, for it was so badly bitten that, after a few feeble movements, it rolled over and died.

This catastrophe changed the minds of the would-be-crabbers, who thereupon decided to return home. They arrived in town in the afternoon with the dead bodies of the dog and the ground hog in the back of the wagon

A ground hog barbecue will take place this evening. The departed dog will be buried with proper honors.

EDITORIAL NOTES

America bids fair to supply the markets of the world. A regular auction day is to be established in London for California fruit, which will be shipped by special train to New York, then transferred to the refrigerators of the fast steamers and so reach Europe in good condition.

Antiquarians are baffled in the search for the origin of the "sausage." It seems to be a very ancient institution and was a favorite dish among the Greeks and Romans. The bologna sausage is a descendent of the ancient Roman sausage and so is older than the historic "wiener wurst."

President Harrison, ex-President Cleveland and other eminent statesmen of both political parties have warmly indorsed the proposal for a public school celebration on Columbus Day. This movement appeals to every true American. It brings together in a common cause individuals among whom on most subjects there is wide diversity of thought and opinion.

The unfortunate Marquis of Lorne seems to systematically have fallen from favor, if he ever attained it in the eye of the queen. His last escapade of presenting himself for election to parliament as a Liberal-Unionist and being ignominiously defeated has made him appear at a great disadvantage. Ever since his marriage with the Princess Louise he has been relegated to the end of a royal procession. Now it is feared that he "will not be in it."

A Common Misnomer.

Nothing is more common than the application of the word "brutal" to the miscreant who murders his neighbor, kicks or kills his wife, beats his children or shoots his sweetheart. A late article on the awful riot in New York in July, 1863—an article written by a brilliant newspaper man who was nearly murdered at that time by the infuriated mob—says, "Human nature was transformed into that of beasts." With all deference to that writer, and the thousands of other writers who daily commit this involuntary injustice—for it is a cruel injustice to beasts—let us say that there is nothing in the acts or motives of a mob of bloodthirsty, demoniacal, furious, destructive and murderous men which is in the least like the acts and motives of those creatures which it pleases us to designate as "the lower animals."

Even the most dangerous and fierce of wild creatures—lions, tigers, grizzly bears, panthers and wolves—never were known to band together to destroy and terrorize their own kind. No naturalist student of wild animals ever knew or heard of such a thing as a few disaffected lions or tigers, angry at some real or fancied wrong, fomenting trouble with their disgruntled boon companions and combining in a body to slaughter the peaceable and inoffensive of their kind. It is not recorded that any of these, or other fierce fair footed creatures, ever was yet known to attack the lair and family of his neighbor, or indeed to fall upon any utterly inoffensive creature of its own or another race, and slay it for the mere sake of slaying.

It is of course a law of the very being of carnivorous creatures—a law that must always seem cruel and inexplicable to the softer hearted—that they must kill to live. It is not their fault, but their necessity; a mere measure of self preservation. It is doubtful if they ever kill from mere wanton love of killing—that grand distinction belongs to man alone. And there is certainly nothing in the least "beastly" in a war against property into which most mobs finally resolve themselves. If a hungry man should snatch a loaf of bread from his neighbor and run away with it, the act would justly be likened to that of a beast—for only in such circumstances does a beast meddle with his fellows' property.

It is a still sharper injustice to the "lower animals" to call the wretch who kicks, beats or kills his wife "a brute." No brute, if by this we mean a creature with four feet and "no soul," was ever known to abuse his mate. That is another distinction which belongs to the male of the human species. Even a mad or rabid dog, driven out of his real nature by the disease of rabies, will never, it is said, bite a female dog. He loathes his ordinary food, he snaps at the hand that would help him, he forgets the master whom he had loved for years, he attacks his best friends, just as human maniacs sometimes do, but he never bites the female of his own kind, even though she may be a stranger to him. It does not appear that the tiger, when he comes downward at night after a day's roaming, and finds that his spouse has not hunted anything for supper, ever falls upon her and kills her for that reason—and men have killed their wives for that and even lesser sins.

So let us invent some other and juster adjectives for designating and condemning—say stigmatizing—the worst crimes and most monstrous sins of men, and no longer insult their betters by calling such deeds "brutal" and "beastly." Where the cruel misnomer is not utterly careless and thoughtless, it is thoroughly cowardly and false.

THE STRIKE SPREADING

Switchmen on the New York Central Stop Work.

MORE TROOPS ARE ORDERED OUT.

No Serious Conflict Has Yet Occurred, but the Men Are Inclined to Be Destructive, the Situation Is Strained and Serious Trouble Is Expected.

BUFFALO, Aug 17.—The Central men all struck out of sympathy with the striking switchmen on the Lehigh Valley and Erie roads. The Central's men had made a demand for ten hours' daily work and the adoption of the Chicago scale. Being refused, they abandoned their trains and joined the ranks of their brethren who are now battling against the Lehigh and Erie.

It is expected that the West Shore switchmen will unite with the Central strikers. This would mean a tie up on all the lines terminating here and the desertion from their posts of at least 2,000 men. This action was brought about by an order from Grand Master Sweeney, of the Switchmen's brotherhood.

Trains were moved from the Lehigh Valley yards with a soldier armed with a Winchester and with thirty-eight rounds of cartridges in his belt stationed on the platform of each car.

Governor Flower Anxious.

There were one or two slight differences between the new lines of soldiers. One band of fellows stoned the militia from a bridge, but were quickly driven off. Another crowd of angry men tried to force their way into the Lehigh yards. One of them drew a revolver. The guard gave the alarm and two policemen arrested the striker. He resisted and was clubbed. His friends started the rumor that he died from the beating, but this could not be verified. Two cars were set on fire in the yards while the militia guarded all entrances.

Vice President Webb, of the Vanderbilt system, was on the ground to investigate the situation.

Recruits are arriving to take the places of the strikers. Fifty nonunion men were put to work in the yards under military protection and others are held outside guarded by the troops.

Members of the state board of arbitration have arrived and are studying the situation preparatory to attempting to settle the difference between the strikers and the companies.

News has been received that Governor Flower is on his way to Albany. More troops have been ordered to make ready to march to this city at a moment's notice. It is feared by cool headed citizens who have viewed the situation that a general fight may be expected between the strikers and the troops at any moment.

More Troops Ordered Out.

Manley C. Green, justice of the supreme court at Buffalo, impressed by the gravity of the situation among the striking switchmen, has ordered out the entire Fourth brigade of the New York state militia, consisting of 2,000 men in separate companies and one battery of artillery. It may surprise many persons to learn that a judge in this state can take this action, but it seems that he can. At present there are "no men of the brigade in active service. This order calls for 1,200 more. In his letter to General Doyle Justice Green says:

"It appears to me that a riotous and unlawful assembly is in the county of Erie, state of New York, with intent to offer violence to persons and property. I do hereby order and direct you to order your command and all thereof to appear and assemble forthwith at a place to be designated by you in the city of Buffalo to aid the civil authorities in suppressing violence and enforcing the law."

The separate companies are pretty well scattered among such places as Rome, Oswego and Elmira, and it would ordinarily take a little time to muster them. General Doyle, however, sent out hurried orders, and as the railroads had made arrangements beforehand for transportation, it is expected that all the men will be in camp here to day.

A Military Aspect.

The aspect of affairs at Cheektowaga is decidedly military. Squads of men are marching up and down with muskets on their shoulders and bayonets glittering in the sun. All the cars and buildings of the Erie and Lehigh Valley railroad in the vicinity are guarded. Up and down the dusty cinder road of Lackawanna avenue soldiers are parading on regular beat. Loiterers are made to move on.

Pickets have been placed at the Lackawanna bridge over Lackawanna avenue at the city line, and no one not in uniform is allowed to pass. All the streets and railroad tracks in this vicinity are patrolled and completely occupied by the troops. At noon a new line of pickets was thrown out, extending out for half a mile beyond the city line.

Just inside the city line at the head of William street Captain Kilroy has a force of sixty police officers. His force joins at the city line with the military and extends to the Seneca street crossing of the Erie.

A large group of strikers gathered at the bunch of saloons at the head of William street and watched the evolutions of the military. There were between fifty and sixty of them there, and upon the Lackawanna embankment was a small group, evidently on the lookout for incoming trains. The strikers were very quiet. They watched the troops, but made no effort to approach or converse with them. They had met together in low tones and acted as if biding their opportunity.

Two carloads of nonunion men passed through on the Lehigh Valley about two hours late. They were instantly spotted by the union switchmen, but no effort was made to molest them, as it was impossible for the strikers to get near them. A few freight trains were on the move, but very few and very short. There was no very general movement of freight, however.

To Protect the Central.

Third Vice President H. Walter Webb, of the New York Central road, is in the city, called here by the gravity of the situation. He has been in close consultation with the attorneys of the road and its officials, and while acknowledging the serious nature of the strike, is confident that with proper military protection all will come out right.

The following is a copy of a notification to the sheriff from the New York Central authorities asking protection:

Augustus Beck, Esq., Sheriff of Erie County:

Take notice that you are hereby notified and called upon by the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad company to protect their property from mob violence and destruction now threatened the said property in the county of Erie, New York, and that the said railroad company will hold the said county responsible for all loss and damage which may result from lawlessness and violence on the part of said mob or other lawless parties.

NEW YORK CENTRAL AND HUDSON RIVER RAILROAD COMPANY.

By C. L. Rossiter, Assistant Superintendent.

Scurvy Tempted to Fire.

The scene at Camp Lehigh is a weird one and very military. Fires are blazing all along the tracks of the Lehigh and Erie. Sentried pace their beats at intervals of twenty paces. Not a man who does not wear the blue and brass buttons is allowed within the lines.

A gang of strikers collected on the big Lehigh bridge, just across from General Doyle's headquarters. They began to guy the sentries at first. Accomplishing nothing by this they swore a bit at them. This made no more of an impression than did the guying. Finally, in exasperation, the strikers picked up stones and rocks and hurled them at the heads of the guards.

General Doyle was at once told of the attack and ordered Colonel Fox to detail a company to clear the bridge. The task was a difficult one. The soldiers had, besides their guns and pouches, to carry great overcoats and blankets strapped to their backs in the charge across the trestle work.

The hallicharged the boys tried to pick their way across the ties amid volleys of rocks. They finally succeeded in pushing the strikers off the bridge, and then at the bayonet's point drove them to the street below and outside the sentry lines. The militia were strongly tempted to fire, but they had positive orders not to do so unless they were shot at.

The strikers are very bitter in their denunciations of General Doyle for calling out the troops. They say he was actuated by purely personal and selfish motives, being identified with the Lehigh in an official capacity. They say he used his authority as a military officer to serve his corporation. This they declare to be an unwarrantable offense, one that would not have been committed had General Doyle not been attached to one of the companies against which he is being waged. The strikers say further that Doyle had no right to order out the militia until Governor Flower so directed. He did so simply at the request of the sheriff and not at the mandate of the state official to which he is responsible.

To Force the Fighting.

General Doyle says that in acting as he did he had the advice of legal counsel, who assured him that he was warranted in calling out the troops as soon as the sheriff notified him of his inability to control the situation and asked him for aid. General Doyle justifies his actions, too, by citing the fact that the strikers were engaged in riotous acts outside the city limits and beyond the jurisdiction of the police. The deputy sheriffs had surrendered to the law breakers, and since its arrival its presence, he argues, has prevented any serious destruction of property.

Reading special agents are recruiting men for Buffalo throughout the entire length of the road. Over 200 are said to have already been secured, and they will be shipped at once to take the places of the strikers.

The Reading road, it is said, is determined to force the fighting, and is resolved on beating the men at any hazard. To precipitate matters, it is said to have been decided to discharge all employees of the Lehigh Valley division not already out on strike and ask their intentions. If they appear to be wavering or weak in their loyalty to the road discharge will at once follow.

President McLeod, of the Reading, is here also, but he refuses to say anything. All the passenger trains on all the roads are on time.

There has been a great deal of stealing from the cars during the fires, and $1,000 worth of goods have been taken. One car, full of brussels carpet, was raided, and huge rolls of fine carpets carried away in wheelbarrows.

The situation is strained. The militia expect an attack, and the men have been given these orders: "If you are ordered to shoot, shoot to kill, and don't waste your ammunition."

FASHIONS

Hats for Early Autumn.

The new designs for fall hats from Paris and London are all small and rather simple. Large flowing brims and elaborate decorations are for the time, at least, discarded. Here are two of the prettiest novelties for traveling and early autumn wear.

The first is of brown felt, trimmed with black velvet ribbon bows, which are fastened with an effective buckle of brilliants. It is further ornamented in front with some beautiful kingfisher's feathers, in an exquisite shade of blue-green.

The second is a neat little hat of soft light brown felt, trimmed with ribbon and quill to match. The brim, instead of being bound round as usual, is stitched.

a circle around the fire, every man clasping his neighbor's hand, the following covenant was read by the leader and chanted by the rank and file. Impressive and grave some was the mountain scene as the tones of the deep voices repeated the covenant oath:

In this covenant we this day agree to act jointly and together. We swear to be true to each other; to stand by one another if need be to the death; to keep what we do a secret from all the world, and if any one betrays it the others swear to follow him wherever he may shelter himself and take vengeance upon him by taking his life. If any of us fail in this oath may he be accursed ever after.

The Wires Cut.

All the telegraph wires between Knoxville and Coal Creek have been cut. The soldiers at the latter place are building a large fort and are preparing for war.

It is said that Governor Buchanan will go to Coal Creek and will then declare the lease system void on the ground that it is illegal. The governor has ordered all the military companies in this city to be ready to march at a moment's notice, and they are resting on their arms in the armories. They will probably be called out.

Another Homestead Arrest.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 17.—Harry Brickerton, another Homestead strike prisoner, was arrested and brought to jail on a charge of aggravated riot preferred by F. T. F. Lovejoy. In default of $2,000 bail he was committed for a hearing. Jack Clifford, charged by Secretary Lovejoy with murder and aggravated riot, was released.

Nearly a Conflict at Homestead.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Aug. 17.—A mob of strikers and some enraged women attempted to attack four nonunion men, but Major Crawford and a company of troops put the strikers to flight without any one being injured.

HUNDREDS HOMELESS.

A Delaware Town Wiped Out by Fire and One Life Lost.

DELMAR, Del., Aug. 17.—Fire almost wiped out this town. Loss is over $75,000.

Aid arrived from Salisbury, Md., but the firemen could do little else than watch the town go to ashes, as the water supply was limited and two feeble steams that were played upon the burning mass of frame buildings were converted into steam before the water fell upon the fire.

The burned area comprises about three acres and includes all the leading stores, two churches, railroad station and repair shops of the Delaware Railroad company, the postoffice, Delmar hotel and from thirty to forty dwellings.

Three hundred people are homeless and lost all their earthly belongings. The fire raged for three hours and finally burned itself out. So far one person is known to have perished in the conflagration. The body is so badly charred that it has not yet been identified.

The Iron Hall Bank Fails.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 17.—The Iron Mutual Banking, Surety, Trust and Safe Deposit company, which has become somewhat famous for its connection as depository with the Order of the Iron Hall, has assigned to A. E. Stockwell. Some months ago this institution was closed by Banking Superintendent Krumbhaar because of the impairment of its capital, and until the finances of the concern were rehabilitated by the transfer to its officers of $170,000 of Iron Hall money was it permitted to resume operations.

THE LIBERAL CABINET.

Gladstone Announces the New Ministry of Great Britain.

ROSEBERRY IS FOREIGN SECRETARY.

John Morley, Chief Secretary for Ireland, and Baron Houghton as Irish Viceroy Without a Seat in the Cabinet. Labouchere Wouldn't Suit the Queen.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—The official announcement of Mr. Gladstone's cabinet has just been made. William Ewart Gladstone, the new prime minister, is first lord of the treasury and lord privy seal. His cabinet is composed as follows:

Baron Herschell, lord chancellor.

The Earl of Kimberly, secretary for India and lord president of the council.

The Earl of Rosebery, foreign secretary.

H. H. Asquith, home secretary.

Marquis of Ripon, colonial secretary.

H. Campbell-Bannerman, secretary of war.

Earl Spencer, first lord of the admiralty.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt, chancellor of the exchequer.

Mr. John Morley, chief secretary for Ireland.

Sir George Otto Trevelyan, secretary for Scotland.

Anthony John Mundella, president of the board of trade.

Henry H. Fowler, president of the local government board.

Arnold Morley, postmaster general.

The other official appointment of noncabinet rank is that of Baron Houghton, who becomes viceroy of Ireland.

The chief surprise in the list of ministers are the names of Lord Houghton and Mr. Acland. Lord Houghton's father, better known as the Poet Monckton Milnes, was a great friend of Gladstone, who has unbounded confidence in the abilities of the son. Acland has had no official training to fit him for his new post, but is a bright and capable man. His special hobby is education. He is also prominent in movements on behalf of the working classes. He is a good debater, and will do good work for the government in the house. Arnold Morley doubtless owes his elevation in good part to Mr Gladstone's friendship for his father, Samuel Morley.

Cabinets Compared.

A comparison of the present cabinet with that which served Mr. Gladstone when he took office in 1886 shows these changes:

The Marquis of Ripon succeeds the late Earl of Granville in the colonial department; and Mr. Fowler follows James Stansfield as president of the local government board, that gentleman having accepted the office when Joseph Chamberlain, who originally held it, resigned for the same reason as Sir George Trevelyan.

The Earl of Kimberly now accepts the duties of lord president of the council in addition to the secretaryship for India, and thus assumes the position formerly occupied by Earl Spencer, who succeeds the Marquis of Ripon as first lord of the admiralty.

Of the others—those who have never before held cabinet office—Mr. H. H. Asquith follows Mr. Childers in the home office, and Mr. Arnold Morley succeeds the late Lord Wolverton in the postoffice, which appointment did not carry cabinet rank in 1886, although it did in Mr. Gladstone's previous ministry (1880 and 1885), when it was held by Mr. Chas. Lefevre.

Baron Houghton succeeds the Earl of Aberdeen as viceroy of Ireland, as the office is commonly though incorrectly termed, the real delegation being "lord lieutenant of Ireland."

Labouchere Disappointed.

Mr. Gladstone expressed himself to his intimates as delighted with the way in which the queen received and treated him in Osborne House. Mr. Gladstone conferred with Sir William Harcourt, Earl Spencer, Lord Rosebery, John Morley and five other men chosen as members of his ministry. He informed them of the queen's acceptance of their names, and the official list of the ministers was at once issued. The conference lasted two hours and a half.

Henry Labouchere feels slighted in not having been invited to any office. It is understood that Mr. Gladstone followed a court friend to sound the queen as to whether she would accept Mr. Labouchere's name, and that her majesty dismissed the subject so curtly that it was not considered politic for Mr. Gladstone to himself suggest the brilliant Radical editor. One of Labouchere's final acts will probably be to challenge the government's foreign policy, especially in regard to Egypt. A motion made by Labouchere in 1880 that England evacuate Egypt was carried unanimously by almost all the Liberals and the Radicals.

The absence of the progressive element from the cabinet is being commented upon generally by the more advanced organs of the Liberals. Some uneasiness is felt lest this presages the sacrifice of all reforms except the particular one of Irish home rule, which Mr. Gladstone has so much at heart.

POTTER AGAIN INDICTED.

Dana and French Also Accused of Defrauding the Maverick Bank.

BOSTON, Aug. 17.—In the United States circuit court, before Judge Putnam, the United States grand jury reported four new indictments against the ex-officials of the Maverick National bank. Of these indictments two, containing respectively eighty and thirty counts, were found against ex-President Asa P. Potter. They charge him with making false certifications of checks having a face value of between $100,000 and $200,000 and signed Irving A. Evans & Co., and with making false entries in the books of the bank and in reports to the comptroller of the currency.

One indictment each was reported against Colonel French and Mr. Dana, charging them with failing to report to the comptroller overdrafts of their own, aggregating in Colonel French's case $70,000 and in Mr. Dana's $30,000. Mr. French was admitted to bail in $10,000, John Stetson becoming his surety. Mr. Dana, by arrangement with District Attorney Moran, has not been as yet arrested or admitted to bail. Mr. Potter was held in $10,000 on the false entry and in $30,000 on the false certification indictment. Granville T. W. Braman becoming his surety. Sept. 15 next was fixed as the date for the arraignment of the defendants.

MORE BLOODSHED IN TENNESSEE.

Miners and Guards Have a Battle at Oliver Springs.

CHATTANOOGA, Aug. 17.—The riot signal was again rung from the big bell in the courthouse, and the excited people rushed toward the newspaper bulletin boards to learn that the miners had attacked the third stockade in three days. This time it was Oliver Springs, a little mining town in Anderson county, on the Walden's Ridge road. The defenses consisted of a blockhouse and about forty guards when the miners came to the stockade. They demanded the surrender of the place. "Come take us and be damned," was the answer sent by Superintendent Farris.

Fire was at once opened. Seven hundred miners on one side glanced down the barrels of their weapons, and streams of flame leaped from the muzzles as the leaden messengers sped toward the blockhouse. The guards manfully answered, and the sharp crack of the rifles struck terror to the hearts of the assailants. A flag of truce was raised. Captain Farris respected it and called on the leader to come and talk with him. Both sides rested on their arms while the wounded were removed. It is impossible to say how many of the miners were wounded or killed. Two guards were slightly hurt.

Quiet then reigned for some time, and hurried messages were sent to the governor. A new company that has been recently formed at Harriman went to the rescue. Twenty-eight armed men from Knoxville went to the battleground. Attorney General Norman had a heavy ordnance supply arranged and boarded the train at Nashville for the scene of the trouble. The Chattanooga boys will join him here.

A mass meeting of miners was held on the railroad track near Knoxville, at which it was decided to attack Coal Creek. The miners are laid by a strong oath, which is as follows:

The Oath the Miners Take.

You do each of you solemnly swear, in the presence of the Almighty God and these witnesses, that in joining this company you do so voluntarily and of your own free will and accord. You do each covenant to obey all orders committed to you and to keep profoundly secret all our objects and aims, not even giving the name of any one a member of this company to any individual or any inquisitorial power whatever. You do further solemnly swear to obey your officers and not refuse to act in any capacity where the interests of this company demand your services.

And you further bind and obligate yourselves by all you hold sacred on earth or in the future world not to desert or betray this organization into the hands of its enemies, either by signs, words or action in writing, symbols or carica ture; and further, you promise to keep forever secret this obligation, suffering yourselves to be racked, bung to the gibbet or your right arm severed, rather than reveal anything determental to this labor company, formed for the express purpose of mutually protecting every member from injustice, risking even your very lives in their defense.

In the event you betray this company you solemnly call heaven to witness your eternal damnation. You pledge your neck for the fulfillment of this solemn and voluntary oath, and may God and heaven record the same against us all.

This blood cemented tie did not seem to satisfy the conspirators, and as they stood in

Spooner Will Be Nominated.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 17.—It is settled that ex-Senator John C. Spooner is to be the Republican nominee for governor, and today's convention will nominate him on the first ballot. Colonel W. H. Upham has withdrawn, leaving the senator a clear field.

SOME ODD STORIES.

INTERESTING INCIDENTS RELATED BY MAJOR A. R. CALHOUN.

Wholesale Snake Charming on the Banks of the Indus—A Magician Gives a Concert for the Benefit of Scores of Hooded Cobras.

"We frequently read about the power which some snakes have to "fascinate" their victims. A somewhat careful investigation of this subject leads me to believe that what we call "fascination" in the presence of a deadly reptile is that paralysis of dread which nature brings on creatures destined to death, and which in itself is a safeguard against agony.

But although we see what is called snake charming in these museums, I doubt if there is any such thing to be found outside of India, for it is easy enough to toy with venomous serpents after they are deprived of their poison fangs.

Some years back, while in the vicinity of Attock, on the banks of the Indus, I visited a Hindoo temple, where I found a man named Iman Raj begging one of the attendant priests to rid him of a plague of cobra serpents which infested a plot of ground belonging to him. The priest refused to help him, but recommended him to one Mungul Deen, who was a professional snake charmer of great fame.

A LARGE NUMBER OF COBRAS HAD GATHERED ABOUT THE MAGICIAN.

The consideration having been agreed on, I was invited to be present, and went to the grounds of Iman Raj, where I found a stand for visitors erected.

Mungul Deen, the charmer, was a middle aged man, with a bright face and a curious, sparkling eye. He wore a mustache, but no beard, which seems to be a peculiarity affected by the Mohammedans in India. He had a light copper colored complexion, and his dress, which was finely decorated with all sorts of signs, including snakes of every form and size, was of white linen, and from the becoming turban downward was scrupulously well adjusted.

Everything being pronounced ready by Mungul, he first lighted a small fire, into which he threw something which flashed up with a blue blaze, and then the fire was quickly allowed to die out.

The charmer then went fearlessly all over the snake infested ground in his bare feet, distributing as he walked a kind of powder, the nature of which he seemed particularly anxious to guard. After this he began to play an instrument that emitted a sound like the monotonous drawling of Scotch bagpipes.

The spectators were all natives, excepting two English officers named Hall and Richardson, whose guest I was while visiting Attock. The natives must have liked the music, judging by their occasional howls of delight.

Mungul played for some time without producing any effect, but he was evidently not discouraged, though not a snake had been seen. After about a half hour, and when the situation had lost its novelty to me and was fast becoming tiresome, I heard exclamations from the crowd on the platform, and following the direction of their extended hands I saw scores of hooded cobras and other great slimy creatures winding from the undergrowth toward the impassive magician, who was seemingly as indifferent as if the hideous monsters were gores.

At length, when a large number of cobras had gathered about the magician, and many an anxious fear was expressed by the lookers on lest he be stung to death, the music was changed to a low, plaintive air, which I did not think the rude instrument capable of producing.

Every one now noticed that the snakes were, in military phraseology, "changing front from the rear upon the center" by turning around upon their tails with their heads down, as if intent on reaching their poles. In so doing their mouths came, or seemed to come, into contact with the powder which Mungul Deen had previously scattered about. But whatever the cause, certain it is they one and all, so far as I could see them, stretched out and appeared to be dead.

The snake charmer kept on piping for ten minutes more, when he began a dance among the snakes such as I have never seen outside a circle of howling dervishes. This dance lasted a quarter of an hour, the man becoming much excited as it went on. At length, breathing very hard, he fell on the ground in a state of complete exhaustion.

An attendant gave him a drink of water, after which he rose up and declared the battle won. The spectators were invited to view the dead cobras, and that they were dead, at least the few that I pretended to touch, I can say with great certainty.

Letters received from my friends at Attock after my return to America assured me that the charm worked well, for Imau Raj up to that time had not again been troubled by snakes.

Funny, but True.

"No matter how public office may be regarded outside of New York city, a long and varied experience has convinced me that here it is a private snap." This was said recently in the New York Press club by a well known ex-Commissioner of public works.

In illustration of this by no means novel proposition, the ex-commissioner told the following story with a power of acting and mimicry that delighted the listening newspaper men and added powerfully to its effect:

"I do not wish to pose as a purer or more patriotic man than my neighbors, but when I assumed the position of commissioner of public works it was with the firm determination to conduct the office in such a way as would secure the interests of the people and reflect credit on myself.

"A brief examination of the roll of employees of the department convinced me that there was $60,000 being paid every month to men whose only public services were to come to the city hall, if sober enough, on pay days, sign their names and get their money.

"With one stroke of my pen I stopped the annual robbery of the city treasury of about three-quarters of a million of dollars. Of course I knew this would create a howl among the ward bosses, and so I was not surprised when a lot of men with wild hints, big diamonds and a preceding odor of high priced whisky poured into my anteroom and vociferously demanded that my attendant should usher them into my presence.

"The first man admitted was Pat Malone, the keeper of two gin mills and the leader of the Third. His shiny hat was tilted over his eyes and his cigar met it at such an angle that it threatened to burn the rim. With the swagger of a Bowery tough, Malone advanced, laid both hands on my desk and glaring at me as if about to destroy me he poured out a torrent of oaths, and then asked:

"'Misther Commissioner! phat fur in —— and —— didge yez go for to discharge Mike Fagin?'

"'Pardon me,' I said, with all the coldness I could command, 'but there is a barrack in the other room, and while I do not ask for respect this office demands it.'

"'Oh, yis, Inclade.' And with a sneer the fellow went back and left his hat in the anteroom. Returning, he launched into a profane tirade again, and I stopped him by reminding him that I did not object to his swearing in my presence outside, but that the dignity of the commissioner's office required the use of decent language.

"I had an idea that by stopping the brute's swearing I would make him dumb, but after stammering for some time and gulping down his oral oaths he managed to repeat his first question.

"'Phat fur, Misither Commissioner, didge yez go an discharge from the pooblic works Mike Fagin, from my ward?'

"'Mr. Malone,' I replied, 'I discharged Fagin and seventy others simply because there was nothing for them to do but draw their pay.'

"'But phat has the worruk got to do wid it? Ain't they good party min?'

"'That has nothing to do with it.'

"'But it has all to do wid it. That's why I got them the job, and whin it comes to workin at the polls you'll find Mike Fagin on hand early and late, and he kin lick any man in the ward.'

"'That may be; still I have sworn to do my duty, and I cannot permit the public to be robbed without violating my oath.'

"'But,' persisted the ward boss, 'you don't seem to vally the importance of patronige to the party.'

"'Yes, I do, for I employ only party men.' Then, determined to crush Mr. Pat Malone with an illustration that I thought would come home to him, I asked, 'Do you employ more barkeepers than you need?'

"'Sometimes I do,' he said guardedly.

"'And you pay them?'

"'Be gob, I do!'

"'Well,' I persisted, 'that is a private affair; in public matters it is different. Now, Mr. Malone, I have only one pick for two men to work at, and using the pick is all that either can do. One man to a pick is enough, you see.' I am obliged to discharge the other man'——

"'No, yer not!' interrupted Malone.

"'I'm not?'

"'No, sur!'

"'Then what would you have me do under such circumstances?'

"Without a moment's hesitation Malone said with an oath:

"'I'd discharge the pick an keep the min!'"

A Frosted Negro.

Professor Peters, of Hamilton college, well known as an astronomer, went out to Iowa some years ago to observe an almost total eclipse of the sun. He chose for his point of observation a farm near the center of the state.

On reaching the ground, which he did fully a week before the great event which he had come to observe, he hired a black man named Cato to help himself and his assistants.

Cato was all curiosity, and he worked with a great energy and much apparent interest in getting the instruments in order. Indeed he was heard to tell his friends in the neighboring village that the "eclipse couldn't come off nohow onless he was 'round."

When the important day and hour came Cato was placed in charge of a large poultry yard. He was told that he must stand perfectly still, keep his attention undistracted, observe how geese, turkeys, ducks and hens were variously affected and report at the conclusion.

Well, Cato," asked the professor, as the turn came for the poultry yard report, "what did you see?"

"Beats de debbil," gasped Cato. "Har yo', way in New Yo'k, knowed a year ago dis yar eclipse was comin off on dis yar fa'm, didn't yeh?"

"I did, Cato."

"Waal, sah, dat's wot gits me. One year ago yo', way off dar in New Yo'k, knowed dat dis yar bressed arternoon de dahk would come, de geese squat, de turkey fly up de apple tree and de chicken run in de hole. And, sah, de puzzle to me is, dat yo' didn't nebber see one oh dem dar birds befoah, nudder, and dey nebber seed yo'!"

A Settlement.

"When are you going to settle that bill?"

"We've had a settlement already."

"When?"

"The last time you called."

"How so?"

"Didn't I tell you I meant to settle the bill?"

"Yes."

"Very well, then; that was a settlement."

A Smart Observation.

Who was it said at a large dinner party given by Lieutenant Old Pepper, "My dear Dr. Pepper, how delighted you must be to see so many of your devoted friends mustered?"

ALFRED R. CALHOUN.

Smallest Bone in the Human Body.

The smallest bones in the human body are to be found in the ear. The smallest of these is known by the anatomical name of stapes. It has a head, neck and two haunches and is shaped not unlike a stirrup iron. The full extent of its dimensions does not exceed that of a pea, and is frequently smaller. By some authorities it has been named the lenticular bone, from the idea that its shape and appearance resembled that of a lens. It is situated within the drum of the ear.—New York World.

King Humbert as a Fireman.

The king of Italy has a perfect fancy for attending fires. The other evening he was due at the German embassy, where Count Solms gave a ball. Her majesty Queen Marguerite, radiant in a toilet of pale yellow silk and dazzling with superb diamonds, came alone, and stated that his majesty the king had gone to a fire which had broken out at a manufactory of macaroni and Italian paste, and he remained at the scene until the flames were subdued.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE MORNING OF THE DISCOVERY.

Immortal Morn, all hail,
That saw Columbus sail
By Faith alone.
The skies before him bowed,
Back rolled the ocean proud,
And every lifting cloud
With glory shone!

Fair Science then was born
On that celestial morn,
Faith dared the sea;
Primeval sin of her foes,
Then Truth immortal rose
New Heavens to disclose
And Earth to free!

Strong Freedom then came forth
To liberate the earth
And crown the right.
So walked the first mild Lord
Upon the sea of pearl,
And darkness backward rolled
And there was light!

Sweep, sweep across the seas,
Ye rolling jubilees,
Grand clouds of praise,
The world adoring stands,
And with uplifted hands
Offers from all the lands
To God its grace!

Ye hosts of Faith, sing on
The victories ye have won
Shall Time increase.
And like the choral strain
That fell on Bethlehem's plain,
Inspire the perfect reign
Of Love and Peace!

HEZEKIAH BUTTERWORTH.

PREPARE FOR OCT. 21.

The outline of what is proposed for Columbus Day is enough to indicate two things:

First—That the official programme will be so simple and can be so easily arranged that no school need wait till the published before beginning its own preparations for the celebration.

Second—That the object of the national public school celebration of Columbus Day needs the cordial co-operation of the citizens generally in each locality in order to be fully realized.

The executive committee has also sent us a few suggestions of a practical nature which will be of advantage to teachers and all other friends of the celebration just at present. They are as follows:

First—A strong local committee should be appointed at once. It would be well to include in this committee not only the leading school officials, but also editors of the local press, army veterans and leading citizens who are known to favor the celebration by the schools. Only such as are likely to give earnest support to the work should be appointed.

Second—The postoffice address of the chairman of this local committee should be sent to the office of the chairman of the national executive committee (Frank Bellamy, Youth's Companion office, Boston, Mass.), in order that the chairman of the local committee may receive the official programme and other communications.

Third—This committee should first see that each school is provided with a flag the salute to which will be the first feature of the official programme. They should also advise with each principal as to the best way in which the celebration can be carried on in his school house, arranging for speakers and suggesting exercises additional to the official programme.

Fourth—This committee should also arrange that the citizens' celebration be made to occur in the afternoon, and should see that the desired prominence is given to the free school idea in public ceremonies. Where no arrangements have yet been made for a citizens' celebration this committee might themselves take the initiative, and organize the afternoon demonstrations as well as the morning observances in the school houses.

Fifth—The greater publicity that is given to this committee, both in its formation and in its work, the better. Accordingly, the attention of the people generally must be gained and their interest secured. Let the people be freely invited to give suggestions and to send communications to the local press as to the best conduct of the celebration.

Sixth—The committee should see that the editors of the local papers are interested in the movements, and the people informed through the columns of these papers of the celebration and what is being done to make it a success.

In one word, this 400th anniversary of America belongs to all the people. The public schools take the lead because they are the organization closest to the people, most characteristic of the people and fullest of hope for the people.

FRIDAY ONCE WAS LUCKY.

The New York board of women managers of the Columbian exposition are alive to the mistake of dedicating the buildings and grounds of the World's fair on Oct. 12. At a recent meeting in Albany a member of the board made a comprehensive statement of the reasons why the change of date to Oct. 21 should be made, and said in closing: "I would also like to state, in this connection, one sentimental reason which I am sure will show a very interesting set of coincidences. Columbus left the Old World on a Friday, discovered the New World on a Friday, left the New World on a Friday, returned to the Old World on a Friday, and the 21st of October also falls on a Friday; so we see that for us, at least, Friday is not an unlucky day."

CONGRESSIONAL SANCTION.

The following is a copy of the bill which congress passed in the interest of the national public school celebration of Columbus Day:

Joint resolution authorizing and directing the president to proclaim a general holiday, commemorating the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America, on the 21st day of October, 1892.

Resolved, by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, That the president of the United States be authorized and directed to issue a proclamation recommending to the people the observance in all their localities of the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America on the 21st day of October, 1892, by public demonstrations and by suitable exercises in their schools and other places of assembly.

Over 50,000 public schools have already notified the executive committee that they will be the centers of the local observances in their various cities and towns. Have the schools in this county reported?

TO BEGIN THIS FALL.

SHERIFF CODDINGTON TO IMPROVE THE FORMER HILLMAN ESTATE.

He Owns Twenty-One Acres of North Plainfield Real Estate, and His Improvements, if Carried Out, Will Add Many Thousands of Dollars to the Valuation of Borough Property.

Sheriff Coddington of Somerville is a shrewd judge of real estate and he showed his faith in growing North Plainfield when he recently purchased the Hillman property, comprising 21 acres, which has been on the market for a long time.

The land is located just above Bergen street and extends from Somerset street to Westervelt avenue.

The purchaser intends, this Fall it is said, unless work on the new street is commenced before, to cut a street through his property, to the estate of the late Samuel Hudson, the executors of which will continue it through to the Miles property. Then side streets will branch out from this main artery, to Somerset street on the west and Westervelt avenue on the east.

The brook, which has an exceedingly erratic course through that section, will be straightened and banked.

When these improvements are made and the property cut up into 50x100 feet lots there will be a big boom in Borough realty. The entire plot of ground is beautifully situated and several well-known capitalists are said to be deeply chagrined that they did not snap up the bargain. $7,000 was the consideration.

PERSONAL.

Miss A. E. Clarke of Liberty street has returned from Newport.

Mrs. William Tallamy and daughter of West Sixth street are visiting friends in New Haven, Conn.

Mrs. D. C. Ivins, of Hillside avenue, left Green this morning for Ellenville, Ulster county, N. Y.

Ground has been broken for the erection of a dwelling for Mr. Ira Mundy of Summit avenue, North Plainfield.

Mrs. James Collins, formerly of this city, but now of New York, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. Blimm, of East Third street.

The remains of James Clarke, who died Tuesday at Elizabethport, were brought to this city this afternoon and interred in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hodges, of 76 New street, returned yesterday from a two weeks outing at a popular mountain resort near Elizabethtown, New Jersey.

Mr. Warren Marsh, formerly of this city, but now of Toledo, Ohio, is visiting his father, Mr. Marsh, of East Ninth street. Both Mr. Warren Marsh and his brother, Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, have such a strong family resemblance, that a friend remarked yesterday, do they both rode up Somerset street on their bicycles to the ball game: "If they were dressed alike, and were riding wheels, so the difference in height wouldn't be noticeable, it is the toss of a copper if they could tell apart." Mr. Warren Marsh has, apparently, been greatly benefitted physically by his sojourn West. He will remain in Plainfield for about two weeks.

Entries for the Road-Race.

The entries to date for the 25-mile roadrace of the Crescent League Wheelmen, open to any resident of New Jersey, which will take place Thursday, August 25th, are: Alexander McAllister, Bayonne; Israel Jones and J. S. Pike, Plainfield; Asher Atkinson, New Brunswick Bicycle Club; Randolph S. Lagbren and Sidney B. Bowman, Elizabeth Ath. Cyclists; G. D. Greenwood, East Orange Cyclists; Charles Vanderveer, Eagle Wheelmen, Newark; Louis M. Meir, Rutherford Wheelmen; Charles H. Coffin and George W. Coffin, Newark, and George Mahon, Charles Maltby and Warran A. Clapp, Plainfield Bicycle Club; H. A. Bath, Union County Roadsters.

Special Secret Meeting of the Iron Hall.

A special secret meeting of Local Branch No. 1199 Order of the Iron Hall, was held last night in the lodge rooms.

It was the largest gathering of members since the formation of the branch. The present troubles of the order in the West came up for discussion, also the probability of the appointment of a receiver.

The resignation of several officers was accepted and new ones appointed to all these places. The action appointed have still to be heard from.

$14 for a Small Blue Fish.

Dr. Seymour Marsh of No. 27 Putnam avenue, who is at Belmar on his vacation, took a party of friends out bass-fishing with him a day or two ago. The catch consisted of but one very small blue fish which was not caught by the doctor although the expenses of the trip footed up to and some odd cents. The doctor says now that he don't think fishing is much fun any way.

The Elizabeth Zouaves Must Vacate.

The Elizabeth City Council voted last night, 18 to 1, to eject the Veteran Zouaves and Gatling Gun Company A from the City Hall, on which they have stood for eleven years. The Council will give the Zouaves thirty days in which to move off their building, and if they fail to do it will appropriate the armory.

Adam Jemensky, a laborer, was arrested on Front street by one of the special policemen last night for intoxication. City Judge Coddington this morning fined him two dollars, which he paid.

A $5,000,000 BUCKWHEAT TRUST.

Mr. Charles W. McCutcheon Among the Incorporators.

Articles of incorporation of a buckwheat trust were filed in the office of the Secretary of State at Trenton, yesterday. The company will be known as the Hecker, Jones & Jewell Milling Company, and will have a capital of $5,000,000. The incorporators are David Jewell and Joseph A. Knox, of New York; William A. Nash, of Brooklyn, and Charles W. McCutcheon, of North Plainfield. The principal New Jersey office will be in Jersey City, but the business, which is to purchase mills and deal in flour and other articles of food, will be done all over the world. Among the stockholders are John V. Hecker, Eugene Jones, Herbert S. Jewell and C. G Moller.

BREVITIES

—The pay car of the Central Railroad arrived here yesterday.

—The City Executive Committee will meet in the Republican Headquarters at a little before eight o'clock this evening.

—An ice yacht has travelled a mile in 1m. 10s., a running horse in 1m. 35s., a torpedo in 1m. 50s., a steam yacht in 2m. 12s.

—The borough street commissioner is keeping the streets in proper order. He has a force of men at work on Park place now.

—There were five Mondays in February of the year 1616, 1644, 1672, 1700, 1712, 1740, 1768, 1796, 1808, 1886, 1864, 1892. The like will occur in 1904.

—The Grand Court officers of the Ancient Order of Foresters will visit the Court Pride of New Jersey, located in this city, this evening.

—A stage load of picnicers returning from Paplao last evening announced their presence as they passed through the city by horn-blowing, yells and singing.

—The wheelmen who are members, or wish to be, or are at all interested, in the Bicycle Campaign Club, are requested to meet in Republican Headquarters at eight o'clock this evening.

—A train leaving Plainfield at 10.04, had the forward platform of one car considerably damaged by fire, supposed to be from a hot box. The fire was discovered just beyond the tunnel and was quenched by water from a locomotive hose.

—A lady who was present yesterday afternoon when Mr. Stevens collided, while riding a bicycle, with a horse, whereby his bicycle was injured, states that Mr. Stevens did not loose his cream. Reported. Mr. Stevens is to be contented.

—There was a fair-sized crowd at the opening of the two days' trap tournament of the Union Driving Club at Springfield yesterday. All the shooting was at Keystone targets, thrown from Keystone traps. Among those present were Jacob Pentz of Fanwood, R. S. Cadwell of Fanwood, Neal Apgar, W. F. Force and Charles Smith of Plainfield.—Elizabeth Herald.

—When Thomas A. Edison, who formerly lived at Menlo Park, near Plainfield, was a poor, barefooted boy, says a visitor in St. Louis, he lived in Port Gratiot, Michigan. He rigged up a telegraph line from his own house to a playmate's, who was not very skillful in receiving messages, and would therefore come out of doors and finish the conversation verbally. This was such a reflection on the young genius and his apparatus that he would resent it vigorously.

—According to "Science" the snail is very prolific. Assuming that the reproductive season extends from March to September, and assuming further that one snail lives in two gardens, we have the following estimate of the total number of the offspring of a single pair: At the close of the first season, 1,900; 600 pairs at close of second season, 1,805,000; original pair at close of second season, 1,800. Total number of offspring in two years, 1,808,800.

—Capt. George W. Steelmen, commanding the schooner J. N. Kerlin of Elizabethport, N. J., now discharging at Brunswick, Ga., reports that on Aug. 12, while at Georgetown, S. C., a pigeon flying from northward overtook his vessel as the ship bell tapped midnight. The bird was gentle, and was carried to the cabin. Upon examination a small gold band was found clasped around the left leg of the bird, on which were inscribed the letters "W. C," and the number "217." There are many pigeon fanciers in this city, to whom the above may have great interest.

—Mr. J. K. Hoyt, ex-editor of the New Brunswick Times, the Newark Daily Advertiser and other papers and the author of several popular works, has opened in Newark a "Literary Bureau" where work of all kinds is done from the writing of an advertisements to an epic poem. Manuscripts are edited and publishers found and we hardly know what Mr. Hoyt could do that Mr. Bette will not undertake in the line of literary work. Type writing and copying is included, and, as Mr. Hoyt is a resident of Plainfield, he will receive orders for work here and take and deliver it to orders. See the advertisements.

—Stories of Spurgeon, who was greatly admired by many people now residents of this vicinity, are not always new, as was shown in the case of one widely current after his death, but afterwards traced back to a preacher of Queen Anne's days. Here is the following anecdote, just over from the other side, is vouched for as fresh: When the spirit of the great divine left its earthly tenement of clay the widow posted a bulletin reading: "Rev. Dr. Spurgeon passed to heaven at 6 o'clock this afternoon." After he saw the bulletin two hours later wrote on it: "7 p. m.—Spurgeon not heard from. Getting anxious."

EIGHT BIG GOOSE EGGS.

THE NEW BRUNSWICK TEAM SHOULD HAVE HAD NINE YESTERDAY.

The Crescents Defeat Them by a Score of Nine to One—Careless Play in the Last Inning Give the Visitors One Lone Run—Fine Work by the Crescents' Pitcher.

The New Brunswick base ball team came to Plainfield yesterday and played ball with the Crescents. They feel sorry for it now. The score-keeper marked down a great, big goose-egg for them, after each one of eight innings.

Then in the last inning when the game was so completely against them that one of the team had gone to get dressed and were compelled to play, even called, in street clothes, a Crescent player took pity on them and pretended he couldn't stop a ball. The visitors scored one run.

The score by innings explains the game:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
New Brunswicks..	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	1—1
Crescents.	0	2	2	1	1	0	0	1	2—9

The game had its amusing points. For instance, the ball during one inning took a jump from the bat and evidently tried to get in and shake hands with Borough Councilman B. A. Hegeman, Jr., who was in the screen-protected stand back of the pitcher, and to congratulate him on his youthful appearance with his moustache gone. The screen didn't recognize its pass, however, so it didn't get in. Its effort was appreciated.

Jones, Bonner, Murphy and Leidy of the Crescents made themselves noticeable, as usual, by their good batting. Jones by his base-running and fine catches; Bonner, Murphy and Leidy by their heavy batting.

Murphy, the Crescents' pitcher, put the visitors out, with but few exceptions, in one, two, three, order.

Twice the game became exciting. That was when, in different innings, Crescent players were caught between bases. They dodged back and forth with all the New Brunswick team getting in their way, hindering and finally putting them out, but each time another Crescent player, during the confusion, stole two bases.

Holford, the catcher, who looks as though he had been lazy during his growing period, is a good man both behind and at the bat.

The players and their positions on the opposing teams is here given.

Reading for Base Ball Enthusiasts.

Murphy, the pitcher of the Crescents, yesterday threw a ball so hard it split a board in the back-stop fence.

The Crescents will play the Y. M. C. I. A. Saturday, on the Crescents' grounds. The score is prophesied at two to one in favor of the home team.

The two "W's"—Westfield and West Ends—will play in Westfield. The West Ends will probably win.

Saturday's games will be watched with great interest. The result may mean "pennant" or "no pennant" to the leaders. There are only a few more games to be played.

The Somerville Messenger has a poor opinion of the Plainfield players and their methods, as may be seen from the following clipping:

The only cup of sorrow that any loyal Somervillian was obliged to quaff on Saturday was when the report reached the town that the Crescents had succeeded in defeating the Elizabeths. The most exacting could find no fault with the quality of game that the local nine furnished, but they couldn't win two games at one time, and the Plainfield mob are still one game to the good.

Dust seems to be an important factor in base-ball games. The batters pick up hand-fulls of it, the pitcher puts a little on his finger tips, the catcher puts some in his glove, and the base runners fairly roll in it.

The Dog Catcher's Secret.

Dog Catcher Frisbie considers that there is a charm about the odor of the warts on the inner side of the legs of a horse, whereby he can make dogs follow him. In this belief he gets the odor on his fingers from the warts, and is reported to get where the dog can smell it when he wants to capture the animal which is thereafter following him to its destruction. Dogs are said to be very fond of the parings from horse's hoof as found in blacksmith's shops.

And the Law Can't Touch Him.

Some men, residents of Plainfield and Netherwood, wagered recently on the forth-coming Corbett-Sullivan prize fight. They made a Netherwood Hotel employe stake-holder. He proved a good holder. The men who bet wish he wasn't quite so good in that way. The money went when the employe did and the stakes can be found. As betting in itself is against the law, nothing can be done.

The Last Week of Camp Meeting.

Sunday will be the last day of the camp meeting in Hyde's woods. Rev. W. A. Harris of Port Richmond, S. I., and Rev. G. H. Boswell of New York city will lead. Rev. Mr. Harris will preach this evening. The song service will be conducted as usual by Rev. Mr. Murphy.

A GOOD WAY TO GET LOST.

The Guide Posts of Three Counties are Failures.

A State law, more honored in the breach than the observance, is that townships must pay $10 into the county treasury for each guide post not kept in proper condition.

The "guide" posts of Union county are what wheelmen call, when they have ridden miles out of their way, "a d-d-d-(ete) sell."

Two of Plainfield's best riders, miles from home, were guided by an honest looking sign-post one evening recently and—well, they got home for breakfast.

It would be a good idea for all riders to send notice of false guide-posts.

IT MEANS WEALTH TO THEM.

The Saloon-keepers Want the Fair Closed Sundays.

Just how the saloon keepers look upon the idea of the World's Fair being closed on Sunday is pretty well expressed in the following clipping from the Wine and Spirit Gazette:

NOT A BLUFF.

Our esteemed cold-water contemporary, the Voice, speaks sometimes for the *wicked liquor dealers with a perumptori*ness that warrants the belief that it possesses good inside information on whisky. The statement that the Chicago saloonkeepers were in favor of having the World's Fair closed on Sunday was elicited the following positive denial from the Voice:

"This is all pure bluff. There is not a saloonkeeper in Chicago that has placed himself on the side of Sunday closing or against sales of liquor at the World's Fair—not one.

We do not dispute the peculiar constitutional condition which often makes the Prohibitionists good judges of liquor but in this respect we prefer the statement of a liquor organ published in Chicago to that of our cold-water cotemporary. Mixed drinks, a saloonkeeper's organ, published in Chicago, says:

In so far as the liquor interests are concerned, nothing better could have happened than to have the Fair closed on Sunday, for it will fill the saloons as well as the churches, which is the side aim desired by these cranks.

We would accept this statement of a Chicago liquor paper on the sentiments of the trade in that city as better authority than the editorial utterances of the Voice, though it is a Prohibition paper.

YOUR HOUSE PAINTED FOR $6.

But the Swindle Becomes Apparent When the Paint is Paid For.

Look out for a gang of men traveling about the country making contracts for painting roofs. If they offer to paint yours for $6, or any price, don't fail to ask them how much the paint will cost before you close the contract. It is to the price of paint where the fraud exists. Patronize only people you know and then you won't be taken in by these deadbeats.

The Junior Order of United American Mechanics at Asbury Park.

The annual assembly of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, held at Asbury Park yesterday, was a grand success. In the parade, which formed in Railroad square and started at 2:30 p. m., there were fully 3,000 men. Councils from nearly every town in New Jersey were represented, and the delegation, by point of numbers, was one of the greatest yet held.

The men were accompanied by their families and friends, and two miles of railroad coaches were required to carry the crowd from Asbury at night.

It was said to be the greatest day in many years at Asbury Park.

There were many Plainfielders present.

A Vitual Telegraph Company.

The New York Visual Telegraph Company filed articles of incorporation yesterday with the Clerk of Union county at Elizabeth. The company's capital is placed at $100,000, and its business will be to transmit, receive and perform other public services by means of electrical devices. The incorporators and stockholders are James E. Browne of Elizabeth, William W. Rider of New York, and Albert Blackburne of Yonkers.

He will erect several modern houses on it this Fall to be ready for occupancy next Spring.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

HAYS HE KILLED THE BORDENS.

The Confession of a Supposed Insane Man.

Fall River, Mass., Aug. 18, (Special.)—Charles H. Peckham of Central Village, Westport, Mass., walked into the Central Police station this morning and said to Assistant Marshal Fleet:

Well, Mr. Marshal, I killed Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Borden, and I have come from home to give myself up.

I went over the back fence and through the rear door of the Borden house two weeks ago to-day, and I killed both of those people out of pure love for blood.

The police think he is insane.

WAR AT COLD CREEK.

Troops and Miners Supposed to be Fighting.

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 18, (Special.)—The telegraph wires to Coal Creek have been cut. It is reported that a battle is raging between troops and miners.

Canvassing can be heard in the distance. The streets here are crowded with a mob and the greatest excitement prevails.

Five newspaper correspondents who went to Coal Creek have been captured by the miners and are held prisoners.

A Wife Beater Commits Suicide.

Paterson, N. J, August 18.—(Special.)—Isaac Solkins, who had been arrested for brutally beating his wife, hanged himself in his cell here last night, and was dead when discovered.

Solkins was twenty-one years old, and is said to have married three months ago out of mercenary motives, believing that his wife was rich. When he learned that she was quite poor he grew abusive towards her and beat her unmercifully. He committed suicide rather than live with an impecunious wife.

Over Ten Thousand Cholera Victims.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 18th. (Special.)—The official cholera reports from the various infected districts in Russia yesterday give 8,458 new cases of the diseases and 3,207 deaths.

This is an increase over Tuesday's figures of 669 new cases and 535 deaths.

A Clear Case.

Say, Mike, I met Mis Jinkins comin' down, Wid a bit of hay on de way to town; An' he says to me, says he: "Jake Riggs, What's burnin' on?"

An' I says to him, says I: "Mis. why?"
"Because," said he, "it makes things high."
"Pshaw!" said he
Nodded his bobbin head at me.

"I've noticed it some myself," says I;
"Fer de price of hay is mighty high;
An' up to date we ain't been stuck
Almighty much on our garden truck.

"An' our wheat, as of our oats, it seems to me,
Has gone plum out of sight, right free;
Our corn ain't now; an' Silas, that hay
Of yourn ain't takin' in much to-day.

"I reckon the tariff's doin' it, Silas;
(Givin' us prices in high-up style;
Leastways Dean workmen, fer's I know,
Ain't doin' much to keep 'em down.

"D' them there furnaces, mills, and sich,
Keeps us hummin' we will get rich;
Fer the fellers that works have got to eat,
An' we've got to furnish the bread and meat.

"The tariff's doin' it, of course it be,
Puttin' up prices for you an' me,
An' our children, when we are gone;"
Then she said nothin', but jis' drav on.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Live in pure air and you will never take cold. It is the attack of microbes on bad air that gives you cold.

Spain garrotes condemned murderers, France guillotines them, New York kills them by electricity and the rest of the world hangs them. It is a ghastly business whichever way they are sent out.

Some time ago a book was published giving a list of all the eligible title bearers in Europe for the benefit of the American girl. A Parisian paper recently gave a list of American women wealthy enough for impecunious noblemen's wives. "One good turn deserves another."

It is good news if it is true news, that an oil can has been invented which will show when a lamp is full and thus prevent it from doing what no lamp or anything else ought ever to do—slop over. A wheel is placed in the spout of the can. This revolves with the flow of the oil. An air vent is fixed upon the spout. When the lamp is full of oil the air vent is closed, the wheel stops and the oil ceases to flow.

The way to bring good times and make business lively is to talk constantly of the hard times. Search all the dull seasons you can remember; predict failure for every business enterprise that undertakes operations. Tell all the world that business in the country is dead beyond resurrection and have the report go abroad. Prophesy another panic, trust nobody financially, be afraid to employ your capital and make everybody else feel the same way.

Gladstone Booms the Cycle.

Gladstone is an enthusiastic cyclist, but it is in theory only. He admits that he is too old to master the softly gliding wheel, but he is confident its increasing use is a great thing for England. As might be expected, he maintains that while improved health and spirits are good, the greater good will be in enabling Englishmen to get better acquainted with one another. He says:

It is far more profitable than the luxurious railway journey from the city to some definite point along an unalterable route, over which the traveler is whirled with no time for observation and no opportunity of examining the district through which he is carried. I can only emphasize the fact that I consider that physically, morally and socially the benefits that cycling confers on the men of the present day are almost unbounded.

Practical Philanthropy.

To outside people who are neither capitalists nor laborers in the accepted meaning of these terms it would seem that the problem so long unsolved might become clear by studying and imitating in a greater or less degree the examples of Aristide Boucicault and his wife, the founders of the Bon Marche in Paris.

Of course where the demon of selfishness rules these beneficent exemplars would be denounced as ridiculous enthusiasts, but, as results have shown, the plan they have pursued has been an enormous financial success. As a system of benevolence statistics show that it has scarcely a parallel. The following is a brief outline of M. Boucicault's plan from its inception, and a sketch of the manner in which its purposes have been nobly fulfilled by Mme. Boucicault after his death. Jacque Aristide Boucicault was one of the people. He began life as an employee in a small provincial town in the dry goods business.

After going to Paris in 1853 he became partner and later proprietor of the Bon Marche, line du Bac, a small shop, but which under his care became one of the most unique buildings of the kind in the world. From the first his idea was to found an establishment which should be philanthropic and commercial. The welfare of his employees was always in his thoughts. As his means increased he improved their manner of living, diminished their working hours, increased their salaries and accorded them an individual interest in their sales. He also established a "system by which every employee was assured a progressive advancement according to the time of his or her employment and to the services rendered.

In 1872 he opened free classes for the study of languages, music and fencing. He installed a library for the public and a free art gallery for artists desirous of exhibiting their work to the customers and visitors of the Bon Marche. In 1876 he opened a provident fund which, without retaining anything from the salaries of employees, accorded a small capital to the men and a marriage portion to the women at the expiration of ten or twelve years. This fund was largely increased at every year's stock taking. He also allowed his employees to deposit with him any of their savings at 6 per cent. The annual returns of this system at the time of his death in 1879 exceeded the sum of $2,000,000 francs.

Marguerite Boucicault consecrated the last years of her life to the carrying out of her husband's plans in this great work.

Supposing that capitalists should inaugurate, as far as possible, a just and merciful system similar in effect to the above—there would be no use of armed Pinkertons or armed men of any sort. Perhaps before the millennial era such a practice may prevail. Meantime men will die and go to their own place, both millionaires and workingmen, and there will be "no pockets in their shrouds."

MORE TROOPS ARE OUT.

Governor Flower Orders Reenforcements to Buffalo.

THE LAKE SHORE MEN STOP WORK.

Engineers and Firemen May Join the Banks and a General Tieup Ensue—All is Quiet at Present, but the Situation is Critical—A Soldier Accidentally Killed.

BUFFALO, Aug. 18.—The situation in Buffalo is extremely grave. While the day has passed without any conflict between the militia and the strikers, it is realized that it would require but the shadow of an excuse to precipitate a riot. The strikers are angry at the calling out of the troops, and they are angry at the militiamen for coming out when they were called. They take every opportunity to harass them, without resorting to sufficient violence to warrant an attack by the soldiers. How long they will keep within the bounds is a question.

At a conference, at which were present Sheriff Beck, Mayor Bishop, Brigadier General Doyle and Superintendent of Police Morgenstern, representing the civic authorities, and H. S. Walter Webb, ex-Senator Daniel H. McMillan, Wilson S. Bissell and E. Ellicott Sprague, on behalf of the railroads, it was decided to issue a call for the entire state National guard. Several prominent citizens were also present.

It was with the greatest reluctance that Sheriff Beck and Mayor Bishop finally gave their consent to appeal to Governor Flower to call out the entire National guard.

The Governor has responded, and the Twelfth and Twenty-second regiments, Tenth battalion and Buffalo Gatling company start at once for Buffalo on special trains and others will follow as the adjutant general directs.

Previous to this conference Mr. Webb wired Governor Flower requesting him to call out the National guard, but the governor replied that he could only do so on request of the proper civil authorities.

The Lake Shore Men Out.

The Lake shore men have been called out and it is asserted by both sides that the strike will spread still further. Grand Master Sweeney declared that if he found that the men were losing he would call out every switchman west of here to Chicago, but the calling out of the switchmen west is not feared so much as that the trouble will spread right here and that the switchmen will be joined by the firemen and brakemen and possibly the engineers.

The organizations of nearly all these men sympathize with the switchmen. It is stated, on what is said to be good authority, that the firemen are almost on the point of striking, and that a request from the Switchmen's union would draw an order from the Firemen's union to its members to quit work.

If the firemen should quit, the engineers, while they might not strike, would refuse to work with green men as assistants, and that would certainly mean a tieup.

The Roads Won't Arbitrate.

The state board of arbitration, it is learned, has failed to do anything at all toward having the differences between the strikers and the companies submitted to arbitration. The board held a secret meeting, which Grand Master Switchman Sweeney and fifteen of the strikers attended. They submitted their side of the dispute to Mr. Donovan at length, and formally declared that they were willing to agree to the whole dispute being settled by arbitration. They agree to stand by any decision that might be made.

Then the members of the board issued invitations to all the officials of the railroads involved to come and state their side of the case, and to agree also to have the matter submitted to arbitration.

Without a single exception the railroad men sent their excuses for not accepting the invitation, and added their refusals to turn their long story over to the hands of any board of arbitration.

Grand Master Sweeney, of the switchmen, is said to have stated his belief that the case would end two nights ago, were it not abandoned holks, and hinted that the railroads had set fire to them. He said: "That burning set the citizens against the switchmen, who had all their sympathy before. Those were the most profitable bonfires I ever heard of, and they did not cost anybody a cent, unless the county is foolish enough to pay for them. We can furnish evidence that they were abandoned and valueless old cars."

The Engineers Anxious.

Grand Master Wilkinson, of Galesburg, Ills., reached the city, and, after registering at the New Continental hotel left at once for the meeting of his organization. On his return to the hotel he said to a United Press reporter, "I cannot tell you anything because I know nothing."

One of the trainmen was seen later, and although he would not say anything about what was done at the meeting, brought out the fact that the situation was outlined to Mr. Wilkinson. He told of some of the reasons why the brotherhood is interested. "I am an Erie man," said he, "and we could make our usual wages provided we go into the yards and switch our own trains. This we will not do. The trainmen do not intend to follow the example of the men at Chicago a little over a year ago, when the spit occurred between the orders in the Federation of Railway Employees. We are going to do nothing to hamper the switchmen in their fight."

"Will the trainmen strike?"

"Not today. It will take time to move, but I have no doubt we will have a finger in the pie within a week if the strike is not settled before that."

The firemen and engineers are mysterious, and it is stated that Chief Engineer Arthur of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and Grand Master Sergent, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, would be in the city at once if the men were affected by the strike. A meeting of the firemen will, it is stated, be held to act on some question which has arisen.

One of the Lehigh valley engineers named Dietrich refused to pull out a carload of soldiers and men from Chicago street. He was ordered to do so by Master Mechanic Cunningham, it is stated, and on his refusal was ordered off his engine and the train was taken out by Mr. Cushing. This, it is stated, is one of the causes of the anxiety of the engineers.

Lake Trade Suffering.

Lake trade is feeling the strike severely. The steamers New York and Rochester, of the Erie line, will be laid up. The Erie elevator is full of grain, and some of the allied elevators are nearly so. Dock warehouses are nearly full, with no prospect of relief from any source. Canal men sympathize with the strikers and refuse to take grain at any figure offered by shippers. Grain is coming in from Toledo and Chicago at a rate never before known in August. Twenty-five cargoes arrived yesterday and seven today, aggregating 1,250,000 bushels. Western floor agencies are greatly distressed for room and are ordering shipments back. The lumber trade is also about stopped.

At the Erie elevator six boats had to be refused. An attempt was made to run down a string of empty cars, but the strikers headed it off. Two engines of soldiers were ordered over from William street. When they arrived the attempt had been given up and nothing was done. The cars were deserted, so the soldiers went back again to East Buffalo.

At the inner Lehigh freight houses there are over fifty freight cars stalled. Unless some of the cars can be moved soon it looks as though the lumber yards would be tied up.

The companies are not idle of hand or head, as is evidenced by a device that will be put in operation for the protection of men making up trains. Flat or "gondola" cars are being prepared with fixed benches running lengthwise of the cars. These benches are to be occupied by sharpshooters well armed, and one each of these cars is to be hooked to the conductor or buffer of each switching engine. Thus the crews will be constantly under ready guard.

A strong guard now keeps Queen street bridge from the Lackawanna trestle north. The loafers who used to congregate on the trestle over the heads of the soldiers have been driven off, and it is now occupied by the signal corps of the Seventy-fourth, who are occupied in transmitting orders from headquarters from the high point of vantage.

Say the Strike Is Lost.

The strikers, with their broomsticks and clubs, have found themselves no match for the militia with their improved rifles and bayonets. In every collision the former have been worsted.

Instead of fighting the troops openly the men have confined themselves during the day to obstructing the passage of trains. This they have succeeded in doing temporarily in several instances, but in each case the mischief has been quickly driven away, and freight traffic, though much delayed, has proceeded.

The day and night have been almost free from attempts to blockade passenger trains. Travelers have experienced little difficulty in getting in and out of the city.

The railroad officials declare that the backbone of the strikers has been broken, because of the large number of new switchmen that have reached here from Boston and Philadelphia. They will try to put eighty of them at work on the Central and Reading systems. The strikers threaten to use the men very roughly if they catch them trying to take out any trains.

Another Soldier Killed.

The first soldier to be sacrificed during the strike has been killed. Frederick W. Elsasser, quartermaster sergeant of the Sixty-fifth regiment, was shot by a fellow soldier, Luther Holmes. Elsasser was standing at the door of a shanty near the tracks and Holmes was inside. Positive orders had been issued not to load any rifles. A stack of guns was standing in a corner and Holmes picked up one and snapped the trigger. The gun was loaded and the bullet struck Elsasser between the eyes, passed through his head and buried itself in the wall beyond. Elsasser was brought to this city, where he died.

ANARCHY IN TENNESSEE.

The Miners Capture Oliver Springs and the Militia Called Out.

CHATTANOOGA, Aug. 18.—Anarchy now reigns in the mining regions of this state and the excitement is intense. Governor Buchanan has ordered out the entire state militia under General Samuel T. Carnes. They will move to the front at once. The sheriffs of the counties of Knox, Shelby, Hamilton and Davidson were ordered to summon 100 men each and go on a special train to the scene of war. The governor claims to be able to have 8,000 men on the ground within a few hours.

The miners have taken possession of the property of the East Tennessee railroad in the neighborhood of Coal Creek and Olivers. They have cut the wires in numerous places, torn up the track in every direction and captured every locomotive in the mining region.

At a late hour last night over 1,000 miners captured three locomotives and several empty coal cars at Coal Creek and forced the engineers to take them to Oliver Springs, where about ninety-six convicts were employed in the mines of the Cumberland coal company. They arrived at Oliver Springs about 4 o'clock this morning and at once planned an attack on the stockade where convicts were confined. About 7 o'clock they assaulted the stockade and a lively battle ensued.

The Stockade Burned.

The stockade was defended by fifty picked guards and a company of thirty-eight militiamen. Two companies of National guards are on from Chattanooga via Harriman, were compelled to take the side track a few miles from Oliver Springs on account of displaced rails. Hundreds of shots were exchanged, but, strange to say, no one was injured. Guards and militia, seeing that it was useless to combat a force of 1,000 infuriated and determined men, quietly surrendered.

The convicts, guards and soldiers were loaded on a train of flat cars, and the engineer at the point of a Winchester rifle was compelled to pull the train out in the direction of Knoxville. The stockade was then burned to the ground.

Arriving at Clinton permission was obtained from the railway officials to bring the convicts to this city. The train, which was the only one in or out for twenty-four hours, arrived in Knoxville, and a special train then left the station, taking the convicts to the main prison at Nashville. Four convicts escaped between Oilvers and this city.

To Attack Coal Creek.

Passengers on a train just arrived from Coal Creek say that Camp Anderson at that place, the only point in the state where convicts are at work, will be taken tonight. The assault will take place before midnight, so they say. Over 1,500 miners are massed at Coal Creek, all heavily armed. They have captured the two companies of militia sent to Oilvers last night. They locked the soldiers in a warehouse at Clinton this morning, and then a thousand marched across the mountain to Coal Creek.

When the proposed assault on Camp Anderson is made they will force the captive soldiers in uniform to march at the head of the column, and have sent word to the officers in command of their intention. They believe that the officers of the camp will refuse to fire on them as long as the soldiers are in front. The miners held a meeting and several warlike speeches were made. There is a position to know say that Camp Anderson will be defended to the last man.

NANCY HANKS IS QUEEN.

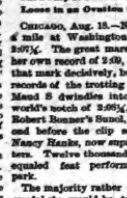
Sunol and Maud S Eclipsed by the Peerless Mare.

SHE BREAKS THE TROTTING RECORD

Twelve Thousand Persons Saw Budd Doble Drive His Pet the Mile in 2:07 1-4 Without a Skip or Break—Then Bedlam Broke Loose in an Ovation to Man and Mare.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—Nancy Hanks trotted a mile at Washington park yesterday in 2:07¼. The great mare was sent to beat her own record of 2:09, and not only upset that mark decisively, but broke all existing records of the trotting turf. The 2:08¾ of Maud S dwindles into obscurity, and the world's notch of 2:08¼, held until now by Robert Bonner's Sunol, pales by a full second before the clip set by the peerless *Nancy Hanks, now supreme queen of trot*ters. Twelve thousand persons saw the unequaled feat performed at Washington park.

The majority rather expected that a successful shy would be taken at 2:09, because



BUDD DOBLE.

Budd Doble had given it out plainly since Monday that the daughter of Happy Medium and Nancy Lee, named after the mother of Abraham Lincoln, was in fine form and in condition to do wonders. So fast did she trot, however, and so enthralling was her pace and perfect her control that as she sped under the wire with 2:07¼ hung out on the stand the big crowd of enthusiasts present let loose as if Bedlam had escaped, and Doble and the conqueror of time were lifted from their feet. Man and mare were practically carried to the paddock, and the faces that followed were seen only as a passing memory.

An Ideal Trot.

It was half past 5 o'clock when Doble brought Nancy out to score. Alongside was Frank Starr driving Dolly Spanker, who acted as pacemaker. She was sent a slow mile to warm up, and after her mouth was sponged was ready for the struggle. The mare sped toward the wire like a machine, and Doble, having nodded to the timers, was given the word and the famous mile try was on. The fan of the whip just tickled her sides as he raced toward the first turn, and she passed the clubhouse so rapidly that veterans of the turf declared she was going too fast to hold out at that pace to the end.

The quarter was reached in :31¾, but the mare was going as steadily as she had begun, and Doble sat like a statue. When she flashed past the half mile post in 1:03¾ there was a great murmur of surprise. Just then Starr passed the runner on Doble's wheel. He had been trailing up to that point. The thoroughbred, however, appeared to be an unnecessary companion, for the mare never let nor had need for courage. When the three-quarter flag went down the time recorded was 1:36¼, and then for the first time Doble began to urge the mare. Into the stretch she thundered, Starr now sending the runner level with Nancy, and as she came toward the finish the mores enthusiastic of the people began to cheer.

The Effort of Her Career.

On swept the mare, and faster and faster Starr urged the runner. At the final eighth pole Doble's hands were raised, and he leaned over the beloved charge and with voice and rein he coaxed her to the effort of her career, and thus forced her to the very limit of speed and endurance. The applause had died away, and amid most impressive silence Doble lifted Nancy Hanks under the wire, and so won the distinction of a world beater. Starr was trying to get the mare into trotting kingdom.

Nancy showed little fatigue and was breathing easy before her stall was reached. Doble declared that she was not at her best, but that she was somewhat retarded by the strong breeze down the back stretch. She was driven to one of the new pneumatic tired sulkies.

THE ARENA OF POLITICS

PLATT AND PASSETT ARE IN LINE.

The Vice Presidential Candidate Says They Will Work for the Ticket and That the Battle Will Be Fought and Won in the Empire State—Reed Talks in Maine.

RIVERTON, Aug. 18.—Hon. Whitelaw Reid, Republican candidate for vice president, his wife and Congressman Burrows passed through here en route to Chicago. In an interview with a reporter, between Pittsburgh and Rochester, Mr. Reid was asked about the condition of the campaign generally. He said it was highly encouraging. Stories of great trouble and dissatisfaction in the northwestern states were being circulated. "But," he said, "we never had and I suppose never will have a campaign without them. In fact, they do the party good rather than harm. Republicans always fight better when they get a little scared. Our danger always lies in being overconfident rather than in being standpatted."

"How about New York?"

"The contest will be fought and won in New York," replied Mr. Reid. "It is naturally Republican in presidential campaigns. In the thirty-six years in which we have had Republican presidential tickets there have been but three Democratic victories, and one of them, in 1884, was extremely doubtful. The candidate of that year is now running for the third time and after having been once defeated. I believe that as New York has been Republican two-thirds of the time in presidential contests, still really Republican more than that, it will be Republican this year."

"What is Mr. Platt's position? The Democrats are still assiduously spreading the story that he is sulking and will do nothing toward the election of the Republican ticket."

"As to that," said Mr. Reid, "it is well known that Mr. Platt was not so well suited with the nomination as he might have been, but he is a Republican and is with his party. His warmest friend, Mr. Fassett, who represents him at Albany, is at work for the ticket and so are all the strongest adherents of both these gentlemen.

"We expect the Republicans of the state to come down to Harlem bridge with an old fashioned majority, and in New York we expect to do well, too, but nowhere without a hard fight. The Democrats will make a desperate struggle, and we realize it, but we will win. The Republicans of New York are under no apprehensions, but they are also under no more delusions."

REED STARTS THE BALL.

The Congressman Opens the Republican Campaign in Maine.

PORTLAND, Aug. 18.—The Republicans of western Maine opened the fall campaign with a big meeting at city hall, which was packed on the floor and in the gallery, many people being unable to obtain seats. Hon. Charles F. Libby presided and made the opening address, outlining the issues of the coming campaign.

Hon. Thomas B. Reed was then introduced and received an ovation as he came forward. In substance he said:

"The Democracy is upon the defensive. They have not done anything in this generation to defend. No Democratic orator wearies his audience with a catalogue of achievements of the party. Just before the election in 1884 the Democrats were making a great complaint that we had a surplus of $70,000,000, and owing it to the people for purposes of circulation, and when Mr. Cleveland was elected his administration not only spent that $70,000,000 but nearly $77,000,000, and then let the national banks have the whole of it without interest. There are two points on which the Democratic party found especially claim—economy in public expenditures and reform in tariff.

"The very first thing they did in the house with 140 majority, was to pass a resolution that they were going to be good. At the first session of the Fifty-first congress we Republicans appropriated $403,000,000. How much do you suppose, under the guidance of Mr. Holman, the Democratic house has consented to appropriate? Well, when we got through and examined it up it was $379,000,000, more than $24,000,000 worse than the worst wickedness up to date.

"Here is a Democratic house capable of passing any appropriation bill they wanted to, but they have only captured Massachusetts immediately with free wool and attempted to take off the duty on cotton pecking and machinery to obtain the assistance of Rhode Island, which is one of the great forces of the world it is not the only force now. I fancy that the uniformity of prices since the Wilson bill passed is due to the greediness of importers who over stock the market, but at the same time the Democratic house that has stood by cannot be impeached on such large profits hereafter.

The last speaker of the evening was Hon. H. F. Frazier, of Detroit, who gave a stirring address.

WOMAN.

Glory to her forever!—
Glory and love bestowed
Till we from earth discover,
Angel she is to blood

The last are death defiants us,
To yield a helping hand:
The first that clasps and greets us
In yonder morning land!

The joys and hopes of heaven
Her smiles and blessings give,
Full of the love that leaven
The lives of pain we live!

She shines in song and story,
And still fair as of old;
She stands enshrined in glory,
Turning the clouds to gold!

Mother! What name is dearer?
Woman, thou are divine!
All heaven hath not a nearer!
My soul is ever mine!

—Rufus J. Childress.

TRAINED NURSES.

Work for Which Women Are Peculiarly Suited and Which is Well Paid.

In this world of suffering many find their life work beside the couches of the sick and dying. Some have this work thrust upon them by the stern hand of necessity, others voluntarily devote their lives to lessening the human misery to be found about them, while a third class undertake the work for money.

Necessity or a desire for independence sends forth each year a large number of young women to swell the ranks of the world's workers, and to one class seem to have chosen a nobler calling or to be better equipped for life's work than the army of trained nurses sent out from our hospitals. Those who have served the apprenticeship, varying in time from eighteen months to three years, go forth, not necessarily hardened, but experienced to objects and sounds of suffering, trained not to give way to their feelings on even the most trying occasions, to obey the doctor's orders to the letter, to note the slightest change in the patient's condition, to follow the best methods for promoting the comfort of the sick and assisting nature in her efforts to restore health.

There is a demand for this sort of knowledge and it is profitable from a financial standpoint. Trained nurses receive good wages, the most profitable field of work being the large cities. Of course every one may not succeed in this work. I am informed that hardly one-half of the probationers at a certain woman's hospital finish the course. Some find the work harder or more disagreeable than they expected, cannot overcome their nervousness at beholding painful operations or for various other reasons, but those whom it has been my pleasure to know, who have finished the course and are now working independently of the hospital, are quite devoted to their work.

I have several friends and acquaintances who are trained nurses, and perhaps a few items from the experience of one who has recently spent a part of her well earned vacation with me may be of interest to those young women who are about to choose some vocation. She commenced teaching at seventeen. After five years' work she found herself worn and nervous, with very little love or enthusiasm for teaching, but work she must, as her parents were poor.

Just at this time a lady of her acquaintance was taken ill and she was persuaded to undertake the nursing of her. She succeeded so well that the doctor and friends urged her to fit herself for this work.

Sending an application, together with a certificate of health from a physician and a recommendation from her pastor, to a hospital for women and children, she was voted in on a month's probation, donned her uniform of striped gingham, with white apron and cap, and went to work.

The first few weeks were homesick ones, but, as she wrote, "They pay very little attention to that kind of sickness," and her only remedy was hard work.

The kitchen—making of gruels, poultices and various other disagreeable duties—was given to the newcomers, but as they became more skillful their lot was easier.

At the close of her probation she was accepted and at the end of eighteen months graduated with honor. For her services at the hospital she received from six to twelve dollars a month, board and washing. She had regular hours of work, regular meals and a certain amount of instruction in the form of medical lectures, followed by examinations. Her services, since her graduation, have been in demand at fifteen dollars a week.

While under training, nurses are often sent out in the city to nurse, their wages, excepting the regular salary, going to the hospital. At this particular hospital the nurses, physicians and superintendent were women, and it is unnecessary to state that in spite of hard work the nurses managed to have some enjoyable times.

My friend and several other nurses rent furnished rooms in a physician's house, which they occupy between cases or when they need a rest. Two nurses room together, thereby lessening expense of rent, but it seldom happens that both are free to occupy it at the same time. One comes and another goes. Busy lives! But are not the busiest people the happiest?—Mary Slosson Stetson in Housekeeper.

The Great Women of Islam.

In the early centuries of Islam, almost until the extinction of the Saracenic empire in the east, women continued to occupy as exalted a position as in modern society. Zobeida, the wife of Horun, plays a conspicuous part in the history of the age, and by her virtues, as well as by her accomplishments, leaves an honored name to posterity. Humieda, the wife of Fazuk, a Medinite citizen, left for many years the sole guardian of her minor son, educating him to become one of the most distinguish ed jurisconsults of the day.

Sukinah, or Sakina, the daughter of Hussain and the granddaughter of Ali, was the most brilliant, most accomplished and most virtuous woman of her time. Her self no mean scholar, she prized in the converse of learned and pious people. Buran, the wife of the Caliph Mamun, Ummul Fasi, Mamun's sister, married to the eighth Imam of the house of Ali, Ummi Habil, Mamun's daughter, were all famous for their scholarship.—Ameer Ali in Nineteenth Century.

Banish Slang From the Home.

Slang is a note of savagery on our hearths and in our drawing rooms. It replaces the easy grace of courtesy by a familiarity often tinged with indelicacy, and is incompatible with that respect and deference that the noblest ideal of womanhood demands. And coarse speech is speedily followed by loose manners. No pure woman will speak a lingo into which it would be a kind of blasphemy to translate the Ten Commandments and the Apostles' Creed.

There is something painfully grotesque in imagining a jolly girl of the period talking slang to the babe on her knee, and all good men must frown down such a degradation of the world's mother.—Exchange

An English Dish.

There is a very prevalent idea that hotpot, as well as Irish stew, is made of any superfluous pieces of cooked meat that may be conveniently disposed of in that manner. Of course they can both be made so, and at times, for economical reasons, this serves a very good and useful end; and when this is done, the greater variety of meat put together the better it will be. Mutton, beef and fowl may then all be mingled in sweet confusion.

It may be made of either beef or mutton. If you can afford it, use for it a nice piece of rump steak, and those who know would tell you to give it a gentle stewing for half an hour before putting into the correct pot which is to contain the lot. This of course is to make the beef tender. When sufficiently done, cut it into pieces, perhaps two inches or so in size, lay some of these at the bottom of the white pot, which is said in the north for the purpose and generally has the word "Hotpot" printed on it, thenceforth such a one is not to be obtained farther south, a reputable stewing pot or pie dish may be used, for it has to be carried to table, and has a servicette or neat towel of some kind around it.

The pieces of beef laid at the bottom with a little stock; put on them a layer of potatoes, each cut into perhaps three pieces; add a little onion, and pepper and salt. Then some more beef and flavoring, then repeat with potatoes, and if the dish will hold two more layers, put them, but potatoes must be the last, and ought to present a nice, browned appearance. If made with mutton, the treatment of the hotpot is the same, only that the mutton does not require quite so much stewing beforehand. —London Lady.

Fashionable Women and Helpless Man.

During the Roman fashion red fair hair was bought of the German peasant girls; and simplicity returned with the invasion of the Franks. Philip the Fair decreed that no demoiselle with less than 2,000 livres a year should have more than one pair of gowns a year, or more than two with that income. He fixed the price of the stuff and provided for and against everything, and the ladies cared not at all. The husbands remonstrated and the clergy preached, and they cared less.

High heel dresses—high heels came later—were preached down everywhere; and the "seculion," a broad cylinder of rich stuff ornamented with jewels and two horns, said to come from England, like many eccentricities, was the object of the most sacred invective, and the hennin," a tall conic tube in brocaded stuff worked with beads and tightly fixed on the forehead, denouncing even more. But the ladies would have them, because it was be *coming and harmonized with the architec*ture—the day of slender spires and slim turrets and lofty cloth towers.

In vain did Brother Connecte, a Carmelite, of Rennes, undertake a campaign against these "hennins." The women came to his sermons bearing them, till he seized his staff and rushed among them, knocking the "hennins" off with the assistance of a side stroke. When he had gone on his way the "hennins" were made rather taller than before. The poor man went on to Rome, but as his fervor had grown upon him till he attacked the luxuries of the church, he was arrested and burned.—London Spectator.

Husbands and Fathers.

Some well known New York literary women discussing the subject of "husbands" when Jenny June said she compared her husband to her father, and was very much injured at his habits differing from the parent's, until a nice married friend told her that she had not married her father, but her husband, that she took him for "better or worse," and that she ought to find all the "better" she could, and think of the unfavorable as "bad." said the nice friend, "if you had a little private talk with your mother she might tell you some peculiarities in your father that you would find to be in a husband." Mrs. Croly said that she did not think husbands were as often disappointed in wives as vice versa, for wilful, selfish girls made spoiled wives and unsatisfied husbands. "A woman is not at her best until after she is married. Marriage is a great education and test. Young wives are too apt to lower their standard of character to please their husband. It is not essential to be assertive, but simply to hold your ground where principle is concerned, and if you do at the same time keep your head and keep your temper, you can do almost anything with a man.

Regulating the Stove Draft.

Allow no more air to enter the firebox than is absolutely necessary to keep up the fire after it is well started, and if you will try closing partly or altogether the draft slides in front you will be astonished to find how much longer the fuel will last and the oven remain hot. This is especially true when wood is used as fuel, and with a good draft it can be done when using coal. Let the fire rule be followed and the oven plate kept clean, especially the top oven, free from ashes, it will be found that much less fuel will be necessary to do the work, nor the cleaning have to be done so often. And above all be sure to keep the grate free from ashes at the bottom of the fire. Remember that oxygen is as necessary as fuel in keeping up a fire, and anything that prevents free access of oxygen through the fuel prevents perfect combustion. —Stoves and Hardware.

A Homemade Dress.

A green serge dress, which had done good service for two years, was recently washed in clear water, to which a little castile worth a penny per bar was added. After being gently rubbed—not on a board, but by hands—it was rinsed in water in which a little borax had been dissolved—a piece the size of a hickory nut to a pail of water. The cloth was hung on a line to drain, and before it was quite dry it was ironed on the wrong side. The result was a success, being so thoroughly cleaned without fading. New cloth, which was to make sleeves, was also dipped into both waters and then was added to the dress, it now almost as good as new. The water was neither hot nor cold, but just comfortable to the hands.—Homemaker.

Flavoring Canned Pears.

Pears that, after canning, prove to be tasteless, can be made delicious by heating and adding pineapple in the proportion of one can of pineapple to three of pears. Cut the slices of apple quite small, and if the pears are in halves, divide them again. Heat all together, taking care not to let them cook so that they lose their shape. When putting up pears it is very little trouble to add pineapple to a few cans, and the result is excellent, since the pear becomes perfectly flavored with pineapple and yet is far more easily digested.—Homemaker.

Pillows should be made of the best feathers to be had, and we should go to reliable dealers for them. Many pillows purporting to be of this quality are "dauped" with all sorts of rubbish to help fill up.

She Took Pride in Him.

It was a good many minutes after midnight when Mr. Snaggs reached home, and after a good deal of experimenting with the keyhole and the latchkey finally let himself in.

He went up stairs as stealthily as he could, but of course they creaked, and when he wheeled the second floor his wife was wide awake.

"What time is it?" she asked.

"A little waddle after 12 by my watch, my dear, but I think it's fast."

"Something like its owner," Mrs. Snaggs commented in a frigid voice.

Mr. Snaggs made no reply, but began to undress.

"Where were you tonight?" she demanded.

"My dear," responded Snaggs in a injured tone, "you don't mistrust your own husband, I hope?"

"Not at all. I merely had some curiosity to know what fresh excuse you had concocted, that's all."—New York Recorder.

Her Little Joke.

"Why did you toss young Chapley overboard?"

"Oh, I was tired of him: I wanted to renew my youth, don't you know."—Life.

Struck Down.

A farmer told this story the other day at Newtown, L. I.:

"Crops had turned out pretty badly, and the prospect for sprouting was worse. No rain had fallen for many days. I was about discouraged.

"My boys were flying a kite.

"'Dad,' they said, 'send up a message.'

"I took a piece of paper—half of a sheet of note paper—and wrote on it: 'Will it rain? Henry E. Smith.' Then the boys sent up the message, as you did many a time when you were boys.

"Well, that message went scooting away up. Before long a whole flock, or whatever you call it, of sparrows came along. They spied the kite and the message away up there and kicked up a great row. They darted at the paper, drove their little bills through it time and time again, and pecked furiously at it. Then they stood off at some distance to it inspecting their work, and then they flew off and took up position in a big old tree.

"The boys shortly afterward, when the sky became clear and the big black clouds began to bank themselves up all about, pulled down the kite.

"But a small piece of the paper remained. All of the name but the y on the end of Henry, the E and the S on the Smith had been picked away. 'Twas—"

"But the strangest thing was yet to happen. That night there was a thunderstorm, but strange to say not a drop of rain fell.

"Next morning we found that the tree in which the sparrows had taken refuge had been struck during the night, and that every blamed one of those sparrows had been killed.

"What for?

"Twas's the first time a fellow was struck down for lying, was it?"—New York Evening Sun.

Motherly Pride Justified

"Mildred, is it true that Frances Billiwink has been seeking to attract the attention of Harold Spangler?"

"The regal, dark eyed girl bowed her stately head.

"She has, mother."

"Does she not know he is your affianced husband?"

"I—I think so. Everybody knows it."

"And—pardon me, my child—does he seem to waver in his allegiance to you?"

"No, mother."

A look of relief, mingled with an unmistakable expression of gratified maternal pride, flashed across the gentle face of the mother.

"I am glad to hear it, Mildred," she said tenderly. "I could hardly think it possible, I confess, that a girl of her merely superficial attainments and florid style of beauty could attract the fancy or snare the affections of a discerning, self poised young man like Harold Spangler. And you are sure she has utterly failed?"

"I know what I am talking about, mother," rejoined the proud girl, her lips curling in magnificent scorn. "When Fan Billiwink tried to cut me out she bit off more than she could chew."—Chicago Tribune.

Out of the Pan.

Sea Captain—Yes, I want a boy, but I think you look like a runaway. Now ain't ye? Didn't you run away from home?

Boy—Ye-ye-y-e-s, but I couldn't help it. They was goin to send me to a dentist to have six teeth filled.

"They was, was they? Well, I'd 'a' run off too. I don't believe in fillin teeth."

"N-o, sir; I don't either."

"Of course not. You come on board with me, and if anything's wrong with your teeth th' carpenter can take 'em out with a monkey wrench."

Boy went home.—Good News.

Maud Muller.

Maud Muller worked at raking hay,
And got more freckles day by day.

Until her face looked like a side
Of leather from a horse's hide.

She didn't care till boarders came
From Boston town, and then her shame

Was really pitiful to see,
At least it so appeared to me.

Her reddish brown locks wouldn't show,
The freckles were too thick, you know.

In an Album.

I turn the pages idly
And shadow faces see
That time and distance widely
Now separate from me.
But one, with beauty rarest,
I see as through a mist
Of tears; her face the fairest—
The girl I never kissed.

For all these winsome creatures
My heart best will and warm—
Maiden, with her cheeks of roses,
Blanche, with her perfect form.
And May, for one whole season,
I ranked upon her list.
Them sought, with love's unreason,
The girl I never kissed.

Louise, this stately goddess,
Queen of the ballroom's whirl,
And Dora in silk and bodice,
A darling summer girl.
Fast sweeps, by memory driven,
To turn I can't resist.
To where upon this page is
The girl I never kissed.

She'd all their winning graces,
Oh, Cupid's tool, the sinner!
She'll play another game of love
And then he'll not be winner.

THE BOROUGH RAILWAY

A COMPANY ANXIOUS TO PUT IN A COMPRESSED AIR SYSTEM.

The Projectors Say they Have the Unanimous Consent of Property-Owners—Only Waiting for the Council to Grant a Franchise.

A petition for a street railway franchise has been for some time before the Borough Council, and may be considered and granted at the next regular meeting. There are many who hope so, anyhow.

The majority of the company are residents of this neighborhood and are all well known and respected.

The incorporators are Messrs. Manning, of Trenton; C. T. Hughes, of Orange; T. S. Burr and S. P. Wheeler, and Doctors T. S. Davis and J. H. Cooley of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

They propose to use the compressed-air system if the franchise is granted.

Compressed-air has been successfully tried in many places, and is recommended everywhere. The advantages it offers is little noise and no poles, wires, odor or dirt.

The route proposed would be, as a started, along Somerset street to Mountain avenue, to Westervelt avenue.

If the proposed extension of Peace street is carried through this year, as, it probably will be, the tracks would go down that thoroughfare.

Then, when the company got down to regular business, it proposes to extend its tracks to Fanwood and Scotch Plains railway, and if possible, Evona and Dunellen in the opposite direction.

There seems to be an almost unanimous desire for rapid transit in the borough, by means of the compressed-air system.

Marriage is likely to be more or less of a failure in New Jersey, now that the matrimonial house has been made an issue in the domestic campaign by a recent decision of Vice-Chancellor Bird. A Truckman Tries to Turn off the Car Tracks too Short.

Mr. Van Deenden, a truckman from Greenbrook, drove to Plainfield this morning with a load of fruit and vegetables and on Front street was driving on the trolley car-tracks.

A car suddenly loomed up and in his effort to get off the track out of the way his wagon wheels became jammed and one front axle was wrecked. Every spoke was broken.

Base Ball Banter.

Special Officer Whitely is proving himself a competent man on the ball-field, although he finds it hard work to tell his particular friends to "vacate" when they get outside the ropes.

THE BOROUGH FIRE ALARM WHISTLE TESTED.

Hundreds of People Hunting for a Supposed Fire Last Night.

The new steam fire-alarm whistle of the borough was tested at about eight o'clock last evening. It made itself heard to a remarkable distance.

It was a decided bit of carlessness on somebody's part that notice of the test was not given in the papers. The plea that the exact time could not be given is a good excuse, but it had been generally known that a "test" was daily expected the hundreds of people who went hunting for a fire in the borough last evening would have been saved time and trouble.

The sound of the new whistle is similar to the one in Plainfield.

The next thing in order now will be the preparation of a code of signals that will not conflict with the Plainfield system.

PERSONAL.

Miss Jennie Lunger of North Plainfield, is visiting friends in Clinton, N. J.

Mr. Harry G. Squires of No. 108 Broadway has returned from his vacation.

Mr. Addison Laing of Brooklyn, N. Y., is visiting among his old friends here.

Judge John Ulrich addressed a political meeting at Hoboken, N. J. last evening.

Miss Fannie Schomp of this city is visiting her cousion, Miss Van Pelt of Harlingen, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hall, of Plainfield avenue, have returned from a short stay in New York.

Mrs. M. E. Holton of Grove street, has returned from Ocean Grove, where she spent the Summer.

Miss Mamie Murphy of Newark is visiting her cousins, the Misses Murphy of East Third street.

Mr. and Mrs. Uppersett of 12 Putnam avenue returned yesterday from a short visit to Philadelphia.

Mrs. Weaver, wife of mail-carrier Weaver of Orchard place, died yesterday after a short illness.

Mr. John Lindsay of West Front street has returned from a two weeks visit at Newburg-on-the-Hudson.

Miss Adrian Allisson of North Plainfield, returned home last evening from a month's stay at Cape May.

Mrs. Emma Kingsley and Mrs. Grace Kingsley of this city are registered at the "Minot," Asbury Park, N. J.

Mrs. J. J. Coard of No. 49 Putnam avenue started yesterday to join her daughters at Burlington, Vermont.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. M. Runyon of No. 106 East Front street, returned this morning from a two week's stay at Asbury Park.

Mrs. George F. Mesobutt of No. 110 East Front street returned this morning from a two weeks' visit to Asbury Park.

Miss Della Feytel and Master Joe Feytel of West Front street, have returned from a two weeks' visit at Winsted, Conn., with relatives.

Mrs. M. A. Mulford of this city, who has been spending the past few weeks at Martha's Vinyard, is now at the Westminster hotel, Asbury Park, N. J.

Miss May Flannagan of West Fifth street, Miss Carney of West Third street, and the Misses Mullen of West Fifth street are registered at the Grand Central Hotel, Asbury Park.

Mr. Robert Radford of West Front street, returned home yesterday from a prolonged outing. He starts to-morrow for Newark, N. J., and after a few days' visit there will take a trip up the Hudson.

Mr. and Mrs. McCrorly, of New York, guests at the Netherwood all last Summer, are this year in domestic trouble. She is suing for a limited divorce on the ground of cruelty, and his counsel has produced affidavits which show that he was more than justified in refusing to live with her.

Concerning the latest business venture in which that enterprising borough resident, Mr. Charles W. McCutcheon, is interested, the Trenton American says: The "Buckwheat Trust," with a capital of $5,000,000, is the latest in that line. Next we shall have a "corner" on buckwheat cakes, which will bring the war home to every man's griddle.

—Rev. Mr. Walker of New York will preach this evening at the colored camp meeting in Hyde's woods.

—Nora Edmondson appeared before Judge Codington. John Sullivan, a backman, accused her of using indecent language and also of throwing a pailful of dirty water upon his carriage. She was fined $5.

THE CITY'S CHANCE.

TO HAVE THE RAILROAD COMPANY DO THE FAIR THING.

And Before Permission is Given to Extend Consent to Pay Five Per Cent. of its Gross Receipts as is Paid Everywhere Else.

The Plainfield Railway was secured by ordinance passed by the defunct combine so that it can run its present line for five years without paying a dollar into the city treasury, although in other cities five per cent. of the gross receipts is paid.

This company gave as a reason why it should not pay, that it did not expect the road for five years to pay expenses. Such an excuse cannot now be given, as the company itself gives it out that its success is unparalelled.

It asks Council for the privilege of extending the line to East Front and Peace streets and North avenue.

Now, the company cannot extend its line without the consent of Common Council by resolution, and even then not without the consent of the majority of the property owners along the lines proposed.

Those who do not give their consent can at any time have the road stopped by injunction, as has already been done in several cities reported in the newspapers at the time, on constitutional grounds, wherein the question was raised as to the right of Common Council to grant the right to any man the use of the public streets, as are given trolley companies.

Of course a citizen who once gives his consent by signing the petition allowing the companies to pass in front of his property deprives himself of the right to ever raise the question, or to sue the company for damages resulting from its ordinary use of the streets. It might be well for those who do not favor the trolley to reserve their right to sue in case the road becomes such a menace to life and property as it has become in other cities.

And Common Council ought not to grant any privilege to further extend the road unless the company is willing, as one of the conditions, to pay five per cent. of its gross receipts.

This is only reasonable and businesslike, and the interests of the city require that it should be exacted.

This Common Council was elected to protect the city's interests, which were so greatly jeopardized by the "Combine," unparalelled in the way it run up taxes and frittered away the people's rights.

The company's earnings, even on the short line it has, can be approximated. It declares that it has carried, the first week it has been in operation, 13,563 passengers. This is probably more than it will carry regularly, at least for a few months. Suppose we allow it but 1,000 a day. That would make the gross receipts $50 per day, or $350 per week. The eight men employed on the cars receive $13 each per week, or $96 in all, and allow even $100 per week for all other expenses, or say $200 in all, it leaves the net earnings of the company over $30 per day. As a matter of fact it it will be nearly double that amount. But even on this basis it will be seen what enormous returns the company will receive on its investment. It is capitalized for $25,000. If we were to allow even the minimum basis of calculation we have here, it would leave the net earnings on even this short line of road (two and half miles) not far from forty per cent. It will probably be double that.

With the extensions there would be no extra expense, after the first outlay of wiring, poling, and laying of the tracks, a trifling matter, as that it would not surprise us to see the earnings reach one hundred per cent. There are reasons to believe that the company will water the stock and bond the road and resort to other schemes to increase the investment from public its real earnings, just as is done by other roads, but we don't think that, if done, will deceive persons experienced in such matters.

We will take only what they have proved to be the popularity of the road as a basis of calculation, and even reduce it nearly one-half. Yet on that basis it would mean $2.50 per day to the city, a mere bagatelle to the company, putting less than a thousand dollars a year into the city treasury.

As a matter of fact it would be more likely to reach from $5,000 to $10,000 per year, which would be a considerable help to the taxpayers, in whose interest our Common Council must of course and will act, and in doing so can do no less than to require five per cent. of the company's gross receipts before granting any further privileges.

WEALTH IN GOLD BRAID.

Franklin Council's Drum Major's $70 Suit.

Master Thomas Schafer (and his drum major suit) of the Independent Drum Corps, created a sensation at Asbury Park during the parade of Franklin Council, No. 61, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, of this city, on Wednesday. He informed a New reporter that he thought that his gorgeous uniform cost him $70.

The coat is a deep fawn color heavily trimmed with gold braid and the trousers are of army blue with a broad white stripe down the side.

As Franklin Council marched past the West End Hotel Master Shafer and the corps received a perfect ovation from the 2,000 persons who had assembled on the piazzas to witness the parade.

A TEMPERANCE LESSON.

The Curious and Laughable Result of a Drunk.

A good story is told of a North Plainfield gentleman, lately deceased. The gentleman's wife, a very worthy woman, is still living. She has always been a strong temperance advocate. Her husband, it seems, was not quite as faithful a follower of the Prohibition principles as his wife.

One evening he was troubled, it is thought, with a slight attack of colic, and, going to a neighbor, asked for some brandy. It was forthcoming, and he drank half a tumbler of the liquid. Then he went home. His wife was on the porch and the minute he sat down she noticed his breath. The odor of brandy was unknown to her, and she could attribute the "smell" to but one thing. Getting up she said, very decidedly, "John, your stomach is in an awful condition. I can tell by your breath. You must take a good dose of medicine."

"John" didn't dare object, for he wouldn't have his spouse know he had been drinking for worlds. She fixed up a big dose of castor oil, and, ever ruling his frequent suggestions that he would "take it later," calmly made him swallow it.

INCORPORATED IN NEW JERSEY.

A Railroad Whose Operations will be Carried on in Central America.

Articles of incorporation were filed this morning in the Secretary of State's office at Trenton, N. J., for a railroad to operate in Central America. The road is to go through the Department of Nicaragua, from Nicaragua, Central America.

The capital stock is $400,000 and the incorporators are John B. Forrest, Beverly T. Harris, Frank H. Davis and Adrian Vermeule. This is the first time that a railroad company has come in existence under the miscellaneous corporation act.

How to Land a Black Bass.

"When a black bass is hooked the only way you can judge of its movements and intentions is by the sense of feeling transmitted through the rod and line and by watching the line at the point of contact with the surface of the water, from which point never remove your eyes until the fish is brought safely to bag," says a local fisherman. "A black bass or a trout will resort to every means in its power to get rid of the remorseless steel, sometimes breaking water four or five times. When a fish is seen to be making pell-mell for the surface, and is bound to get there no matter what happens it can often be checked, just before it breaks water, by moving the rod quickly and steadily to the right or left, keeping a taut line, of course, all the while; but, should this not succeed and it break water in spite of you, lower the point of the rod a little, otherwise it might be jumshed. Care must be taken in this, in order that the fish may not throw its weight and bring the whole force of its jump to bear on the straight taut line or fall back on the taut line, either of which are extremely liable to produce the result spoken of. If you get a strike when trolling, keep the line taut and the boat in motion, slaking its speed somewhat, of course; for give your catch but a few inches of slack, and up it goes into the air like a rocket and is gone."

POLITICAL POINTS!

The City Republican Executive Committee.

The following members of the City Republican Executive Committee met last evening in Republican headquarters on East Front street: Messrs. J. Coward, E. R. Ackerman, T. J. Carey, F. MacDonald and Judge Codington, being present.

Little business of importance was done and the meeting adjourned at 10.15 o'clock.

The Campaign Bicycle Club, which now has 96 members, was to have met after the City Executive Committee adjourned, did not do so. The time of the next meeting will be set by Judge Coddington.

A Get-Rich-Quick Concern Closed.

The headquarters in Newark of the Eastern branch of the Real Estate Exchange and Purchasing Company were closed yesterday. Announcement is made that it has wound up its business because of the "lack of business and the feeling of distrust among the people of this vicinity." The Real Estate Exchange and Purchasing Company is another of the "get-rich-quick" concerns with which Jersey has been infested for a year or two past.

HIGH COURT OF FORESTERS.

The Annual Meeting to be Held at Plainfield.

The High Court of Independent Foresters of New Jersey, which was to have held its annual session at Florence in September, will meet at Plainfield, the change of place being made on a dispensation granted by Supreme Ranger Dronyteikin. The town of Florence is in South Jersey below Burlington, and too inconveniently located for the great majority of delegates, some of whom come from New York State, which is a part of the New Jersey jurisdiction.

The session at Plainfield will be held on Sept. 20. About two hundred delegates will attend. The new Plainfield Court, Wetumpkin, which will be formally instituted on Friday evening of this week will have charge of some of the local arrangements.

The Independent Order of Forresters is growing very rapidly in this section. In Elizabeth there are eight hundred members. During the past year new courts have been instituted at Dunellen, Somerville, Plainfield, Newark and in this city. The latter is Court Columbus, which has a membership of one hundred and fifty. The other courts in this city are Courts Elizabeth, Washington and Lafayette. Theron B. Clark, of this city, is High Chief Ranger, and will preside at the coming meeting of the High Court.—Elizabeth Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Twenty Acres and a Living.

A correspondent of The Ohio Farmer declares that any energetic man not afraid to work can pay on credit ten to twenty acres of land, rich or poor, near a village of not less than 1,000 inhabitants, and in a few years not only pay for the land, but make a living besides. He himself has bought twenty acres in this way, and in five years finds himself not only out of debt, but with improvements on his place worth $700. A [illegible] farmer apparently need despair of getting on.

The correspondent was offered the second year of his occupancy seventy-five dollars an acre for the land. He could now get $200 an acre, so much has he added to its value, but he has no wish to sell. He is laying up money. He explains some of his methods. He has been a close student of agricultural literature both in books and papers, and he attributes much of his success [illegible]

Furthermore, he has run in specialties in gardening. He has a considerable vineyard from which he sells grapes. But he has not put all his eggs in one basket, but distributed them, so that if one is a loss he will have others to fall back on.

For instance, on the one vegetable, horse radish, which most farmers treat with contempt, he realizes annually a large sum. He puts it up in bottles, and cannot prepare it fast enough for his customers. He has now an acre and a half of this vegetable alone. His plan generally is to find his own customers and sell to them directly, without the middleman's intervention. His wife does much of the buying and selling and otherwise runs the financial end of the partnership, leaving him time to carry out his agricultural ideas.

Artesian Wells in Cities.

In Lincoln park, Chicago, is an artesian well that supplies twenty gallons of pure water a minute to thirsty crowds. Artesian well water generally is preferred to that which cities get by piping from lakes and rivers, because it contains less decaying organic matter, coming as it does from away down deep in the earth. The large well in Lincoln park is 1,800 feet deep, and there is in the park also another well of this kind, flowing constantly. During the disturbance of the water supply some time since in Chicago one hotel triumphed over the others because it had its own artesian well, from which flowed a crystal stream unchecked by storm or breakage. In Newark, N. J., an enterprising citizen makes a comfortable living by bottling the water from a famous artesian well and delivering it by wagon to families that are unwilling to drink the ordinary hydrant water.

It seems that there are large possibilities in the artesian well industry for cities and for smaller towns. An establishment that had its own well would be independent at all times of the water department. For fires and seasons of drought and for other emergencies public wells of this kind would be useful in every city. And small towns might draw their entire water supply from this source in almost any spot in this country. Numbers of villages have, in fact, constructed public waterworks in this way, and all of them might do so.

It is a very serious business when a regularly accredited officer of the United States in a foreign country stands a self confessed forger and swindler, as one of our four consuls in Europe does at this moment. Nothing short of insanity could excuse dishonesty in such a place. The consul from this country who turns out to be a forger does irreparable damage. An imputation of dishonesty will be cast on the good name of all Americans as long as his crime is remembered. People elsewhere in Europe will shrug their shoulders at mention of a United States consul. "American consul! Oh, yes. American consuls are forgers. Look out for them." To the man who has thus dragged his country's flag in the dust and bemired the good name of all American citizens hardly any punishment is too severe.

An electric wagon, run by storage battery, has appeared in Chicago. It might be useful and available, and may yet be, but there is the same old trouble. The battery which generates the electricity, and which must be hauled about in the wagon, weighs a ton—as much as one of the largest of draft horses. At present the motive power costs as much to maintain as a pair of horses, so there seems no advantage except the greater cleanliness and more room in the streets. When shall we have an economical and convenient way of getting electric power? The storage battery for vehicles would come near the mark if it could be made cheap and of light weight.

The skilled mechanics at the Homestead mills struck and their places were more or less successfully filled. The whole iron and steel association of the land united against the Carnegie men, too, but they yet went on operating the mills. But when the head cook struck, then there was trouble, sure enough.

NICKEL PLATE MEN OUT.

A General Railroad Strike Appears to Be Imminent.

TROOPS HURRYING ON TO BUFFALO.

The Entire National Guard of New York Under Arms and Ready for Service at an Instant's Notice—Webb and McLeod Peremptorily Decline to Arbitrate.

BUFFALO, Aug. 19.—The overwhelming militia force here has put an end to the rioting, but, as Grand Master Sweeney, of the switchmen, remarked, all the troops in the country couldn't keep the strike from spreading. The strike of the Lake Shore switchmen [illegible] to the Nickel Plate, and on the Lake Shore, Lake Shore and Western, the only road east now open, a few men have gone out and the others seem to be wavering, and the Michigan Central switchmen are ready to go out the minute any one insists on their handling freight from lines on which there is a strike.

The leaders of the strike have witnessed the movement, and massing of troops with growing determination to meet every attempt of their opponents with a counter stroke.

Before sundown 8,000 troops in the state service will be upon the field here to watch and control about 800 strikers. The presence of so large a number of soldiers is relied upon by the railway officials as a cover under which they may put to work non-union men already engaged to break the freight blockade.

The Nickel Plate Men Out.

The latest addition of strength to the striking switchmen was ninety men in the Nickel Plate yards, who struck because they were asked to handle boycotted freight. The switchmen upon the entire Vanderbilt system in this vicinity are now out. The Lake Shore men, to be sure, were working on the western schedule at the same rates for which their colleagues in Buffalo went on strike last Saturday.

They went out entirely to add strength to the movement of their fellows.

The Nickel Plate men who went out struck only out of sympathy, for they are receiving at least 10 per cent. higher rates than the men who originated this strike. The Michigan Central, which is of the Vanderbilt system, practically has no yards in Buffalo, their switching being done on the Central's tracks.

The leaders of the striking men hold that the Vanderbilt roads are tied up and inactive at this point. They urge in addition that the Erie, the Lehigh Valley and the Buffalo Creek roads are likewise paralyzed by their strike.

They feel that the movement against the roads by the men has now reached such magnitude and completeness in this locality that it may not be necessary for any men in allied trades to be called out at this point.

Their reserve ground for operations is a possible calling of the switchmen on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg and the western New York and Pennsylvania roads. The relations of these roads with the strike leaders are extremely amicable, and they will not be called out except to make the strike absolutely complete in this vicinity.

Significant Preparations.

Brigadier General Doyle has removed his headquarters from the yards to the city proper, in order that the assignment of [illegible] and the direction of affairs may be closely attended to.

Preparations of a suggestive character were being made today at the Fitch hospital. Over twenty cots with bedding have been furnished, together with several field stretchers. These arrangements have been made in view of the danger of riot and bloodshed in the city. There will be no night accommodation at the Fitch for forty wounded men, and even more if necessary.

Several doctors have signified their intention of assisting the Fitch surgeons should the necessity arise. An ambulance from the Fitch will report at headquarters for service, and will remain at the Villard street crossing all night. Another ambulance and two wagons, prepared for the reception of the wounded, will be held in reserve at the hospital.

Webb Refuses to Arbitrate.

The state board of arbitration met and prepared a circular, which was sent to the executive officers of the roads on which the trouble exists. It states that the switchmen had expressed a willingness to arbitrate, and asked to be informed whether the railroads would consent to an adjustment of the difficulty by such arbitration. Vice President Webb returned a reply which is believed to embody the sentiment of the officials of the other roads. It was to the effect that the Central had nothing to arbitrate.

In the Lake Shore yard a crowd of strikers gathered and stoned two yard engines, breaking the glass in the cabs and driving the engineers and firemen from their posts.

A messenger was dispatched to General Doyle for a force of militia, and pending their arrival work was suspended. A few other skirmishes here and there served to [illegible] the monotony, but none was of a serious nature. There were a few freight trains moved, but it was as a drop in the ocean toward lifting the immense blockade that exists here.

Vice President Webb was the most cheerful man seen. In his opinion the backbone of the strike was broken at least so far as his road was concerned. He claimed that the Central was in good shape and that the Lake Shore was the only portion of the Vanderbilt system affected. He asserted that the blockade there would be lifted today.

Notwithstanding this optimistic view of affairs the gravity of the situation can hardly be overestimated. As it now stands a general strike of firemen, engineers, conductors and brakemen is threatened.

It is either this or a flat failure of the switchmen's strike. And the latter say, "If we fail now it will be your turn next." The grand officers of all the unions are either in the city or within easy call. Chief Arthur is in Toronto and can be called here in a few hours.

A General Strike Threatened.

It is stated on good authority that at the meeting of the striking switchmen Grand Master Sargent, of the firemen, and Wilkinson, of the trainmen, were present, and while counseling peaceful measures and the maintenance of good order, assured the switchmen of the sympathy of their organizations and declared that they would join the strike if necessary.

A meeting of the firemen has been called for tonight, and it will be one of the most important ones of the strike. The trainmen will also hold a meeting and deal with act in conjunction with the firemen. Conductors are known to be in touch with the other three organizations, and if a climax is reached will work in harmony with them.

The engineers will not work with green firemen, and so, this is now of falling bricks, and points to the [illegible] Buffalo.

At Warsaw the New York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad company gave formal notice to Sheriff Day, of threatened violence to the property of the company in the neighborhood of Warsaw, and especially at the high bridge crossing the Genesee river at Portage. A force of special, under command of Deputy Pond has been [illegible] to guard all points of danger on the county [illegible] while the Livingston county [illegible] has a force on the opposite side of the river. It is believed that anarchist dynamiters are about the only persons that could successfully wreck the great structure, and all suspicious characters lurking around it will be sent away.

A Passenger Train Stopped.

The order of police and military which had been on duty at the Louisiana street crossing of the New York Central were withdrawn and within an hour the Rochester [illegible] was stopped by open switches. The men [illegible] to close them, and it was not until a squad of police arrived that the train was allowed to go on its way.

General Superintendent Blodgett, of the Lake Shore, was in his office in general charge of the affairs of the company. He had just heard of the Nickel Plate switchmen going on strike and remarked, "Misery loves company."

"What influences have you taken to reopen your road?" was asked.

"Nope yet. When we get the men I will tell you far better. We are at present sitting still. A little [illegible] in the yards, but very little. As we cannot either receive or deliver freight to our connecting lines, we are obliged to sit still until they can resolve it."

"We have five switching engines at work and have sent out three trains already," said Superintendent Braun, of the Erie. "We expect to send more tonight but will not work the men in the yards after dark for the present. We are taking grain at the elevator right along and are caring for all the trains offered. We are now in good trim to keep things moving."

The situation at East Buffalo and Cheektowaga, the scene of the strike, is quietness itself. There was no disturbance and no apparent indication of any, although this may be accounted for by the fact that few trains were moved about.

Another Soldier Killed.

There can be no doubt but that before yielding this fight the leaders will extend their strike west, even to Chicago, and eastward to New York, ultimately calling out, perhaps, not only switchmen, but firemen and trainmen. The strikers look for wide developments in the next three days.

Another chair was made vacant yesterday in a militiaman's home, and another mother is left to mourn the loss of a son. This makes two lives sacrificed so far to the strike. This victim is James O'Hara, of Oswego, aged twenty-one. He was a member of the Forty-eighth Separate company and was on duty at the southern [illegible] end of the "Y" yard, about a quarter of a mile out East William street, on the New York Central, when the accident occurred.

Engine 438 of the Erie was patrolling his beat. He must have sought shelter in the shade of three cars which were kicked by a string of about twenty-five others. Anyway, he was found with a wheel on his body and his life slowly ebbing away. O'Hara was taken to the hospital, but was beyond medical aid and died in about five minutes. He was conscious to the end, and his last words were: "My God! What will my poor mother do? She'll go crazy with grief. Help me all you can, boys." The body will be sent to Oswego for burial.

The Troops Under Arms.

The following is the list of troops in service awaiting orders and available if wanted. Those already started or in active service at the front are: The Seventy-fourth and Sixty-fifth regiments, Buffalo; the Twenty-second, Ninth and Eighth Seventy-first regiments, New York, and the following separate companies: The Fourth, Yonkers; Fifteenth and Nineteenth, Poughkeepsie; Fourth and Twenty-first, Troy; Thirteenth, Jamestown; Tenth battalion, Albany; Thirty-fourth, Geneva; Eighth, Rochester; Twenty-sixth and Thirtieth, Elmira; Tenth and Fifth, Newburg; Twenty-ninth and Thirty-eighth, Oswego; Sixteenth, Catskill; Forty-third, Olean; Seventh, Cohoes; Twenty-third, Hudson; Thirty-second, Hoosic Falls; Fortieth and Forty-first, Syracuse; Thirty-sixth and Thirty-seventh, Schenectady; Twenty-eighth and Forty-fourth, Utica; Forty-second, Niagara Falls; Thirty-ninth, Walton; Second, Auburn; Forty-fifth, Catskill.

Tenth and Seventeenth first regiments, of New York, started at midnight, as did also the Twenty-third company, of Hudson, for Buffalo.

The troops ordered under arms and awaiting orders are the Seventh, Eighth, Sixth and Sixty-ninth regiments, of New York, and the Fourteenth, Twenty-third and Forty-fourth regiments, Brooklyn, and the separate companies: Ninth, Whitehall; Seventeenth, Flushing; Eleventh, Mount Vernon; Fourteenth, Kingston; Third, Oneonta; Twelfth, Troy; Thirty-fifth, Ogdensburg; Twentieth, Binghamton; Thirty-third, Walton; Thirty-first, Mohawk. Not yet ordered out: Separate companies—Twenty-seventh, Malone; Twenty-fourth, Middletown; Twenty-second, Saratoga, and Eighteenth, Glens Falls.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 18, 1892.
M. F. BONZANO, General Superintendent, Buffalo, N. Y.:

I am in receipt of your message informing me that the New York state board of mediation and arbitration have written to you that one Sweeney is willing to arbitrate, and inquiring whether this company is willing to consent to arbitration.

You are instructed to reply to the board that in the opinion of the management of this company the time to act for or consider the question of arbitration has passed. When we abandoned the service of the company, destroyed its property and threatened to murder its employes we were not, therefore, in any judgment, not entitled to any consideration other than that of outlaws.

COAL CREEK CAPTURED.

Tennessee Miners Make Four Attacks on the Stockade.

COLONEL ANDERSON CARRIED AWAY.

The Intention Was to Hold Him as a Hostage Till the Troops Were Called Off, but a Mob Took Him and It Is Thought He Was Lynched.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 19.—Captain Keller Anderson, who for nearly a year has held the convicts at Coal Creek, is in the hands of the miners at last and may have been lynched. His force of 120 men are still holding the fort. The men have been on short rations for three days. Every available man in the [illegible] assistance arrived.

The Knoxville [illegible] company, lessees of the branch penitentiary at Coal Creek, have given the governor twenty days' notice that they will give up the lease and turn the convicts over to the state authorities. This decision, if laid before the miners, would probably put an end to the whole trouble.

Tracks Loaded with Dynamite.

Governor Buchanan, with the consent of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company, has promised to annul the convict lease, and the leaders of the miners are counseling patience. It will take twenty days, however, to arrange the details, and there are many hot heads among the miners who got a taste of blood and want more. This accounts for the renewal of hostilities in Coal Creek.

A special train arrived from Chattanooga carrying Brigadier General Carnes and the First regiment of National guards, 600 strong, and over 100 volunteer citizens of Chattanooga. The train was switched around the city and is now on its way to Coal Creek.

A private message from Clinton to the agent of the United Press says: "A courier has just arrived here from Coal Creek. He says fighting has been going on continuously. Four convicts were killed and their Gatling guns are out of order. The Knoxville volunteers and soldiers who left here by special train will never reach Coal Creek, as the track is loaded with dynamite."

The Battles at Fort Anderson.

The latest reports which are reliable say that the battle at Camp Anderson was commenced early, but for several hours the firing was not general. Then the miners to the number of 1,000 made an organized assault on the fort and were successfully repulsed. The second assault was easily repulsed.

The third attempt resulted in a regular pitched battle and the Gatling guns got in their work, but to what extent is not known. Several of the assailants were wounded and some of them were probably killed, but no one knows for certain. The fort commands the road which is surrounding a range of Coal Creek valley for five miles east and west. To the north is a spur way, he was found with a wheel on his body and his life slowly ebbing away. O'Hara was taken to the hospital, but was beyond medical aid and died in about five minutes. He was conscious to the end, and his last words were: "My God! What will my poor mother do? She'll go crazy with grief. Help me all you can, boys." The body will be sent to Oswego for burial.

REID SPEAKS IN ILLINOIS

He Starts the Fight There with a Speech at Springfield.

DICKINSON WILLRULE AT CHICAGO

The Democratic National Campaign Committee Decide to Open Headquarters for the Northwest in the Windy City—Tom Watson's Third Party Indorses Buchanan.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., Aug. 19.—The state convention of Republican League clubs was called to order by Chairman Tracy, who delivered a brief speech, giving the history of the league and stating its objects. The secretary read the following letter:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, Aug. 2, 1892.

W. W. Tracy, Esq.:

DEAR SIR—As I have explained to you personally, it will be impossible for me to attend the meeting of the league clubs of the United States Aug. 18, nor can I write at any length, but I beg to extend to that large body of intelligent and courageous Republicans who will be at your meeting my most hearty thanks for the invitation so kindly extended. I beg also to express the hope that your meeting may be largely and successful, and that after your conference the young men who compose these clubs will take up the aggressive work of the campaign with increased zeal and energy. Very truly yours,

BENJAMIN HARRISON.

A telegram of greeting was also read from J. Ellen Foster, president of the Women's Republican Association of the United States. A glee club from Chicago sang a couple of campaign songs and the convention took a recess for one hour. The special train bearing Whitelaw Reid and party then reached the city. Mr. Reid was escorted from the station to the capitol by several marching clubs and addressed a largely attended mass meeting from a stand erected in the open air. He said in part:

Whitelaw Reid's Speech.

This great assemblage of young Republicans is most cheering. They who have the young men on their side have taken bond of fate and have insured the future. The national work, of which this convention is an early expression, is doubly noble, because it is to be associated and well organized effort of young men. It means far more, therefore, than merely a success in one campaign. The adhesion of first voters and the active interest of other young men in the associations and determine the tendencies of those to whom the near future belongs; and so this inspiring movement carries with it the promise and the potency of many successive and/or long protracted rule.

No patriot can fail to rejoice at your political activity. It is, or should be, one of the purest and best forms of manly endeavor. Next to the service of God the service of the people—that is, the work of politics—is the highest of human interests and the noblest of human occupations. Your league methods are tainted with the true spirit of Republicanism. Its inspiration is love of country rather than love of office.

The advance guard of this great movement in the state of Lincoln and Grant I bring greetings from the land of Seward, Weed and Greeley; and since we are speaking of the younger generation, I take a peculiar pleasure in adding that every living descendant of those historic New Yorkers, like every living descendant of your Illinois heroes of all time, supports now the principles and the nominees of the party their immortal fathers led.

A practical friend says he would like to hear about the other New York men of today. He asks what about the Big Four? Well, I bring you their greeting—united and authorized greeting, the hearty greetings of Hancock and Warner Miller; of Thomas C. Platt and of Chauncey M. Depew, of Morton and Miller, of Fornes and Cornelius Bliss and Sherman Rogers. Of our late candidate Fassett, and of our Chairman Sloan, of Nesbit and Hankin with the assurance that while we do not undervalue our opponents or underestimate the hard struggle before us, we believe we have an organization and a situation making our prospects for victory this fall in New York as good as yours in Illinois. We have no quarrels but healthy ones, and no factions—excepting in the eager reports of our friends, the enemy. We go to the people claiming that the Republicans have given the country a clean, honorable, businesslike and highly successful administration; that a change will bring to us a business injury to every citizen, and that there is no occasion for a change.

The Democratic party has failed to frame an immediate and an absolute change. They want to repeal the McKinley tariff at once. They denounce as a protective tariff of any sort or description, refuse to let tariff legislation have the slightest reference to the defense of American interests against wages. They declare that Washington and Madison and even Andrew Jackson didn't understand the constitution, and that nobody but Jefferson Davis and Jefferson ever did; denounce anything but a pure tariff for revenue only as unconstitutional; want to get rid of our reciprocity and demand a return to without banking. Hold them to their doctrine. Never have they rushed so plainly and palpably upon their fate since the memorable week in 1864, when their taunt in Chicago that the fate of the Union was a failure was triumphantly answered by the victorious thunders of Sheridan's guns from Atlanta, and the triumph. that chased Hamilton's name from the lips of Lee to rise up and go forward. They have been blinded again to their own destruction and are delivered of traitorous hands.

Mr. Reid's speech was greeted with prolonged cheering, which was renewed several times. Congressmen Burrows and Dolliver each made brief speeches.

THE DEMOCRATIC CAMPAIGN.

Don M. Dickinson Will Be in Charge at the Chicago Headquarters.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—The campaign committee of the Democratic national committee met here and adopted resolutions to establish branch headquarters for the northwest at Chicago. Campaign Committeeman Don M. Dickinson will be in charge, assisted by Committeemen R. T. Cable and E. C. Wall. The resolutions adopted unanimously were as follows:

Resolved, That the members of the campaign committee of the Democratic national committee from the states west of Ohio, including the chairman of the committee, be requested to constitute a subcommittee to open headquarters in the west and to take charge, under the supervision of the campaign committee, of the campaign of such of the western states as may be assigned to it by the chairman of the Democratic national committee.

Resolved, That the chairman of the campaign committee is be authorized to appoint such person as he may select to act for him upon such subcommittee in his absence, and that such subcommittee be authorized to create such an auxiliary organization as it may deem necessary, subject to the approval of the campaign committee.

Under the authority conferred by the second resolution Chairman Harrity has assigned the states of Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, North Dakota and South Dakota to the care of the subcommittee in charge at Chicago, through which the campaign work of these states will be conducted. Other western states may be designated at a later day. The Chicago headquarters, it is understood, will be opened next week. The committee adjourned after the transaction of business of an executive nature, to the call of the chair.

Buchanan Indorsed.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 19.—The People's party convention adopted a resolution indorsing Governor John P. Buchanan as an independent candidate for governor and pledging his support. The Omaha platform and nominations were indorsed.

NEW TEA GOWNS.

Attractive Designs Shown in These Artistic and Favorite Garments.

There are so many pretty models for tea gowns that it is difficult to select the most attractive. Our cut shows two stylish models. The first is in heliotrope cashmere, with a front of soft yellow silk forming a yoke, and the high sleeves have a puffing of the silk extending the length of the arms. The second is in gray crepon, with a long Watteau plait train. The very full sleeves are of ivory surah, tucked to form a deep cuff. There is a full front of the surah, with a high tucked collar. The pointed revers of crepon are feather stitched with ivory silk.

Another stylish tea gown seen was made of pink silk and heliotrope ribbon velvet, the sleeves, bodice, etc., trimmed with rich ecru lace. The lace fell from the neck to the feet; but at the back, over the bands of velvet which swathed the figure, fell a distinct habit shirt of the silk fastened on the shoulder seams, but otherwise loose, which descended onto the train in a long end of silk. Still another tea gown was a string colored crepe de chine, trimmed with wide lace like guipure d'art, worked in with an applique of silk flowers, which were most rich and important looking. This magnificent trimming was introduced on the bodice in the Zouave form.

Hal Pointer Is Champion.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Hal Pointer was sent to beat the harness record of 2:06¾, made by Johnston in this city on Oct. 3, 1884, at Washington park. He paced the mile in 2:06¾, and not only wiped out the mark shot at, but splintered the 2:06 pacing record of Direct and became the side wheeling champion of the world.

CORPORATION NOTICE.

The Plainfield Street Railway Company have presented a petition to the Common Council for the right to extend the location of its tracks and operation of its cars on said street over the following streets in the City of Plainfield, from the northerly side line of West Front street to East Front street, through East Front street to Peace street, thence through Peace street to North avenue, thence through North avenue to a point two hundred feet southwesterly from Peace street the tracks to be laid in the center of said streets (with the necessary switches and turnouts on North avenue at the end of the route.)

A meeting of the Common Council will be held in the Council Chambers, 7 Park avenue, on Tuesday evening, September 6th, 1892, at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of considering the matter, at which time petitions and remonstrances may be filed or parties interested.

By order of the Common Council.

F. W. RUNYON, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., August 16, 1892.

CORPORATION NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same at a meeting to be held at the Council Chamber, No. 7 Park avenue, Plainfield, N. J., on Tuesday, September 6th, 1892, at the hour of 8 o'clock p. m., at which time and place prior to the adoption of said ordinance, said ordinance will be considered by the Common Council and all persons interested may be heard before the Common Council.

F. W. RUNYON, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., August 16, 1892.

AN ORDINANCE

To lay out and open Seventh street from the northerly side of East Fifth street to the southerly side of East Fourth street.

The Commissioners of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That Seventh street in the city of Plainfield from the northerly side of East Fifth street to the southerly side of East Fourth street be laid out and opened so that said street shall be of the uniform width of twenty-five (25) feet on each side of the centre line thereof, which said centre line is described as follows:

Beginning at a point in the northerly street line of East Fifth street, said point being distant two hundred and eight-tenths (24.8) feet in a magnetic course of north forty-five degrees and forty-three minutes west (N. 45 deg. 43 min. W.) from a stone monument in the intersection of the centre lines of said sycamore and East Fifth streets as now laid out and opened, and from said point beginning point north forty-five degrees and forty-three minutes west (N. 45 deg. 43 min. W.) over lands of Elizabeth Chapin, Charles H. Hand, Lydia Ann Hand, Lydia Ann Hand, Margaret Thatcher, William H. Brower, Justus B. Cooley, the Plainfield Bicycle Club and Michael Quinlan, a distance of three hundred and sixty-two and twenty-one one-hundredths (362.21) feet to a magnetic course of north forty-five degrees and forty-three minutes west (N. 45 deg. 43 min. W.) from the intersection of the centre line of East Fourth street and there to run

The land to be taken, in addition to the land already dedicated to the public, consists of a narrow strip of land on the intersection of the northerly side of East Fifth street with the easterly side of Seventh street, beginning at said point, thence northwesterly along the said line of said Seventh street, seventy and eighty-one hundredths (70.81) feet to a point in the line of lands now or formerly of Charles H. Hand, thence along said line last mentioned line southwesterly ten and eight-tenths (10.8) feet to a point, thence southeasterly seventy and forty-eight one hundredths (69.48) feet to a point in the northerly line of East Fifth street, distant from said point beginning two hundred and twenty-four one-hundredths (224.04) feet to the place of beginning.

That the lands and real estate and the portions necessary therefor to be taken and appropriated for the said laying out and opening of Seventh street as aforesaid, pursuant to the charter of the city of Plainfield and the general statutes in such case made and provided.

The land to be taken and the lines of said street as the same is hereinbefore described and laid out and opened are shown on a map on file with the City Clerk entitled "Application to Lay Out Seventh street, Sycamore street from the Northerly side of East Fifth street to the southerly side of East Fourth street, City of Plainfield, N. J., April, 1892."

CORPORATION NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

F. W. RUNYON, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., August 16, 1892.

AN ORDINANCE

Authorizing the Plainfield Street Railway Company to extend the location of its tracks.

The inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the Plainfield Street Railway Company be and is hereby authorized to extend the location of its tracks as follows: From the northerly side of East Front street, on west Front street, through said Front street to Peace street, thence through Peace street to North avenue, thence through North avenue to a point two hundred feet southwesterly from Peace street; the track to be a single track to be laid in the center of said streets (with the necessary switches and turnouts on North avenue at the end of the route.)

Section 2. That the said company shall comply with respect to the route hereinbefore located with the provisions, pursued, and complied, upon the final adoption of this ordinance, and before exercising any of the rights or privileges granted hereby, shall, as a condition precedent, execute and file with the City Clerk a contract to be approved by the Corporation Counsel, which contract and bond shall contain all the terms and conditions specified in sections numbered to said of in the original ordinances relating to the tracks of said company, and that said contract and bond shall apply and relate to the extension hereby granted.

VALUABLE POINTS AS TO THE MANAGEMENT OF A HOME.

No more desirable accomplishment exists than to be able to keep house well. Management, tact and knowledge make the wheels of the household run smoothly. Turns home into a little domestic heaven that means comfort; in fact it is the spot where a man turns to when the world goes hard and trials press heavily upon his overburdened shoulders.

A well directed, well managed home is the acme of enjoyment, just as a disordered, untidy one is just the reverse. But see, young bride, in your new nest that it all your own, do not let your desire to have things neat drive you into a morbid state of disagreeable fussiness that will make your life a burden and turn your home into an abode that is too good to be used. It is not necessary to be careless, but let the gloom of day come in through the tightly closed shutters. It will not fade the new carpet. If excluded when the stars are strong. Let your tired husband spread out but heavily upon the couch when day is done or on those occasions when toil does not call him forth from his home.

Suppose the cushions do not set up quite so stiffly after he has finished his nap, can they not be easily straightened, and will he not appreciate the feeling of "homeliness" that permits him to do as he likes under his own roof instead of being obliged to sit up in a straight backed chair or just such a spot in the carpet, with a nagging voice crying, "Look out for that headrest; you are mussing the pillows!" What are headrests and pillows to him? He can be trained to be careful, but do not make his home life miserable by continually finding fault with him. Visitors will soon cease if they learn that they ruffle the temper of the hostess when they turn up the fringe on her rugs, if they accidentally get a drop of water on the tablecloth or do not leave the shades exactly on the same line.

A young housekeeper whom we know has a pink bathtub in her beautifully appointed bathroom, but does she or her husband ever indulge in a good plunge and every morning bath as such luxury would indicate? Not a bit of it. Tub, douches and all the other etceteras of this complete apartment are kept for show. The room is darkened, the towels are hung with the initials she has embroidered turned primly out and no drop of water is ever allowed to defile the pink sanctity of this bathroom that is too good to use. There is a wide difference between carelessness and such overfussiness as this. Use your furniture, your carpets and all else in your possession, but do not abuse them, and you will be rewarded by a sense of comfort that no other place can ever afford.—Philadelphia Times.

The Face on the Dollar.

Anna Willess Williams, the original of the face of the goddess on our silver dollar, was born in Philadelphia during the civil war. Her mother was of southern birth, the daughter of Dr. Arthur H. Willess, a wealthy slaveowner of Maryland, who, while his daughter was still unmarried, suffered financial reverses. When nineteen she married Henry Williams, of Philadelphia, and removed with him to his native city. Mr. Williams soon became affluent, but through some mismanagement he lost all his property, and his daughter Anna, the youngest of nine children, was born in the most adverse circumstances. While she was still but a child her father died, leaving his widow, although in delicate health, with the strongest determination to care for and educate her children, and it was entirely through the endeavors of her mother that Miss Williams received her education.

Early in 1876 the treasury department secured the services of Mr. George Morgan, an expert designer and engraver, who had previously been connected with the royal mint of England. He was assigned to duty at the Philadelphia mint upon the design for the new silver dollar which was soon to be issued. He gave his attention first to the reverse side, for which a design of the American eagle was afterward selected, hoping that a suitable idea would occur to him for the head of the Goddess of Liberty, which it seemed proper should be used as the principal figure on the coin. After considerable delay and frequent change of plan it was decided that if possible the head should be a representation of some living American girl. In the pursuit of his duties Mr. Morgan had been thrown into the society of Mr. Thomas Eakins, an artist of considerable reputation, and the similarity of their interests became the foundation of a warm friendship between them. It was through Mr. Eakins' influence that Miss Williams, a friend of his family, was induced to pose for Mr. Morgan for the designs of the Goddess of Liberty.—Alice Graham McCollin in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Lace Schools of Venice.

The lace of Venice, like her glass and mosaics, is a traditional monument to her ancient industrial greatness. Venice is the earliest home of lace, and from her hands it was introduced into other countries. The first lace was made by nuns within the walls of convents for ecclesiastical garments. With the fall of the Venetian republic the convents were closed and this graceful industry was lost for an entire century.

In 1870 the Princess Margherita, now queen of Italy, determined to revive the art and provide employment for Venetian women struggling in the throes of poverty. To her is due the credit of the origin and endowment of the existing schools. These schools are subsidized by the Italian government and are under the direct control of a committee of which the Countess Jesurum is at the head. There are now seven schools in full and active operation in Venice and her surrounding islands. The principal building juts up against the time colored walls of San Marco, and from this picturesque spot, under the very wing of the cathedral, issue some of the most exquisite patterns of lace that the world produces.

I walked through the various rooms of this school and saw the women absorbed in their tedious work. They were of all ages and sizes, from the soft eyed girl of twelve to the gray haired woman of sixty. Each sat in a low stool and held a plump, square cushion in her lap. On this cushion was pinned a strip of paper marked with the pattern to be followed, and into this pattern the nimble fingered worker sticks glass headed pins and twists her thread about them. From twenty to fifty shuttles depended from all sides of the cushion, and these were thrown across and back with the rapidity of a typewriter handling the keys of her machine. The pins were constantly withdrawn and replaced as the thread advanced along the pattern. The process is so simple that it looks like play, but the lace produced represents thousands of hard gold dollars.—Venice Cor. Mercer.

Run by One Woman.

One of the most flourishing exchanges for woman's work is established in an island city, and is in many ways unique. The entire concern is owned and controlled by one woman, without the usual committees and board of managers. No fee is required of those entering their work, except the usual 10 per cent. on sales, nor are there many rules and regulations. One question always asked of intending depositors is, "Do you need the proceeds of this work?" The exchange counts over five hundred depositors, and work is sent from nearly every state in the Union.

Among the articles not usually kept at exchanges are toilet articles of all kinds, cements, a Japanese jelly for cleaning woolens, velvet and plush, and linen fringe brushes. In the infants' department are "Jedediahs," and in the cake list two sweets, new to me, called "yule babies," which are sold by the dozen, and "peach blossom," which is sold by the pound. Fifteen per cent. is charged on the price received on ordered work.

If unsold at the end of one year, goods must be withdrawn, in which case one-half the 10 per cent. paid at their entrance is refunded. If re-entered, one-half of the paid per cent. is returned and may be applied toward the new entrance fee. Only those not engaged in business can become beneficiaries of the exchange, and all work received must be approved by the manager. All kinds of work is done by specialists, from "weaving rag rugs to cleaning and repairing laces." Menu cards and every requirement for a dainty luncheon are furnished.—New York Post.

Learn to Take the Pulse.

Every mother should know how to take her child's pulse, and this is easily accomplished by passing one or two fingers down on the front of the arm from the base of the thumb to a little below the wrist. With some practice there is no danger of mistake. Take the number of beats for five minutes, for frequently there is an irregularity that can be discovered only by careful observation.

The respirations can be obtained by watching the rise and fall of the chest; if that is not sufficient, by placing the hand there. A self registering clinical thermometer is necessary for taking the temperature, which is generally obtained by placing the end of the tube containing the mercury under the tongue and keeping it there with the mouth closed from three to five minutes.

From 98.4 to 99 degs. is a normal temperature; 100 degs. or over indicates fever; 101 to 103 degs. is fever to a moderate amount, while 105 degs., except in rare instances, is dangerous. In childhood the pulse varies from 120 in early infancy to 90 in a child 6 or 7 years old. In middle life it ranges from 65 to 75, and is apt to be more rapid in women than in men. In infancy respirations are often 30 or over; in childhood, between 20 and 25; in adult life they are quite constant at from 17 to 20. For an adult the proportions are: Temperature, 98.6 degs.; pulse, 75; respiration, 18. —Christian Union.

Borax Has Many Uses.

As a destroyer of insects, borax is especially useful. So common roaches may be successfully banished by this means, providing common cleanliness is also exercised. There is no possible excuse for the presence of any of the familiar water bug, which disgraces so many kitchens by its presence. If the precincts of the kitchen and all the surrounding closets and pantries be dusted with borax, and then systematically cleaned in every nook and cranny, thoroughly dried, and every shelf be sprinkled with borax and lined with clean paper, the whole of a woman desirable in every way. Her one incapacity was that she was not known. A member of the club who devotes her time and money to philanthropy and good works generally, and who desires to be known as a helper of women, sees considerable power, and for that reason it should not be allowed internally without a physician's order. It is a valuable disinfectant and antiseptic. It is sometimes used with glycerin or honey for affections of the throat. There is a certain form of boracic acid which is used to preserve fish and meat, and even milk and butter. It would be very unsafe, however, for any one not acquainted with scientific methods to make use of borax in any such way. Borax is also said to be of use in making fabrics fireproof, being superior to alum for this purpose.—New York Tribune.

An Interesting Bit of Furniture.

Quite an old institution is the easy chair —I mean the chair that is easy only in name. The really comfortable chair is quite a modern thing; it is only just coming into fashion. The only easy chair known till now by this generation is a spring chair of some sort or other. If you throw yourself into it with a weary feeling it sends you bounding ceilingward, and if you don't come down on your feet and seat yourself more gingerly you may come down in the chair again, and so be kept in perpetual motion. But the new easy chair is a chair you can fling yourself into with perfect safety and a certainty of finding comfort. It has got a name that suggests this—it is called the grandfather's chair.

It is roomy and soft, and on each side at the top has two projections, something like the peaks of a Gladstone collar. These form cosy corners to settle your head in for a nap. The grandfather's chair is perfect for those whose want to take the pleasures of life drowsily. Comfortable seats have other uses than to lure to sleep. There is a "courting settee," which is really two grandfather's chairs rolled into one. They supply, in the stereotyped phrase, a long felt want, for sitting on them the most timid and halting lovers must feel at ease.—Miss Mantaline in Pall Mall Gazette.

Quiet Service.

The keeper of a first class private boarding house in one of our great cities recently gave this reason for discharging a waitress: "She was neat, prepossessing and honest," said this very excellent woman, "but after laboring with her for a whole month to impress upon her mind that the people in my house must not be subjected to the crashing and banging of china and glass, which she would use to the trouble to handle noiselessly, I had to discharge her."

This lady had learned the important lesson that, though a gentle intake of dishes is grateful to the ear of a hungry man, when this intake is carried beyond the point of absolute necessity it becomes an offense. It is a mark of vulgarity, and forms a sufficient excuse for leaving an otherwise satisfactory boarding place. The efficiency of any housekeeper may almost always be gauged by the music of dishes which she permits among her servants during the performance of their duties.—Kate Upson Clark in Food.

Woman's Conservatism.

Women pride themselves on the exclusiveness of their clubs. They well then about with what they are pleased to call "conservatism."

Not many months ago at a business meeting of the foremost woman's club in the world the name of was proposed for membership of a woman desirable in every way. Her one incapacity was that she was not known. A member of the club who devotes her time and money to philanthropy and good works generally, and who desires to be known as a helper of women, rose and said: "All this stated regarding this lady may be true. But we do not know her, and I cannot see why we should admit to our club any one regarding whom there is the slightest shadow of doubt."

The name did not pass.—Margaret Mangan in New York World.

Housework as an Exercise.

To keep the complexion and spirits good, to preserve grace, strength and agility of motion, there is no gymnasium so valuable, no exercise more beneficent in result than sweeping, dusting, making beds, washing dishes and the polishing of brass and silver. One year of such muscular effort within doors, together with regular exercise in open air, will do more for a woman's complexion than all the lotions and pomades that were ever invented. Perhaps the reason why housework does so much more for women than games is the fact that exercise which is immediately productive cheers the spirit. It gives women courage to go on living and makes things seem really worth while.—Medical Record.

A Tribute to a Mother.

In a book on "Woman Through a Man's Eyeglass" the author pays this beautiful tribute to his mother, to whom he dedicates the volume: "When one has reached middle life and the wheels of existence need oiling with the encouragement of affection; when one is wounded and weary he seeks again the steady starlight of a mother's love. For a man who is growing old, with neither wife nor child to bring him greetings on his birthday, I can conceive nothing more awful than to have no mother who shall say, 'Bless you, my son!' while in solitude she happily remembers, in a gentle autumn mood of love, all that full, flowering summer love with which she greeted him on that first birthday."

Pressure a Cure for Headache.

Dr. Heinrich Weiss claims to have discovered an unfailing cure for certain forms of headache. The treatment consists in the application of pressure with the hand for a few minutes on the great inferior artery between the sternum and the navel, which causes an alteration in the distribution of the blood. This treatment was applied to twenty-three female patients suffering from violent headaches, with immediate relief in each case. In most of the cases the attack did not recur, but in a few it returned in milder form, ultimately disappearing on the treatment being repeated. The discovery was made accidentally.—Jenness Miller Illustrated.

Cream and Chicken Salad.

Take half a pound of ham and chicken paste, rub it through a hair sieve and mix with half a pint of whipped cream, flavored with a few drops of sherry, salt, etc. Place this on the lettuce leaves and stitch into rolls with threads of lean ham or chicken. Brush the leaves over with white of egg, powder with the bruised yolk of a hard boiled egg that has been rubbed through a hair sieve, set on a bed of fine cress and serve. Three or four of these rolls are sufficient for each guest.

The Choice of a Dressmaker.

A woman who has given the subject consideration says always choose a dressmaker in your own style. If you are thin choose her who is spare and meager; if you are stout, choose her who is well covered. It is she alone who can enter into your feelings, realize your difficulties and make and clothe you not only fashionably, but with that sympathy which should always exist between a woman and her clothes.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Of late it has been the custom among ladies who were handy with the needle to make anniversary and wedding presents of some dainty bit of decorated table linen. A hemstitched cloth and napkin, teacloth, tray cloth or doilies make a most appropriate gift for any of these occasions.

Sweet oil is a good remedy for poisonous bites and must be taken internally (a half cupful), and baths the wound externally with it. For a horse give one-half pint to one pint internally and apply externally as well.

Wormwood boiled in vinegar and applied hot, with enough cloths wrapped around to keep the flesh moist, is said to be an invaluable remedy for a sprain or bruise.

The serious work of the Vassar graduate is the higher walks of life has silenced the gibes of masculine colleges and crippled the jingles of the funny man.

The Borough Budget.—Examining the Assessor's Books.

The Borough Council held a special meeting last evening to prepare the budget of expenses for the coming year and to examine Assessor Cooley's books. Mayor Saunders and Councilmen Conkley, Hageman, Hummer, Neal and Sebring responded to roll call.

The reading of the minutes of the previous meeting was dispensed with.

After the following budget, which is almost the same as last year's had been approved, the Council took a recess of two hours to examine the Assessor's books.

Board of Health	$300
Municipal	6,000
Lights	5,000
Streets	1,000
Fire Department	6,200
Total	18,500

When the Council resumed business the Assessor's books were approved. Adjourned 10 30.

BREVITIES.

—Meat is said to have been raised in price two cents a pound in Trenton, N. J.

—Mr. W. H. Brodie of this city has received a patent for a fire-protecting shutter.

—Judge Crossley has remitted ten days, the good behaviour, of Mrs. Schneider's sentence.

—The grocers expect to take 1,500 people on their excursion Labor Day, which will be duly advertised.

—It is announced that Mr. F. M. Hulett, the well-known musician, will hereafter have charge of the Music Hall orchestra. It will be composed of trained musicians.

—With but few exceptions riders of bicycles have neither lamp nor bell. The few days of grace allowed by Chief Grant are about up. Then the ordinance will be enforced.

—The gall of some folks is colossal. A hand organ man played "Auntie Rooney," "Ta ra ra boom de ay" and other classical airs on Somerset street to-day and then went around target pay for it.

—The Union County Republican Executive Committee will meet at the new Republican Headquarters, Elizabeth, on Monday, August 22, for the purpose of arranging for primaries for the State convention.

—The Somerset marble and granite work's man, Mr. Townsend, says that he meets with success far beyond his expectations. Already he has received several large orders for local cemeteries, as well as some for Westfield and Mt. Bethel.

—Now is the time to here of big ears of corn and long stalks. J. Y. Hutchinson, of Hamilton Square, N. J., has an ear of corn from his lot which measures 19½ inches in length, and has twenty rows with fifty-six grains in each row, making 3,130 grains.

—"Gus" Sutterlein was arrested by Amos Moffett this morning on complaint of George Moore, charging him with assault and battery. He was released under $500 bail to appear for trial Monday. Moore was arrested last evening by Officer Frederickson for fighting.

—The next meeting of the Plainfield Local Union will take place at the Presbyterian church, Dunellen, on Thursday evening, September 15th. The Committee of Arrangements will meet in the parlors of the M. E. church on Thursday evening, August 25th, at eight p. m.

—Mayor Saunders does not approve of the manner in which bills are passed, and told the clerk last evening to notify all interested that bills must be presented earlier so that the auditing committee can examine them, or else they will not be ordered paid until a later meeting.

—The Democratic State Committee of Plainfield, Conn., after considering a new organization scheme unanimously adopted it. The plan is to organize the rural towns by school districts, and if the county does as was done there there will be a sub-committee member in each ten voters in the State. They also agree to raise a sum equal to one cent a day for each man who voted the Democratic ticket in 1888. This means a big campaign fund throughout the State from now until election day. The Democratic party is doing more work in a quiet way this year than ever before.

—Stetson's Uncle Tom's Cabin Company, which is advertised elsewhere, is said to have the largest dog in the world. The dog in question weighs 208 pounds, stands thirty-five inches high at the shoulder, and measures seven feet from tip to tip, and cost Mr. Stetson $1,000. He was originally the property of the Czar of Russia and was presented by him to Miss Ella Russell, the well-known actress, and sold by her to Mr. Bradenburg, of museum fame, and was exhibited by him in all the leading cities of the United States and can be seen in the street parade given by the company which will exhibit here.

—The following is quoted in an English exchange from a poem appeared in a Hong Kong journal issued in the English language. It is certainly a choice specimen of the "pigeon" variety of that tongue. A Chinese dollar is about 72 cents.

I have a tame cat is lost it is about nine pounds his breast all are white the hands and legs both are white but one the behind leg out side are Gray and Grey Colour and his back are all Gray but that back have a white bine spot on it his mustle is red and his bowel is light black his nake have a iron ring on it and with a iron chain and it is tight on the iron ring in his nake if any person found where he wa bring back to me I will prefer to give him two dollars for reward.

JAMS LEE YUE.

WHO WAS THE RIDER?

A Three-Year-Old Child Knocked Down and Left Bleeding in the Road.

Edith Flatley, the three-year-old daughter of William Flatley, of No. 72 West Fifth street, was knocked down in front of her house at six o'clock yesterday afternoon by a young woman bicyclist.

After the accident the rider heartlessly picked up her wheel and rode on again, without a backward glance, leaving the child lying bleeding in the middle of the road.

A gentleman riding about a block behind saw the accident and riding up to where the child lay, picked up the little one and placed her in her mother's arms. He refused to give his name and rode away.

At the time of the accident the child was playing in the street with a number of other tots about her own age. It was not dark and the accident could only be attributed to gross carelessness.

$100 AN ACRE.

The Bargain a New York Man Got in a Stocked Farm.

A farmer in Dunellen, recently, getting tired of farm life and anxious to get away from it, sold his thirty-six acre farm for $3800.

The farm was cultivated as follows: ten acres in corn, ten acres in rye, six acres in potatoes and the balance a hay field. A horse, two cows and 100 chickens were included in the bargain.

The Rev. Mr. Hunt of Pauling, New York, was the purchaser.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Wm. Mc. D. Corsell of this city is at the St. Cloud, Asbury Park.

Miss Edith Shepard of Elizabeth is visiting friends in this city.

Mrs. Wm. Tallamy of West Sixth street is visiting relatives at Cumberland Hill, Rhode Island.

E. C. Howard of East Ninth street, has returned from a two weeks' visit at Ivorvton, Conn.

Miss Genevieve Gilman of Brooklyn, N. Y., is the guest of Miss E. Beekman of West Eighth street.

Mrs. H. E. Bowen of Broadway returned last evening after seven weeks' stay at Good Ground, L. I.

Mr. C. Townsend H. Fellows of Albany will sing a solo in the First Presbyterian church on Sunday. He has a magnificent voice.

Mr. Joseph Myer, long a resident of Dunellen, and proprietor of the Elm Park Hotel, died at his home in that place last evening of heart disease.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Serrell, Mr. and Mrs. John French and Miss Bessie Hull left this morning for a ten days' stay at Conshaunch, Pike county, Pa.

Mr. William A. French, now of St. Paul, Minn., who has been visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. French of North Plainfield, left at noon to-day to return home.

Rev. M. A. Hunt of Pauling, N. Y., and his son, Mr. Eugene Hunt, a prominent orange-grower of Mineola, Florida, were the guests, this week, of Mr. and Mrs. Townsend of Prospect place, North Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. George S. Raynolds of No. 49 Jackson avenue, returned this morning from Concord, Mass., where they buried their 18 year-old son, Frank, who was drowned near Augusta, Maine, last Saturday.

The talented wife of Mayor Wm. L. Saunders of North Plainfield is to take the leading part in amateur theatrical at Twilight Park, in the Catskills, this evening. Mayor Saunders left this morning to join her at their handsome Summer home there.

Base Ball Doings.

The Gorhams defeated the "Fourth Wards" yesterday afternoon by a score of 25 to 5 on the Park avenue grounds. Evidently the "Fourth Wards" were not "in it."

To-day the welcome Elizabeth ball team comes to Plainfield for the last time this season. The doughty West Ends also pay their farewell visit to the Westfield team.

The West Ends Somerville manager, Mr. Mack, it is said, is growing hoarse from coaching his team for their final bout with the Crescents.

Is Your Sidewalk in Good Condition?

A committee from the Borough Council is making the rounds of the Borough streets to examine into the condition of the sidewalks. The owners of property with sidewalks in need of repair will be notified, and then, if not attended to, the walks will be repaired and the cost charged against the property.

This is something very much needed. The condition of Somerset street is a disgrace to the borough, as well as dangerous.

Going Now to Egypt.

The next "Honeyman Tour" is to be to Italy, Greece, Egypt, including up the Nile and a month in Palestine. Arrangements are all perfected for it, and those desiring to go can secure particulars by writing to A. V. D. Honeyman, P. O. Box 705, Plainfield.

Bicycle Notes.

On Saturday, September 3, the East Orange Cyclers will hold a handicap club race from Plainfield to Orange. Four prizes will be awarded.

—The fence at the corner of Grove street and Prospect place projects to an uncomfortable degree over the sidewalk. It is unsightly.

PREPARING TO STRIKE.

ARE THE SWITCHMEN TO GO OUT NEXT TUESDAY?

Intended to Go Out Last Thursday, But Finally, so it is Said, Decided to Wait Until Next Tuesday. The Men Don't Want to Go, but Feel they Must Obey Orders.

The News has been placed in possession of information that, at a meeting of switchmen on the Philadelphia and Reading New Jersey Central Division, held this week, it was decided to strike last Thursday, upon receipt of word from Buffalo.

It did not come as expected, but it was decided to go on strike next Tuesday, probably at midnight, the men to leave the trains wherever they happen to be.

Later orders may change this, but our information, from a reliable source, is that this is the present programme.

The switchmen say that they are satisfied, and do not want to strike, but are afraid of the odium that would be cast upon them, if they refuse, after the orders are received.

The news from Buffalo to-day to the effect that the strike is broken may change the plans, but commuters would do well to be prepared.

General Joseph R. Byrne, commanding the New Jersey National Guard, was seen yesterday respecting possible trouble of the railroad lines in this State. He said he had received no instructions from the Governor in regard to holding the military in readiness. He did not think, however, that there would be any trouble. In reply to a question, the General remarked, dryly, "The National Guard is always prepared."

In 1891 the New Jersey Legislature passed a law enacting a State Police Department. Under this law the chief of the department is authorized to draw upon all the counties and municipalities of the State for experienced police officers and constabulary, in case of emergency. A force of 500 or 1,000 disciplined men could, at short notice, be thrown upon any threatened point. Governor Abbett is known to be opposed to the use of the National Guard. On a recent occasion, when the latter had been summoned, he refused to authorize a local military company to act to preserve order. In 1877, when similar troubles occurred on the railroads in Pennsylvania and other States, Governor Bedle called out the entire National Guard of New Jersey, and threw a whole brigade into Philadelphia, which is an important railroad centre. This action saved the State from all violence.

SAT ON A BALE HOOK.

The Painful Accident that Happened to Little Arthur Fritts.

Arthur Fritts, the young son of Mr. Adam Fritts of Somerset street, North Plainfield, while playing with other children in his father's barn, knocked a bale hook from a nail, where it had been partly driven, and, later accidentally fell on it. The point of the hook pierced his left thigh inflicting a painful but not serious wound.

The Brewers Can't do as They Please.

Much anxiety is felt among the brewers of Newark concerning an opinion given by City Counsel Guild in reference to mortgages and licenses, which will be of interest to Plainfield saloon-keepers.

There are about 1,400 saloons in Newark, and two-thirds of these are mortgaged to one or the other of the different large brewing firms. Several hundred thousand dollars are involved in these mortgages.

It has been the custom of the brewers to take a mortgage on the license of the saloon, and if the saloonkeeper did not pay up he has generally been compelled to get out. Henry Henrichs was one of the saloonkeepers who failed to pay his mortgage, and the brewing firm foreclosed.

At the request of the brewers the Board of Excise transferred the license to William Gensel. Henrichs objected to this and threatened to bring suit, and the matter was referred to the City Counsel, who decided last night that the board had no authority to transfer the license without the consent of Henrichs. This gives the saloonkeepers an advantage over the brewers.

Resolutions of Respect.

At the last encampment of this Post held August 18th, 1892, the following resolutions were adopted in regard to our late comrade, Abel S. Titsworth.

WHEREAS, The hand of Death has removed from our midst our well beloved Past Commander, Abel Shepard Titsworth, and

WHEREAS, The record of his life among us and the many years of his honorable membership having been such as to invite more than a passing recognition from this Post, therefore, be it

Resolved, That by the testimony of that relationship which we established by the ties of our deceased comrade as intimately as man can be known of men, we give unanimous testimony to his nobility of purpose, his fearless patriotism, his business probity, his kindness of heart, his steadfastness in the ways of duty and friendship, and his possession of that genial, manly nature which made the lives of all around him happier by their having lived, and he is also

Resolved, That the members of Major Anderson Post, No. 109, Dept. of New Jersey, Grand Army of the Republic, tender to the widow and family of the deceased their sincere sympathy in their great affliction, and it is hereby ordered that they be furnished with a copy of these resolutions, and that the same be transcribed on the minute book of this post, and be printed in the daily papers of this city.

THE TOWNSHIP MEETING.

Approving the Assessor's Books. $9,000 Needed for "93."

The Township Committee met last evening in Spencer's Hall, North Plainfield. Messrs. Allen and Voorhees were present.

The assessor's books were examined and approved.

In preparing the township budget of expenses for the year "93" it was found that $9,000 would be needed.

The tax collector was authorized to issue a warrant for the sale of property for back taxes. Adjourned at 9 30.

Celebrating the Moving.

Mrs. Margaret Johnson is behind the bars. She has been a resident of Elizabeth for the past two days, having moved here from Plainfield. She has just 50 cents in her pocket, and on arising last night she celebrated the completion of her labors. She resorted to the free lunch counter at the corner of Broad and Cor Otto on Elizabeth avenue for being disorderly. This morning she was sentenced to 20 days in jail.—Elizabeth Journal.

—A dangerous counterfeit silver quarter of the "vintage" of 1892 has come to the surface. It is a very fine piece of work made at the New Orleans Mint this year, and the only difference is that the "tail" of the "R" in quarter is a little too clearly outlined. The weights of the two coins, the genuine and the spurious, are identical. The way to tell the ring of the coin when it is dropped. "It is the most dangerous counterfeit I have come across in all my experience," said a Boston man. "His face is absolutely perfect, and the reverse is nearly so. The weights of the two coins are the same. In fact, the only flaw is the ring, and the milling is slightly defective."—From the Portland (Me.) Argus.

WHISTLING A GIFT.

What a Professional Lady Whistler Says About the Art.

Mrs. Alice Shaw, the celebrated American whistler, who formerly lived on Broadway, this city, says of her peculiar gift:

"A clever whistler must be born, not made. The natural gifts necessary are a good ear, a sound pair of lungs, a favorable formation of the cavity of the mouth, regular teeth and a flexibility and agility in the orbicular and buccinatory muscles, which, in turn, these muscles are great. After an hour's practice I have been compelled to apply electricity to my lips to get them into a normal condition. I breathe like a singer, from the diaphragm, and whistle as any artist would sing. Trilling is to me as easy and natural as ordinary speech. It is the tones which must be long sustained that are most difficult. My compass is two and three-fourths octaves. I never whistle on an upward breath. The notes are always directed outward. The higher the note the closer my lips; the lower the note the larger the orifice. The possibilities of a whistle are almost unlimited. The art is at present in its infancy. I attract much attention by my careful singers. During my first performances my lips became sore, but now it is an effort to produce a clear, liquid tone. I owe much attention which obviates this difficulty. I practice an hour sometimes more daily, and this has had a doubly beneficial effect. It has not only enhanced my proficiency as a whistler; it has caused my chest to expand four inches in the last three years."

Two Good Recipes.

MRS. JUSTICE FIELD'S EGG PUDDING.

Three eggs, yolks and white beaten separately; one teaspoonful cornstarch; two tablespoonfuls of flour, two tablespoonfuls white sugar; pinch of salt; one teaspoonful of butter, and milk to make a good batter. Bake in hot oven fifteen minutes and serve with a sauce made of one cup of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, yolk of one egg beaten till creamy, and three-fourths of a cup of hot water and stir till smooth. Squeeze a lemon for flavoring, and grate the rind, then whip in the beaten white.

HOW TO POACH EGGS IN A BALL.

To poach eggs in a ball is a knack known to clever cooks. The water is heated to boiling and then rapidly stirred till a small whirlpool is produced, in the hollow heart of which the unbroken eggs are cleverly dropped. The motion of the water sets the white instantly into a circular covering for the unbroken yolk.

—The recent hot spell here and the present hot spell in Europe are attributed, by a learned astronomer, to the position of certain planets. This is probably correct. A similar condition of affairs existed here forty years ago, succeeding a series of years of most remarkable events, just as preceded this year, including terrible storms, earthquakes, tidal waves, extremely severe Winters and blizzards.

—With the introduction of street-cars in Plainfield, the genus "masher" may be expected. A case is given in the following incident: The street-car "masher" has been worsted in one engagement, at least, by the pretty girl. According to the Detroit Free Press, it appears that one of these gentry tried his wiles upon a well known lady upon a car in this city. At first she was inclined to stop the car and get away from his insolence, but on second thought changed her purpose, levelled it at the "masher," sarprised him from head to foot, and coolly and composedly let him pass, until he fled in dismay. It evidently required a great deal of nerve on the part of the lady, but that the weapon proved an effectual one.

AN ORDINANCE

To regulate the use of bicycles, tricycles and other horseless velocipedes in the public streets, avenues and highways in the Borough of Plainfield.

Be it ordained by the Mayor and Council of the Borough of Plainfield, in Council assembled, that it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to ride any bicycle or bicycles, tricycle or tricycles, or other horseless velocipede or velocipedes, on any sidewalk in the City of Plainfield, except when necessary to pass over the same to reach private premises to the rear of any street; and it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to ride upon any sidewalk or sidewalks at a greater rate of speed than six miles per hour, or at a greater rate of speed than is allowed by law for horses and other vehicles to travel upon the streets of the Borough of Plainfield, and it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to give rise to any alarm in passing any person or persons on any sidewalk or sidewalks. Approach to any person or persons on any sidewalk or sidewalks shall be given by a bell, whistle or other sound, and no person shall ride a bicycle, tricycle or other horseless velocipede so as to endanger the life or limb of any person or persons, or to cause damage to any property.

Any person violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty dollars for each offense.

Passed by the Borough Council August 1, 1892. Approved by the Mayor August 3, 1892.

GILBERT MAYO,
Mayor.

Attest—F. W. BURTON, City Clerk.

Every one violating any of the provisions of this ordinance will be dealt with as law and justice may require.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The National Vice.

Herbert Spencer declares that complete truthfulness is the rarest of virtues, and King David declared in his haste that all men were liars. Bob Ingersoll adds that if David had lived in Chicago he might have said it at his leisure. Seriously, however, the witticism as to Chicago is a witticism only, for the exaggerating habit is prevalent in America, and if it shows out strongest at Chicago, why that is only because that city is so ardently and progressively American.

Some one has said that each nation has its national vice, as vanity among the French, treachery among the people of southeastern Europe and drunkenness among Britons, and that lying is the national vice of Americans. There is just enough truth in this to make it sting. We are a terribly careless people in our general habits of expression. Fortunately we know it and do not believe each other to any dangerous extent. No one dreams of accepting the statements in an advertisement as literal facts. "Let the buyer beware" is not only a law maxim, but it is everyday, common sense among us.

The effects are both ludicrous and suggestive. A few years ago an old New Yorker of more than average intelligence read Parton's "Life of Andrew Jackson" for the first time, and was amazed that he hunted up the author and asked:

"Did you really get proof that General Jackson had all those quarrels and fights?"

"Certainly I did—had you never heard of them?"

"Oh, yes," was the cool and candid response; "I read all about them in 1832, but thought of course they were campaign lies."

Citizens of New York who travel out west in the rural regions are often startled and sometimes enraged at the views they hear about their city. The plain truth that there is no more crime in proportion than in most other communities, that taxes are not very high and that the government is as good as the average—well, the untraveled rustic simply don't believe it. Similarly a man from the Wabash valley who speaks good English is looked on with undisguised astonishment in some eastern communities.

Herbert Spencer concludes that long continued oppression will turn a whole race into organic liars, and there is painful evidence of its truth. Conversely, long continued freedom ought to make a people truthful, but it seems to have failed in at least a few cases that might be mentioned.

All womanly women will be glad to hear of the vindication of Helene Vacaresco, who was torn from the side of her betrothed, Prince Ferdinand of Roumania, "for reasons of state." She was not tilted, and he, it was declared, must wed with the scion of a royal family.

After his engagement to a daughter of the Duke of Edinburgh, it was said that Mlle. Vacaresco had sent the letters received by her from the prince to his new fiancee. This of course was attributed to disappointment and maliciousness, but now the Rome correspondent of a leading Paris paper declares that "I must say that I know personally and positively that Mlle. Helene Vacaresco has been calumniated by those who say that she has made unfair use of the letters from her ex-lover, the crown prince of Roumania. It is false that she ever sent, or even intended to send, any of the letters to the Duke of Edinburgh, and she would consider it cowardice to do such a thing." Mlle. Vacaresco is a very beautiful and talented young woman, and as before intimated, it is pleasant to learn that she didn't make a fool of herself.

A Wyoming man, writing a long letter to an eastern paper in explanation of the rustler troubles, says the rich cattle barons have had free occupancy of the government lands for so many years that they now look on them as their own and are unwilling to give them up for settlements to actual homesteaders, although the government opened them to the settlers. The war attempted by the cattle barons was, he says, a war to drive the homesteaders off the lands they had taken under government guarantee. In any case it is probably true that the days of the great cattle ranges are numbered and that cattle will more and more be raised by farmers in small or "bunches."

The only time our American flag ever floated over any country of the Old World, as the result of its capture by our forces, was in 1804, when the town of Derne, in Tripoli, at that time a resort of corsairs for pirates, was captured by General Eaton, of the United States army.

Usually Zola writes with black ink, but when his very vivid imagination falters he uses red ink as an inspiration. A very Frenchy idea, but one naturally associates rouge-et-noire with a Frenchman.

Paul de Cassagnac, the hero of forty French duels, calls for the abolition of that popular way of settling a vexed question in France.

FREIGHT TRAINS MOVING

Nonunion Men Raising the Big Blockade at Buffalo.

SOLDIERS ACCOMPANY EVERY CAR.

The Militia Have Two Slight Skirmishes with the Strikers—The Situation Quiet but Expectancy Keenly Manifested by the Railroad Companies.

BUFFALO, Aug. 20.—The general situation is quiet, save for uncertainty. Representatives of the United Press, after a thorough tour of the important posts established by General Doyle, find the troops and police alert, little being done in the way of moving freight and a general air of "wait and see." All the troops ordered have arrived, been posted and are unusually alert for men not schooled in uncertain guard duty—uncertain because of the rigid orders to keep every one outside the lines, and at the same time to allow free movements to all the employees on duty.

The excitement of last night was furnished by two incidents of the semidramatic sort, both of which served to keep the troops near the scene. Near the main freightyard of the Central the firing of three shots in succession shortly before 2 o'clock caused not a little stir, and investigation revealed the cause.

At this point the nonunion men have been housed in an old paint shop which has been converted into a dormitory and quarters generally for them. Here good food is prepared by cooks of the Wagner service, directed by Superintendent Yaeger, of New York. The troops of the First Provisional regiment are also quartered here.

A pretended nonunion man was among the new men at supper, and after the meal began arguing with them in an endeavor to have them quit the service they had just entered. Those in charge soon discovered the character of the supposed "scab" and he was promptly driven away. From the edge of the tracks opposite the barracks he began throwing coal in the direction of his pursuers, for which he was fired at by fifteen men of Captain Kirk's command, the First Provisional regiment.

The report of the musketry put the police under Captain Wurtz in chase of the spy, but he could not be caught. The supposed nonunion man was said to be a striker who had worked for the Erie. During the investigation which followed several suspicious looking people were found in the yard and were locked up in Captain Wurtz's precinct as vagrants. One of them claimed to be a locomotive engineer.

A Lively Shake Up.

Camp 4, the important part of the Central elevators on Ohio street, guarded by a battalion of the Twenty-third regiment, had a lively shake up just before midnight, when strikers at the Elk street crossing stoned nonunion switchmen who were making up a train. The missiles hit a few of the soldiers of the Twenty-third, but none of them was seriously injured.

The soldiers ordered their assailants to leave or accept a dose of lead, and when the order preparatory to firing was given there was a scarcity of strikers. No arrests were made. After this train had been sent to East Buffalo word of the affair reached Vice President Webb, and he thereupon ordered further operations suspended for the night on the ground of insufficient protection for the road's employees.

This action on the part of the Central official is regarded as signifying that the road will withdraw its police protection from the civil and military authorities or it will not attempt to do business.

In view of the many statements from various sources, alleged to be official, that there are more troops here than are needed, the position of the central will doubtless cause the governor to adopt more rigorous measures than are even now in force.

Brigadier General Robert Shaw Oliver, commanding the Third brigade, arrived, and after calling at General Doyle's headquarters went to his hotel. It is said that his presence here is not official and is due, doubtless, to his personal interest in the several commands on duty here from his brigade.

The Central in Good Shape.

The Central is in much better shape than it has been since the strike began. A lot of the old switchmen who struck early in the week returned to work and two carloads of experienced nonunion switchmen arrived at the East Buffalo yards. They have been working at Pittsburg, Albany, Boston and other cities. Vice President Webb ordered C. A. Beach, local freight trainmaster for the western division, to come here and personally take charge of affairs at the East Buffalo yards. Passenger Trainmaster Maloney has been placed in charge of the Ohio street yard, where there is an awful blockade. Beach has eighty-five switchmen at work; Maloney has less than one-third that number.

Attention was first given to the trains containing live stock and perishable freight. These were hundreds of cars filled with suffering cattle and the available force in the yards were directed to sending them to their destination. Big freight engines that have been sidetracked since Monday were brought out and four big stock trains were sent forward. There was a soldier with a loaded gun on every car.

After the stock trains were sent forward the men began to work to relieve the yards of perishable freight. It has been gathering with remarkable rapidity. The tracks are filled with cars containing this class of freight. Several train loads were sent away with soldiers on top of every car. But the moment stock and freight is slow, not withstanding all this.

Luckily for the Central road, the receipts of freight have fallen off generally since the Lake Shore and West Shore switchmen went out. From present indications the Central will be able to hold its feet after today, unless something of the turn up. Its yards are well protected by about 400 soldiers, and not a striker is allowed inside the lines. A striker named James Hanley was arrested and sent to jail for ten days for refusing to move on when ordered to do so by a soldier.

Knights of Labor May Step In.

A halt occurred in the movement of freights from the Lehigh yards. An order came to move no freight east until further orders from the general superintendent. It was learned that the freight cannot be received in the yards east, and it was thought the better plan to hold the freight here. Several trains were made up ready to move and the engines were ready to take them out. An official said that the Lehigh yards were in good condition and could be cleaned in short order if the eastern points were open. The Lehigh already has men enough to do the work. Nearly all the perishable freight has been moved.

Important news developed here to the effect that Knights of Labor from other points are here to take the positions made vacant by the strike of the nonunion switchmen, and that the old hands who struck Monday night are falling over each other in their endeavors to be taken back in the employ of the New York Central road. Another interesting thing to chronicle tonight is that all of the nonunion switchmen who struck will be back at work.

A committee of seven striking nonunion switchmen waited on Assistant Superintendent Dodd and asked if they could go back to work. They were accepted.

Superintendent Brunn, of the Erie, was busy at the wires when the reporter called. "We have ten engines at work with 117 men," said he, "and tonight we will have 135 men, more than enough to do the yard work. We took three trains of grain from Ohio street and sent out five trains. Our men spent the most of their time straightening up the yards and picking up the links and pins removed by the strikers. The yards are now in very good shape."

The Buffalo Creek continued on the fence and no attempt was made to move any freight on the tracks. There was nothing startling occurring on the line.

Sweeny's Proposition.

Frank Sweeny, grand master of the Switchmen's union, has furnished the officials of each one of the roads in volved in the strike with a copy of the following proposition:

On or about June 11, 1892, the switchmen in the employ of your railroad formulated certain requests in writing to the division superintendent of this division of your railroad. The committee appointed on behalf of the switchmen to present this written request to the division superintendent used every honorable effort to effect a peaceable settlement of the difficulty existing between your road and the switchmen and urged for favorable consideration by the proper officials of your road the several propositions contained in the request presented by them, but up to date said committee has failed to accomplish the objects for which it was appointed.

This is how the matter now stands: The men idle, traffic seriously impeded, and this county in a state of excitement, and probably will be until the differences between the switchmen and the railroads are amicably adjusted.

I am duly authorized by the switchmen, and pursuant to your request, I do make this proposition to you as to the disputed points in question, viz.:

The hours of labor per day, the schedule of wages and the right of appeal of a discharged or suspended switchman to higher authority on your road be submitted to a committee of three citizens of the city of Buffalo—one to be named by the officials of your company, one to be named by the switchmen and the third to be named by the two thus appointed.

This committee to investigate all matters in dispute and hear all evidence by either side, and after such investigation and hearing the final conclusions of the committee to be binding upon the officials and the switchmen.

If this proposition should be favorably considered by you and pending final conclusions of the committee on settlement, that it be agreed that the switchmen who prior to Aug. 12, 1892, were employed on your road, and such other employees of your road who have since been discharged on account of their refusal to do switchmen's work be permitted to resume their employment.

An early reply will greatly oblige, yours respectfully, FRANK SWEENY, Grand Master Switchmen's Mutual Aid Association of North America.

The Proposition Ignored.

The proposition has been totally ignored by all the roads in question. Vice President Webb, of the New York Central, when asked by a United Press reporter if any action, if any, would be taken by his road on Mr. Sweeny's proposition, replied:

"I don't know any such man as Sweeny. Who is he?" Mr. Webb concluded by saying: "We have no jobs on our line to offer anybody. All positions have been filled and a number of applications refused."

Notwithstanding the denial made by President Sloan that the Lackawanna would continue to handle freight from the roads on strike, it is said they will not refuse to handle any freight offered them, provided it is not freight which has been diverted from roads on strike. If this is done trouble may follow.

FASHIONS

Fancy Dress.

Among taking fancy dresses designed for summer entertainments, fancy dress balls, etc., is the Vivandiere costume depicted in the cut. It is of white satin with cuffs and revers of white silk braided with gold. The shirt is transparent muslin with frill and ruff edged with gold, and there is a decoration of braided gold cord. The vivandiere's barrel is gayly painted in colors. The three cornered hat and shoes should be in white satin and the hair waved and powdered.

VIVANDIERE COSTUME.

A pretty dancing costume for a brunette with petite, graceful figure is the "Torsador," with full, short skirt of yellow satin, trimmed with gold cord, sequins and red pompons, sash and drapery of red and yellow satin, edged with pompons and black lace edged with sequins. Over a bodice of yellow satin cut square at the neck is a little red silk jacket covered with black lace and with sleeves edged with red pompons. A black toreador hat, bound with gold and trimmed with red and yellow pompons and embroidered hose and gilt shoes, completes the costume.

CARNES AT COAL CREEK

The General Rescues Captain Anderson in Short Order.

THE MINERS ARE IN AN UGLY MOOD

They Surrender Camp Anderson to the Troops, but Swear Vengeance Against the Determined Officer Who Forced Them Into Temporary Submission.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 20.—General Carnes is monarch of all he surveys at Coal Creek. He occupies a meadow midway between the village and Fort Anderson. Passengers on the last train which left there say that he had taken about 100 of the insurgents prisoners and was guarding them near the camp. The garrison at Fort Anderson has been increased to 200 men and 100 picked men are guarding the depot and railroad property.

When General Carnes arrived at Coal Creek with his regiment the entire village surrendered without the slightest opposition. The march was then taken up in the direction of Camp Anderson, a mile distant. On the way the soldiers were attacked by a large body of miners, possibly 300. The fire was returned and considerable shooting was done. In about ten minutes the miners sent up a flag of truce and surrendered.

General Carnes' Way.

Soon after the arrival General Carnes demanded the release of Captain Anderson and gave the miners until 1 o'clock to produce him. One o'clock came, 2 and 3 o'clock passed and the officer had not turned over the captive. He then ordered his men to arrest all suspicious looking men. They went around the village and arrested men promiscuously until 100 men had been taken into camp. He addressed them as follows: "You promised to release Captain Anderson at 1 o'clock. You have broken faith with me. You shall produce him in one hour or I will proceed to burn every house in town and will shoot every one of you down."

In less than an hour a committee went out for the purpose, marched into camp and surrendered the prisoner. He immediately released command at Fort Anderson. He had been concealed in a little farmhouse on the outskirts of the village. One of the men arrested in the round up was the negro who boasted that he killed Bruce Givens in the battle yesterday morning. He will probably be held on a charge of murder in this county.

Bud Lindsay Arrested.

General Carnes has Bud Lindsay, leader of the miners, under arrest at Coal Creek. He is a deputy United States marshal and a thoroughly desperate character. He has killed several men. It was he who proposed hanging Captain Anderson, and was only prevented by his brother, who is a good citizen and postmaster at Coal Creek.

Captain Anderson was captured by five men coming under a flag of truce. He was enticed into the open by a promise of safety. Turning the corner he met a mob, who took him to the hotel and produced a letter to his lieutenant, which was an order for the surrender of the fort without action. If any, would be taken by his rank on Mr. Though threatened with hanging he steadily Sweeny's proposition, replied: refused to sign the paper, and asked only that he be shot and a grave marked so that his family could find it.

"I don't know any such man as Sweeny. Who is he?" Mr. Webb concluded by saying: "We have no jobs on our line to offer anybody. All positions have been filled and a number of applications refused."

Swear They Will Wipe Carnes Out.

The great body of the insurgent miners are still in the mountains, heavily armed, and swear they will yet whip Carnes out of the valley. Prior to the arrival of General Carnes the miners ambushed a detachment which went over the mountains under command of Major Carpenter within a quarter of a mile of Fort Anderson, killed three of the soldiers and forced the rest to retreat. Volunteers from all parts of the state are hastening to the scene of the insurrection, and guns and ammunition are being supplied by the federal authorities and the authorities of adjoining states.

Mass meetings have been held throughout the state, at which resolutions condemning Governor Buchanan for his inactivity were passed, and charges are openly made that he and other state officials are in collusion with the rioters.

The Dead and Wounded.

A special train bearing the bodies of the men who were killed in the battle at Coal Creek, three men who were wounded and 125 volunteers who went to the front rolled into the depot last night. Three thousand people were gathered about the station, and the excitement was higher than at any time since the trouble began. When the train stopped the men poured out of the coaches and formed in a line, through which their dead comrades were carried in military style. The company formed with arms reversed and marched behind the bodies to the courthouse.

Not until the arrival of the train was it possible to get a correct statement of the battle and the exciting incidents leading up to it. Five men were killed in all. The dead militiamen are: John T. Waitnall, of this city, railway clerk, aged twenty-two; Bruce Givens, farmer, Knox county, aged thirty-nine; militiaman of the Second regiment, name unknown, and supposed to be from Chattanooga.

The wounded are: Thomas L. Carty, lawyer of this city, shot through the left groin, injuries may prove fatal; Samuel O. Heisel, prominent lawyer and Democratic politician, slightly injured; John Milton, laborer, slightly wounded.

Two miners were killed. They are George Miller, of Coal Creek, and George Neil, of Oneida, Tenn. John Wilson, a miner of Coal Creek, was slightly wounded in the heel. J. M. Gaut, a business man of this city and one of the volunteers, was badly injured by falling over a ledge of rocks.

THE CHOLERA SCOURGE.

Persians Dying by Thousands of the Malignant Disease.

THE SHAH HAS FLED FROM TEHERAN

His Cowardice Denounced by His Subjects, Who Are Left to Suffer—The Plague Eating Its Way Through Russia—It Has Reached Hamburg.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 20.—Anarchy now reigns in many towns of Persia owing to the cholera. The disease is raging with frightful virulence and the people are dying by thousands. At Tabriz, capital of the province of Azerbijan, the Armenian and European colonies are panic stricken and have left for the hills. This city is a great entrepot for commerce with India and Central Asia, and the ignorant people are frantic against foreigners from those regions, whom they suspect of having brought the pestilence.

The authorities have added to the popular excitement by adopting measures repugnant to the public feeling, such as ordering the removal of the cholera patients in carts of the most squalid description, resembling pesting cases, and in wheeled platforms and of so sinister an aspect that they were cast by the crowd to be fit for nothing but dogs.

The passage of these carts through the streets was the signal for all sorts of vituperation on the part of the populace, who eventually stoned the drivers. In the pillaging of the shops the mob displayed the greatest animosity against the Russian merchants, who have never been regarded with favor by the townspeople and who at present are the objects of special aversion.

Several of the small Persian towns have been abandoned by the people, who have left the sick to perish without assistance and the dead unburied.

Advices from Teheran say that much indignation is felt in Persia at the cowardly and incompetent conduct of the shah, who has entirely abandoned the direction of affairs at the capital to take refuge in a summer camp.

The common people of Teheran have dared to denounce the shah openly, something almost unheard of before, and, owing to the general demoralization caused by the cholera, utterances that would have been punished on any occasion are suffered to pass without rebuke.

There is much misery in the Jewish quarter of Teheran, where the cholera first showed itself, both the authorities and the people compelling the Jews to maintain a rigid isolation, and driving them back when they attempt to seek relief beyond the limits of their district.

On the Increase in St. Petersburg.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 20.—Fresh orders have been issued to the provincial governors to use the military when necessary to quell disturbances arising out of the cholera situation. But the Russian soldiery are either massed at headquarter garrisons or are spread along the frontier, so that immense districts in the interior are almost wholly unguarded, the village police alone upholding authority.

Three hundred and fifty deaths have occurred from cholera and the disease is on the increase. This is in contradiction of the official reports. Quite recently the postoffice employees, most of whom are fathers of families, asked that the letters and parcels from districts where cholera prevailed might be disinfected.

This request, however, not having complied with, they decided, out of regard for the safety of their wives and children, to cease coming to work until some such measure as they demanded was put into execution. This resolution was communicated to General Besac, director of the department of posts and telegraphs, who, far from complying with the officials' desire, ordered their immediate dismissal from the service.

Imported to Scotland.

LEUCHS, Aug. 20.—Wilhelm Ferdinand, a fireman on the steamship Ellen Dunbar, from Grandcalm, Scotland, has contracted from died of cholera on the way. The disease was of the Asiatic type, it is believed, and is supposed to have been contracted from Galicians who were at the Hamburg dock. The steamship has been disinfected and all hands are kept on board under quarantine regulations.

Prussian Precautions.

BERLIN, Aug. 20.—The presidents of the different Prussian provinces have been ordered to prohibit the importation and through use of used body linen and bedding, rags of all kinds, fresh vegetables and cream cheese. Especial precautions are to be observed as to goods imported from Milan Novgorod.

Aid Requested.

LIZZIE BORDEN MAY BE INSANE.

It Is Said Her Mother Was Tainted—A Story of a Conversation.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 20.—Charles F. Peckham, the man who surrendered to the police, saying that he was the murderer of Mr. and Mrs. Borden, has been released. His wife and Constable Grinnell, of Westport, took him home. Peckham was apparently sane, and amused the crowd at the station by his witty remarks. He denied all knowledge of the Borden murder and wanted to know why he had been locked up.

An examination of the late Andrew J. Borden's papers discloses the fact that he was worth nearer a million than a half million dollars. His property holdings are all gilt edged and would sell at much more than their face value. The daughters' inheritance will be greater than was anticipated by the public and probably by themselves.

The report is circulated here that the presence of insanity in the family of Lizzie Borden's own mother has been discovered. It is further added that no member of the Morse family, from which she came, escaped the reputation of being odd and eccentric. Friends of Lizzie Borden say that she takes after the Morses and that her peculiarities are almost identical with those of her maternal ancestors.

A friend of Andrew J. Borden, at New Bedford, relates a conversation which took place between himself and Mr. Borden a few weeks before the murders. Mr. Borden appeared very much disturbed. Upon being questioned, he remarked that he did not take much comfort at home with Lizzie; that she would not eat at the same table with him, and that only that morning when he went into the room where she was eating she got up from the table and left the room.

This gentleman also said that Mr. Borden told him this with tears in his eyes, and further remarked that when he left the house Lizzie told him she hoped he would come home a corpse, and that probably he would before long.

JERRY SIMPSON ALMOST MOBBED.

A Highly Exciting Incident at a Political Meeting in Kansas.

WICHITA, Kan., Aug. 20.—Quite a diversion was created on the old soldiers' reunion grounds by a controversy between Judge Botkin, of Steven county, and Congressman Jerry Simpson. In his speech Judge Botkin made the remark that there was a Kansan who had written of the people of western Kansas in a letter to The American Watchman, saying that "the men are selling their honor, the women their virtue and the children are becoming criminals and outcasts for bread."

The audience demanded the name of the writer and Botkin answered, "Jerry Simpson." Simpson was in the crowd and was repeatedly called for, but refused to come forward.

At the close of the speaking Simpson accused Botkin of doing him an injustice and said the remark referred to was applied to the people of Boston and New York. This Botkin denied, and said the letter was written in response to a request for an article on the condition of his constituents. The judge promised Simpson that he would secure the letter in full, and if he was wrong he would make public apology, and if correct in his statement he would publish the letter and place it in the hands of every voter in the congressional district.

After a sharp exchange of words between Simpson and Botkin the latter said, "If you said this thing about the people of Kansas you are disreputable and dishonorable." The crowd was highly excited by this time and Simpson was threatened with personal violence. He would have been mobbed, but Judge Botkin interfered and Simpson was taken away by his friends.

TURKEY TO BE DISCIPLINED.

An Outrage Which Secretary Foster Proposes to Follow Up.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The secretary of state received a cablegram from the United States charge d'affaires at Constantinople informing him that the house of Dr. Barnum, an American missionary at Bourdour, province of Konia, Asia Minor, has been burned and that the lives of the missionaries are in danger. He believes that if prompt action is not taken the missionary cause and lives of the missionaries will be in serious danger in other places.

Secretary Foster promptly cabled the charge to make urgent demand for effective protection, indemnity, puniasment of the guilty parties and reprimand of the authorities if found remiss. The United States cruisers Newark and Bennington, now on their way to Genoa, will be ordered to the vicinity of the outrage to support this demand.

Secretary Foster said that the complaints of infringements of treaty rights of American missionaries in Turkey had been accumulating since 1883, and in one notable instance, that of the outrage upon Rev. Mr. Knapp and Dr. Reynolds, by Moussa Bey in this same province of Asia Minor, it had taken seven years to secure the punishment of the offender, and the United States was now determined to see if American citizens and any treaty rights which the Turkish authorities were bound to respect.

SOMERBY'S ADMISSIONS.

Worthless Bonds Bought and Questionable Transactions Winked at.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 20.—The investigation of the affairs of the Iron Hall was resumed before Judge Taylor with Supreme Justice Somerby on the stand. His admissions were important. He stated that when the $170,000 was loaned the Philadelphia bank it was proposed by the supreme officers to the individual money of Supreme Cashier Davis, but that all knew that it was Iron Hall money and winked at the transaction.

The $88,000 that was sent to Secretary Hayes at Philadelphia to be invested, he stated, had been invested in bonds of the Mutual bank. Under close questioning Somerby with reluctance he admitted that the bonds were absolutely worthless, and further admitted that he was compelled to discharge Mr. Solomon Meckbrachan, supreme adjuster, in order to gain the consent of Walker and Davis for the loan of $170,000 for the bank.

The plaintiff produced documentary evidence to show that $200,000 had been drawn ostensibly as a loan to the bank and resigned for, but that $30,000 of the amount was never accounted for.

The testimony of Morrison, Supreme Cashier Davis' clerk, developed that the "loan ticket" for the $170,000 had been carried on the supreme cashier's books to balance them for over two years to his knowledge. The book only showed the item more than there was on hand. It was represented as a building account for a mythical addition to the home office. It was charged off the books a few days ago.

He knew little or nothing about the $300,000 taken to Philadelphia by Davis or the $84,000 that disappeared in the same direction for "investment" at another time. It was all carried as "cash on hand." He said that on July 26 the order's cash deposits were $1,315,415.74.

THE WAYS OF THE ANT.

An Entertaining Consideration of a Few of Her Peculiarities.

Any one who cares to "go to the ant" and "consider her ways" can hardly find more entertaining occupation, especially when a thriving colony of those busy little people is enclosed in glass cases and seen through magnifying glasses and powerful microscopes, as is the case in an "ant house" arranged for the London horticultural exhibition.

Perhaps the first thing that strikes an outsider in connection with ants and their habits after a few moments' observation is the apparent ease with which they carry loads many times their own weight and size.

AN INTERESTING EXPERIMENT.

An interesting experiment has been made to test the lifting capacity of the ant by means of the apparatus shown in our sketch. An average specimen of an ant was carefully weighed, and the amount registered at one-sixteenth of a grain. It was then held between the finger and thumb by the body, and the ant suspending the wooden pins brought into contact with it, which it immediately seized with its jaws and supported without any outside assistance. The ring was then weighed, and by this means it was conclusively proved that the ant had lifted 1.6/9 times its own weight. So tenacious is the hold that if the weight were increased to beyond its strength it would allow its head to be pulled off sooner than relinquish its grip.

To get a notion of the domestic side of the ant's life the visitor is recommended to visit an exhibit containing perhaps one queen and her attendants. The latter, knowing full well that the continuance of their little colony depends upon their queen, vie with one another in their attention to her comfort, assisting her in her toilet, feeding her, and even carrying her; but their most serious charge of all is the care of her eggs in their various stages up to maturity. As fast as they are produced they are carefully conveyed to a place of safety and kept at the right temperature by the unerring instinct of the workers.

To withhold their solicitude, raise an alarm by tapping the side of the box; in a moment all is life and bustle; each worker, mistress of the nearest cocoon, picks it up with its strong jaws and scuttles off to a place of safety, returning again and again for another precious load till all are out of danger. The workers appear to know by intuition when the perfect insect is ready to escape from its cocoon, and are at hand to render assistance by breaking through the silk covering at the end where they know the head should be. After the outer covering is removed the new arrival still requires assistance to free itself from a second covering, after which its wings are smoothed out by its nurses, who keep a watchful eye on it for several days before its final departure from the nest.

AN ALARM.

Electricity and Photography Combined.

Leon Esquire, a Mexicanized Frenchman, is said to have perfected a marvelous invention which combines electricity and photography in a most unique manner. By speaking into a photophone transmitter, which consists of a highly polished diaphragm reflecting a ray of light, the ray of light itself is set into rapid vibrations and a photograph is made of the sound of the voice as it travels along a band of sensitized paper. Now comes the most wonderful part of the whole story. If on the image of the photographic tracing is projected by means of an electric arc or oxyhydrogen light upon a selenium receiver, the original speech is instantaneously emitted from the tube of the receiver and may be heard as plainly as if uttered by a human being in an ordinary tone of voice. If true, this is a most wonderful discovery, says The Industrial World, and only for the foregoing, as it is evident that there is no limit to the developments of this peculiar combination of methods.

Action of Metals on India Rubber.

The Manufacturers' Gazette reports that recent experiments on the action of metals on india rubber show that copper is the most deleterious, Platinum, palladium, aluminium and lead act only slightly, while magnesium, zinc, cadmium, cobalt, nickel, iron, bismuth, tin, arsenic, antimony, bismuth, silver and gold have no action whatever on this material.

Scientific Brevities.

The "telephonograph" is a new invention reported, which consists in the combination of a microphone and phonograph.

Three thousand seven hundred and forty-one bodies were cremated in France last year.

The United States consul at Seoul states that paper making is one of the leading industries of Corea, where paper is employed in a great diversity of ways. It serves as string, and in the manufacture of lanterns, fans, umbrellas, shoe soles, hats, boxes and coats. It is also used for covering floors, walls and ceilings, and, stretched on frames, supplies windows and doors.

"Saturated solution of zinc" means simply a solution, probably the chloride, which is completely saturated with zinc: that is, the acid is all used up.

The petroleum industry is developing fast in Peru, which, it is predicted, will soon supply the entire demand on the west coast of South America.

The finest emeralds in the world are said to belong to the Spanish crown and to have been found in America.

The Country Shop

SCOTCH SUPERSTITIONS.

A Number of Familiar Happenings That Are Believed to Bring Bad Luck.

It is considered unlucky for the mother and her baby to go out of doors until the child is baptized; for the child to be baptized in a Scotch church; but lucky for the child to be christened in the house it was born in; for lovers to be engaged with a ring containing either opals or emeralds; for lovers to give either a Bible as a present before marriage; to be married in a month where the letter J is, such as May; to be married in a Scotch church; unlucky for any of the wedding guests to be dressed in green or black, a black crape bonnet or a band on a gentleman's hat; those accidents entail lifelong misery to the new married couple.

A young woman who tries on a widow's cap is sure to be a widow after marriage. It is unlucky to try on your bridal dress before the bridal day; to see your future husband on the day of the marriage until the ceremony. Unlucky to marry out of your own position—that is, a lady to marry a servant or vice versa; unequal marriages bring ungrateful children. To bring flowering hawthorn into a house denotes a death in the family. If a timepiece or clock stops unexpectedly you will get intimation of a death; if a corpse is kept unburied over a Sabbath another death of a relation will follow before another year or twelve months have elapsed; hence so many funerals in Scotland on a Sabbath afternoon. Unlucky to wind or roll up wool or knitting yarn after sunset, only winding trouble and care to the winder or knitter. A cat washing its face with its paws before the fire is a sign of a wet day; the cat frolicking or dancing about a room is a sign of a hurricane or storm.

An Interesting Instrument.

The congress for experimental psychology to be held in London represents the present tendency toward applying scientific methods in studying the relations between mind and body or mind and brain, subjects which are of as much interest and importance in the case of criminals as of normal men. Science says: "This is illustrated by the new psychophysical instrument called the 'plethysmograph,' which presents the least fluctuations of blood in the arteries of the arm. Thus it has been found that when the sentence of the judge is read before the criminal there is a decrease in the flow of blood in the arm, but the sight of a glass of wine increases the flow. When, for example, it is required to multiply nine times seventy-three an increase in blood flow is the result. The flow is little affected in a brutal murderer or born criminal when a pistol is shown to him, whereas in a normal man the plethysmograph indicates a decided effect. The importance of this new instrument lies in this, that involuntary testimony is given as to the nervous and physical nature of the criminal. It is often unknown to him and in spite of himself."

Zola's Novels.

At the present time 1,300,000 copies have been sold of those of M. Zola's novels which are comprised in the Rougnon Macquart series, "Nana" heading the list with 100,000 copies, after which come "L'Assommoir" with 158,000 and "La Terre" with 120,000. The sale of M. Zola's other works, such as "Therese Raquin" "Les Contes a Ninon," "Madeleine Ferat" and his volumes of literary criticism, amounts to about 80,000 copies. These figures are exclusive of translations in the English, German, Italian, Spanish, Dutch and Hungarian languages.

On the first day that M. Zola's new novel "La Debacle" was issued in Paris, a few weeks ago, the publishers executed orders for no fewer than 60,000 copies.

Specific Forms of Salutation.

The wish of saints is often specific, connected with the circumstances of environment. Thus the Irish, especially say, "How do you perspire?" a dry skin being the symptom of the dreaded fever. In hot Persia the friendly wish is expressed, "May God cool your ages!"—that is, give you comfort in declining years. In the same land originates the quaint form, "May your shadow never be less" which does not apply, as often now used in Europe, especially in Ireland, to the size and plumpness of the body as indicating robust health, but to impress upon a traveler to the noon sun, when all shadows are least.

Barking Up the Wrong Tree.

"Barking up the wrong tree," a very common expression in some localities, according to a correspondent of the Detroit Free Press, originated from the fact that a dog will bark at the foot of a particular tree to indicate to his master where the game is located. While endeavoring to see the animal he discovers another tree, and it finally escapes him altogether. In its application it denotes that a person has mistaken his object, or is looking for it in the wrong place.

Landor and His Wife.

It is told that on one occasion during the honeymoon Walter Savage Landor was reading some of his own verses—and who read more exquisitely?—when all at once the lady, releasing herself from his arms, jumped up, saying: "Oh, do stop, Walter. There's that dear, delightful Punch performing in the street. I must look out of the window." Away went poetry, and away went the heart of Landor from his wife.

Purposeless Visitants.

Charles Lamb said concerning hospitality: "May we be branded for the veriest churl if we deny our heart to the many noble starved friends that at times encumber their dwelling for our poor roof! It is not of guests that we complain, but of endless, purposeless visitants; droppers in, as they are called. We sometimes wonder from what sky they fall."

How to Clean Bronze.

A lady who has had some experience in cleaning ornamental articles in bronze says: "Do not put vinegar on bronze. Vinegar or water takes the bronzing off it, inflation and affects the gloss of real bronze. The safest thing is pure salad oil, lightly rubbed on (the dust being all removed first), then rubbed off with a soft cloth, and afterward polished with a chamois. Another way is to plunge the object in boiling suds, then in pure boiling water. Afterward expose the article to the air, and when it is dry rub it very lightly with a leather on which a little whiting has been rubbed. I believe rinsing the suds in beer, after having washed them with soap and water, is very good. The beer should not be wiped off, but allowed to dry in a warm place. But I prefer the salad oil to any other application."

THE Household

INSECT PESTS.

How to Overcome the Faithful Fly, the Almost Human and Others of That Ilk.

There is scarcely any household scourge that brings with it more annoyance than the insect tribe. The appalling regularity, too, with which the enemy invades our dwellings is, to say the least of it, extremely perplexing. What with the city water bug and the country cockroach (whose "menon" has no limit), the faithful fly, the annual moth, to say nothing of red ants, mice and homely fleas, our life is not "a happy one." Methods manifold of ridding ourselves of these have been set down before us, but still they flourish undisturbed; the question to be solved is not that of extermination alone, but the most effective way of keeping them away.

First of all it is important that all waincoting, window ledges and other parts of the room where cracks may prevail should be thoroughly overhauled, and closed with putty well pressed in and slightly mixed with vitriol if necessary. That sounds a commonplace remedy, and yet it is an excellent one, proof against the invasion of the intruders. Insects of all kinds, and most of the small winged tribe, can effectually be kept off by rubbing all the woodwork of the rooms, bedsteads, etc., with a solution of vitriol. Worms in wood, red ants, etc., will infallibly be destroyed if this is done.

The great objection to the common fly killers is their unsightliness or general filthiness. Papers in plates are far from ornamental, while the inartistic traps, with openings underneath through which the poor things crawl to their fate, are positively aggressive. Papers nevertheless are very efficacious, and it is perhaps not generally recognized that the lighter they are placed the more flies they will attract. It is therefore quite possible to distribute one or two out of sight on bookcase or wardrobe. They should be slightly moistened and changed as soon as the water becomes discolored.

Another remedy could be kept in one or two of the ornamental cups or bowls which are found in almost every apartment, whether it be study, reception room or bedroom, and is prepared as follows: Grind two ounces of pepper freshly for the purpose, mix it well with four ounces of brown sugar and stir it all into one pint of infusion of quassia. Keep it well corked in a bottle, store it in a cool place and pour a small quantity only when wanted into some small receptacle. Oil of vitriol should of course be used with great care.

Cherry Tart.

Take 2¼ pounds of cherries, seed them and mix with six ounces of powdered sugar; put fruit, etc., into a stewpan with four ounces of good fresh butter, toss up over a moderate fire for a few minutes and then let them cool. Make a round under crust seven inches in diameter, moisten the edge and put on it a band of puff paste three-quarters of an inch high and one-half inch thick. Put the cherries in this so as to form a sort of dome, cover them with the puff paste, taking care that it does not extend beyond the band, upon which it must be pressed down; wash it over with white of egg and bake it in a gentle oven for about an hour. When it little cooled take the whites of two eggs whipped to a strong froth and mixed with two ounces of powdered sugar and mask with it your cake; cover with sifted sugar and color the whole of a clear yellow in the oven and then serve immediately. Canned cherries may be used in the same way.

Green Grape Jelly.

Jelly made from unripe grapes, just before they change from green to purple, is very delicate. A correspondent of The Housekeeper Weekly gives the following recipe for it: Wash the grapes, after picking them from the stems, in several waters, then put them in a porcelain kettle. Wash them before putting them on the stove, as then you will not need to put any water with them, and of course the less water the less time it will take to boil the juice. Put the grapes, when sufficiently cooked, into a bag made of first flannel and let the juice drain out without squeezing, if possible. To a pint of the juice add a pint of sugar, as for other jellies.

A Quaint Bracket.

Odd but attractive in way of a bracket is one recently seen and here illustrated. It is composed of white enameled wood with fretwork gilded.

DRAPED BRACKET.

The drapery is in soft silk. The amateur carpenter and decorator would not find it difficult to carry out a somewhat similar arrangement. Such a bracket in dark stained wood with drapery of velvet in any deep rich color would be very effective for the display of old china and curios.

Peach Shortcake.

Into one quart of flour rub well two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, half a teaspoonful of salt and half a teacupful of butter and sweet milk enough to make a dough and roll like biscuit. Roll it about an inch thick and bake in a quick oven. When done split with a sharp knife, butter both halves and spread over the under piece very ripe, juicy peaches, cut into small, thin slices. Sweeten plentifully with powdered white sugar, lay the pieces together and serve with sweetened cream.

House Decoration in Leather.

The use of leather in the decoration of fashionable English houses is increasing. Dining room and library chairs are covered and the walls of libraries and bedrooms are cased with it. It deadens the sounds from the outside, and besides it is very rich looking. Inside curtains of leather used instead of doors have an impressive effect. Furniture leather is frequently embroidered, the needles being the same as those used for sewing gloves.

Tomato Sauce.

Two dozen large, ripe tomatoes, two onions, six red peppers, three cups of vinegar, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, one of salt. Mix all together and cook slowly three hours.

The Usual Excuse.

Two ladies who had not seen each other for years recently met in the street. They recognized each other after a time and their recognition was cordial.

"So delighted to see you again. Why, you are scarcely altered."

"So glad; and how little changed you are. Why, how long is it since we met?"

"About ten years."

"And why have you never been to see me?"

"My dear, just look at the weather we have had."—Tit-Bits.

BREVITIES

—The Morristown team will play base ball here Wednesday.

—Texas Siftings says that politeness is too cheap to be scarce.

—The roughest roads are those we have not traveled over.

—Three freight cars and a caboose were wrecked at the overhead railroad bridge in East Bound Brook Friday.

—Nora Edmondsen, arrested last night on complaint of Mary Sullivan who charged her with using indecent language, was fined three dollars this morning.

—An interesting programme of athletic sports has been arranged for the Labor Day entertainment of the New Jersey Athletic Club at their grounds at Bayonne City, N. J.

—A farmer in Washington Valley has over half an acre planted with sunflowers. The sun-flower seed is highly valued as chicken-feed. In Russia sunflower seed is eaten and relished as peanuts are here.

—Augustus Moore, an employee of W. W. Cortell the butcher, ran a hack to camp meeting yesterday without having first indulged in the trifling formality of obtaining a licence. Officers Fredrickson ordered him to do this, and did.

—A correspondent vouches for the accuracy of the following: "My brethren," said a preacher, "such a man is like the captain of a vessel on a shoreless sea. Happy would such a man be could he bring his men safe to land."—Tit-Bits.

—Senator W. J. Keys, of Somerset county, has decided to establish an extensive ranch at Ridgeway, Colorado, and will ship there many of his highpriced thoroughbred stallions and brood mares from his stock farm at South Branch. So the reports have it.—Ex.

—This is the prize definition of "A Friend:"

The first person who comes in when the whole world has gone out.

—Remember the last excursion of the season to Ocean Grove and Asbury Park is on Wednesday, August 24th, under the auspices of the Warren Union Mission. It will be a good opportunity for all who wish to attend the camp meeting which begins this week. See advertisement.

—The Stroudsburg Times says: "Woodcock are scarce. Since the 4th, when the season opened, but few have been bagged and the prospect for Fall shooting of these game birds is not rosy. But, young pheasants are seen in larger numbers than last year, and rabbits are said to be not less as fleas.' The hunter may be happy yet.

—In answer to the question "where do the flies come from?" an exchange says: "The cyclone makes the house fly, the blacksmith makes the fire fly, the carpenter makes the saw fly, the grocer makes the sand fly, and the boarder makes the butter fly." How about the shoo-fly and the woman who makes the chicken fly?

—An exchange says considerable interest has been awakened about Amity, by the finding of some very fine specimens of a good quality of red marble. It was discovered on the farm of Samuel P. Layton, the merchant and postmaster of Amity, which is located partly in New York and partly in New Jersey, the quarry of valuable stone being all in the latter State.

—Had the great and only Barnum been in Elizabeth, Saturday, he could have created no more commotion among children and ladies than did Stetson's Big Uncle Tom's Cabin Company. Parents and children began assembling at an early hour along the promised route of procession, and when it came no one was disappointed. It was an overwhelming surprise to all. The donkeys, gaily and gaudily uniformed, with spirited airs, attracted great attention. The musicians were followed by half-a-dozen Siberian blood hounds.—Elizabeth Leader.

—The news from Buffalo that the strike will be declared off to-morrow night indicates that there is a change in the purpose of the strikers to declare a strike in this vicinity of the switchmen on the New Jersey Central Railroad division of the Philadelphia and Reading, as was reported last week was the intention. Switchmen spoken to on the subject still say that they don't want to strike, and believe in leaving well-enough alone.

—It is reported that the Central Rail road last week sent instructions to Mr. Haines, who has charge of the station here, not to allow trolley poles erected anywhere in front of the railroad property. Enough property-owners on the opposite side of North avenue have also declared their determination not to allow the erection of these poles. But one of the leading officials of the Plainfield Street Railway Company Saturday offered to bet $50 that they would have the poles up within a month.

A PARK FOR NORTH PLAINFIELD.

When the Street Railway is in Operation.

The Boroughites are counting on a promise said to have been made by Mr. W. Johnson that when the street railway is in operation and running near his property he will donate to the Borough a large plot of ground on Mountain avenue for use as a public park.

The ground along the north side of Mountain avenue is beautifully situated, sloping gently downward from the mountain to the brook and then upward to the avenue. It is thought that very little expense would make it a beautiful spot for the use intended.

SHE GOES OFF WITH HIM.

SEVENTEEN—YEAR OLD "BEANIE" BLIMM DISAPPEARS.

A Letter Informs Mrs. Blimm that She and George Strayer Have Married and will Live in Brooklyn—What a Friend Says.

Saturday noon, "Beanie" Blimm, the seventeen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Blimm of Somerset street, after mailing a letter to her parents, boarded the 12.58 train for New York. The letter informed her parents that she had gone off with George Strayer, a young man about twenty-two years of age, who had been paying her attention for a year past.

Mr. and Mrs. Blimm strongly objected to Strayer, and this seems to have determined the girl, for in her note she said she was tired the way they treated "George," and was going off with him.

Strayer is said to be from Connecticut. He worked for some time in Pond's Machine Tool Works here, and of late has been employed in a machine shop in Brooklyn.

A friend of the girl says "Beanie" and George were quietly married two weeks ago, and that the departure was planned long ago, that the girl has been making necessary preparations for a month past and lately quietly carried her possessions, a little at a time, to a friend's house on Second street, where they were packed in a trunk.

The young couple, it is said, will board until Fall, and then start housekeeping.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Frank W. Runyon, editor of the Courier, returned last night from his vacation.

Miss Edith Rose of Short Hills, is visiting Mrs. Harriett A. French of North Plainfield.

Miss Blanche Busant of New York is the guest of Mrs. Obitz of Somerset street, North Plainfield.

Mrs. Sarah Newman and Miss Rose Newman of Boston, who have been visiting Mrs. Samuel Drier of West Front street, returned home yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. William Harrison Sampson and family of East Fifth street returned Saturday after a three weeks' stay at Hartwood Park, Sullivan county, New York.

Rev. J. P. Searle started Monday morning for a month's stay on and around Ontario. He is accompanied by Rev. Mr. Raymond, formerly of Plainfield.—Somerville Democrat.

The New York Tribune to-day has an illustrated article on Chautauqua, including pictures of Miss Kate F. Kimball and Dr. Jesse L. Hurlbut, one a former and the other now, residents of this city.

Mr. Fred. Moore of Broadway and Fifth street returned Saturday from Long Point, Seneca Lake, New York. With a party of friends three weeks ago he went to Watkins Glen, the source much used through the Erie Canal to Seneca Lake. This novel trip was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The Elizabeth Journal says, that Mr. Downer and son of Fanwood, and the Misses Rose Lent, Sallie Miller, Mamie Littell, Mary Page, Eleanor Neuendorf, Marguerita Case, Rosa Hart and Edith and Ethel De Long of Plainfield were the guests of Miss Louise, daughter of Mr. J. W. Jones, who celebrated her fourth birthday at her home in Elizabeth Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer, Advisory Dean of the woman's department of Chicago University and afterward a professor here and at Geneva Lake, for two years she held the chair of history at Wellesley and for six years was President of the college, which office she resigned to marry Prof. Palmer of Harvard. Miss Buckler, Dean of the university, has been for many years principal of the High School in Plainfield, N. J., and is an educator of wide reputation. Under her discipline the Plainfield school has been elevated to that extent that its graduates are received by colleges on its certificates without examination.—N. Y. Sun.

Everyone feels deep sympathy for the afflicted parent, Mrs. J. W. Taylor, formerly of this city, after reading the following abstract from a letter written to a friend, from Argyle, New York, in which she says: "It is with a heart full of sorrow and sadness I attempt to inform you of the death of our dear and only son, which occurred recently. He was drowned at Lake Champlain on Sunday afternoon. Fifteen men and one young man started out for a sail on Lake Champlain, about six miles distant. When about mid way between the mouth of the river and a point the boat capsized. Malatt, who was the only one who could swim clung to the bottom of the boat, as did also Broder, but our dear boy went down and was drowned."

THE HORSES RAN AWAY.

The Driver Injured and the Wagon Wrecked.

The horses attached to a carriage driven by Lawrence Reidy of Dunellen while passing down Plainfield avenue during the funeral of Joseph Meyers this morning became frightened at the swings between Fourth and Fifth streets and ran away. The carriage collided with a tree and Reidy was thrown to the ground. His right shoulder was badly injured. The carriage is a total wreck.

In the City Court.

George B. Nolan and Gustave Satterlin, who were arrested Friday evening by Officer Fredericksen, who arranged before City Judge Dedington this morning, plead not guilty. The case was adjourned for one week.

LEAGUE BASE BALL.

THE CRESCENTS WON AGAIN SATURDAY.

Francis Knocked Out of the Box in the Fifth Inning.—Seven Runs in One Inning.—Score: Crescents, 10; Elizabeth, 4.

The Crescents won from Elizabeth on the ball ground Saturday, scoring seven runs before the side was retired, making a total of ten. The game was very interesting up to this time, but after that the result was never in doubt.

The Elizabeths having been worsted in every game with the Crescents, came to Plainfield determined to win this time if possible, and, indeed, it looked as if they would win up to the fifth inning. In that eventful inning the Crescents were due for some base hits, and they made them, regardless of Francis' feeling in the matter.

Francis threw curves—out, in and drop. The drop was the most noticeable, for something dropped upon his delivery. In the aforesaid fifth inning, and then Francis took a drop from the pitcher's box to first base. Bowes went to centre field and a man named Jones pitched. After the inning he retired in favor of McDonald, who finished out the game.

Francis' hard luck commenced when he gave Brady his base on balls. Murphy, the next man up, proved a good waiter, and he walked to first. Turner followed with a base hit. Daley and Leidy did likewise. This made Francis lose heart, for he gave up and walked out of the box. Result of the inning, seven runs.

Sneeden was rather wild in the two first innings, giving two men their bases on balls in the second, helping Elizabeth to get their runs in this inning unearned. After that his pitching was of the first water. He struck out seven men in seven innings.

Jones, besides playing first base to perfection, made the longest hit of the game, and when Dillon got through chasing the ball, and threw it back to the ground, Jones was on third.

Bonner played his customary good game at short, making some phenomenal stops. In fact all the Crescent nine played "pennant ball."

CORRESPONDENCE.

A SUGGESTION FOR WHEELMEN.

To Band Together and Prosecute Careless Drivers.

Editor Aaron M. Powell of East Sixth street, while riding on his bicycle Friday evening, was run into by a careless driver and, although, fortunately, the rider escaped injury his bicycle was wrecked.

Concerning this accident the following communication has been received:

To the Editor of The News—It is to be regretted that Mr. Powell is not a member of the League of American Wheelmen, in order that the man who drove over his wheel on Friday evening, might receive the punishment they deserve.

I have no sympathy for the wheelman who rode as if he owned the whole road, but Mr. Powell's lamp was burning, he was on the right side of the road, and should have been clear into the gutter, barely escaping himself, as the horse fell over the wheel.

The reckless drivers offered no apology for the damage they had done, but proceeded to berate Mr. Powell, and would probably have done him personal injury had not some friends interfered.

As Mr. Powell is a member of the peaceable Society of Friends, I presume he will be averse to engaging in a legal contest over the affair, and I hope to hear that the men who were responsible for the damage, have concluded, after considering the matter, to make what reparation they can by settling the bill for repairing the wheel.

Would it not be well for the small army of men in our city who use their wheels to carry them to and from their places of business, and others, who, like Mr. Powell, ride by advice of their physicians, besides the great number who ride for pleasure, to do something for their mutual protection.

Why not start a fund for the prosecution of such reckless drivers, beginning in case no reparation is made, with those who so distinguished themselves on Friday evening. BUSINESS.

Republicans the Report and Denies that He is a Free Trader.

The Democratic party in its National platform, of principles, a little over a month ago, declared itself at Chicago, unequivocally in favor of Free Trade, and chose candidates to represent that policy.

The Democrats of the Fourth Ward, to ratify the Free Trade platform, and, incidentally endorse the Free Trade candidates, held a mass meeting in the party part of the present month, and invited Mayor Saunders, who was elected on the Democratic ticket, to be one of the speakers.

The Press reported Mayor Saunders as presenting arguments to show that the Democratic platform of Free Trade was best, and as supporting his argument by citing New South Wales, away at the other end of the earth, referring to it as a prosperous Free Trade country.

Mr. S. W. Reese, a News' reader, we think very ably, in two communications, showed that the statements and position of the talented Mayor of the Borough of North Plainfield, and that he was wrong in his statements of facts, assuming that he was correctly reported, and we supplemented the communications with comments, concluding with an extract from a correspondent in New South Wales, or that locality, taken from The Sun, which showed the existence of an entirely different state of affairs from that presented by the Borough supposed Free Trade champion, and especially as shown by our correspondent, Mr. Reese.

Mr. Saunders, on Saturday, repudiates the Press report, claiming that it misrepresented him, and then to show what he did say quotes the language of some of the New South Wales boomers, where the Sun's article exposed, and declares that he is not a Free Trader at all. Yet, he speaks at a Democratic meeting, called to endorse the Democratic Free Trade platform, and is quoted in language that he was supposed to have revised as upholding the Free Trade folly.

Must we then look upon him as a Free Trade champion who don't believe what he says, or rather, implies?

That must be the conclusion if he is willing to address Democratic meetings called to uphold Free Trade doctrine, in view of his claim over his own signature that he is not a Free Trader.

During the last Presidential campaign that most gifted orator and lawyer, Mr. Dougherty, of Philadelphia, said to a large audience in Music Hall:

"I like to address an audience, as a lawyer addresses a jury," etc.

As we said at the time in commenting on it, a lawyer is a man you consider his client a scamp, but as his lawyer he must address the jury so as to make them believe that same scamp only needing wings to flop away as an angel to a reserved seat or even a private box in the house of the Lord, with Peter.

By his language we judge that this is the case of Mr. Saunders. As a man of sense he repudiates the Democratic doctrine of Free Trade, but as a stump speaker at a Fourth Ward Democratic meeting is not to endorse Cleveland and Free Trade, he is willing to argue that Free Trade is all right — for the other fellow.

Of course the mayor is too much of a gentleman to be guilty of the coarse epithets so characteristic of the sheet in which his communication appears, and which is not to endorse Cleveland and Free Trade, he is willing to argue that with any self-respecting use toward each other.

—The title of a gentleman is one that many men wear.

BUD LINDSAY ESCAPES.

The Rope Taken from his Neck When he Offers to Give Evidence.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 22. (Special.)—The leader of the most daring, most lawless, and most troublesome body of miners was Bud Lindsay, and to his machinations has been due of the turbulence on Coal Creek.

Last night, in some way that no one seems to understand, four citizens managed to seize and silence him.

He was hurried up the valley toward Briceville, and the mob, which gained force almost at every step, hurried him forward, fearing alarm and pursuit by the soldiers. At Briceville a rope was placed around Lindsay's neck. He broke down and begged for his life with all possible fervor.

*He had life given him upon the assur*ance that to-day he would turn State's evidence and reveal the names and plans of all the leaders, tell how the mob was raised, the nature of the oath, the names of the miners known to have killed soldiers or guards, in short to reveal to the civil authorities all of the lawlessness that has reigned, and this he agreed to testify to in court.

When all this was promised the rope was taken from his neck and he was returned to the camp for safe keeping. It is now believed that with his testimony at least thirty leaders can be successfully tried for murder and convicted.

TRIED TO ESCAPE.

SING SING, N. Y., August 22—(Special.)—A daring but unsuccessful attempt to escape from Sing Sing Prison was made by two convicts at 1 o'clock this morning. The two were long-term prisoners. One was shot dead.

TRADED HIS RAZOR FOR WHISKEY.

After Cutting His Wife's Throat.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 22d. (Special.)—John Kennedy cut his wife's throat yesterday in a shanty on the river front. He then rowed across to Covington, and traded his razor for liquor. His wife will die.

A MOSQUITO THEIR EMBLEM.

New Jersey Knights of Pythias in Kansas City.

The New Jersey Brigade, Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias, started Saturday for Kansas City, where it will participate in the annual encampment of the order. The Sir Knights traveled on a special train consisting of two day coaches, two Pullman sleeping coaches and a baggage car.

The New Jersey brigade will be very conspicuous at the western camp, not in point of numbers perhaps, but they carry with them as emblem of New Jersey in the shape of a monstrous mosquito. The "bird" is mounted on a pole and on its large wings is the legend "Escaped from New Jersey." They do not expect to bring it back.

The brigade is over two hundred strong, beside the many guests who accompany them. They also have taken with them the Rankin Post Drum and Bugle Corps of Brooklyn, twenty-five strong. The brigade is made up of Sir Knights from Newark, Jersey City, Union Hill, Long Branch, Trenton, Phillipsburg, this city and Elizabeth.

"Were Plato alive today his auditors would be chiefly women," says a writer in The Arena. Along with this may be placed the remark of Emerson, "Civilization is the power of good women."

To the $2,300,000,000 recently reported by the treasury department as being at present in the country is to be added the $4,000,000 in silver notes issued monthly by the government.

Blessed be the man who invented building associations! There are now 5,000 of them in this country, and they pay up $180,000,000 a year. Their best development is probably to be found in Philadelphia. In that city 60,000 families have been enabled by means of the building association to buy and pay for homes of their own.

A society writer in London Queen says of our American homes: "Every house furnishes at least a score of rocking chairs." Coming down to hardpan, how many American houses are there that have twenty rocking chairs? That would be four rocking chairs apiece to the members of an average family of five. What liars British society writers can be when they set their heads to it.

Learning Languages.

The university student will pore over the grammar and literature of, say, German, four years and be ground out with all diplomas of proficiency, though he can not speak one word of that tongue. The newsboy who can scarcely read and write runs the streets and picks up in a few months enough German to make himself understood anywhere and to converse fluently with newly arrived emigrants. His German is not grammatical, but he can speak it; the university graduate who has learned it out of books cannot. There is the difference between learning a language by the natural method and learning it out of books, which is not acquiring it at all. The natural way is by using the ear and tongue, and in no other way will any human being ever be able to talk a foreign language, though he pore over grammar and dictionary a century.

This great truth is beginning to be recognized. Professor Schliemann mastered Greek by reading it aloud and accustoming his ear to the sound of it. Then when he went to Greece he understood the common talk. Professor Blackie, of Edinburgh, in five months became as familiar with German as with his native tongue simply by going among Germans constantly, listening to the sound of their talk and imitating it. The new method of learning a foreign language is exactly the method of a child when it first begins to speak. Five months of faithful work by this plan will enable anybody to become familiar with a foreign tongue. In this great age of the intermingling and fraternity of nations every person ought to speak at least three languages.

Two Women Novelists.

Among women story writers most read just now are Marie Wilkins in America and Marie Corelli in England. The two are as different as a lake and a river, yet they have equal power.

Marie Wilkins in America writes idyls of New England. It is safe to say they are among the strongest, most striking that have ever been penned. Her scenes and characters are so natural because she has found the true secret of realism—not to paint actual characters, but such characters as might exist anywhere; not to describe actual events, but such events as might happen to anybody. Her tales fit everybody's humor. They are sweet, natural and wholesome. Her success as a writer of long stories will probably be determined by "Jane Field," now appearing as a serial. As an author of short stories her fame was long since established. She lives in Randolph, Mass., and there is not a particle of affectation about her or her delightful stories.

Marie Corelli chooses to veil herself in as much mystery as blunt, broad daylight, British civilization will admit. Nearly all persons who pretend to dabble in so called "occult science" do the same, more's the pity. They generally get the name of being quacks and charlatans, however, which serves them right.

In plain English, Marie Corelli is Miss Mackay, daughter of Charles Mackay, who used to be editor of the London Illustrated News. "A Romance of Two Worlds" is the best known of her novels so far. The one which will have the greatest circulation is "The Soul of Lilith," however, because Queen Victoria has taken a fancy to it and commended it warmly. The Corelli ideas in weirdness, spookery and clairvoyance, mingle the most incredible scenes and ideas of her pen point as if they were puff balls. The present interest in hypnotism and psychology generally has swung her stories powerfully forward on the tide of popularity.

Besides this, Miss Corelli has "views," not always good natured or pleasant ones, and she flings them into her stories as liberally as she does miracles. She hates Protestants, strong minded women and high society, and her work is constantly marred by her spiteful flings at these. The American Marie would never be guilty of such bad taste.

THE STRIKE A FAILURE.

Freight Cars Run Without Much Difficulty at Buffalo.

THE SWITCHMEN CAN'T WIN ALONE

Their Only Hope Is That the Firemen Will Go Out, and Such Action Is Not Probable—Sargent on His Way East. A Number of Strikers Arrested.

BUFFALO, Aug. 22.—"The strike is ended. The men are beaten. They acted prematurely, were ill advised, and if they cannot make terms with the companies within forty-eight hours their places will be lost to them." This is the summary of the situation as expressed by Florence F. Donovan, member of the state board of arbitration. He has been a sympathizer with the men, and therefore his opinion is of value.

The side strikes at Niagara and Elmira are inactive; the firemen did not go out; the railroad telegraphers have made no move; the trainmen are in an aggravatingly hesitating mood, and altogether the unfortunate switchmen, in the face of the defeat which stares them, have the added grief of realizing that they went into the action without having taken the most elementary steps toward forming sympathetic alliances that would almost surely have been able to pull them through.

General Master Sargent has high hopes still and is working with greater skill than most people are inclined to credit him with being capable of exercising, but he has only a handful of men with him. What his next move may be only himself and the immediate friends know, but would the plans run in the sequence which naturally suggests itself, they would be to order out his men to the eastward in the morning, probably at the important points of West Albany and Hornellsville. The companies say they are prepared for just such a move, and that they have taken pains to assure themselves of the loyalty of their men along the route.

Strikers Arrested.

Despite the fact that some of the people here are urging General Porter, of the National guard, and Sheriff Beck to send back the troops the, strikers keep right on injuring railroad property, sanding the soldiers and throwing stones and bolsboring the working nonunion switchmen. The soldiers and police have captured a lot of strikers.

An Erie striker named William Milleny was pulled in for entering the West Shore yards and threatening switchmen if they did not join the union forces. Milleny was sent to the penitentiary for ten days.

John Brown, Thomas O'Brien, John Hughes and Michael Fallen, all striking Erie switchmen, were arrested in the East Buffalo yards of the Erie. Brown was in the act of throwing a coupling pin at some of the Erie switchmen and the others were urging them to leave their work and join the union.

Another man was arrested by a detail of Colonel Welch's command. A detail under command of Lieutenant Lambrecht was sent out to guard the crew working on a Lehigh train. When the train finally started it broke in two. Daniel Cahill had succeeded in removing a coupling pin. Lieutenant Lambrecht noticed Cahill running back along the track. The lieutenant climbed down off the car and followed him.

A nonunion switchman stepped in between the cars at the order of the conductor to couple the cars together again, and as he did so Cahill stepped up to him and floor ed him with a blow on the head with his fist. The man addressed Lieutenant Lambrecht insultingly when he commanded him at pistol point to give himself up, and made off down the track. The officer followed, and in a lively struggle held the man until some of the men in his detail came up and placed the man under guard.

A Brace of Accidents.

The Lehigh Valley was a sufferer from two accidents, but in neither case could any blame be charged to the strikers. The first was when the work train was backing onto the Lehigh Valley trestle at East Buffalo, two cars being ahead of the engine. The train was run down to the entrance of the tunnel, and before the engineer could stop his engine they ran into several cars which lay in the tunnel. The wreck caused three or four bents of the trestle to fall, almost burying a number of Polish laborers in the debris. Luckily no one was hurt, but the cab of the engine was carried away and the dome badly broken.

The other accident occurred on the main line, near Babcock street, to the train engaged in carrying the soldiers between East Buffalo and Scott street. The train was running at a lively rate of speed when nearly Bancroft switch, one of the switch tenders threw the switch before the train reached him, letting it on the west bound track against a string of cars which were standing there. The platform of the car was smashed and several of the freight cars were derailed. A number of the men who were on the train were badly injured though not seriously.

All the Roads Moving Freight.

Freight traffic has been resumed with a vengeance by all the roads, and the officials of all the lines say the strike is unquestionably a failure. As the grass hands are being broken slowly the work in the different yards improves and inside of three or four days at most the outlook for the freight blockade being removed is decidedly promising. The Erie is no longer crippled. Superintendent Charles A. Brunn told a United Press reporter that his road has sent out thirteen full freight trains besides opening up the Black Rock and Suspension Bridge yards. No work was done at Suspension Bridge or Black Rock last night. Mr. Brunn declares that those yards are not sufficiently protected to work in them at night.

"Mr. Brunn," the United Press man asked, "do you think it safe for the troops to be removed as yet?"

"I do not; decidedly not. There are not enough here as it is. If the troops were sent back at this juncture acts of lawlessness would occur that would shock the people of this state. Even with the troops here there is trouble occurring every day and night. The attempt to wreck the Erie express train, with 250 passengers on board, was a dastardly piece of work. I am making an investigation now, and I am satisfied strikers were responsible for that work."

The Central no longer feels the strike, as far as its road is concerned. They have a full force of switchmen at work. The new eastern hands are turning out well, but those from the west are failures with few exceptions. Freight trains in the big East Buffalo yards are sent out regularly. The Black Rock and Niagara Falls yards are open too, while the Ohio street yards, where the grain trains are made up, are being cleared up rapidly. General Manager Voorhees, of the Central, said that the Lake Shore sent 420 cars to the Central. This is the most the Lake Shore has turned over since the strike began a week ago.

There is a marked improvement in the Lake Shore, West Shore, Nickel Plate and Lehigh yards. The new men are being broken in rapidly, and as they become acquainted with the track and switches their work improves, and most of the roads have resumed the night freight service. The Lake Shore, Nickel Plate and West Shore sent out a few trains last night. Troops were on top of every car and there was no molestation from the strikers.

The Troops Will Remain.

Some of the Buffalo newspapers have been jumping on General Porter and the sheriff to send the troops home, as they do not believe they are needed. General Porter will do nothing of the kind.

The sheriff said to a United Press reporter: "I am going to respectfully decline keeping the troops here until I am convinced there is no further use for them. I think now their presence is needed here and needed badly. While standing near Camp Dingens I saw a striker go up and break a freight train in two and pull a pin. He afterward hit a nonunion switchman on the head with a brick. This occurred right in the face of the sentinels and was one of the boldest pieces of work I have ever seen. I am going to do all in my power to keep the soldiers here as long as the strike lasts. This is positive."

Seven privates of the Seventh Separate company, of Cohoes, N. Y., slept in the penitentiary last night. They ran away from their camp and when they went back to their posts the Thirty-second company, of Hoosick Falls, were occupying the territory which was at Black Rock. The Thirty-second company arrested the Seventh company troops and they will probably be court martialed.

Sargent Going to Buffalo.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Aug. 22.—Grand Master Sargent has left here for Buffalo on telegraphic request from the local lodge of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen. He has been acquainted with the situation and not believe that his going is to be considered as meaning that a strike of firemen is likely. On the contrary, his presence there will tend to prevent a strike. The laws of the organization provide a detailed procedure before a strike can be ordered. The grand master does not believe in sympathetic strikes, and has repeatedly said that in all probability there would be no strike of firemen unless firemen were discharged for refusing to do switchmen's work.

COAL CREEK UNDER MARTIAL LAW.

General Carnes Has Taken Some 300 Prisoners, Who Will Resort to Habeas Corpus Proceedings—Twenty-Seven Miners Were Killed by the Troops.

COAL CREEK, Tenn., Aug. 22.—Bud Lindsay, deputy United States marshal, chief conspirator in the insurrection against law and order, the man who placed a pistol at the head of General Anderson and commanded him to surrender the fort after he had gone among the miners under a flag of truce, was hanged by the troops. Soldiers who were sent here to uphold the law and gallop in the lawless have themselves become the chief spirits in the work of wreaking vengeance in a lawless way.

There have been threats of lynching Lindsay ever since he was brought in a prisoner. He is known no have been the chief firebrand among the lawless miners. To his inflammatory speeches are due most of the scis of treason among the mountaineers who have waged war against the commonwealth of Tennessee.

When to Bud Lindsay's crimes was added that of treachery to brave General Anderson the soldiers demanded vengeance of summary sort. Lindsay's body dangling to a tree was the spectacle which they desired most to see. This spirit has been growing constantly, and it became overpowering, so Lindsay was taken from the little school house, in which he was confined with the other prisoners, and hanged.

Martial Law Practiced.

Military law, though not proclaimed, is practiced here today. While in the station of the sentinels there is no individual freedom. Men come and go by sufferance of the commanding officer and passes must be shown at every turn. Soldiers board the trains as they come into the station and subject each passenger to scrutiny. Arrests without a civil warrant are made as far away as Knoxville, the capital of the state. The bayonet is deemed process enough.

General Carnes has now nearly 300 prisoners confined under guard in the church at Coal Creek, having driven about thirty men, either miners or their allies. Last night it was feared that an attempt would be made to rescue the prisoners from the school house in which they were, so it was decided to transfer them to the village church. While this was being done a bridge over Coal creek gave way and captured and captors fell in a heap fully fifteen feet to the rocky bed of the creek, which had only a few inches of water in it. A few bruises covered the physical injuries and none of the prisoners escaped.

Guns and Pistols Hid Away.

The prisoners are a tough looking set of typical mountaineers, and whatever may be said of their cowardice, as shown in the bush whacking method of warfare, certainly they will not betray each other. General Carnes has ordered that every man not furnished with a pass. Several suspects were taken from the Knoxville train this morning.

They gave no satisfactory account of themselves, and were held prisoners. One of them was George E. Irish, the uncle of young Irish, who has caused so much trouble. When pressed closely with questions as to what he knew, he declared he would implicate no man if he was kept a prisoner for a thousand years.

The sullen spirit displayed by all. Doubtless many of the prisoners are innocent of participating in the riot, but nothing can induce them to identify a single man who was with the mob.

It is a singular fact that not a pistol or rifle has been found on any of the prisoners, although nearly all of them had cartridges in their pockets. Guns and pistols have been found very carefully secreted in hollow trees and caves, and there is little doubt that the whole gang has arms in the mountains ready for use if they gain their freedom. General Carnes, therefore, if judgment shall go against him in the courts, will probably declare martial law.

Twenty-seven Miners Dead.

Three more dead bodies of miners were found in the mountains. This makes in all the bodies of twenty-seven miners found since Thursday's skirmish. A number of wounded were carried away by their comrades.

Fifteen guns were captured in the mountains, and beside each was a miner's cap and lamp. General Carnes thinks the trouble is about over, but others believe the miners are playing a waiting game. The miners are gathering at Jellico and others are leaving the country.

Six hundred stands of rifles and 30,000 rounds of cartridges sent by the United States government arrived at Knoxville and will be forwarded to Coal Creek as they are needed.

Morton's battery of Nashville, with two guns, left last night for Coal Creek. They will be part of the regular garrison at Fort Anderson. No trouble is anticipated for some time at least, but the troops will remain at Coal Creek indefinitely.

Tomorrow the virtue of habeas corpus will be resorted to by the prisoners and the outcome is awaited with interest. To turn these 300 men loose would be a setback to the victory of General Carnes, and by removing the moral effect would encourage fresh lawlessness.

CANADIAN RETALIATION.

The President Brings the Canal Tolls Fight to a Climax.

HE REFUSES THE DOMINION'S OFFER

And Issues a Proclamation Partially Suspending Free Navigation of St. Mary's Falls Canal and Imposing a Toll of 26 Cents a Ton on Canadian Freight.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—By authority of President Harrison the state department has made public the important action taken by the president under the Canadian retaliation act of last session in partially suspending by proclamation the free navigation of the St. Mary's Falls canal and imposing a toll of twenty cents a ton upon all freight passing through that canal from Canadian ports. The president's proclamation, though constructively executed in Washington City, was signed at Loon Lake and forwarded here for promulgation.

Accompanying the proclamation is the correspondence on the subject which passed between the state department and Mr. Herbert, of the British legation. The correspondence shows that the president refused to accept the Canadian offer to abolish the rebate tolls at the end of the season [illegible] abolished at once. The [illegible] the provisions of the [illegible] passed July 26 last, entitled "An Act to Enforce Reciprocal Commercial Relations Between the United States and Canada and for Other Purposes," and continues as follows:

The Proclamation.

Whereas, The government of the Dominion of Canada imposes a toll amounting to about twenty cents per ton on freight passing through the Welland canal, and also a further toll on all vessels of the United States and on all passengers in transit to a port of the United States, all of which tolls are without rebate; and

Whereas, The government of the Dominion of Canada, in accordance with an order in council of April 4, 1892, refunds eighteen cents per ton or the twenty cent toll at the Welland canal on wheat, Indian corn, peas, barley, rye, oats, flaxseed and buckwheat, upon condition that they are originally shipped for and carried to Montreal or some port east of Montreal for export, and that, if transhipped at an intermediate port, such transhipment is made within the Dominion of Canada, but allows no such nor any other rebate on said products when shipped to a port of the United States, or when carried to Montreal for export, if transhipped within the United States; and

Whereas, The government of the Dominion of Canada, by said system of rebate and otherwise, discriminates against the citizens of the United States in the use of said Welland canal in violation of the provisions of Article 27 of the treaty of Washington, concluded May 8, 1871, said; and

Whereas, Said Welland canal is connected with the navigation of the great lakes, and I am satisfied that the passage through it of cargoes in transit to ports of the United States is made difficult and burdensome by said discriminating system of rebate and otherwise, and is reciprocally unjust and unreasonable;

Now, therefore, I, Benjamin Harrison, president of the United States of America, by virtue of the power to that end conferred upon me by said act of congress approved July 26, 1892, do hereby direct that from and after Sept. 1, 1892, until further notice, a toll of twenty cents per ton be levied, collected and paid on all freight of whatever kind or description passing through the St. Mary's Falls canal in transit to any port of the Dominion of Canada, whether carried in vessels of the United States or of other nations; and to that extent I do hereby suspend from and after said date the right of free passage through said St. Mary's Falls canal of any and all cargoes or portions of cargoes in transit to Canadian ports.

Canada Must Give In.

Included in the aftermath of the proclamation is a statement that this course has been under careful advisement since before the adjournment of congress. After the act of July 26, authorizing retaliation, had gone through both houses without opposition it was stated that the members of the foreign affairs committees who had reported the bill had done so at the personal request of the president. The information is now allowed to leak out that the precise shape which retaliation should take, so as to produce the most telling effect on Canadian commerce and precipitate a solution of the difficulty, was arrived at after repeated consultations with leading business men on our Canadian frontier, who were called into consultation by the state department from northern New York and other parts of the country so quietly that the fact of their presence here on this business is only now made known after their departure and the completion of the act.

It is said in administration circles that the ground was so carefully gone over beforehand that Canada is not left a leg to stand on, and must give in to the American demands and immediately revoke the order in council on April 4 last authorizing the discriminating rebate of eighteen cents a ton on grain products shipped to Canadian ports and refused to all American merchandise. Equality of tolls in the Welland canal was one of the distinct pledges made by Article 27 of the treaty of Washington of 1871, under which treaty Canada has profited so largely.

May Be Rebuked by Gladstone.

Another fact much commented on here is the humiliating position in which Governor General Lord Stanley and the Canadian ministers have placed the British legation in Washington. Mr. Herbert, the British charge of affairs, twice asked of the United States government an extension of time, stating that he did so at the request of the Canadian government, and on the last occasion—Aug. 8—holding out, on the same authority, a promise of satisfactory action.

Yet the first news of the decision of the Canadian government to continue the obnoxious rebate until the end of the navigation season—that is, until a period when retaliation would be harmless—came to the state department, not from the British legation, which had been led to promise early and satisfactory information, but from the United States consul in Ottawa.

When Mr. Herbert journeyed post haste from Newport to Washington, and was asked by Secretary Foster whether the information conveyed by the United States consul was correct, he was obliged to confess that the Canadian government had left him absolutely in the dark; that he had no official communication to make, although he did not question the truth of the consul general's dispatch. It is surmised that Mr. Gladstone's government and the new colonial secretary will not allow this apparently gross discourtesy on the part of the Canadian powers to the British representatives pass without a fitting rebuke.

TO PHOTOGRAPH ALL CHINAMEN.

Uncle Sam's Officials Have Evidently a Large Contract on Hand.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Commencing on Sept. 1, every Chinese in the United States, except the refinue of the diplomatic corps and a few recognized merchants, is required to make an application for a residence certificate to the nearest internal revenue collector, describing himself, his age and occupation, and proving his identity by presenting and filing three proof sheet photographs of his face.

His statement of facts are to be supported by the affidavits of two creditable witnesses, and upon approval of this application the collector is authorized to issue him a certificate entitling him to continue to reside in this country. Any Chinaman who fails to provide himself with such a certificate of residence between now and May 5 next is liable to deportation back to China.

There are 107,000 Chinese in the United States. Over 70,000 of these are in California and 9,000 in Oregon, and there the brunt of the enforcement of the exclusion act will fall. But there are nearly 3,000 in New York, over 1,100 in Massachusetts, besides 700 in Chicago and nearly 500 in St Louis.

The obligations of the law are discretionary with the Chinese. If they don't choose to get themselves photographed, and to make their applications within the time prescribed, the revenue officials have no power to compel them.

The only penalty is deportation, which falls under the domain of the attorney general and the secretary of the treasury. The anticipations of difficulty entertained by the internal revenue officials seem to be borne out by the fact that of the $100,000 appropriated in the sundry civil bill to carry out the law, only $30,000 has been allotted by the secretary of the treasury to the internal revenue bureau to provide the necessary deputies to execute the law, while $70,000 has been retained by the treasury department and the department of justice to meet the cost of deporting the recalcitrants.

Will Meet the Issue in Court.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Aug. 22.—The Perth Amboy Railroad company has decided to proceed with the building of its new four track elevated bridge across the Raritan river at this city according to their original plans, regardless of any disputes about the titles to land over which its tracks will run. All such questions it proposes to meet in the courts.

Buried Under Falling Walls.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 22.—While workmen were busy cleaning bricks from the ruins of a fire the roof and part of the walls fell, burying a Spaniard named Bresento, a twelve-year-old girl, a man named Brespo and a ten-year-old boy. Bresento was killed, the girl very badly injured and the boy was injured in his legs. Brespo escaped.

A Bank Wrecker Arrested.

ARMY OF THE CUMBERLAND.

The Survivors Will Have a Reunion at Chattanooga in September.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The preparations for the coming reunion of the Army of the Cumberland in Chattanooga on Sept. 15, 16 and 17 have brought out some information. There are 21,000 surviving officers and non-commissioned officers of the 230 regiments and batteries which served in that army. The names and postoffice addresses of the whole number have been secured and invitations to the reunion sent to each.

The list of officers and noncommissioned officers is accepted as showing that about 80,000 private soldiers who served in the army of the Cumberland, or about 100,000 in all, still survive.

The Chattanooga reunion will be one of the largest army gatherings of recent years. The brigade of General Wilder alone will have 1,200 of its former members in attendance to lay the cornerstone of its monument in the Chickamauga National park. General Grant, the acting secretary of war, has approved as the location of this monument a point fifty feet south of the widow Glenn's house, which was General Rosecrans' headquarters in the field. General Alger, the regular orator, being unexpectedly prevented from attending, the annual oration will be delivered by his alternate, General H. V. Boynton.

The G. A. R. Encampment.

BOSTON, Aug. 22.—In general order No. 10 John Palmer, commander-in-chief of the G. A. R., announces the details of the grand parade in Washington next September. General Palmer has decided that no other than Grand Army organizations will be permitted in line. The order also says:

"A political campaign badge has been placed on sale, an exact fac simile of the insignia of our order, except that the photograph of the candidate is inserted in the center. The commander-in-chief not only urges every comrade not to disgrace the order by placing this 'thing' upon his breast, but that he will appeal to every man who wears one to take it off, and not disgrace an insignia of loyalty which is dear to every Union soldier regardless of party."

SOME ODD STORIES.

INTERESTING INCIDENTS RELATED BY MAJOR A. R. CALHOUN.

Abraham Lincoln as a Criminal Lawyer. How He Cleared a Client Charged with a Murder That Was Never Committed. Circumstantial Evidence.

Abraham Lincoln was not anxious to shine as a criminal lawyer, though as he was in general practice he could not well refuse any case that offered.

Before a jury he was always powerfully effective, and though he did not appear to be strong as a cross examiner he usually succeeded in getting at the truth, even when the witness was most eager to hide it.

After his return from congress in 1848 Mr. Lincoln received a letter from the county jail. It was sent him by a man who was accused of having murdered a fellow workman on the preceding winter on the Illinois Central railroad.

The prisoner declared his innocence and said he was at present very poor, but that if Mr. Lincoln cleared him, as he was sure he could do, he would repay him in good time.

The best way to secure Mr. Lincoln's services was to appeal to his heart, and to that poverty and suffering never came in vain.

A few hours after getting the letter he went around to the jail, and the sheriff said as he conducted him to the cell of the condemned man:

"I've seen you do mighty big work with a jury, Mr. Lincoln, but this job is too heavy for you."

"How do you know?" asked Mr. Lincoln.

"Because the man is guilty."

"How do you know that?"

"Well, because," stammered the sheriff. "But because is not a reason."

"I know, but"——

"But what?"

"This fellow Tompkins, the murderer you've come to see, was found with the dead man's clothes on."

"But have they found the dead man?" asked Mr. Lincoln.

"Yes."

"Where?"

"The bones were found under the cabin where the two lived last winter at the time of the murder."

"And that is all?"

"Well, sir, I think that's enough; don't you?"

"Well," drawled Mr. Lincoln, "it may be too much, it may be enough, and then again it may be nothing."

He went to the cell of the accused and found him to be a young man with whose father he had often played when they were boys in the early settlement of that part of Illinois.

Mr. Lincoln shook hands with the prisoner, sat down on the iron bed and said:

"Now, Tompkins, I'll defend you on one condition."

"What is that, sir?" asked the prisoner.

"That you tell me the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

"That's what I mean to do, sir."

"Well, are you guilty?"

"As God is my judge, I am not."

"Glad to hear that. Now tell me your whole story and I will help you back."

Tompkins, with every appearance of truth, told his story, which was as follows:

He and Samuel Phipps, an old friend, had a contract to do some work on the line of the proposed road, and that they might do so economically they built a cabin, which they occupied in common and took turns in cooking.

Against the wish of Tompkins, Phipps persisted in fetching whisky to the cabin, and for days he would lie in the bed drunk and unable to work or to take care of the place.

This kind of a partnership was too one sided to suit the sober and laborious Tompkins, so after a time he quarreled with Phipps while the latter was drunk. A fight ensued, and Phipps was thrashed, shall put upon the stand for a minute only." He then called out:

"Samuel Phipps!"

And to the amazement of the court the "murdered" man turned down his collar and came forward.

A Rich Man's Library.

Mr. Jacob Quigg, or Jake Quigg, as he was called before he made a fortune in laundry soap, recently built a fine mansion near Prospect park, in the city of Brooklyn. What the gentleman and his wife and daughters, who aided in the supervision of the structure, lacked in taste they made up for in ostentation. On one thing all were determined, and that was to outstrive their neighbors if it lay in the power of money.

It was not till the house was built and furnished that Mr. Quigg and his wife bethought them that the gorgeous room known as "the library" had no books in it, and still relying on their dollars they determined to remedy the defect forthwith.

The next morning they stopped into a Fulton avenue book store and asked to see the proprietor.

The proprietor presented himself, all bows and smiles, and asked what he could do for his visitors.

"Well," said Mr. Quigg, with his eyes riveted on the books with the most gorgeous bindings, "I've got a fine library fixed up, up to my house, but there appears to be one thing still wanting."

"Indeed? May I ask what that is?" said the proprietor.

"Books," replied Mr. Quigg.

"Ah, yes; books are very essential to a library."

"Yes, me and my wife—this is my wife—Mrs. Quigg, allowed that books was needed, and as it'll take a pile to fill the shelves, why we thought we'd stop in and see what you'd furnish the lot for."

"Certainly, Mr. Quigg. I am quite sure we can accommodate you, and if we have no books in stock that you want, we can order them. Now, what books do you still need?"

"We need a lot with blue and gold and red and gold, and all them kind of backs," broke in Mrs. Quigg.

"We have all the authors in all kinds of bindings. But perhaps we could judge better if you could let me know what authors you have already on hand," said the proprietor, with more than a perfunctory smile.

"We ain't got none, 'cept the Bible and the gal's schoolbooks," said Mrs. Quigg.

"Then you will want the foreign and homespun poets?"

"Oh! yes; stick 'em all in if they've got good, shiny bindings," said Mr. Quigg.

"And the novels?" pursued the proprietor.

"Yes; let us have a caseful of them too."

"May I ask if you have any favorites, Mr. Quigg?"

"In what?"

"In authors—in novel writers."

"No, I don't think I have," said Mr. Quigg, with prompt impartiality.

"Oh, yes, we has, Jake," interrupted Mrs. Quigg. "Don't you remember, just afore we left the house, Sue she told us not to forget Sir Waverley's novels; and I remember, now, I've heard 'em praised a good deal myself."

A Sensible Legislator.

George Peabody, the great philanthropist, did not forget the state of Maine when he died. It will be remembered the body was brought to his native America, and every state legislature then in session passed fitting resolutions of regard and sympathy.

The Maine legislature was in session at this time, and one of the members arose in his place and said, "Mr. Speaker, as an evidence of our esteem for the noble character of that great New Englander, George Peabody, Esq., late of London, England, I do move you, sir, that the members of this house do attend the funeral in a body."

The motion was then seconded, and it would have passed at once had not a watchdog of the state treasury got up on his hind legs and protested that he would not vote for the motion until it was decided how the expenses of the members who attended the funeral were to be met.

Here a long wrangle ensued. Some declared that the state should pay the necessary bills, as a matter of course, but there were potato paters of a different way of thinking.

At length an old member from the backwoods got up and shouted with all the force he could summon:

"Mr. Speaker, I am disgusted with the conduct of this house. This funeral at Portland is going to be the biggest kind of a thing. But when I see this house a-sweatering and a-sweating, as if it didn't know its own mind, I swar I most wish Mr. Peabody hadn't died!"

Natural and Artificial.

I recently attended a recitation before a class in literature in one of the best known colleges in New England. I would gladly use the name of the professor in question if I had his consent, nor would it sound strange in any village in America, or for the matter of that in the Old World.

In the course of the recitation the professor said, "Young gentlemen, in your writing and talking I desire you to be perfectly natural and to avoid the artificial."

"But how are we to distinguish between the two?" asked one of the students.

Without a moment's hesitation, the professor said:

"Here is a line from an ancient ballad:

"The sun shines fair on Carlisle wall.

"It might be said there is not much poetry in that, and perhaps there is not. The artificial school, however, would render it in this fashion:

"The glorious orb, which Phœbus rolls on high, Shines with transcendent luster in the sky; The fast approaching evening sunbeams fall, Oh, stately Carlisle! on thine ancient wall.

"You can judge for yourselves, young gentlemen, but as I have no love for sonorous, grandiloquent sound, I must confess I prefer the original."

That the "young gentlemen" were of the same way of thinking was evident from the "applause and laughter" that followed this clearly extemporized illustration.

A Stirring Subject.

Clergyman—We have an excellent rule in our church, Brother Jones.

Brother Jones—What is that?

Clergyman—Whenever a man goes to sleep during the sermon the sexton goes around and stirs him.

Brother Jones—Very good; but I'll tell you a better rule.

Clergyman—What is it?

Brother Jones—It would be for the sexton to stir you up whenever a man goes to sleep under your preaching.

ALFRED H. CALHOUN.

The Age of Weeping.

A girl will cry with a loud bawling joke until she is ten years old, when she begins to cultivate the art of weeping.—Atchison Globe.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Almond meal is very softening and whitening to the skin.

To clean brass fixtures, rub them with slices of lemon, then wash in hot water.

Cayenne pepper is highly recommended for driving away ants. It should be sprinkled around their haunts.

To keep flies away from gilt frames, boil four or five onions in a pint of water and put it on with a soft brush.

Wash white flannels in cold water with suds made of white soap, and they will not shrink much nor look yellow.

To prevent colored stockings from fading put a tablespoonful of black pepper into the water in which they are rinsed.

By rubbing with a flannel dipped in whiting the brown discolorations may be taken off cups which have been used in baking.

For chafing, try fuller's earth pulverized; moisten the surface first when applying it. Oxide of zinc ointment is also excellent.

Design for Embroidery.

Here is a very neat design of wild roses suitable for decorating a mantel lambrequin, table scarf, sofa rug, or pincushion, to be worked with velvet, or plush, painted with oil colors, or on satin with water colors. The petals of the roses should be a delicate rose pink, the leaves of shaded green, and the stems of two shades of brown. This design would look well embroidered in crewels or floss.

THE OAK CHEST.

A Relic of Primitive Luxury Much in Demand Nowadays.

Everyone who pretends to have a little taste nowadays lays out some money in buying a genuine old oak chest—that is to say, an oak chest which he believes to be genuine—and the blacker it is the more confident does he feel that he is the possessor of a genuine article, says a writer in the Cornhill Magazine. If, moreover, there be a date on the chest, then his confidence is complete. The dealers know exactly what he wants, and they manufacture dates and blacken the chests they make to meet his demands. It is no fraud to date the chests, but a buyer has no reason to complain if he gets a copy of a good antique. He has but to take his penknife and try the wood, and he can easily convince himself whether the article be new or old. Two hundred years passing over an old chest or old cabinet harden the oak till the tools in use now will make no impression on it, whereas that of the modern antique is fresh and soft, and when a chip is removed the dye is enough to cover them. Cook for twenty minutes, then drop them into cold water for five minutes. When perfectly cold, put them into small cakes and season them, using for each pint of sweetbreads one teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of pepper, one tablespoonful of oil and two tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Put away in a cold place for several hours. At serving time, mix with four tablespoonfuls of mayonnaise dressing. Have the heart leaves of lettuce washed and made crisp in ice water. Arrange them on a flat dish, having three in a bunch, and sprinkle a little chopped tarragon in each bunch, if you can get tarragon. Put a tablespoonful of the prepared sweetbreads in each bunch of the lettuce, and stick a tiny sprig of parsley in the center of each one. Serve at once.—Maria Parloa, in Good Housekeeping.

Home-Made Bed Cushion.

In the case of bed sores, there is nothing that is better in the place of the circular—or annular—rubber air cushion. But these are always high-priced, and a friend of the Stockman furnishes directions for making a cheap substitute of much value. "Take old fine muslin, cut out by a large pan so as to have it round, cut two of these; now take a saucer and cut a hole about the size of the saucer or smaller if the sore is small. Sew inside circle and a short distance outside seam, as you cannot stuff if all sewed at once. Stuff with cotton batting until even and firm all around the circle. Dust the sore with bismuth powder, place the sore in the center of the cushion, and you will soon have the patient say, 'what a wonderful relief.'"

To Whiten the Face.

Do you know anybody who is freckled, or are you a bit freckled yourself by the sun or wind? Try this simple recipe, which is said to remove the worst cases: Sal ammoniac, two drams; German cologne, one dram, and distilled water, one pint. Apply two or three times a day.

A very good simple face tonic for this warm weather is ten drops of benzoin to one of rose water. Put a few drops into the bath or bowl before bathing the face. It will both soften and whiten the skin.

A New Way to Prepare Tea.

There are two ways of preparing tea in Cashmere. The first is to put the tea in a pot with cold water and boil it for half an hour, when more cold water is added, after which it is boiled for another half hour. Milk is then added and it is ready for drinking. The second is to place the tea in a pot with a little soda and water, and boil it for half an hour as before. Milk, salt and butter are then added, after which it is boiled for another half hour, when it is ready.

He Had Learned Something.

Old Hownow—So you're through college?

Young Smilax—Yes.

Hownow—Well, what are you going to do?

Smilax—Well, I hardly know. I've had two offers—one to go into a lawyer's office for two years at three dollars a week, and the other to play halfback for a football team at $1,500 for the season.—Boston Globe.

Waiting for a Bicycle.

"Why don't you ride a bicycle?" asked a young lady who was talking about needing exercise.

"If I had started in some years ago it would have been all right, but I can't do it now that everybody else does it. I am waiting for something new to turn up and then I will get in early."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Time for Rest.

Tailor—Your account, sir, has been running a long time, Mr. Jinks.

Jinks—Exactly; it must be fatigued. Let it stand still for a few months.—Judy.

Very Deep.

"Has Mastalino a very deep voice?"

"Very. Why, when that man sings it hurts his corns."—Tit-Bits.

BREVITIES.

—The trial of Sigmund Frucht for Sunday selling, which was to have been held this morning, was postponed for one week.

—The excursion of the Warren Union Mission to Asbury Park to-morrow will leave the depot at eight o'clock. It is the last excursion of the season.

—"They're after me! they're after me!" cried one of our citizens the other day as he hastened down the street. "Who?" was the inquiry. "Why, my coat tails, stupid," was the derisive response.

—A bicycler was arrested last evening for riding on the sidewalk near Grant avenue. He appeared before Judge Codington this morning and after a severe reprimand was allowed to depart.

—The C. R. R. of N. J., have hired the old ferryboat Moonachie, which has for the last twenty years been plying between Barclay street and Hoboken, to carry C. R. R., passengers until their ferryboats can be repaired, several of them being out of order.

—Three witnesses against and three witnesses for, made such a tie, that Edward Wilson of Plainfield avenue, charged by Mrs. Nestor of Pearl street with using indecent language was released by Justice Crossley, before whom the case was tried last night.

—The County Board of Registration for Union county met yesterday and received from the Chairmen of the Democratic and Republican County committees a list of names of those they wanted appointed election officers. The board confirmed all the selections without making any changes.

—The word typhus—literally smoke—refers to the heavy stupor that characterizes this fever. Formerly the name was used to include also what is now known as typhoid, which was then regarded as only a milder form of typhus. The two diseases are wholly distinct, notwithstanding some resemblance in certain of the symptoms.

—Ex-Judge F. S. Holcombe, of Mount Airy, has a curiosity in the shape of a smooth-bore rifle, which he says is two hundred years old, and is yet in good condition. The judge also has a peashooter and a pitchfork which are curiosities, and are supposed to be over one hundred years old. He contemplates exhibiting these old relics at the Historical Society at its next meeting.

—William Marsh, whose sobriquet is "Black Bill," a colored young man of exceedingly dark skin, was arrested last night by Marshal Pangborn for indecent exposure. He was taken before Justice Crossley, to whom he pleaded guilty, and was given the choice of paying $3 fine or be committed for five days. Unable to pay the fine last night he languished in the lock-up until this morning, when he paid the amount and was released.

—People who rub their arms or legs for rheumatism should remember that the secret of the benefit derived from massage is that the operator always rubs up, that is in the direction of the heart. The reason is found in the fact that the valves of the veins and capillaries all open toward the heart, and by rubbing in that direction the action of these vessels is assisted, the vessels themselves enlarged and circulation is more fully promoted. Rubbing down, that is, away from the heart does harm, for it clogs the veins and capillaries by impeding the circulation, without in the least assisting the action of the arteries, which lie too deep to be affected by external friction, even if it could do them any good.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

—Observing people, says an exchange, may wonder why physicians begin their prescriptions with the letter R. During the middle ages, when astrology was in fashion, a character very much like our R was the sign of Jupiter, the preserver of health. The physicians of that time equally devoted to the science of medicine and astrology, invariably began their prescriptions with the following words: "In the name of Jupiter take the following dose in the order set down hereunder." In this connection at this time the formula was abbreviated, until at last not only the letter R remains to teach us that the physician was once associated with the science of the stars.

—A novel method of betting is here given. It may prove of use to Plainfielders this year. Two Englishmen, one from New York and the other from Atlanta Ga., were talking politics in front of the desk at the Lafayette last night when a decidedly novel election bet was made. Said the Southerner: "I will bet you ten dollars to a hundred that I will be our next President." "I'll take that," replied the Harrison supporter, but why not make it a hundred?" The Atlantan then replied that he would be perfectly willing to do so, but did not have the ready money. "In that event," said the New Yorker, "let's make a progressive bet. We will each deposit ten dollars with the clerk here and forward an additional five dollars to him every week until time for election, the winner will take the pot." The obliging clerk consented to act as stakeholder, the necessary papers were drawn up and signed, and the first instalment paid in. One of the conditions of the bet was that if either failed to send the weekly deposit he would forfeit to the other man. Both were satisfied and each confident that he had a walkover.—Philadelphia Record.

Mr. George Mahon of the Plainfield Bicycle Club last night attended a meeting at Elizabeth of the committee having charge of the proposed athletic carnival to be held on Labor Day for the benefit of the Elizabeth Hospital.

The engagement is announced of S. J. Moore of Poughkeepsie and Miss Mamie E. Bradshaw of West Fifth street, a charming young niece of chief engineer T. O. Doane. The groom is building a home for his affianced, at Poughkeepsie.

Base Ball Notes.—To-Morrow's Game.

The batting order of the Morristown Base Ball team in the game with the same club on the North Plainfield grounds to-morrow will be as follows: Sutter, c. f.; Peckman, 2 b.; Heifer, 1 b.; Wood, l. f.; Fritz, c.; Cannaugh, s. s.; Yahn, 3 b.; Lowe, r. f.; Hetzel, p.

Morristown will send a large delegation of cranks to the game. They claim they are going to take home the scalps of the "champions of Central New Jersey."

The Crescents will need to hustle to-morrow. They only defeated the Morristown team by the narrow margin of three to one at the last game, and the latter are determined to wipe out that defeat.

Ladies will be admitted free to the game and the management hopes they will turn out in force to cheer the boys on to victory.

By special request of the Morristown team, in order to permit them to catch the 5 56 train, the game will be called at 3.45 instead of the usual hour, four o'clock.

A Bicycle Thief Returns a Stolen Wheel.

Sunday a child's bicycle was stolen from the porch in front of the residence of Mr. Lock of 13 Prospect place.

Marshal Pangborn was notified and also informed that some colored boys living a short distance away had tried to take the wheel a few days before.

Last night the marshal took a walk through the suspected neighborhood and as he approached one house, the door was slammed shut and locked. The marshal, suspecting that the action betokened a guilty conscience, would have searched the house then and there, but the stolen wheel was returned by the thief's mother, who secured the forgiveness of the person from whom the bicycle was stolen.

CHAUTAUQUA WORKERS.

Plainfielders Who Are Prominent.

The great intellectual work of the Chautauqua is the subject of a long article in a recent issue of the New York Tribune. It makes special mention as follows of two persons well known to Plainfielders:

Miss E. P. KIMBALL.

The executive secretary of all the work is Miss Kate F. Kimball, formerly of Plainfield, N. J., and now in charge of the office of the C. L. S. C at Buffalo. With unaffected simplicity, Miss Kimball combines great executive power and tireless energy. No detail escapes her attention, and in addressing audiences such as assemble at Chautauqua and other Summer assemblies, she is entirely at ease. In the office at Buffalo Miss Kimball directs a working force of twenty assistants and handles a correspondence of 50,000 letters annually. Her familiar knowledge of the C. L. S. C. includes the beginning and all the development and history of this great educational movement, for she has been associated with Dr. Vincent since 1878, when the first class was formed. Miss Kimball is herself a "pioneer" of '82 and proudly wears a hatchet, the badge of the class.

DR. JESSE L. HURLBUT.

The principal of the Chautauqua Scientific and Literary Circle is Dr. Jesse L. Hurlbut, who continues to live at Plainfield, N. J., where in the early history of the movement Bishop J. H. Vincent and Miss Kimball also lived. Dr. Hurlbut has been connected with Chautauqua almost from the first, and has been prominent in the circle since 1885. During June and July of this year he delivered 144 addresses in a dozen different States, besides conducting Chautauqua assemblies at Ottawa and Framingham. Dr. Hurlbut is corresponding secretary of the Sunday-school and Tract Society in the Methodist Episcopal church, and one of the founders of the normal class in Bible study at Chautauqua. He left Chautauqua three days ago to join Bishop Vincent in a tour of the Methodist Episcopal Conference of the Pacific coast. Foremost and ablest who personal influence and work which has built up Chautauqua, is the guiding spirit of the originators and directors of this great educational plan. Chancellor John H. Vincent and President Lewis Miller, by their individual and united labors, manifest unfailing sympathy and profound appreciation of the needs of the people and the times, have established an institution which is steadily strengthening and enlarging with each year. A Chautauquan with less than the average enthusiasm would grow eloquent with affection for the chancellor and the president.

When Women Voted.

The declaration of the Prohibitionists in favor of woman suffrage recalls some incidents of the history of the State at a time when women were allowed to vote. Under the revolutionary constitution all the inhabitants of the State who were worth $200 were allowed to vote, and that included women and negroes as well as white males. The matter stood that way until 1807, when there was an exciting election in Essex county for the selection of a county seat, and the women of Elizabethtown and Newark, the two rival places for the honor in what was then the county of Essex, turned out en masse to vote for their favorite. Hudson county methods were employed, and some even of the women boasted that they had voted under different names—half a dozen times. The frauds at the polls, which, by the way, were kept open for two or three days, were so great that the Legislature not only set the election aside, but framed a new election law that left the women out of it entirely. After the manner of the modern practical politician the women resented this action on the law as constitutional, and in many parts of the State, where they seemed to have control of the election machinery they continued to exercise the franchise in defiance of it. In Cumberland county as late as 1807 it was claimed that the fraudulent vote of a negress in Hunterdon county had elected a member of Assembly and changed the entire complexion of that legislative body. The "dear creature" seems to have been the tipster for the modern school of politicians.

The Latest About Cameras.

The methods of concealing cameras are numerous. A familiar way is to cover the camera with brown paper, tie a string around it and carry it with an ordinary parcel handle or a leather strap. The instrument is then fully prepared and is thoroughly disguised. At the moment of making the exposure the front quickly falls down, exposes the lens, and allows the shutter to operate. It is then closed up and looks as natural as ever. Still another is a walking cane, which has a head ranged that the films or plates, about 1½ inches square, are strung on an open, endless wire chain passing down through the cane nearly to the bottom, then up to the top. They are exposed rapidly behind a small lens inserted in the outer end of the ½ handle, and are readily transferred after each exposure. The contrivance for carrying the plates resembles an endless steam hod carrier.

For years we have lost by error and are accustomed to wear glass eyes as substitutes it is said a special miniature camera has been provised to be inserted in the eye occupying the same space as the glass eye. The sheet release proJects downward, to come opposite the under side of the lower eyelid. To make an exposure, the finger is pressed slightly against the under eyelid.

THE SWINDLER ALMOST HAD IT.

A Poughkeepsie Lawyer's Penstroke Saved Him $250.

A Poughkeepsie, N. Y., lawyer is congratulating himself yet over his recent narrow escape from being swindled out of $250 by the same trick as was successfully worked on Lawyer Coddington here, and it is believed it was the same swindler.

A stylishly attired man, a fluent conversationalist, entered the Poughkeepsie lawyer's office, and, after announcing that he was from a well-known and highly rated firm, proceeded to secure the lawyer's services, and, as a clincher, to pay the lawyer a retainer, and that gentleman send a check for $250, which the swindler had in his pocket, to the bank to be cashed.

The bank returned it with a note that the check would be paid if the lawyer endorsed it.

This seemed quite correct, so the lawyer endorsed it.

As he penned the last letter of his name on the back of the check, a thought, which he has since blessed, struck him, and he drew his pen through the signature just made and passed it back to the man opposite, with the remark, "Never mind this. Your firm is all right. You can mail me the retainer."

The swindler of course could do nothing but acquiesce as gracefully as possible and retire.

As might be expected the lawyer got no "retainer."

SOMERBY'S METHODS.

A Rather Queer Financial Statement and Some Expensive Lobbying.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 23.—At the Iron hall investigation in court a letter written by Supreme Accountant Somerby to Supreme Accountant Walker related how the chief executive of the order had gone to Maine to work with the legislature. "It is expensive business," the letter stated, "but it pays in the long run." The letter also stated that the supreme officer had "fixed" the New Hampshire body of legislators.

Supreme Accountant Walker testified that Somerby had drawn over $30,000 for "legal and legislative" expenses in the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, Delaware, Pennsylvania and Nebraska.

Over $10,000 was used in the New England states to procure the passage of favorable legislation and to prevent the passage of unsatisfactory laws.

A rather queer financial statement, purporting to be a showing of the order's condition July 21, 1892, was put in evidence. It had been printed, but had been withdrawn before the printed sheets were in a hundred copies had been stricken off. Totals were so arranged that it could not be well analyzed. Walker admitted that the statement was false one, and said that it had been withdrawn to be revised by Somerby.

Supreme Cashier Davis produced checks evidencing the gift of $200,000 to the Philadelphia fund and his testimony went to show that Somerby had urged the deal. He disclaimed any thought that it was a gift until Somerby stated so in the supreme sitting a few days ago.

STATE NEWS

BOOMING FOR ZINC.

The New Jersey Zinc and Iron Company is boring for a vein of pure zinc known to exist at a depth of 1,100 feet, at Franklin Furnace, struck a vein of water at a depth of about 360 feet, which has flooded the shaft. Five workmen barely escaped, the water rushing in at the rate of 600 gallons per minute. More powerful pumps have been ordered, but the suspension of work and delay will subject the company to great expense.—Sussex Register.

While a number of young men were bathing in the river at Sayreville, N. J., last week, one of them, Christian Causey, in diving struck his head against a stone. He suffered only a few moments from the accident, and was then able to dress and walk home, but to-day he suffered from severe pains in the head, and after a few hours died in great agony.

Odds and Ends.

A GATE 250 FEET WIDE.

A beautiful marble palace, much resembling the White House at Washington in its architectural style, which when completed, be the summer home of W. K. Vanderwilt as family at Newport. The house has been three years in building, and the most eminent architects in its plan and ornamentation has been observed. The interior is of Numidian marble and Mexican onyx. The magnificent entrance gates, modelled after the entrance of the palace of Versailles, but far surpassing them in magnificence, are 250 feet wide and 16 feet high.

A CENT ADVANTAGEOUSLY INVESTED.

Miss A. J. Aderson, matron of the Door of Hope, a charitable institution for girls, found a cent in the street one day, since the Door of Hope was contemplating buying a cemetery lot in which to bury the dead girls, while in the cars, and Miss Anderson declared that she would consecrate the cent to this cause. She bought a lottery ticket with it, and that was hatched from it for $1. The dollar was invested in silk, ribbon, cardboard and paper articles. Out of the cardboard were cut scripture texts, and the silk was crocheted into little purses, which, with strips of satin sash ribbon, made a good photograph holder. The fancy articles were sold at good profit. Now Miss Anderson has nearly $13, and she hopes to have at the expiration of the year enough money to pay for the entire piece in the cemetery lot, which has been purchased.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

A Railroad Passenger Blinded.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Aug. 23.—(Special.)—As a train on the New Jersey & New York Railroad, due at Jersey City at nine o'clock this morning, was passing through this place some one threw a stone through a car window. The broken glass severely cut one of the passengers about the right eye. The sight was almost destroyed. The train was stopped and one of the company's detectives who happened to be on board, got off to make a search for the person who threw the stone.

The River's Channel Changed.

TUMA, Ari., Aug. 23, (Special.)—Colorado River is falling slowly, but is still 13 inches above the average for the last twelve years.

The great cr-vasse which cut through the west bank last year twenty miles below here is growing wider and deeper. The great bend in which it is situated has also cut in more than two miles further to the west in the last two months, which throws more than four-fifths of the water into the new river.

An Actor Commits Suicide.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23. (Special.)—A great sensation was created in theatrical circles in this city to-day by the news that the well-known comedian, W. S. Daboll, who used to convulse New York audiences with laughter by his excellent rendition of the grandiloquent scoundrel Ragvenne in "Erminie," had committed suicide yesterday afternoon at the home of his father-in-law, G. W. Slocum, in Hollister, Mass.

Buffalo Firemen Want to Strike.

BUFFALO, Aug. 23. (Special.)—There appears to be a strong inclination on the part of the local firemen to go out on strike in order to help the switchmen.

Grand Master Sargent was kept busy this morning receiving calls from the local firemen, nearly all of whom, it is understood, urged him to order a strike.

A Striker Shot.

BUFFALO, Aug. 23, (Special.)—Between 12.30 and one o'clock this morning a striker was shot by a soldier stationed at the Hamburg street crossing of the Lehigh Valley.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Give satan his due. The Fifty-second congress, whose long session has just closed, is on the whole a sober, decent body.

Some Colorado steers, frenzied for want of water, lately ran amuck on their way to the slaughter houses in Brooklyn and gored two little boys and smashed a plate glass store window before they could be lassoed. Where is that law requiring that beeves in transit shall be regularly and sufficiently fed and watered? Nice beef that will be for some citizen to eat, won't it?

You cannot change the human race, say the apologists for the political spoils system and for all the other wrong and inhumane that gather about mankind. But the human race does change, and change constantly. It is exactly what does change, else man would now be a naked, glaring, murdering savage, devouring raw meat and tearing it with his teeth and nails, and killing every other of his brother savages who sought to take it away from him, if he was the stronger, or being killed if he was the weaker. That the majority of civilized mankind are fairly honest, decent and humane to one another, instead of each one regarding every other as his natural enemy, is owing to the fact that human nature has changed steadily for the better in the course of some millions of years. But there is still room for improvement, and a good deal of it. Reformers who seek to improve the human race by working on its finer, better feelings, need not despair, however. It is the only way.

Americans in British Politics.

The American edition of The Review of Reviews pays its respects to several Americans who have figured in politics in Great Britain both during the recent campaign and before. The Review does not find that they covered themselves with glory, and is of opinion that they might be in better business than meddling with English politics, especially in the particular way in which they have chosen to exploit themselves.

Of certain of our former citizens now in England the editor of The Review observes:

> The curious fiasco of Mr. Henry M. Stanley's attempt to get into parliament as a Conservative aims from a London constituency was one of the sensations of the campaign. Mr. Stanley will have small sympathy on the side of the water. With Henry M. Stanley posing as an enemy of Irish home rule, with William Henry Hurlbert's notorious misrepresentations of the Irish question in the interest of Tory landlords, with George Washington Smalley serving perennially at Mr. Gladstone in the New York Tribune and with Harold Frederic playing the part of facile journalistic tool for the desperate scheme to rehabilitate Sir Charles Dilke we have a very sorry quartet of American meddlers in the British realm, and it is scant credit they do to the opinions and convictions of the republic that they so egregiously misrepresent. Their performances are a source of mortification to the mass of right thinking Americans.

A Scientific Spiritualist.

"He held the cranks down," was said of the late Colonel John C. Bundy, editor of The Religio-Philosophical Journal, of Chicago. With equal truth it might be said that he held the frauds down as well. He was unalterable in his conviction of the reality of communication between spirits in and out of the flesh, but no man ever pursued fraudulent "mediums" and manifestations more mercilessly than he. He held that the cause of spiritualism could in no way be better served than by unearthing the frauds and tricksters that have so gathered about it as at times to well nigh disgust all decent people with its pretensions.

No materialistic scientist, no strict orthodox priest or preacher ever more zealously hunted to the earth the frauds practiced on the public in the name of spiritualism than John C. Bundy did. He was, moreover, one of the clearest headed, coolest, most intelligent men of his time, with a brain packed full of shrewdness and common sense. Yet he held that after a thorough sifting and exposure of all the tricks and cheating, whereby unprincipled professional mediums make a living off a public that dearly loves to be gulled, there still remains undoubted evidence of communication between departed spirits and those in the flesh. He certainly had a right to believe so if he chose.

To the scientific establishing of his faith and to psychic research generally he devoted his life and his paper. His unquestioned sincerity and his trained power of scientific reasoning fitted him peculiarly for the task he had undertaken, and his death must therefore be a great loss to psychic research in America. The increasing number of authenticated facts in hypnotism, clairvoyance, thought transference, as well as the remarkable cures of disease by no known medical means, show there is a wonderful field opening before the investigator of mental science. Whether one goes in for spiritualism or not he must regret the death of a man whose journal was devoted to the examination of such psychological facts. Colonel Bundy was president of the council which was organizing a world's psychic congress, to meet during the fair at Chicago.

It is pleasant to recall that Colonel Bundy was a man of pure and gentle life, devoted to his family, and an admirable member of society in every respect. Of him it may be said that he believed in spiritualism and hated humbug.

LABOR CHIEFS TO MEET

A Conference Brimful of Import to the Switchmen.

IT WILL KILL OR HELP THE STRIKE

Unless the Affiliated Organizations Decide to Stop Work the Present Struggle Is Virtually Over—More Switchers Go Out Rather Than Handle Tabooed Freight.

BUFFALO, Aug. 23.—This is the eleventh day of the switchmen's strike, and although the refusal of the Western New York and Pennsylvania men to handle freight received from the Central was emphasized by sixty-five men quitting work, it is not believed much increased vitality is shown by this action. Even enough, the official ending may be delayed just another forty-eight hours, for no one expects Grand Master Sweeney to make an official declaration of failure until after the conference of the chiefs of the leading orders, which will be held as soon as they can get together. The switchmen's efforts has been a failure for several days and is so regarded in the conservative judgment of impartial observers.

Grand Master Sargent, of the locomotive firemen, did not attend any meeting last night, although a regular meeting of firemen was held. It is understood on good authority that Mr. Sargent does not appear inclined to call out his men, and declares that if they should go out telegraphers, engineers, trainmen and others will go out.

There is an interesting report in circulation to the effect that the firemen at their meeting drew up a set of grievances which they will present to the railroads, and that if they do not get their demands they will strike. Mr. Sargent will neither admit nor deny the truth of the report.

"To be or not to be" a general strike of all the allied organizations of railroad employees is, therefore, the one and only conundrum yet to be solved, and if a negative decision is reached the strike of 1892 will vanish from view as a factor of interest to the general public of the country.

Beyond the daily instances of malicious annoyance to which the men now busy moving trains have been subjected since operations were resumed under protection, the railroads are doing a fairly normal amount of traffic. At least they are doing as much as they can probably accomplish with the many men green to the yards and not of the greatest experience, even when judged by the class usually employed.

The Military Situation.

In the military situation there is not likely to be any material change before Wednesday, for in spite of the talk of sending troops away there still seems to be plenty of picket duty to be performed in protecting the supposed exposed points on the more than 600 miles of tracks within the city limits, to say nothing of the coal trestle of the Lehigh and Western, also in Cheektowaga, two or three miles beyond the eastern limits.

The aggregate strength of the commands as shown by the usual morning reports today is 6,882 men, divided among eight regiments, the Albany battalion, thirty-one separate companies, cavalry troops, the fifth battery and the Fisk Washington signal corps. The gathering of so large a part of the state's forces at this point has called forth exaggerations that a corps of the men as a whole would be of value before they are sent home.

While this would probably be as pleasing to Adjutant General Porter as to any one, the exigencies of the case will hardly permit. He says frankly he would like to arrange such a parade for its moral effect, for while the figures convey a certain idea of the force, the distribution of the organization is such that they are actually lost in the vast expanse of territory gridironed with tracks. Desirable as it is to do this, it is safe to say no general parade will be ordered.

Unless sooner ordered by Governor Flower, it is certain that as soon as he thinks they can be spared General Porter will send the men home in detachments, for he knows the inconvenience and loss that each member of the guard is sustaining in being absent from home and business under conditions like the present call.

A General Strike Not Probable.

The homeward move may be expected as soon as the conference now on the tapis is concluded, unless it should happen that a general strike is ordered. Such a conclusion seems illogical, however, from the very character of the leaders who are expected to consider the interests of the men.

Grand Master Sweeney, of the switchmen, will not think it a pleasant thing to order switchmen out at other points without he is sure of the support of the other organizations.

Grand Master Sargent, who has been interviewed to death since his arrival from Terre Haute, has nothing to say in any shape that will foreshadow the probable action of the firemen. He says there are 1,200 members of his order in this vicinity, and disclaims anything like secrecy when a conclusion is reached. Hence, beyond a complimentary expression of confidence in Grand Master Sweeney, he seems to give the latter little encouragement of ultimate help.

Even should Sargent and Sweeney act together, it is safe to assume that Grand Chief Arthur, of the engineers, and Grand Master Clark, of the conductors, will both be against action that will involve their respective bodies in any position other than that of conservatives, for which their record is proven.

Hence, if the conference consists of five members and a majority vote is to rule, it is possible that the attitude of Grand Master S. E. Wilkinson, of the trainmen, may be the deciding factor. It is thought, however, that his natural position will be on the side of the engineers and conductors. As neither of the latter bodies have any special grievances, arguments not now visible will most certainly have to be used before the battle royal between the roads and the men will be on, though the roads would be glad to have it out, now there has been a beginning.

The Niagara Falls Strike.

Mr. Webb, of the Central, was seen at the station just as he was about to board a train for New York. He has performed his mission to Buffalo and goes away with the feeling that the strike is ended so far as the Central is concerned at any rate. "Everything is satisfactory with us," he said smiling. "Our trains are running on time and no trouble is expected. As to the switchmen we have now, they are good men; many of them are experienced already. It's all right now."

The condition of the strike at Niagara Falls is gradually becoming more serious. The five New York Central night switchmen who left under intimidation last Saturday returned to work on Sunday night. Their action is so doing seemed to anger the striking switchmen who are out from the Erie yards. These last, encouraged by some sluffers from Buffalo, in spite of the utmost exertions of the police, pulled some pins from trains, and more trouble was caused without any one being caught.

An Erie switch engine with a nonunion crew on it was backing down near the suspension bridge, when one of the crew was pulled off the engine by a Buffalo striker. The Buffalo man was promptly arrested and locked up. At the police station he gave his name as Charles Kibler, and said he was a switchman on the Lake Shore railway at Buffalo.

General consternation was thrown into the switchmen's camp by the arrest of Joseph Helmerie, the recording secretary and treasurer of Buffalo lodge, No. 39, of the Switchmen's association. Heimerie, who is looked upon as one of the most powerful men in the organization and who is called the orator of the order, is accused by the railroads of assaulting their green hands, of threatening them with violence if they did not join the union forces and with interfering with the running of their passenger and freight trains. At the office of the superintendent of police he was searched and a loaded revolver was found on him. He was taken away and Heimerie was locked up.

The Signal Corps Practicing.

The Tenth battalion of Albany, the Forty-sixth Separate company from Amsterdam and the Twenty-first from Troy are on duty in the Western New York and Pennsylvania yards. The Sixteenth regiment of Brooklyn is having trouble in the Ohio street yards of the Central road. They are doing duty in the toughest section of the city. The latest fight there took place between James Hickey, a grain scooper, and a member of Company C. Hickey insisted on going through the lines and the sentinel prodded him with his musket. Hickey picked up a bit of iron and attempted to knock the soldier down. Hickey was arrested. Several young men were arrested for throwing stones at soldiers.

Owing to rumors of a possible strike among the railroad telegraphers and fears that the wires might be cut, the signal corps are busy getting into practice at the headquarters of the Seventy-first. Nearly 700 men are comfortably lodged there in freight cars so surrounded by tracks and cars that no one would suspect their presence there. The officers, among them Jay Gould's son, Captain Edwin Gould, sleep on the floor of the third story of the Erie floor station near Dailey avenue.

FASHIONS

IN FAIR WOMAN'S WORLD.

WHAT IS BEING DONE IN THE BROAD DOMAIN OF FASHION.

Some Information on Matters Uppermost in the Feminine Mind—New Notions in Dress—Some Pretty Costumes—Early Autumn Styles.

One of the preferred garnitures for rich dresses for next season will be the new durable laces in raised patterns, such as Rubelien, English silk guipures, and the heavier patterns of point de Gene and Russian Arabesque. These trimmings will be used as flat borderings, panel ends, and, on the bodies, in the shapes of capes, collars, caps, standing ruches, cuffs and vests. For special evening uses very delicate and pretty laces are sent out in Irish point, cream Chantilly, Venetian points and white and ecru point de Gene in all silk.

Early Autumn Toilette.

One of the most attractive designs from Paris for early autumn is shown here. It is of changeable silk trimmed with velvet and galloons of pearly passementerie. Very large collar with tiny bow of passementerie opening over the bodice, the aperture of which is closed by an exceedingly high band of pearly passementerie and a trowel shaped collar with a slight hem of passementerie. Sash formed by two rows of passementerie, the last of which knots and falls like a riband on the skirt. Sleeve full at the top and very tight at the wrist. The skirt has two small facings which turn backwards and are trimmed with a tiny hem of pearly passementerie. Quite a small panel of velvet separates this front facing from the skirt.

LINDSAY'S LIFE SPARED.

He Whines for Mercy and Offers to Turn State's Evidence.

THE MOB HAD A ROPE ON HIS NECK.

He Will Now Be Used as a Witness in the Trials of the Miners for Murdering the Soldiers—If Another Outbreak Occurs There May Be No Quarter Shown.

COAL CREEK, Aug. 22.—Bud Lindsay, the notorious desperado, murderer and outlaw, and one of the leaders of the outlawed miners, narrowly escaped lynching. He was confined in an old mine for several days under a heavy guard, but several citizens managed to stealthily seize, silence and hurry him through the pickets. He was taken to Briceville, where a rope was placed around his neck.

Although reported to be a most desperate man, his courage forsook him at this trying moment, and he broke down and pleaded in abject fear for his life, offering to turn state's evidence and reveal the names and plans of all the leaders, tell how the mob was raised, the nature of the oath, the names of those known to have killed soldiers or guards; in short, to reveal to the civil authorities all of the lawlessness that has reigned, and this he has agreed to testify to in court.

When all this was promised the rope was taken from his neck and he was returned to the camp for safekeeping. It is now believed that with his testimony twenty or thirty leaders can be successfully tried for murder and convicted. Lindsay is now under a guard.

More Miners Arrested.

Twenty-three men, supposed to be in sympathy with the most notorious of the miners, were arrested near Coal Creek today and locked up. Several of them are suspected of holding up a mail train between Clinton and Coal Creek last Tuesday night. Among them is Jim Hatmaker, son of John Hatmaker, who led the attack on the stockade at Oliver Springs last Tuesday. The younger Hatmaker is supposed to have escaped to Kentucky.

L. A. Roescher, a German who conducted a shooting gallery here and is a sharpshooter, is also wanted. Last week he went to a high point overlooking Fort Anderson and erected himself a small barricade, from behind which he kept up a constant fire. It is believed he shot and killed Private Smith. He was an anarchist, and many believe that he has directed in person the attempts on property and human life recently made in this vicinity. All the leaders prominent in the labor troubles of the past eighteen months, save Lindsay, have fled.

George R. Ellis has also been recognized for months as a leader and adviser of the miners, was arrested at Lyon's View by Deputy Sheriff Hall, in accordance with the orders of General Carnes, and was taken to Coal Creek.

Charles T. Alleman, assistant mine inspector, who has been recognized as acting in concert with the miners for months and aiding Labor Commissioner Ford in kepping the miners posted in all the movements of the military and county and civil authorities. Commissioner Ford gave bond today in the sum of $10,000. He was released by General Carnes and is now at his residence in this city.

May Raise the Black Flag.

The latest story is that the mines are to be smoked in order to drive out the miners who are supposed to be in hiding in the bowels of the earth.

Captain Anderson is in full possession of his position. He is about a mile from General Carnes' quarters, but communication is perfect. The troops are gritty, but they are physically exhausted.

Captain Morton is on the field with General Carnes. It is reported that Colonel Shorel should be more troops. Camp Anderson is exhausted by its constant fights.

There is a terrible feeling at Knoxville because of the slaughter of Knoxville citizens. If more fighting occurs Knoxville will send many men forward who will go under the black flag. Captain Morton's 4-inch rifles arrived here last night, with ammunition and tents.

General Carnes telegraphed the governor that trials of all his prisoners against whom cases could be made out would be begun before a civil magistrate at Clinton. Adjutant General Norman replied, "Procure the best counsel obtainable and send all prisoners bound over to Knoxville jail for safekeeping." The charges against the prisoners will be murder, attempted murder, assault and battery and resisting officers.

A SCANDAL IN NEW YORK.

Millionaire Wormser's Son Sued by a Woman Whom He Discarded.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—In supreme court chambers Charles W. Brooke, the noted criminal lawyer, argued a motion for Olive Kent Wormser, which asked that Maurice Wormser, son of the millionaire Wall street operator, be compelled to pay her $100 a week alimony and counsel fees of $1,000, as she was his common law wife up to the spring of 1892, when he deserted her and contracted a ceremonial marriage with Miss Ranger, of this city, daughter of Solomon Ranger, the wealthy cotton operator. Neither the plaintiff nor defendant was in court.

Frederick Johnson, counsel for Mr. Wormser, replied to the motion by ridiculing the charge as absurd. "It is true," he said, "that in 1888 Mr. Wormser, who was then perhaps as wild as many other young men, met the complainant in a house of ill repute. She was then a common woman, and this charge is simply a case of blackmail."

Judge Patterson said that Mr. Brooke would have to show where the acquaintance between the two originated, and Mr. Brooke requested time to procure further affidavits from his client and others.

Judge Patterson agreed to have a further hearing of the case on Friday, when Mr. Brooke will attempt to disprove the allegations made by the defense.

BANDIT BUNCH IS DEAD.

The Terror of Louisiana Shot Down by a Sheriff's Posse.

HE DEFIED THE LAW TO THE LAST.

When Run Down and Called Upon to Surrender He Attempted to Kill His Pursuers—His Companion Desperado, Hopgood, Caught with Him.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 23.—Eugene Bunch, the train robber and outlaw, is dead, riddled by the bullets of the detectives who have been on his track for two weeks. Bunch in the last four years had robbed the railroad and express companies of nearly $100,000. The posse in search of Bunch captured Colonel Edward Hopgood, another member of the gang. The posse consisted of Detective Jackson, who ran to earth Rube Burrows; C. O. Summers, of the Southern Express company; Dave Martin and John Jackson, of Aberdeen, Miss., and Monroe McElvern, of Tangipahoa. The posse heard that Bunch and Colonel Edward Hopgood were in hiding near Honey Island and made for that point.

Honey island, one of the most lonesome places in this section of the country, is on the dividing line of Louisiana and Mississippi, and for years has been the hiding place of outlaws and fugitives from justice. Bunch, whenever he committed any crime, would invariably flee to Honey island.

The posse led by Detective Jackson arrived at their destination and learned that Bunch had stopped at a farmhouse to procure food and had obtained what he wanted by threatening the owner of the place. The posse pushed on to what is known as the old Shirling place, a rude hut near a shallow creek.

A Volley of Bullets in Him.

Half a mile beyond Bunch was discovered near the creek. He carried his rifle in one hand and a bucket in the other, which he was about to dip in the creek. Instantly he wheeled and fired at Jackson and his companions. The bullet flew wide of its mark, and before Bunch could again fire the posse poured a volley of bullets into him.

As he fell his rifle was exploded in strik. ing the ground, and the bullet sped dangerously near the leader of the posse. Hopgood, who was in the hut, came to the door and was covered by the detectives, who made him throw up his hands.

The body of the outlaw was taken to Franklinton, and Hopgood, bound, was carried off on horseback. The news of Bunch's capture spread like wildfire, and thousands of people went to Franklinton to view the body. A watch found on the body, which was identified by the express officials as one stolen from them during one of Bunch's raids, settled any doubt about it being the famous criminal. Hopgood said that it was Bunch.

The body of the outlaw showed five bullet holes, one behind the left ear and the others on the left side. Bunch's vest was lined with small pockets for cartridges, forming a perfect shield across his breast, and the weight of his ammunition and belt of four revolvers was nearly 150 pounds.

Bunch Was a Desperate Man.

Hopgood, who was taken to this city, admits having participated in the robbery of the Illinois Central railroad in April, when the mail car was rifled of $30,000. He states that Bunch admitted that he had murdered Henry Sherling, the railroad detective, who had become one of the gang to get a knowledge of their secrets, and committed the assassination as stated. This act aroused the officers, and they captured Ben Outlaw within a week and Henry Carneguay in the same eight hours.

Captain Eugene Bunch was one of the most desperate characters in the south. Born of a good family, he started in life with good prospects. When he grew to manhood he became a school teacher near where he resided, but the life did not suit him and he came to this city, going to work on the Northeastern railroad.

Not long after a Northeastern train was held up and robbed of a large sum of money. The robber turned out to be Bunch. A price was set on his head, and Dave Hennessey, who at the time was chief of police, had Bunch's wife watched. Nothing, however, came of this. It was believed that Bunch had fled to Texas. Pacific trains having been held up there much after Bunch's methods. He was next heard of in Florida, where he relieved a passenger train of considerable money. He then operated in Georgia awhile and finally returned to Louisiana. He was seen near his home, and soon after the final robbery of an Illinois Central train at Newcom's Switch occurred.

Hopgood Thought It Funny.

Hopgood was placed in prison and will be taken to Marion county, Miss., to stand trial for the murder of a man named Terrall some time ago. One day in a burst of confidence he told Detective Sherling, who was assassinated by Bunch, that he had killed Terrall, and he seemed to think it a good joke that another man was in jail for the crime.

The several rewards offered for Bunch's capture amounted to $8,000, which will be divided among the posse that effected the capture. The express officials were all delighted over the result of the Bunch expedition, and say it cost far less than the Rube Burrows affair.

THE ARENA OF POLITICS.

McKinley Consults with Carter, Clarkson and McComas.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Governor McKinley, of Ohio, visited the Republican national headquarters and had interviews with Chairman Carter, General Clarkson and Secretary McComas. The governor intends to take an active part in the campaign, speaking for the committee wherever they may desire, and the conferences were held to arrange assignments for the governor.

Governor McKinley then left for Seabright, N. J., where he intends to rest for a few days. He will then go to Vermont and Maine. On Aug. 30 he will make a speech in Vermont, and on Sept. 5 and 6 he will make two speeches in Maine, the first at Port Orchard and the second at a point to be hereafter decided upon by Chairman Manley, of the Maine state committee.

Governor McKinley, before he left the city, said with regard to Ohio that the majority for Harrison would be much greater, in his opinion, than that given for the Republican national ticket in 1888. "The situation in Ohio," said he, "is as favorable as we have any right to expect. The question with us, of all other questions, is the tariff. Our people accept the Democratic national platform as a demand for free trade, pure and simple. In Ohio we are not prepared for free trade. Our people do not want it, and as long as the Democrats conduct their campaign on the free trade issues they must expect an overwhelming verdict against them in Ohio."

Boyd Declines Renomination.

OMAHA, Aug. 23.—Governor Boyd declines renomination. He promises to work hard for the Democratic party this fall, and predicts success for the state ticket if good men are nominated.

THE RETALIATION EDICT.

It Will Give Collector Howard a Big Job.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—The chief labor of enforcing the president's proclamation of retaliation, should it go into effect on Sept. 1, will fall upon Elector B. Howard, the collector of customs at Marquette, on Lake Superior, Mich. He is an experienced collector, who served for some time as deputy sheriff before being appointed collector.

More than 500,000 tons of wheat passed through St. Mary's canal last year, and 250,000 tons of flour and 76,000 tons of grain other than wheat. Of iron ore there were 4,401,000 and coal 1,894,000 tons. In fact, the tonnage and traffic that goes through the St. Mary's canal is greater than that passing through the Suez canal in Egypt. Nearly 6,000 coastwise vessels and 718 foreign vessels were entered at Marquette during the year 1891.

Opposed to a Backdown.

OTTAWA, Aug. 23.—There is a decided feeling manifested by the government press against any backdown by the Dominion government upon the canal tolls question. Circumstances, however, may induce Premier Abbott to regard the situation from a different standpoint.

The three cabinet ministers in town refuse to express any opinion with regard to the president's proclamation. A cabinet council meeting will be held today. No decision on the question, however, will be reached until Premier Abbott and other leading members of the cabinet reach the city.

Gould to Sell Western Union.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—Peter A. B Widener refused to deny a report to the effect that he and William L. Elkins were to succeed Jay Gould as the controlling power in Western Union. He also refused to confirm it. It is known that Mr. Gould has been wishing for some time to concentrate himself upon his railroad interests, and this lends color to the story that he has sold or is to sell his Western Union stock and it is believed that Widener and Elkins are or are to be the purchasers.

The New Cardinals.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The Rome correspondent of The Daily News says the pope will make to the cardinalate Archbishop Walsh, Archbishop Vaughan and Bishop MacDonnell.

General Ember Is Patriotic.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 23.—General Ember states that it has been decided to send the entire state brigade to New York Oct. 12 to participate in the celebration there of the landing of Columbus. Transportation will be furnished at the expense of the state, and in case the legislature refuses to confirm the action of Governor Bulkeley he will bear the expense himself.

To the National Cemetery.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—The Pennsylvania Railroad company will in a few days begin the construction of a single line of railroad from Washington, D. C., to Rosslyn. The road will pass directly by the National cemetery at Arlington.

Actor Daboll a Suicide.

HOLLISTON, Mass., Aug. 23.—W. S. Daboll, a widely known actor, drank a dose of poison and died almost immediately. He made his reputation by successful impersonation of the thief in "Zemilar" as a member of Francis Wilson's company.

Pellegrini Resigns.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The Standard's Buenos Ayres correspondent says President Pellegrini has resigned and that congress has requested Senor Saenz-Pena to assume the reins of government.

Concessions to France.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—The Argentine Republic, Uruguay, Paraguay and the United States of Colombia have conceded to France the "most favored nation" treatment.

Troy Brewers Strike.

TROY, N. Y., Aug. 23.—The brewers employed in three breweries in this city struck because of reductions on the delivery wagons refused to organize.

The Bar Association.

SARATOGA, Aug. 23.—The fifteenth annual meeting of the American Bar association will be held here on Aug. 24, 25 and 26.

Free Excursions to Chicago.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—The Garfield park race track management has decided to admit the public free of charge for a time at least, and thereby avoid friction between the club and the police.

Confessed to Arson.

FOR WORKING GIRLS.

THEIR CLUBS HELP YOUNG WOMEN TO IMPROVE THEIR LOT.

The Principles Upon Which All "Working Girls'" Societies Are Built—Organizations That Have Done a Great Deal to Make Women Independent.

Miss Grace H. Dodge, who first thought of the Working Girls' club, and who has so zealously and helpfully lent her co-operation from the beginning, has kindly consented to state the aims and endeavors of the members and does so in these words:

First—Consider just what a club is, namely, an organization formed among newsworkers and girls to secure by co-operation means of self improvement, opportunities for social intercourse and the development of higher, nobler aims. Second—That it is governed by the members for the members. Third—That it strives to be self supporting. It is not a charitable society. It is a co-operative rather than a philanthropic organization. Methods that are usually adopted to start charitable and philanthropic movements cannot be carried out when a Working Girls' club is planned.

A neighborhood or city club, of either men or women, is started by a few who decide that the establishment of such a club would be desirable for social or literary reasons. Then others are consulted, constitutions and bylaws adopted, a committee on rooms or location appointed, and their report acted upon by the club. Other committees follow on furnishing, house rules, finances, etc., all the members of the committees being chosen from among those who are to utilize or have part in the house, rooms or meetings. Fee and dues are voted upon and other club affairs system atized.

If the house or rooms are to be bought, built or leased, capital must often be obtained, and this is loaned on interest or raised among the members. Those with large families feel it a privilege to give more than the others, who perhaps give time, talent or effort as much more than the money. Outsiders are not admitted to these deliberations, but after the club is located, rooms furnished and all in running order a reception is held, when each club member is privileged to invite a given number of guests, and from these new members are obtained and fresh interest aroused.

HOW A CLUB IS STARTED.

A similar plan is followed in starting a Working Girls' society or club, if it is intended to be founded upon the principles of co-operation, self government and self support. Working girls cannot be forced into a club organized in their interests any more than any other people can be driven into a social club. They wish to know their proposed leaders, and here friendship must be at the root of the matter. To guard against the springing up of cliques it is well to have the early members represent different occupations. Women of leisure, teachers, saleswomen, clerks, stenographers, dressmakers and mill and factory employees—if at the start there is a mingling of these each will bring in friends, and a sisterhood of women will be the result, all interested in mutual aims but coming from different surroundings. The importance of improving on mistakes, their individual responsibility to the club cannot be too strongly urged.

In Europe a working girls' club could not be started because the principles of organization are not comprehended as yet. In this country organization is understood because wage earning women breathe the air of self government. The class of girls that come into the clubs are women who are accustomed to join other forms of organization, such as benefit societies, lodges, etc. There are in this city an enormous number of wage earning women, perhaps 20,000 or 40,000, who belong to the women's branches of the Freemasons' organizations and other societies, and in these they have already learned something about the benefits of associations.

The clubs are giving to girls an opportunity, and are doing for one class what Sorosis, the Wegman's Press club, the Wednesday Afternoon club, etc., are doing for others. People say, "Why do you give it the name of the Working Girls' club?" We want to dignify the name of "working girl."

SOME OBJECTIONS ANSWERED.

The public should know what intelligent and enlightened girls belong to our clubs. There is the "other side," however. Ladies' organizations say, "We are opposed to you because you are making working girls satisfied with their lot," but is there any thing to fear in that?

When people say we do not touch the class of girls that most need help I feel quarrelsome. Where are they? We have girls belonging to our clubs who earn but $5 a week, girls who work for "sweaters," and who do the humblest kind of factory work, and yet we are told we do not reach the really poor girl. I received a miserable anonymous letter two or three days ago, asking why we do not devote our money to better purposes than to New Year's parties at the Madison Square garden.

People talk of it, as they know nothing about. The club girls know the secret of the New Year's party expenditures, and if they are satisfied everybody else should be. The principles of our movement are penetrating everywhere, and can any one say that the results are not good?

I am asked by what right I am a member of the Working Girls' club, and why Mrs. Richard Irvin and others are admitted. The club girls ask the question themselves one evening at a discussion. It was decided that Mrs. Richard Irvin and others were working women, but they might be said to be working with money, not for money. It is not a question of dollars and cents, or of the kind of work. One member may be just as busy keeping house for her mother as another girl is in a shop, and it was thoroughly agreed that both have an equal right of membership. As a matter of fact I have no more voice in the Thirty-eighth Street club than the young est cash girl.—New York Tribune.

Women of Chili.

Chili is the woman's Utopia. It is the only country in the world in which women are possessed of full political rights. Every woman over twenty-one can vote on all questions. The street cars are all conducted by women. The native women have not good opportunities for education, but they are said to be possessed of fair mental ability and boast of one woman doctor. In manner they are the most self-possessed and dignified, in person small and delicate.—Exchange.

Stockings Must Not Soak.

Stockings should never be left to soak, but washed immediately in clean water, and not in the boiling suds that is left from the other clothes and which always has plenty of lint in it. They should be plaited in pairs and hung up by the toes. Woolen hose should not be ironed, but dried nicely and pulled into shape.—New York Journal.

SAID IN FUN.

A barrister observed to a learned brother in court that he thought his whiskers very superfluous. "You are right," replied his friend; "a lawyer cannot be too bare-faced."—Tit-Bits.

He (a seaside acquaintance)—I leave tomorrow, Miss Summergirl. I leave on the 9:40 express, which will bear me away from here and you at the rate of forty miles an hour. Just think of that! She—Forty miles an hour! How nice!—Harper's Bazar.

Wife—John, The Morning Daily states that you got into a disgraceful fight at your club last night. Who did you fight with? Husband—I am sure I do not know, dear. I haven't even seen The Daily yet. —Clubb.

"What has become of the big man who used to beat the bass drum?" asked the private of the drum major. "He left us about three months ago." "Good drummer, too, wasn't he?" "Yes, very good; but he got so fat that when he marched he couldn't hit the drum in the middle."—Tit-Bits.

Briggs—I hear you are living down on the New Jersey coast. Is it cool down there? Griggs—Cool! I should say so. Why the mosquitoes all have to wear buffalo robes.—Cloak Review.

Tommy—Pa, may I ask you a question? Pa—Certainly, my child. Tommy—Well, where is the wind when it doesn't blow?—Texas Siftings.

"There goes little Mr. Sissy," she said as they strolled down Charles street. "Isn't he effeminate in his dress?" "Do you think so?" replied her friend. "Yes, indeed. Why, he wears suspenders, high collars and sashes just like a real woman."—Baltimore News.

Winks—Minks has been aging very rapidly during the past few months. Jinks —Yes; he must be building a house.—Tit-Bits.

"I am innocent, your honor. Heaven is my witness!" "I am sorry," returned the sympathetic justice; "your witness is beyond the jurisdiction of the court. Five years."—Harper's Bazar.

Mother—Mary, go up in the attic and get that photograph of Mrs. Grimson and put it in that new frame on the piano. Mary—Why, mother, what do you want to get that homely old thing in there for? Mother—She is coming to visit us tomorrow.—Rochester Democrat-Chronicle.

"Don't you know better than to put your arm around a lady's waist?" she cried indignantly. "I know few things better," he said.—Boston Post.

Smith (with effusion)—Halloo, Brown, is that you? I heard you were drowned. Brown (with sadness)—No, it was my brother. Smith (thoughtlessly)—What a pity!—Tit-Bits.

Quickly Over.

In the old pioneer days of the Green Mountain State the marriage ceremony partook of the simplicity which was a distinguishing characteristic of life in Vermont at that time. A native of the state tells a story of those early days, which his grandfather used to take great pleasure in relating:

Elder Brown, a much beloved Methodist minister, was sawing wood in his front dooryard. The day was warm, and the minister's occupation was naturally heavy in its tendency, so Elder Brown was in his shirt sleeves, just like any unministerial wood sawyer of his parish.

Presently there came riding along the road and up to the fence a tall, lank, ungainly country bumpkin on horseback, with a fresh faced girl on a pillion behind him, with her arms clasped about his waist.

As they came to a halt Elder Brown advanced to the fence and rested his arms comfortably on the top rail.

"You want t' get married, I calc'late?" he said, addressing the smiling pair impartially.

"Ya-as," they replied in unison.

"Well, then," proceeded Elder Brown, "James, will you take this woman for your wife?"

"Ya-as," replied the grinning bride groom.

"And you, Hetty, will you take this man for your husband?"

"Ya-as," replied the bride, with unfaltering promptness.

"All right, then," remarked the minister, reaching out his right arm and beginning a parting handshake on each of the newly married pair, "you can ride on!"

And the groom rode on, as happy as if the ceremony had been much more elaborate, while the elder returned to his wood sawing.—Youth's Companion.

THE PRESENT DAY.

How Much Better Things Are Than They Used to Be.

Her eyes were open, but her cheeks yet glowed with the warm flush of sleep. Lan guidly she turned her head in the sunlight playing upon the tinted wall.

"Jane, Jane!"

The sound of a voice was wafted to her ears and her delicate lip curled scornfully as she recognized the accents of her mistress.

"Jane, are you going to get up?"

She raised herself upon her elbow and brushed aside the lace curtains of her couch, suffering the light of day to stream over the sumptuous covers and rich hangings.

"What do you want?"

She spoke sternly, not to say resentfully. The voice grew suddenly softer.

"Won't you please get up?" it pleaded. She ruminated.

"Is the fire started?" she presently inquired.

"Yes, Jane."

"And the steak pounded?"

"Yes."

"And the coffee ground?"

"It's all done, Jane."

"And the biscuits mixed?"

"Yes."

With a smile at herself in the mirror opposite she rose.

"All right," she cried; "go right ahead and if I ain't there by the time"——

She released the wealth of brown tresses and let them fall in billows about her shoulders.

"Breakfast is ready. Don't"——

She proceeded leisurely with her toilet.

"Wait for me. I'll"——

She was braiding her hair with deft fingers.

"Rather eat alone than miss my beauty sleep."

"Thank you, Jane."

As she slowly dressed she reflected how vastly the condition of the hired girl had been ameliorated within a comparatively few years.—Detroit Free Press.

Out of His Way.

FACTS FOR THE HOME.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO THE PRACTICAL HOUSEKEEPER.

The First Step Toward Making Home Happy is to Make It Comfortable—Hints Toward That Object—Well Tried Recipes.

The old-country custom of always having marmalade for breakfast is so excellent that it should obtain in this country. In many families in England the jam pot is a regular feature of the morning meal. To vary the supply of this article, apple marmalade may be easily prepared as follows: One-half a pound of butter, one pound of sugar, three pounds of apples. Season with lemon and stew quietly until they form a sort of marmalade.

HOW TO SWEEP A ROOM.

The Proper Way of Doing It if You Would Do It Thoroughly.

In sweeping a room a few simple rules are all that are needed. Let all ornaments, small toilet articles and the like be placed on the bed and that entirely covered with a sheet. It is well to have a regular covering of unbleached cotton sheeting, large enough to drape such pieces of furniture as cannot conveniently be moved from the room. All chairs, ottomans, light tables, etc., should be dusted and set in the hall or an adjoining room. Loop up curtains and draperies so that they will clear the floor. Have rugs or mats removed first, and shaken in the open air. Shut the doors and raise the windows, unless the weather should be exceptionally cold. In that case the airing may be deferred until the sweeping is finished. The fresh exercise generally creates a glow that makes cool air desirable. Let the sweeper, attired in an old gown made conveniently short (a wash dress is to be preferred), her head tied up in a good-sized handkerchief or covered with a sweeping cap, attack the work bravely. Sweeping from one side of the room, leaving a space into which to push the furniture, as that impedes the progress of the broom. Leave nothing unswept that can be moved, and see that no corner is allowed to harbor dust or fluff. Drive the dust into the middle of the room, gather into a dustpan and bestow at once in the fire. Let the dust settle thoroughly before the "setting to rights" is begun. Wipe off base board, door panels and other wood work first. A square yard of cheese cloth neatly hemmed makes the best duster. It is soft and easily washed, and has the added merit of cheapness. Rub windows and mirrors, brush off picture frames and wash marble mantles and slabs. Replace the rugs, uncover the furniture, dust it carefully and restore the ornaments to their places, first observing whether they are clean. Last, bring in the furniture from outside.

Air in the Sick Room.

A deodorizer, it should be remembered, simply neutralizes the unpleasant odor of a room, and is in no sense a disinfectant. Where a disinfectant is needed, as is a case of sickness, it is always better to consult one from a physician. Coffee is one of the best deodorizers which we have. It should be simply ground, and passed around the room on a hot shovel, on which two or three live coals have been placed. Burned cotton or cotton rags are also valuable for this purpose. Acetic vinegar or camphor are both excellent deodorizers, and may be sprinkled freely in a sick-room. The practice of some nurses who use cologne water, sprinkling it freely by throwing the room, by means of an atomizer, is very commendable, as it proves grateful and refreshing to a patient.—N. Y. Tribune.

HOME REMEDIES.

It is said that a strong solution of epsom salts in water will cure burns if applied immediately.

Beef suet boiled in fresh milk is very good for a cough. Take small quantities at a time, but often.

To remove warts, wet them thoroughly with oil of cinnamon three times a day until they disappear.

Alcohol is a good remedy for burns if applied immediately. Keep the burn moist with it for two hours.

To cure cold sores keep them dry from saliva and touch them once very carefully with carbolic acid, then apply alum occasionally.

Turpentine will take the soreness out of corns and bunions, and will sometimes cure soft corns. Be careful, however, about using too much of it, for it will weaken the joints.—Housekeeper.

A New Fan.

THE MARABOUT FEATHER FAN.

Here is a novelty. The original fan of feathers had the latter lengthwise, the point of the quill being at the hand, with this new fan only the tips of feathers are used and these are fastened crosswise on the sticks.

Ink Stains from the Piano.

Old ink-stains can be removed from polished mahogany or cherry with nitre and water. To a teaspoonful of water add a few drops of nitre; dip a feather in this mixture and rub the ink spot with it. As soon as the stain disappears wash the spot with clear water. Neglect to do this will cause a white mark to come in place of the stain.

Breakfast Muffins.

One coffeecup of sweet milk, two spoonfuls of sugar, one egg, two small teaspoonfuls cream tartar, one teaspoonful of soda, butter the size of a walnut, and flour to make it as stiff as cake. Bake quickly in hot roll-pan.

The Umbrella.

If you would take the best care of your umbrella, do not shut it up after using it in rainy weather. Keep it open to its full extent until quite dry, then stand it away on its handle. If you wish it to wear well, do not crush it up, or put it into a tight fitting cover.

—Mr. Isaac Kennedy, at present janitor of the Y. M. C. A., will assume the duties of sexton of the Methodist church the first of the coming month.

—On the second page is published an account of how the World, noted for its many distorted reports of events in this vicinity, was cornered by the New York Sun in its latest and greatest swindle.

—The great New Jersey Salt Water Day for colored people will be held at Pagan's Beach to-morrow. There will be a large camp meeting. The singing will be led by the New Orleans University singers.

—The twenty-five mile road race of the Crescent League, to-morrow afternoon, will undoubtedly draw a very large crowd. An exciting race is expected as there are many crack riders entered.

—The Newark Sunday Call remarks truthfully: When the walking delegate at four dollars a day becomes a thing of the trades union, and the red-nosed loafer who talks twenty-four hours on a stretch and tries to work one hour is kicked past the everlasting stars into eternal oblivion, there will be fewer but more successful strikes.

—The borough has an ordinance requiring that trees be trimmed up to ten feet from the ground, but the ordinance is evidently a dead letter. It is not enforced. It ought to be amended to have the work done by the street commissioner, if that is not provided for. At all events the work is not done.

—The borough of Dunellen is ahead of the borough of North Plainfield in one respect at least—it does not allow any one to put down the disease-breeding and dangerous board sidewalks. They must be of stone, cement or cinders. North Plainfield is very much in need of such an ordinance. The board sidewalks are a disgrace to it.

—An exchange says, the historic old locomotive, "The General," famous as the engine taken by the Andrews raiders at Big Shanty, on the Western and Atlantic road, is to be a part of Georgia's exhibit at the World's Fair. The locomotive is now being overhauled and repainted, as it has been badly used up of recent years in its humble service as a switch engine. The chase after the Federal soldiers who ran away with "the General," their subsequent capture and execution, form one of the most exciting episodes of war times.

—How the strikers view soldiers may be judged from the following incident which occurred at Buffalo: The captain of a separate company of home men had been some time targets for flying pieces of coal shouted to the men and told them that unless they quit, the lawless would swap lead for coal, piece for piece. The temper of the intruders is evidenced by the response: "We can't fight lead with coal, but we would like to be on an even footing with you for about twenty minutes. We would teach you to come here and interfere in our business."

—A Plainfielder thinks he has discovered the most curious thing in the way of courtship yet. Here is the story: A young gentleman and lady sat in church in a pew adjoining one in which sat a young lady, for whom he conceived a sudden and violent passion. So desirous of entering into a courtship on the spot; but the place not suiting a formal declaration, the subject of the case suggested the following plan: He politely handed his neighbor a Bible (open) with a pin point to the following text: Second Epistle of John, verse fifth—"And now I beseech thee, lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another." She returned it, pointing to the second chapter of Ruth, verse tenth —"Then she fell on her face, and bowed herself to the ground, and said unto him, 'Why have I found grace in thine eyes that thou shouldst take knowledge of me, seeing that I am a stranger?'" He returned the book, pointing to the thirteenth verse of the Third Epistle of John —"Having many things to write unto you, I would not write with pen and ink, but I trust to come unto you, and speak face to face, that our joy may be full." From the above interview a marriage took place the ensuing week.

A Novel Life Preserver.

George Marshall, aged ten, of Elizabeth, walked out of the open third-story window of his home one night last night in his sleep and fell thirty feet to the street, landing on the stone pavement. He was found lying insensible, but examination showed that none of his bones were broken, and he is apparently all right. He is very tired, and that fact is believed to have saved his life.

Captain Martin One Wheel Less.

Genial Frank L. C. Martin, who sometimes hangs the handle of captain to his name, has been so unfortunate as to lose his bicycle. He was returning from Asbury Park Monday afternoon and upon reaching Elizabethport found that the baggage-car containing his wheel had been left at Little Silver. He considers the company responsible.

Change of Railroad Managers.

Word has been received that I. A. Sweigard has been appointed General Manager of the New Jersey Central and leased lines of railroads in place of A. A. McLeod, president.

Mr. E. W. Titsworth of Central avenue started to-day for Southern New Jersey.

Messrs. Vincent Rockwell and Richard Williams of this city are at Asbury Park.

Mr. Fred Smalley of West Fifth street is spending a week at Ocean Grove.

Mr. Edward Stewart of Union avenue returned home last Sunday from Wyoming.

Miss Ida Williams of Madison avenue is summering at the Arlington, Ocean Grove, N. J.

Miss Dora Gillen of Bridgeport, Conn., is visiting Mrs. J. L. Limbarger of Manning avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Brown of Kingston, N. Y., are the guests of Mrs. J. H. Buckley of West Front street.

Mrs. Martin I. Cooley will lead the meeting in the W. C. T. U. rooms to-morrow afternoon at 3.30 o'clock.

Mrs. J. Runyon and daughter of Central avenue, returned to-day from a three weeks' stay at Asbury Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron M. Powell of 39 East Sixth street, are spending a few days at the Lake House, Lake Hopatcong.

Mr. Otto Ahrens and family of this city arrived from Bremen Monday afternoon on the North German Lloyd steamship Ems.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Skiff of Jersey City have returned home from a visit at the home of their son, Mr. H. F. Skiff of Carleton avenue.

The Hon. John L. Blair, New Jersey's railroad magnate, celebrated his 90th birthday Monday at his home in Blairstown, N. J. Hundreds of people called to pay their respects to the aged millionaire.

Mrs. J. J. Force, and her son Frank, of Orange, are spending the Summer with the family of Mr. Ezra Force, at New Dover, near this city. Mrs. Force is a sister of Mr. George Dunham of West Fourth street.

Mr. Thomas Schmidt, Jr., son of Mr. Thomas Schmidt, the Danish consul to New York, died Monday at the Netherwood Hotel. The young man was seventeen years of age and had been in this country but a short time. His body will be taken to Denmark on the steamship Fredrik, which sails next Saturday for Copenhagen.

Mrs. Disbrow, mother of Mrs. J. S. Cutter of West Front street died suddenly Monday morning of apoplexy. Mrs. Disbrow was in her 60th year and has for the past twelve of fifteen years made her home with her daughter. Before that time she was a resident of Rahway, N. J., where she had many relatives. Mrs. Disbrow was found by members of Mr. Cutter's family Sunday morning unconscious on her bed, and despite medical aid, which was promptly summoned, died Monday, as stated.

Base Ball Notes.

The Crescents defeated the Morristown ball players, the last time they crossed bats, by the small score of three to one to two. They hope to do better this time.

The Arlingtons of this city will play the Giants of North Plainfield, Thursday morning, at ten o'clock, on the Park avenue grounds. The battery for the Arlingtons will be G. Mattis and W. Van Horne, pitchers, and C. Sutphen, catcher. For the Giants, G. Bosterli, pitcher, and McLoughlin, catcher.

Second Baseman Hunter, of the Alert base ball club, of Brooklyn, attempted to swim off to the yacht Hildegard, anchored in the Hudson at Nyack, yesterday. The tide carried him below the yacht, and while struggling to return he was seized with cramps. John McMahon who with some ladies was in a boat near by rescued Hunter as he was sinking.

Wrecked at New Brunswick.

Several cars on an East bound freight train on the Pennsylvania Railroad were derailed at 8.15 o'clock last evening on the switches at East New Brunswick.

The passenger tracks were blocked, and traffic was delayed for two hours. As many as ten trains were stalled on the East and West bound tracks between East New Brunswick and the George street station.

At Wanamassa.

A Rhode Island clam-bake was one of the attractions last evening, and it was enjoyed by a party of twenty guests. It was held in the woods, and the success of the affair was due to the efforts of Mr. Henry Sammon, steward of the camp.

A Prominent Templar Dead.

Joseph H. Farrand of Elizabeth died Monday night of heart trouble. He was a prominent member of the Knight Commanderry, Knights Templar, Orient lodge and chapter. He was 44 years of age and leaves a wife and four children.

To Manufacture Shoes at Elizabeth.

Mr. James P. Butler of Elizabeth has leased his property on Elizabeth avenue, near the Long Branch Railroad, to a New York firm, who will erect buildings thereon for the manufacture of boots and shoes.

Want to Improve the Colored Men.

Charles M. Lawson of this city, says an exchange, is the secretary of a called committee to meet at Trenton N. J., for the purpose of devising means whereby the colored men may be advanced politically.

SAFETY ASSURED.

THE CENTRAL RAILROAD BLOCK SIGNALS.

To be in Permanent Use by Next Monday.—Recent Experiments Satisfactory.

The semaphore system of block signalling on the C. R. R. of N. J., that has been in course of erection during the past four months, is now completed and will go into permanent operation Monday next, Aug. 29th. The signals are now being tested and perform their work very satisfactorily.

Many interested spectators, during the past two days have watched, from the North avenue station, the rising and dropping of the red and green signal blades, that are immediately affected by the passage of the engine.

The purpose of a block system on railroads is to preserve a prescribed interval between trains when moving in the same direction. On the Jersey Central, the "blocks" are divided into sections of half a mile in distance. When a train passes the two-bracket-post, with wooden blades or arms painted red and green, it is considered to be in the block and no other train is allowed to be in the block at the same time, except on special conditions. The arms or signals are operated by electricity and compressed air which is forced along the line from the power stations at Communipaw Roselle and Green Brook. It is automatic and the action is effected without the use of human operators. A train passing into a block sets a signal at the entrance, to danger, and transforms its danger signal previously set at the next block, or some other block, behind it, thus allowing a following train to continue.

A train entering any block will set, automatically, after passage of engine, the home and distant signal, and will clear the home signal on entering next block.

A train finding a signal at danger (red blade) must stop before passing same, but if home signal is clear and distant signal at caution (green blade) trains can proceed, expecting to stop at next block.

A train having been stopped by a home signal, may, after waiting one minute, proceed with caution, expecting to find train on block ahead, or switches not properly set.

The system adopted by the Central is the best in use. Under its perfected arrangement the danger of travelling on the road will be reduced to a minimum, as only gross negligence will cause the collision of trains. It is interesting to note the passing of trains and the short time it takes for a "Royal blue" to get outside of a block. As the Central has four tracks and the two outside tracks are used by slow running trains, there will be no confliction of fast and slow trains. The rules governing the operation of the system are absolute.

COAL CARS OFF THE TRACK.

A Broken Wheel Divides a Train with Unusual Results.

A broken wheel was the cause of a coal train being divided and partly wrecked on the Central road near Westfield at an early hour this morning.

The train was running at a high rate of speed, and, when just beyond Fanwood cut, a wheel on a car near the middle of the train broke, about a dozen cars jumped the track. The cars did not upset, however, and so strong was their momentum that they ran almost to Westfield. Their unguided career ended in a smashup on a hillside. No one was injured.

SCALDED TO DEATH.

A Pot of Boiling Soup Ends a Baby's Life.

The infant child of Stewton Guerine of Lyons Farms, N. J., was buried yesterday. Relatives in this city attended the funeral. The baby met death in an awful manner. A pot of boiling soup, was, by some accident, upset upon it, and after a few hours of agony death ended its suffering.

No Politics in the G. A. R.

It has often been rumored that there were politics mixed up with the G. A. R., and such reports, though repeatedly denied, have somewhat injured the reputation of the G. A. R., among outsiders.

The following extract taken from a recent official order sent from G. A. R., Headquarters at Albany, N. Y., to the Aide-de-Camp, on Brigade National Commander, speaks for itself:

General Order No. 12—Section 1—"A political campaign badge has been adopted by the G. A. R., and the emblem of the insignia of our order, except that the photograph of the candidate is inserted in the center. The commanders of Posts not only urges every comrade not to disgrace his order by wearing said badge upon his breast, but that he will appeal to every man who wears one to refuse to countenance such intelligence whereby which is dear to every Union soldier regardless of party."

Besides the disgrace to the G. A. R., of having their battle-earned emblem worn by impostors and persons who never went to "the front" or did any good deed whatsoever for their country, it might get into the possession of unsuspecting G. A. R., men at the National Encampment to be held next month in Washington, D. C., and be worn by them supposing it to be their Army badge.

The notice is timely preventing the misuse of this objectionable campaign badge.

—"Uncle Tom's Cabin" at Music Hall Friday evening. A great street parade is promised.

THE JEWISH HOLY DAYS.

Hebrew Month of Elul—Autumn Holy Days and Festivals.

The Hebrew month of Elul begins today. This month, which always concludes the civil year, is devoted by those who worship according to the Spanish and Portuguese ritual to Propitiatory services and supplications, as it regularly precedes the great holy days—the New Year and the Day of Atonement.

The month of Elul, according to sacred tradition, also marks the period when Moses remained forty days and forty nights on Mount Sinai in communion with the Most High to implore His mercy and forgiveness of the Israelites for the awful sin of the molten calf. The German or Ashkenazic Jews do not read Propitiatory services until a few days before the New Year, and during the penitential days preceding the great Day of Atonement.

The annual Autumn holy days and festivals (beginning the year 5653 since the creation of the world) will be celebrated by the entire house of Israel this year as follows:

Rosh Ha Shanah (New Year) Thursday and Friday, September 22 and 23; Penitential Sabbath, Saturday, September 24; Yom Ha Kippurim (Day of Atonement) on the Sabbath, Saturday, October 1; Sucoth (the feast of tabernacles) first two days, Thursday and Friday, October 6 and 7; Hoshaiana Rabbah (the seventh day—the great Hosannas), Wednesday, October 12. Shemini Atzereth (the eighth day of solemn assembly), Thursday, October 13; Sinohath Torah (the rejoicing of the law) Friday, October 14; Shabbath Bereshoeth (the Sabbath when the Pentateuch) annually is begun over at the first chapter of Genesis, Saturday, October 15.

POLITICAL POINTS

A GREAT MEETING AT CRANFORD.

The Republicans of Cranford, Union county, N. J., held a rousing ratification meeting and banner-raising on Monday night. The affair stirred up that pretty village as it has not been politically stirred up for a long time. The Union County Band from Westfield arrived early, stationed themselves on the green and played a number of patriotic airs. Speeches were made by many prominent politicians.

PLAINFIELD REPUBLICANS ACTIVE.

The Republicans of this city were the first in New Jersey to publicly ratify the nomination of Harrison and Reid which was done at the meeting held in Music Hall about two months ago. Since the nomination of the Presidential candidates Plainfield Republicans have been actively at work forming clubs for campaign duty. The furthest advanced of these organizations is the Wheelmen's Division of the Plainfield Republican Club. Local bicycle riders are enthusiastic for the success of this novel club, and it is expected that the Republican cyclists will present a handsome appearance in this fall's parade. The club now numbers 94 members.

Arrangements are now being completed for a big parade and ratification to be held on Tuesday, September 6. On that date the Republican City Executive Committee will unfurl a handsome banner, 25x30 feet in dimensions. This banner will be hung from a cable stretched across East Front street from the Republican headquarters in the building of Mr. Jos. W. Davis. The Glee Club, which has been formed by the musical members of the Plainfield Republican Club, will furnish much pleasure during the campaign. The club has selected William B. McClymont as its musical director. Mr. McClymont is organist in the First Baptist church, and is regarded as a young man particularly well fitted to perform the duties which will be required of him.

The Union County Republican Committee will meet at Elizabeth on Wednesday, August 31. The committee will then decide upon the date for the holding of primaries to elect delegates to the State Convention.

For Wheelmen's Reading.

About twenty young gentlemen met in New Brunswick, Tuesday, and organized a club to be known as the Raritan League Bicycle Club.

Jonah's old mare, the veteran bicycle of the whale, broke her backbone irreparably the other day, and at last yielded up the ghost. The following epitaph is composed by one well acquainted with her early achievements and transcendent virtues:

HERE LIES THE BODY of
STANLEY, THE OLD MARE.
Beloved daughter of Jonah and the Cycling Fiend.

Born in England about 1870.
Died in Plainfield 1892.

Full many a mile of road she ran,
And many a weary load she drew,
As last—poor girl—her backbone broke,
And down she lay and died.
They stuffed her hide, they painted her,
And tied her up with stiffers,
But she was dead, dead, dead,
Just flopped her caged wings.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

THE HOSPITAL OF THE MINERS.

Twenty-One Men Found Dead in a Cave.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 24, (Special.)—A despatch from Coal Creek says that a mountaineer arrived there last evening, bringing information of the discovery of a hospital in the mountains, a few miles from Coal Creek, which the miners have improvised in a cave. He says he saw twenty-one dead bodies there and a large number of wounded.

Sewer Gas Prostrates Six Men.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24. (Special.)—Six laborers, employed by the Department of Public Works, while engaged in constructing a sewer at the foot of East Twenty-fourth street at seven o'clock this morning were overcome by sewer gas. They were all removed to Bellevue Hospital.

Police Court News.

Two boys named Frank Wilson and Thomas McNarney were arrested last evening for breaking and entering a house on West Front street, near Grant avenue, and stealing a quantity of food and soldier. They had a hearing before Justice Nash this morning, plead guilty and were held in $250 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Business at the lockup was brisk today. The authorities have five new boarders. Robert Hart and John Henry were arrested by officers Flannagan and McCue for being drunk and fighting. Hart was fined $10 or 20 days in the county jail, and Henry has $5 to pay or to take ten days.

James Emmons was arrested for being drunk and disorderly. He plead not guilty and his trial will take place Monday afternoon at 2.45.

THE CITY WITHOUT A DOG CATCHER.

The case of the City of Plainfield vs. Keeley came up for trial at the city court this morning. There were two charges, one of rescuing a horse from the pound and another for resisting an officer. On the first charge, tried by Judge Codington, the defendant, Patrick Keeley, was found guilty and fined $5. The second charge—tried by a jury—resulted in a verdict of not guilty. James H. Frisbie, the officer referred to in the case, became angry at the result of the trial and handed his two police badges to Chief Grant, thus resigning from the force. The city is now without a dog catcher.

Union County Board of Registration.

The Union County Board of Registration which met Monday afternoon at the Court House, Elizabeth, consists of Hon. William Chamberlain of Rahway, and E. G. Woodruff of Elizabeth, representing the Republican party, and Hon. James T. Wiley of Elizabeth and ex-Councilman Elmore D. Moffett of this city, the Democrats.

The meeting was for the purpose of receiving from the Republican and Democratic County Committees the list of names of those recommended for appointment as election officers.

The lists were read, examined, and the names confirmed without making any changes.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Republics South of Us.

There are sixteen of them on the continent—nine in South America, six in Central America, with Mexico in North America. Brazil is as large as the United States. So far as their material resources are concerned these republics have not yet begun to be scratched over the surface. They lie between the 33d parallel of north latitude and the 33d parallel, south latitude.

Mexico is the most prosperous and advanced in civilization, owing, as we flatter ourselves, to her proximity to the United States. She has already four lines of railway connecting her with the United States, and various local roads to the Caribbean sea and elsewhere. In a few years more Mexico will be as well railroaded as any state in the American Union.

Up to 1811 the republics of all the western part of South America were merely colonial dependencies of Spain. Then they declared revolution and fought in a brave struggle for ten years to gain their independence. It may be set down to our credit that the United States was the first to recognize their independence, which she did in 1822. Owing to the efforts of President Monroe and John Quincy Adams Great Britain and France also recognized this independence—England in 1823, France in 1825. During the discussion of recognition by European powers the president promulgated his famous "Monroe doctrine" in a message to congress, setting forth as a principle that the American continents were henceforth "not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European powers."

The United States therefore enjoys the proud distinction of being the actual creator and establisher of the South American republics. Brazil belonged to Portugal till 1822, when it became an independent empire, not swinging into line as a republic till two years ago. Socially no greater affront can be put on a Brazilian gentleman than to class him as a Spanish American instead of a Portuguese American. A mistake one of our ablest Columbian orators made during the progress through the country of the South American delegates to the Pan-American congress. In the republics of Central and South America lies a field of fabulous riches for enterprising individuals who have the brains to develop agriculture, mining and commerce in these countries.

Novel Exhibits at the World's Fair.

Fifteen out of Maryland's twenty-three counties border on the Chesapeake bay, and Mr. John R. Bland, one of the state's commissioners, has a beautiful scheme to illustrate this fact at the World's fair. He would have a Chesapeake bay room, with everything in it suggestive of the bay. First, a screen of shells at the door, then a ceiling representing the bay with all its depths and indentations, and walls set in all the specimens of shells, fish, etc.

Around the wall he would have tanks with the oyster, crab and terrapin in their natural state, oysters clinging to the rocks and turtles in their native habit. He would also have stuffed ducks and other fowl got up in the best style of the taxidermist, vegetables, minerals and all other products. All this to be brilliantly lighted with electric lights, wherever practicable, issuing from the eyes of fish and turtles.

Such a scheme has the merit of originality and gives great scope for incarnated humor. In fact, its chief risk is that of being cruelly satirized. If the plan should be generally adopted, the different state buildings might prove the chief attraction of the show. The pelican of Louisiana and the wild geese of the Dakota cornfields, the loon and muskrat of Michigan, the coyote, the sage hen and the horned toad of the high plains, with all the queer creatures of Arizona and the absurd reptiles of Florida, would certainly make a unique and comprehensive national exhibit. Incidentally types of mankind—stuffed of course—might be set up, such as the cowboy of Texas, the cotton picker of the gulf states and the granger from all over.

A curious fact came to light recently through a decision of the treasury department. It seems that an Italian bank in Chicago is in the habit of buying large quantities of Italian paper money abroad and importing it into this country. The Italian laborers in Chicago buy the money of the bank and send it across the Atlantic to their families at home. Thus Italian money has to cross the ocean twice before it can get where it will do the most good in Italy. The treasury department has decided that the Italian paper currency thus imported is not subject to duty, since it comes under no known classification in the tariff laws. But the question is: Is this sending money out of the country? The American money remains at home and that of Italy returns home. Whoever may be the loser in the case however, it is safe to say that the bank does not get left.

People get in this world exactly as much as they have power to get, therefore just what they deserve.

Mark Twain says that Henry Ward Beecher had more fun in his little finger than he himself has in his whole body.

MORE SWITCHMEN OUT.

Two Other Roads Swell the Strikers' Ranks at Buffalo.

THE FIREMEN WILL NOT STOP WORK.

Grand Secretary Debs Says They Have No Grievance, and, Therefore, Cannot Strike—Soldiers and Sisters in Fatal Conflict—More Troops May Be Called.

BUFFALO, Aug. 24.—The "great war," as it is now called both by the soldiers and the newspaper correspondents, is still in evidence. The events of the day, while not altering the real situation, which is the failure of the switchmen's strike, have been more numerous and exciting than for several days past.

On the side of the strikers the material events of this day have been the accession to the ranks of the switchmen of the Lehigh Valley, Lackawanna and Western and the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg, which completes the tieup, if such it may be called, of all the roads centering in Buffalo. The men of the latter road who quit work are not numerous, and their action does not cut any figure, as the road terminates in Buffalo on the tracks controlled by the Buffalo Creek Terminal company, whose men were already out. Its only significance lies in the fact that the Rochester and Pittsburg is the great soft coal carrier for this and the up lakes territory, and with it in the strike all the coal roads centering at the port of Buffalo are involved.

The Lackawanna addition to the involved roads is of more importance, as its tracks and trestles are numerous and will have to have protection if there is a continuance of the tieup. In addition to its loading trestle at the mouth of the harbor and its extensive freight docks at the foot of Main street along the water front, it has a big storage trestle east of the city line in Cheektowaga, in about the same location as that of the Lehigh Valley, which has been under guard of three companies of the Seventy-fourth regiment for the past week, this post being an isolated one about 3½ miles east of the city line.

A Striker Shot.

All reports to the contrary, up to this time there have been but two cases where strikers or mobs of strikers have been actually hit when shot at by the troops. However, the Twenty-second regiment, stationed at the Tifft farm, where the Lehigh Valley docks are located, had a tussle with strikers, one of whom was shot and so badly wounded by a soldier that he is likely to die.

The affair grew out of assaults on non-union switchmen and several arrests were made. The soldier who did the shooting went with the police to make a statement and was himself made a prisoner. As may be imagined, Colonel Camp was not long in making it evident that the Twenty-second regiment did not relish such treatment by the civil authorities, and when General Doyle told him to take all the men he wanted, recapture his soldier and take possession of the police headquarters if necessary, the order was obeyed with alacrity and things looked decidedly interesting. A large sized incident was spoiled, however, when the police released the soldier before his comrades arrived to rescue him.

The military authorities have their hands full and the work is of the disagreeable sort, but the soldiers are attending to their tasks in a fashion that is surprising. When the large number of men and their unfamiliarity with the work in hand is considered, the fact that there is so much trouble by reason of the annoyance and taunts to which they are subjected is worthy of praise.

Rumors as to the retention and withdrawal of the troops are more than numerous, and in a talk with General Porter the United Press representative to say that he proposes to retain the present force here until it is fully evident that the civil authorities can protect lives and property in the proper manner. The conclusion has been reached after a most thorough inspection of the situation and the stations of the troops in detail. General Porter will make reports to Governor Flower every day as to the outlook, is now firmly convinced that there will be no material change in affairs for some days. To use his exact words: "You may make the statement as to the retention of the troops just as emphatic as you please."

The Conference of the Chiefs.

It may be assumed that the men will all be here until the close of the week at least, unless the strike is sooner declared off. On this phase of the question the expected meeting this afternoon between Messrs. Sweeny, Sargent, Clark and Wilkinson, of the switchmen, firemen, conductors and trainmen, is expected to have an important bearing, and there is no ground to change the belief of twenty four hours ago that the three last named orders will find no reasonable ground for joining in a general strike. Reports that the local firemen have decided to strike and have made their wishes known to Grand Master Sargent requesting him to take their view of the case at the conference are not yet traced to any reliable source.

The incident at the Tifft farm and the call of the Lackawanna for protection may result in an addition to the troops here, and General Porter is consulting with General Doyle as to whether the present force can do the additional work required. If the problem is settled in the negative, then more members of the guard will come on to Erie county.

The busiest men among the 7,000 National guards on duty are the men of the First brigade general corps, Captain Gallup. Owing to the sudden nuisance flags are valueless in the daytime, and at night the vast number of electric lights in the railroad yards make the torch signals of no avail. Captain Gallup and his men have been hustling since Monday morning, running wires where necessary and cutting in on railroad circuits where possible, with a view to connecting the fourteen camps with brigade headquarters.

The stations were made last night and reports were received on the wire at General Doyle's headquarters from the camps of the Ninth, Twelfth, Seventy-first and the First and Second provisional regiments. At the request of Captain Gallup some twenty men from the different companies who are telegraphers have been detailed for duty in the signal corps and brought the entire circuit will be complete.

An Exciting Incident.

Thomas Manaher, a striking Lehigh Valley switchman, was dying on a cot in the Sisters' hospital, the result of trying to induce nonunion men to quit their posts and join the strikers. The affair was one of the most exciting that has occurred during the strike, and happened at the Tifft farm on the outskirts of the city, where a good many Lehigh Valley trains are made up and where is stationed the Twenty-second regiment.

John M. McGoverkin, of Philadelphia, and Charles Gabel, of Titusville, were making up a train when they were approached by Thomas Manaher, Thomas O'Laughlin, Bernard Dunn and Patrick Madigan. McGoverkin and Gabel were employed in place of striking switchmen. Manaher acted as the leader of the strikers, and when he called to McGoverkin and Gabel to stop work and join the union he was met with a refusal.

"Come on, then, boys," he called to his companions; "let us show them we can run this yard yet." Suiting the action to his words, Manaher picked up a heavy stone and made for Gabel. He pounded the latter until he was insensible, and then O'Laughlin and Dunn jumped on Gabel and kicked him in the stomach until they thought him dead. Then the five strikers pounded McGoverkin until he was black and blue. All this happened in a few minutes and in full view of seventy-five soldiers of the Seventy-second regiment. The soldiers were under command of Lieutenant Charles Asten, who with six of his men made a rush for the pugilistic fighters and told them they were under arrest.

The strikers paid no attention to the command, but kept on pounding McGoverkin and Gabel. Lieutenant Asten gave the men discharged command to fire and the small their guns right in the backs of the mob. Two bullets took effect and both struck Manaher, the leader. One ball shattered his arm and the other went through his body. He fell unconscious. During the excitement which followed officers of the Seventh precinct, under Captain Quinn, arrived. Gabel and Manaher, the injured men, Lieutenant Asten and the four other strikers were sent to the police station. Gabel and Manaher, who are in a critical condition and may die, were afterward sent to the hospital. Then followed the arrest and release of Lieutenant Asten.

Important Meeting at Scranton.

A conference will be held in Scranton on Thursday with General Manager Halstead, of the Lackawanna. Thomas P. McMahon, chief of division No. 161 of the Order of Railway Telegraphers, will meet Past Chief Thurston at Scranton on Thursday. General Manager Halstead, who was in Buffalo, has left here for home. The conference will be an important one and will be participated in by representatives of the engineers, firemen, trainmen and switchmen organizations. The result of the meeting will be afterward communicated to the different lodges of the order.

Eleanor Fletcher Balcom, who has been called the "True Florence Nightingale of America" for her untiring devotion to the wounded soldiers and also to suffering humanity, writes to Colonel Austin, of the Thirteenth regiment, that if there should be bloodshed, and if woman's tender care is needed, to send for her.

Cincinnati Switchmen Firm.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 24.—The Switchmen's Mutual Aid association here are a unit in the expressed determination to stand by their eastern brethren to the last if called upon. The officials of the different roads centering here say, as it is expected, that, pushed to desperate straits in their fight with the New York Central road, the switchmen on all Vanderbilt lines may be called out.

Debs Says the Firemen Won't Strike.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Aug. 24.—Grand Secretary Debs, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, says that no strike of the firemen at Buffalo could be legally ordered under the existing conditions without conflicting with the constitution and laws of the order. He was very sure that the men would remain at work and declared that a sympathetic strike was out of the question.

May Be Trouble at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—It has been decided by the Switchmen's union here to have nothing to do with cars handled by the switchmen at Buffalo. They will refuse to work the switches for them. This means that there will be trouble in the yards here of the Erie, Lake Shore and Central roads, and probably in the yards of other roads.

DEATH STALKS HITHER.

The Dreaded Cholera Reaches the Atlantic Seaboard.

IT CAN EASILY CROSS THE OCEAN.

Hamburg and Havre Inspected and the United States Authorities Will at Once Take Steps to Prevent the Plague from Being Imported to This Country.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—The state department has received a cable message from our consul at Hamburg stating that fatal cases of cholerine reported as prevailing in that port have been pronounced genuine Asiatic cholera, and that Hamburg has been officially proclaimed as a cholera infected port.

Consul Oscar F. Williams, at Havre, reports as epidemic of Asiatic cholera at that place, with many deaths, and advises an inspection of the fast liner La Touraine, due here Saturday, Aug. 27. These facts have been communicated to the health officers of Staten Island, and every precaution will be taken by them in the matter, especially in view of the fact that the epidemic has now reached two of the most important ports in Europe with which the United States has direct communication—Hamburg and Havre. The latest news here expresses a doubt whether the cholera has not also reached Antwerp.

The great importance of this information, in view of the present amount of travel between the United States and Europe, was at once appreciated by the state department, and the dispatches were sent over to the treasury department with a request for communication to the supervising surgeon general of the marine hospital service for prompt precautionary action.

Prompt Action to Be Taken.

Assistant Secretary Spaulding and Surgeon Austin, of the marine hospital service, at once had a conference looking to the best methods to be employed to prevent the introduction of cholera into this country. It was decided to inform the health officers of New York and Baltimore of the condition of affairs, and also to send out inspectors. *Secretary Spaulding is in com*munication with the agents of the steamship lines, with a view to having immigrants thoroughly disinfected on the other side of the water. Steamers coming direct from Hamburg arrive at the following American ports: New York, Boston, Baltimore, Portland, Me., and Philadelphia.

The matter of refusing permission to immigrants to land for any other reason than violation of the United States immigration laws depends at present on the local health boards at the ports of entry, by whom all vessels are supposed to be thoroughly inspected. The cases of cholera epidemic at Hamburg assuming serious proportions all immigration from that port (which is now very considerable) would probably be cut off.

The supervising surgeon general of the marine hospital service is intrusted, under the approval of the secretary of the treasury, with large discretionary powers. There is a considerable appropriation amounting at the present time to nearly $100,000 (the exact amount of the balances) to deal with emergencies of this kind. Surgeon General Wyman is absent in Boston at the present time on matters connected with immigration.

Persia's Plight.

United States Consul General Fox, at Teheran, Persia, cables to the state department as follows:

TEHERAN, Aug. 22, 1892.

Four hundred deaths daily from cholera. Five sometimes have been treated by the American hospital. Physicians are badly needed. When may I expect? FOX.

The department has replied that there are no general funds available for this purpose, but that the telegram will be made public.

Hamburg Admits It.

HAMBURG, Aug. 24.—The authorities in this city, in response to inquiries by the American consul, admit that the "reported" here is the true Asiatic cholera. The spread of cholera in this city since yesterday excites grave alarm. The disease is in all parts of the city, on the islands and along the harbor. Several streets have been closed on account of the prevalence of the disease in them. Today 340 cases and 130 deaths are reported. At this time twenty-nine cases have been reported. In both cities the health authorities are sending out instructions as to disinfection in illness and burial. Professor Koch says that several cases in Hamburg are types of Asiatic cholera. The spread of the disease has undoubtedly been accelerated by the oppressive heat. In Roman Catholic churches prayers have been offered for the abatement of the heat and the disease.

CONVICTS WILL GO BACK

Tennessee Proposes to Reinstate Them in the Mines.

THE STOCKADES WILL BE REBUILT.

Then a Strong Guard Will Escort the Cause of the Recent Riots Into the Enclosures—The Trials of the Miners Begun and Some Discharged.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 24.—The convicts who were released by the miners at Tracy City, Inman and Oliver Springs, and sent back to the main prison in this city, are to be returned to those places. This was determined upon today by the state board of prison inspectors. The stockades destroyed by the miners will be rebuilt as speedily as possible, and within a short time the convicts will be engaged in digging coal.

The board of prison inspectors received the answer of the Tennessee Iron, Coal and Railroad company to the notice given to them on Saturday last by the inspectors. This notice was that they must remove surplus convicts from the penitentiary. The Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company in their answer deny that any of the alleged grounds for canceling the lease exist.

They ask that the company be not held liable for the rental of the convicts forcibly released and taken from their possession without their consent, thereby depriving the company of their labor. The company, in their answer, further ask that the convicts that were at Tracy City, Inman and Oliver Springs be returned and the company receive protection from insurrectionary violence.

To Return the Convicts.

The company also says that it does not wish to embarrass the state or burden it with debt to maintain the law, and that if the inspectors prefer that the convicts shall not be worked in the company's mines that company will agree to an immediate cancellation of the lease upon the fairest and most equitable terms.

After the notice and answer had been discussed for several hours the board of inspectors decided to return the convicts to the mines, and leave the matter of their rental during their term of idleness, together with other questions, to be settled by the legislature, by arbitration or by the courts. A large force in a few days will begin work on the new stockades, and when the convicts are sent to these places they will be strongly guarded to prevent any attempt to release them again.

Captain Morton, of Morton's battery, has returned from Coal Creek to confer with Governor Buchanan concerning the situation there. Captain Morton thinks the situation is yet serious and that trouble may occur. He said that General Carnes had information that between 2,000 and 3,000 miners were congregated at Jellico, on the Kentucky border, and there was danger of them making a raid on Coal Creek at any time.

A Hundred Miners Killed.

Captain Morton believes that 100 miners have been killed. He said that several members of sheriffs' parties were still missing, but it is not known whether they were killed or not. Captain Morton said the law abiding people of that section are very apprehensive of danger to life and property, unless the leaders in the riot are severely and promptly punished, and the opinion is freely expressed that unless vigorous efforts for the punishment of the rioters are pressed many law abiding citizens will be killed or driven from the county and much property destroyed. Captain Morton will confer with the governor and counsel as to the advisability of asking the governor of Kentucky for authority to allow Tennessee troops to cross over the line and arrest any Tennessee or Kentucky miners who may have taken part in the riots.

Captain Morton said it was General Carnes' desire to have martial law declared, but this Captain Morton thought could not be done. He said Judge East was of the opinion that the legislature alone could do this, but Attorney General Pickle does not think the legislature can declare martial law because it is prohibited by the constitution.

Prosecuting the Rioters.

KNOXVILLE, Aug. 24.—Squire Kincaid held court today at Coal Creek. Several miners were held and others were discharged. All obstacles to civil prosecution have been removed by the appointment of Brigadier General Carnes deputy sheriff of Anderson county. More than 500 miners, suspects and citizens have been arrested at Coal Creek and in that vicinity. One hundred and fifty are held prisoners in the little church.

The rations of the prisoners consist of cornbread and water, and they have only one meal a day. The charges of murder in the first degree, manslaughter, carrying concealed weapons and rioting will be preferred against several of the most notorious aggressors, and General Carnes, if necessary, will appear as prosecuting witness. Every man found armed during the insurrection or any one directly connected in the instigation of the lawlessness on the part of the miners will be held as accessory before and after the crime, and all will be charged with the murder of John E. Walshall and B. T. Gibbons, who were killed in the fight on Friday morning. If martial law should be adopted simply the fate of Lindsay, Hatmakers and others is decided.

sprang into prominence as the head of the party which overthrew Dom Pedro and the monarchial government of Brazil, on Nov. 15, 1889. He was about fifty-six years old at that time. The life of Fonseca was the life of a soldier, and his career as the head of the republic of Brazil was brief, and inglorious, a fact due to the circumstance that the demands of the republic at the time were for a man of business, skilled in affairs of finance rather than one who knew only the arts of war.

As a soldier he had shown himself brave, and as a citizen he was exemplary. His presidency was not questioned by the majority and the nation held him in high esteem, but he had not been trained in the exchanges, and he could not solve the problems which confronted him when he became the head of the new republic.

The troubles of the country turned largely upon financial questions, and a few months after Fonseca was heralded as the head of the new nation, public confidence, following the course of exchange, went to low water mark and he was asked to resign. His health was failing, his physical as well as his political strength was shattered, and he resigned.

THE NEW YORK SUN AND WORLD.

The Latter Tries to Swindle the Former Out of $1,000, It Is Alleged.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The business of concocting in New York and selling foreign telegrams of a fraudulent character has long been a source of annoyance to every newspaper organization in the country whose efforts were hampered by considerations of honesty and legitimacy. No amount of ingenuity, no reasonable expenditure of money and no influence, however mighty, could, for example, secure interviews with men such as Schiaparelli and Bismarck. The former has referred all inquirers to his article of 1888, and simply said he had made no new discoveries concerning Mars since that publication. Bismarck only talks when he wishes, and generally to the editor of the Hamburger Nachrichten.

In the face of these conditions the New York World published on Aug. 5 what purported to be an interview with Schiaparelli which it disseminated broadcast. The New York Sun immediately pronounced the interview a fraud, and it went back to an alleged interview with Bismarck, printed in The World on July 12, and stamping that also as bogus, offered to give $1,000 to The Tribune's fresh air fund if The World would satisfy Donald Nicholson, editor of The Tribune, that either the Schiaparelli or Bismar. k interview was genuine.

Two representatives of The World called on Mr. Nicholson and produced some forms of the French Cable company on which there was writing. Mr. Nicholson declined to decide the question, but The World claimed it had proven its case and began to clamor for The Sun's $1,000.

In the meantime The Sun had communicated with its office in London, and as soon as copies of The World containing the bogus interviews could be delivered into the hands of The Sun's representatives Mr. Frank M. White started for Milan and Mr. H. R. Chamberlain for Hamburg.

Schiaparelli, who reads English readily, laughed at what he was credited with saying and pronounced it rubbish. He added that he had never before heard of the New York World, and when asked if he would point out the inaccuracies in the fabrication he said it would require the writing of a pamphlet to do so.

Mr. Chamberlain went to Hamburg and saw Dr. Hoffman, the editor of the Hamburger Nachrichten, the paper whom The World had asserted was the man who had introduced their correspondent to Bismarck. Dr. Hoffman, also, had never heard of the New York World, and he said emphatically that the use of his name in the matter was absolutely fraudulent.

In the course of the investigation, which proved conclusively the bogus character of the interviews, it came to the surface that a month after the Bismarck interview was printed in The World it was cabled to London with instructions to cable it back without the alteration of a single word. Thus the fraudulent Bismarck interview crossed the ocean twice within twenty-four hours, and when it was safe in The World office that newspaper challenged The Sun to do its worst.

Another collateral issue of the investigation was the discovery that a third copyrighted "cable," relating to the affairs of the Hansard Publishing union and printed last April in The World, was written in this city by a gentleman who has made affidavit to that effect.

The Sun of this morning prints a detailed history of what it calls the whole infamous attempt to swindle it out of $1,000 through a conspiracy that is a disgrace to American journalism.

New Jersey Democratic Plans.

CAMDEN, Aug. 24.—At a convention of delegates of the Democratic clubs of Camden county, it was decided to hold a mass meeting on Sept. 26, the night previous to the state convention. Governor Abbett will preside, and Governor Russell, of Massachusetts, ex-Governor Campbell, of Ohio, and others will be invited to be present. On the 27th the clubs of New Jersey and Pennsylvania will be reviewed in parade by ex-President Cleveland.

A Serious Cave In.

A Happy Thought.

In the waiting room of the military commission in a Russian town sat two fathers of families in deep anxiety about the fate of their sons, which would be shortly decided by the said commission.

"I am at a loss," said one, "what to say if I am asked the age of my son. If I make him out to be younger than he is he will be sent to school; if I make him too old they'll stick him in the army. What am I to do?"

"How would it be if you told the commission his exact age?" inquired his friend.

The first speaker looked up in amazement.

"What a capital idea; I had never thought of that!"—Dusseldorfer Anzeiger.

An Exception.

"Some one said today that the new minister preached over the heads of the congregation. Do you think so?"

"He didn't preach over my head. I had on my theater hat."—Life.

IRON HALL OFFICERS SCORED.

Judge Taylor Abruptly Ends the Hearing and Appoints a Receiver.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 24.—Judge Taylor ended the Iron Hall hearing abruptly and appointed James F. Failey, of this city, receiver of the order, fixing his bond at $750,000. Mr. Failey is a wealthy man of good standing. In taking this action the court said:

"It is plain that this case should stop right here. I don't see the use of any argument. The remedy is clear. Such management is something the like of which this court never before heard of.

"The court has never before, in the course of ten years' experience on the bench, known such a condition of affairs.

"It looks as though the order was kept up for the benefit of the officers instead of for the members of the order. It is evident that the Iron Hall must be closed out sooner or later, and that members who stay in the order the longest will be the ultimate sufferers. I will appoint a receiver and it is unnecessary to go any further."

A Big Shipping Firm Fails.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—The firm of George Tweedy & Co., one of the best known shipping houses in London, operating upward of fifteen large steamships and the principal operators of the North Atlantic Trident line of steamships between Philadelphia, London, Bristol, Avonmouth, Swansea and Rotterdam, have failed.

THE FLAG AT COLUMBIA CORNERS.

The school committee had engaged Helen Fenton to teach for the fall and winter terms at Columbia Corners with some misgivings. "We ought to have got a teacher with more determination and energy," suggested Chairman Ross, of the committee. "Miss Fenton took an excellent examination, but she's such a mild little body I'm afraid some of the toughs up there will be too much for her." Mr. Williams, of the committee, to whom these remarks were addressed, chuckled quietly and finally drawled out: "Well, you remember Josh Billings says, 'You can't always tell how far a toad'll jump by looking at him.' Perhaps she's got more sand than you think for. Anyway she's engaged, and there ain't no use in being sorry about it now. Perhaps she'll turn out all right."

Miss Fenton's manner certainly did seem placid. She was scarcely twenty years old, and a trifle below the average in height. But if her face did not indicate it she was nevertheless a person of unusual spirit and determination. In less than a fortnight after her introduction into the school she had instituted several reforms, disciplined the unruly spirits and placed her school on a good working basis.

In the belief that her pupils would do better work and would be more tractable if they could all be brought together and become interested in a common cause, she conceived the idea of inviting their co-operation in an effort to procure a flag for the school. Into this project all the boys and girls entered with great enthusiasm. They went to work assiduously to find money for each who would become shareholders in the flag. The curious little "certificates of stock," which were prepared by Miss Fenton with painstaking care, sold readily. After a few days' canvass the ninetieth investor had exchanged his dime for the last certificate, of which the following is an exact copy:

> THIS CERTIFICATE entitles the holder to a SHARE In the patriotic impulses of the SCHOOL FLAG.

The ten cent pieces were gathered together and a splendid bunting flag of ample size was ordered. Then half a dozen of the older boys selected a straight young tree for a pole, cut it down, trimmed off the branches and in a short time the flagstaff, properly fitted with halyards, was raised.

It was decided to raise the flag on Oct 17, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the admission of their state into the Union. The boys and girls worked like beavers during the days that intervened to arrange a demonstration which would be a credit to Columbia Corners.

The eventful day came at last, and it seemed as though everybody in the county was on hand to see the flag raised. Cheer after cheer went up when its stars and stripes were thrown to the breeze, and the band swelled the chorus with the "Star Spangled Banner." Then came the presentation, the address of acceptance and the pledges of allegiance. The closing number on the programme was the recitation of Mr. Butterworth's poem, "Raising the School House Flag," by Willie Piper, the school joining in the refrain:

> Flag of the sea that glows for all,
> Flag of the breeze that blows for all,
> Flag of the sea that flows for all,
> Flag of the school that stands for all,
> Flag of the people, one and all.

But the flag and staff which had cost so much effort were not long allowed to grace the school undisturbed. One morning about a week after the raising the staff was found cut off level with the ground. One of the school windows had been forced open and the flag was gone. An impudent note in a miserable scrawl fastened to the stump of the staff bore testimony to the spirit of vandalism which had inspired the act. It closed with the words, "We'll cut down your poles and ing off your flags as fast as you hist 'em."

For the moment the young teacher was stunned. She was not only thoroughly indignant, but she felt the keenest disappointment. This latter feeling was due not so much to the loss of the flag and the destruction of the pole, but rather to the realization that there were wanton characters in that community who would disregard the national emblem. She knew that a second flag would probably share a similar fate. The school building was too far removed from the village to permit its being kept under very close guard. Nevertheless she was determined that a flag should fly over her school.

The news traveled through the village. It was on every one's tongue. The local paper, in a highly colored half column article, recounted every detail of the occurrence. The state papers noted the episode, berated the miscreants and warmly commended Miss Fenton's announced determination to raise a second flag and protect it herself.

The pupils were now thoroughly in earnest, and not many days elapsed before their accumulated savings were sufficient to buy a flag exactly like the first one.

During these days a taller and straighter tree than the first was transformed into a staff and occupied the old place of honor in front of the school. When the flag arrived it was promptly raised, and the Columbia Corners school was again shadowed by the national colors.

The local paper chronicled the fact that another flag had been raised, and indiscreetly added that the miscreants who carried off the first one would scarcely have the nerve to carry out the threat to serve other flags which might be raised over that school after a like fashion.

It was not, however, generally known that Miss Fenton was well prepared to defend the flag from molestation during school hours. Only a few days after that a Winchester rifle was locked in her small closet in the entry. These friends knew the resolute spirit which Miss Fenton possessed, and not one doubted that, if occasion required, she would make use of it.

For over a week following the arrival of the new flag the raising of school work was unbroken. At the opening of school each morning the flag was raised, the entire school joining in a salute. At the close of the day's work it was lowered from its lofty position and given into the keeping of its staunch defender. Then occurred an incident which proved the determined little teacher equal to the emergency.

It was Friday afternoon and the school work for the week was about over. One of the boys was listlessly erasing the written exercises from the blackboard, when, chancing to glance through the window, he saw something which at once made him all attention. Two men, whom he recognized as Pete Johnson and Jack Welsh, were entering the schoolyard. They were both notorious characters and had been arrested some months before charged with having set fire to a barn. There was not sufficient evidence upon which to hold them and the sheriff had reluctantly released them.

They entered the schoolyard with a swagger, Johnson carrying in his hand an ax. The purpose of their visit flashed through the boy's mind. In an instant he was at Miss Fenton's desk. Breathlessly he told her what he had seen. The color left the teacher's face as she listened, for Johnson and Welsh were well known as reckless and lawless men. For a moment she felt unable to carry out the resolution she had formed that the flag should not be disturbed. But it was only for a moment. Quickly leaving her chair she stepped to her closet and brought forth the rifle which she had provided for the emergency she must now face. An instant later she passed through the door, closely followed by the boy who had espied the men. The other pupils remained in their seats, scarcely conscious of what was passing.

"Touch that flag if you dare!"

Both men looked and were startled to find themselves confronting the dangerous end of a gun barrel, which in the hands of the plucky little teacher looked cold and unwavering. A hasty glance was sufficient to assure Johnson that he was in an undesirable locality. His courage might be equal to forcing an entrance into a deserted school building in the night, but it did not stand the test of a rifle in the hands of the little teacher, who handled it as though she knew how to use it, and he slunk toward the gate. Welsh, however, stood his ground. He had come there to take down the flag and level the pole with the ground and he hated to be thwarted. He looked into the resolute face of Miss Fenton, and his eye caught the glint of the gleaming barrel. He flinched as he met her steadfast gaze and stood irresolute.

"Leave here at once!" ordered Miss Fenton.

He heard the command and dared not disregard it. He turned, and with an attempt at a defiant air moved toward his companion, who was already skulking down the road.

Miss Fenton watched them until they had put a considerable distance between themselves and the flag. Her face was pale and her agitation showed how great had been the strain upon her. Trembling, she turned toward the little school building, dazed by what had occurred during the last few minutes.

The pupils had in the meantime come into the yard and the girls huddled around her, while the boy who first espied the intruders, true to the boy nature, proceeded to take to himself the glory of their defeat.

The news was not long in reaching the town, where the theft of the first flag still furnished a topic for speculation.

Johnson and Welsh were seen no more in the neighborhood.

Mr. Williams in still a member of the school committee of Columbia Corners, and he never drives by the school house without stopping to look at the stars and stripes which are raised every morning of the session. If a friend is with him he always relates the story of Miss Fenton's school flag movement and her defense of it. "And now the young ones get out and cheer 'Old Glory' every day. And when there is an anniversary of anything big in the history of the country they have to have a time over it around the flagpole. Columbus Day is coming, and we're not going to be outdone here by any school in the state. All the folks 'round in the district are going to come here and help the school celebrate old Columbus. We've got to get a new flag for that day, I reckon: that one is getting to look like one of our old battleflags." Then he goes back to Miss Fenton, who started it all, and after vividly describing how the mild looking teacher balked the two ruffians, usually winds up by remarking, "You remember Josh Billings says you can't always tell how far a toad'll jump by looking at him."

GOOD HEALTH

BRAIN POWER.

The Wonderful Intellect Accompanying One of the Highest of Human Brains.

Dr. Elizabeth Garrett Anderson, an English woman, in arguing the question of "sex in education," accepts for the sake of argument the assertion that allowing for the difference in bodily size of the average woman and the average man it will still be found that the woman's brain is the smaller. But Dr. Anderson thinks that the evidence in support of the assertion is strangely inconclusive, for the average woman does not have her brain weighed at all. She dies comfortably in her own bed and is duly buried with her skull intact. The women whose brains Dr. Crichton Browne has been able to weigh and examine belong almost exclusively to the poorest class. They are women whom poverty has driven to die among the cold comforts of workhouse or hospital, and whose friends, if they had any, are careless to claim their bodies. To generalize about all women and men from an examination of the brains of a few individuals belonging to this poorest and least intellectual classes seems distinctly unscientific.

There is a further assumption that the power of the brain is necessarily proportional to the size of the brain. This assumption sounds plausible, but that is the point that can be claimed for it. There is absolutely no proof that a small brain implies intellectual weakness. And indeed there can be no proof. In order to ascertain the intellectual strength of any individuals it is necessary to observe them for a considerable part of a lifetime, and above all for that part of their lives when they are in the fullest health. But obviously it is impossible for a doctor to make a practice of watching his healthy neighbors in order to ascertain their brain power, and then the moment they are dead pounce upon their skulls to weigh the contents.

In one famous case something analogous to this was done with the most remarkable results. The brain of Sir Isaac Newton, who, as his epitaph tells, "in intellectual power surpassed the human race," was weighed and the scales showed that it was one of the lightest that had ever been found within a human skull. Consequently when medical men assert that women's brains are less than men's, and infer a proportional inferiority of intellect, the first answer is that neither the assertion nor the inference is supported by sufficient evidence.

Dr. Anderson also ingeniously suggests that if men's brains are bigger it may be because women's brains are used less. This completely inverts the argument. Instead of asserting that women cannot do intellectual work because their brains are too small we may equally well argue that women's brains are small because they do too little intellectual work.

To Prevent Cholera Infantum.

In a bulletin recently issued by the Boston board of health in regard to cholera infantum it is stated that the disease is caused by bad milk, and directions are given for caring for the milk as follows: "As soon as the milk comes put it into glass bottle; put the bottle in a kettle with a block of wood under it to prevent the bottom coming in contact with the kettle; put water enough in the kettle to come half way up the side of the bottle; heat the water as hot as possible without boiling; then take the kettle from the fire and cool the bottle; put the bottle again in the kettle for half an hour; then put the bottle in a cold place. This makes the milk safe without boiling. If possible use a rubber stopper instead of a cork. The bottle and stopple must be cleansed every day with boiling water."

Toilet Hints.

The ideal complexion is a hard firm skin, smooth, but velvety looking. Hot water tends to make the skin flabby, and should be avoided, according to a specialist in the care of the skin; cold water is the best preservative. The same person gives the following receipe for promoting the growth of the hair: Half a pint of bay rum, two ounces of water and twenty-four drops of cantharides.

ETIQUETTE

GARDEN PARTIES.

An Enjoyable and Convenient Form of Hospitality in Fine Weather.

The one all important element to the success of a garden party is the weather and in spite of the variability and uncertainty as regards the elements, garden and tennis parties are projected long beforehand, and invitations issued accordingly. In some instances where it is possible provision is made against a probable downpour; in others happy chance is relied upon and a fine day hoped for and desired to the last moment.

Garden parties given in town or in the suburbs are almost afternoon parties in the open air. Tennis is not the all engrossing amusement as in country neighborhoods; the ladies are too daintily dressed and do not care to wear tennis shoes in a fashionable crowd, or to get overheated. Thus summer calls, drawn from the various channels now open to the givers of entertainments, are invariably forthcoming, whether it be a popular band or something in the way of a novelty, or band and novelties combined, it being merely a question of expense.

Tents are a great advantage to those who have small grounds and small houses, but in the country these are seldom if ever required. When very large garden parties are given, however, a large tent, with all the convenient appliances now in use, will be a valuable addition to the requisite accommodation for tea and refreshments. A tennis party of ordinary numbers usually finds its way into the house for tea, which is either given in a large dining room or hall. On fine days, creams, sandwiches, cakes of doors, and unless they arrive late are not shown into the tearoom. The move for tea from the grounds is made by the hostess, and becomes very general in a few minutes. *The refreshment list should in*clude everything good, and generally does so. Ices, strawberries and cream, grapes, peaches, jellies, creams, sandwiches, cakes of every description, etc., tea and coffee, champagne cup and claret cup. Small round tables, when space permits, are a convenient adjunct in the tearoom.

His Advantage Over the Oldest Inhabitant.

Some persons can always "go you one better," no matter what the story is you are telling. One of these was accosted one day last week by E. S. Cleveland, who, removing his hat and mopping his head, solemnly said:

"It's an awful hot day! I never saw so hot a day as this."

"Oh, I have," said his friend. "I've seen one a good deal hotter."

"That so?" said Cleve. "Well, you're the only man that's ever been there and got back."—Hartford Times.

A Case of Cash.

They were organizing a land company when Jobson said to Hobson: "We've got everything ready. I've got an artist to paint a picture of the land as it is, and another as it will be."

"But where is the land? Have you bought it yet?"

"Bought it? Why, how can we buy it until we have sold our stock?" responded Jobson, who prided himself on being a financier. "It takes money to buy land."—Boston Transcript.

THE WINNERS IN THE 25-MILE ROAD RACE.

Good Time Made—Many Spectators and Lots of Excitement—The Particulars.

The long expected twenty-five mile handicap road race of the Plainfield Crescent League was held this afternoon. The start was made from corner Richmond street and South avenue at 2:30 o'clock.

A large crowd was present at the starting point and many ladies obtained a good view from Scott's Press Works, the riders having to pass there several times.

The showers of this morning made the roads very muddy and heavy and caused the wheels of the riders to slip, so that no records could be made as expected.

2.35 - The race is well under way. Nos. 17-19 and 23 did not start. Nos. 24 and 25 were scratch men. No. 3 is leading and making good time.

4.25—J. Willis of Westfield, with 8½ minutes handicap finished first in 1.33-31, but he was protested for having been paced by a non-competitor.

George Mahon of Plainfield was second on actual time 1.39-08.

C. H. Coffin of Newark was third—actual time 1-32-08 1-5.

G. D. Greenwood, E. O. C., was fourth—actual time 1-32-06.

F. C. Gilbert, Elizabeth, was fifth—actual time 1-32-07.

J. R. Hazleton, R. A. C., (scratch) was sixth—actual time 1-18-31. Winning time prize.

The course was to Fanwood, to Scotch Plains, to Front and Richmond thence to Fifth street, for four laps and finished by going to Netherwood green parkway to Scotts Press Works.

The numbers and handicaps of the riders were as follows:

No. of rider.		Minutes Handicap.
1	G. D. Greenwood	9
2	Louis M. Miser	9
3	Jas. Willis	8½
4	Chas. Maltby	8

The officials of the race were: Referee, J. L. Crowell, U. C. R.; Judges, W. R. Codrington, Dr. J. T. Fritts, Dr. D. C. Adams, of Plainfield; clerk of the course, W. Ahlgren; Timers, W. H. Rogers, Chas. Vail, J. H. Doane; scorers, Representatives of the Plainfield Courier, Press and News; starter, A. B. Barkman.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Edward Stein of this city is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hopkins at Raritan.

Miss Worrell of Columbus, Georgia, is visiting Miss Morrison of Mountain avenue, North Plainfield.

The Misses Nellie and Maggie Burke of Grove street have returned from a trip through New York State.

Dr. T. S. Davis and Mr. Mulford Estil sailed yesterday from Liverpool on the White Star Steamship, Teutonic.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron M. Powell of East Sixth street are spending a week at the American House, Lake Hopatcong.

Corporal Francis E. Marsh has returned from Mt. Pocono and is now at Milburton-by-the-Sea, Spring Lake.

Mr. David H. Lennox of the P. Bl. C. is to be one of the race judges at the coming great Amateur Athletic meet.

Mrs. William A. Woodruff and daughter, Miss Mabel, of East Second street have returned from Greenwich, Conn.

Mr. Clarence Sinclair of Madison avenue returned yesterday from Southold, L. I., where he had spent a most enjoyable week.

A Prominent Mason Dead.

Mr. Jeremiah Leary, one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Elizabeth, died suddenly of apoplexy yesterday morning.

He was a prominent member in the masonic fraternity, being connected with both Washington Lodge, F. and A. M., and Elizabeth Commandery, Knights Templars. He was also a veteran of the late war, having fought as a private in the 33rd regiment, New York State Volunteers. At the time of his death he was a member of the Veteran Association, and of course was well acquainted with him as members of the political field. The removal of the Essex armory building from its present location to the vacant lot adjoining the handsome new Sunday-school chapel of the St. James M. E. Church, and if all goes well on that score, the members of the church will oppose it with all their might. Not only are the physicians opposed to what many of them justly term an outrage, but there are many citizens not in any way connected with the church who are willing to assist in opposing the proposed movement.

Base Ball Notes.

—Newton, N. J., has a new newspaper. It is called the Sussex Daily.

—The Garwood Company want South avenue extended to Cranford.

—The Executive Committee of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union will meet in the Third Presbyterian church at Elizabeth this evening.

—Although many people are returning from the seashore, it is said by good authority that the season this year will not close until the middle of September.

—Notices warning trespassers have been posted on all the properties adjoining the ball grounds. Hereafter anyone caught trespassing will be prosecuted.

—Governor Abbett is taking the utmost enjoyment out of his cruise along the New England shores. He left New London Harbor yesterday for Shelter Island.

—The Warren Union Mission took seventeen cars and over seven hundred persons to Asbury Park yesterday. They had a pleasant time, and had a very enjoyable time. The bathing was good.

—The Republicans in Union county will not vigorously open their campaign until after September 1. Such at least is the decision arrived at by the leaders, who say it is too hot just yet for active political work.

—The Liberty Corner correspondent in the Somerset Messenger says: H. De-Mott is the happiest man in town. He has sold out his grocery business to Charles Acken of Newark, and his butcher business to Fred Rommell, and will now leave us for ours.

—A great time was had by colored people from all parts of the State at Papino to-day, the occasion being the great southern salt water day. A large camp meeting will be held Sunday, and the choir will be led by the New Orleans University singers.

—Thomas Butler of Elizabeth, a brakeman in the employ of the Central Railroad, while working on a drilling train in the new switch yard near Division street yesterday, was knocked down and a car went over his right foot, badly mashing the forepart.

—Railway's second annual aquatic carnival will be held Wednesday evening, September 7, commencing at half past seven. Guests will be accommodated on the schooners James Patterson. Judge Hyer, of the Union Democrat, is chairman of the reception committee.

—If at any time you wish to know how fast one of those "Royal Blue" express trains is "doing" a mile, just look at the block signal, and with watch in hand time the rushing and whirring of the arms, which, operated automatically by the train itself, will be a sure way of timing its speed.

—A serious runaway occurred on East Front street near Cole's hill last evening, in which a two-seat phaeton was upset and two ladies thrown to the ground and painfully bruised. They were assisted to a neighboring house and cared for. Every spoke of the rear wheels of the wagon was knocked out.

—The York Daily speaks of the company that will perform at Music Hall to-morrow evening as follows:

Stetson's Uncle Tom Co., was greeted with a crowded house last night. The production of slavery days was well interpreted and was enjoyed by all. There were a number of excellent specialties introduced which took exceedingly well.

—In the dining-room of a quaint old house on West Front street, just over the fireplace, is the following odd inscription in old English text:

Work the jaws,
Silent pores,
Frequent haw-haws.

An apt reminder of the value of slow eating and cheerfulness at the table.

—Furman Schenck of New Brunswick, died yesterday morning. He was 47 years of age and was known as "the fat boy" from his youthful appearance and enormous size. He weighed 480 pounds and until recently was employed as a house servant except at intervals when he exhibited his corpulent body as dime museums.

—The N. Y. World says James E. Mastine of Plainfield is not letting grass grow under his feet these days, but is working an energetic still hunt for the Congressional nomination. Alderman Dunn of Elizabeth, will do well to keep his weather eye on the fusion-or-ator, as the latter is an early-riser and is hustling around Union county when his rival thinks he is asleep.

—An old barn at Westfield was burned to the ground last evening about 9.45 o'clock. It was owned by Mr. Aaron Pierson and had recently been occupied by a number of families, employed laying the water pipes along the county road. The building was in a dilapidated condition and is supposed to have been set afire by tramps.

—The main topic of conversation in Elizabeth last evening was in regard to the proposed removal of the Essex armory building from its present location to the vacant lot adjoining the handsome new Sunday-school chapel of the St. James M. E. Church, and if all goes well on that score, the members of the church will oppose it with all their might. Not only are the physicians opposed to what many of them justly term an outrage, but there are many citizens not in any way connected with the church who are willing to assist in opposing the proposed movement.

LOCAL BASE BALL.

THE MORRISTOWNS BARELY DE CAPE A WHITEWASH.

Only One Hit Made by the Visitors Off Murphy in Yesterday's Game

An Error in the Sixth Inning Gave Them their Only Run—Score 1 to 0.

Yesterday was "Ladies' Day" at the Crescent League ball grounds, and in consequence a large number of the fair sex were present to see the Crescents give the Morristowns the worst drubbing they have received this year. The presence of the ladies seemed to spur the home team on to victory, for every player gave a good exhibition of ball playing. It must have been the presence of the gentler sex, which goaded the victors on, for it certainly was not their noise, as it was the quietest game played here this season.

One little error was all that saved the Morristowns from a whitewash. In the sixth inning Hetzel, the first man of the visitors to reach third base during the game, was playing off from the bag, and Hofford threw the ball to third to put him out. It was a bad throw, and the ball struck in the long grass, and before it could be recovered Hetzel had crossed the plate, with the only run for his side.

The visitors were unable to bat Murphy, and therein lies the story of their defeat. One safe hit was all they could get off his delivery, and he fairly toyed with their heaviest batters.

Hetzel was in the box for the Morristowns, and it was thought a close game would be the result, if he pitched in his old-time form, and it was close, up to the fifth inning. His memorable fifth is of late getting to be the Crescents mascot. Last Saturday seven runs were scored in that inning, and yesterday it was duplicated.

Bonner was given a chance to make his customary one-handed catch again yesterday—and he made it. In the first inning the third man to the bat, Heifer, knocked a hot liner, which looked to be good for a base hit, but Bonner put up that paw, and the ball struck it, and stayed there.

Turner, Daley, Leidy and Jones each made a three bagger.

A Married Couple of Summit in Trouble.

A warrant for the arrest of William Betz of Summit was issued Tuesday on complaint of the man's wife who said that her husband frequently illtreated her, and that his mother made her dig potatoes and do other fatiguing work, says the Newark Evening News, from which we take the following:

"When arraigned before Justice Kelly Mr. Betz said that he never refused to furnish his wife, but that he would not live with her again. Then he said that his once better half had two weeks ago purchased a bottle of laudanum with the intention of poisoning his parents. He also charged that she had the poison in her possession and that she then and on other occasions threatened to kill him and his mother and father.

"I am willing to support her," he said, "but I am not willing that she should live with my parents."

Justice Kelly put Betz under bonds until the Overseer of the Poor inquires into the case.

Mrs. Betz is at present in the employ of Mrs. C. B. Grant, and is in a delicate condition. She was previous to her marriage, employed by C. E. Bolmer as a bookkeeper, which he will testify. They speak highly of her and have determined to see that she is not imposed on by her husband.

Mr. and Mrs. Betz were married about three months ago by a Baptist minister. At that time they promised that the first child should also be performed by a Baptist minister, as she is a Catholic and would lose her standing in the church if it were not done. Before the ceremony she also made him promise that he would keep his promise, and she had to do public penance to remain a member of her church.

Her penance was completed last Sunday, when Rev. G. A. Vander Horst, of St. Joseph's church, announced to the congregation that Mrs. Betz had completed her penance in the church and that Bishop Wigger had requested him to make the announcement.

Young Betz is the son of a gardener for Pitcher & Manda at Short Hills. The latter has an excellent reputation. He has a large family of sons, several of whom live in Newark.

New Jersey's Commissioners to the World's Fair.

The World's Fair Commissioners met at the State House on Tuesday and transacted routine business. The plans of the State building were approved by Chief Burnham, of the department of construction, and the board decided to advertise for bids to erect the New Jersey headquarters.

STATE NEWS

A PAPER FOR HOBOKEN AND NEWARK.

The New Jersey Abend Post Company, which intends to publish a newspaper in Newark and Hoboken on a capital of $25,000, of which $25,000 is paid up, recorded articles of incorporation in the office of the County Clerk of Essex county yesterday afternoon. The incorporators are Holderieder Andrea and Leopold Bardo, of Newark, and George D. Metz and Moses Lockman, of New York.

The Junior Fight of the Triton Boat Club of Newark, while taking a practice spin on the Passaic river yesterday collided with a row boat containing two ladies, crushing in its side. One of the ladies jumped into the racing shell which was the only craft in sight, gave way and immediately sank, as did also the row boat. After much excitement and struggling the crew managed to swim to shore, saving themselves and the young ladies. Coxswain Ward manfully distinguished himself. Carelessness caused the accident.

DEAD TOADS CAPTURE A SNAKE.

Flatbrookeville correspondent of the Sussex Herald: Jacob Kishpaugh found a snake that had swallowed a toad and crept through a knot hole in a fence and grabbed another toad on the other side of the fence. The snake could not crawl or creep either way, as the small space of the body was in the knot hole and a toad on each side. It was three weeks before the snake could free itself from the hole in the board.

The Giant of Westfield and What He Wants.

Dr. Chauncey B. Ripley of Westfield wants to be the Democratic candidate for Governor.

What we would like to know is something that the versatile Chauncey doesn't want.

He wanted a dirt heap in Westfield named after him, and forthwith the village and all the inhabitants thereof

Bowed before his mighty will.
And proclaimed the dirt heap Ripley Hill.

And he is the cock of the heap, too.

Yet it does not appease his voracious appetite, when, with his 850 lbs. avoirdupois, he struggles to the summit to crow, feasts his piercing eyes on beautiful Plainfield in the distance, and sees that his little village is but an indistinguishable part of New Jersey.

Thereupon, he wants the State for his stamping ground, and wants the people of the State to know that he wants it bad. So he puts forth a Leader on the subject in his little village paper, and says in no uncertain voice, "Hear ye of Jersey that I want to be Governor!"

But is the Governor's chair big enough for Chauncey?

It was made for smaller men.

And think of what Chauncey's feelings would be when he got to Trenton, and, after one of his weighty, ponderous little things the Gubernatorial chair of New Jersey is, was towed up to the top of the cupola of the capitol, and there should cast his gloating orbs of blue across the black waters of the Delaware river to the Pennsylvania hills beyond!

They are all bigger than Ripley Hill.

Beholding that fact, might he not swell up his tremendous girth of waist and from the top of his six-feet-tour of height vent forth a volcanic sounds in tones of staccato thunder?

Would it be strange if he did not want the State and all the people thereof to tremble at his huge presence as he proclaimed:

"Hear ye of the States!

"Hear ye of the territories!

"Hear ye of the Indian reservations, and even the sand lots of California!

"Hear ye from Maine to Oregon!

"That I want to be President."

But would the feelings of Chauncey as he looked down upon the Pennsylvania Hills be as anything compared to his feelings when he saw the New York Hill?

Would he not want to jump on that Hill with both his ponderous feet? And if he did jump on it with those feet, just think of what the consequence would be!

No more the defiant tones from the New York Hill would be heard saying to the Republican party: "I am a Democrat!"

Instead might we not expect to hear from Ripley Hill in tones of deafening thunder, to the uttermost parts of the earth and the sea: "Ho, dwell ye!" in the awful words: "I am a Mugwump!"

But would the Presidency of the great United States satisfy Chauncey?

Even the Presidential chair was made for smaller men.

Would not Chauncey's waist places still be lacking in that rotundity which indicates fullness within, if it does not indicate satisfaction without?

Would he be even satisfied with the earth?

Alas, would he not, if he had the earth, then want the moon for a footstool, and the other planets for stepping stones to greater worlds beyond?

Who can tell? Who can fathom the greatness of the ponderous appetite of this ponderous man?

We give it up. For, though there are as big fish in the sea as ever was caught,

Where can you find an equal or an ass
To a man of his weight?

Who could fill his ravenous maw?
We give it up. All are too thin.

If size is to decide who will be governor.

Is Your Name Smith?

On Wednesday, Aug. 31, the Smiths and their friends will meet on their grounds near Peapack. This is their 17th annual reunion and picnic. It is said to excel in Somerset county that brings together a larger or better-behaved crowd. Rev. Geo. W. Scarlett of New Hurley, N. Y., will deliver the address of the day, but other speakers are expected. The German Valley Brass Band will furnish the music, and refreshments will be for sale on the grounds.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

THE CHOLERA SCARE.

New York Officials Guarding Against It.

New York, August 25 (Special.)—The health officers are thoroughly aroused to the cholera emergency. That it is an emergency in so far as that the scourge will, in all human probability, reach us, and soon, via the transatlantic steamships, they no longer care to conceal, and they are putting forth every effort to be ready for it when it does come. They say, and they evidently believe, that they will be able to cope with it.

Travel to Hamburgh Stopped.

New York, Aug. 25. (Special.)—Despatches received to-day at the office of the Hamburg American Packet Company, 37 Broadway, state that the directors of the company have resolved to adopt radical measures to prevent the introduction of cholera into the country by the steamships of that line.

The company has decided to discontinue the service of fast ships and cabin passengers to Hamburg until the epidemic has disappeared.

The steamships Fuerst Bismarck, Normannia, Augusta, Victoria, etc., will ply only to Southampton until further orders, and will carry no immigrant passengers whatever.

Master Workman Sweeney Knocked Down.

Buffalo, Aug. 25, (Special.)—At 10.45 o'clock at the corner of Swain and Main streets a crowd of switchmen surrounded Master Workman Sweeney, demanding that he declare a strike from New York to Chicago.

Words ensued and Switchman Quinn, of the Nickle Plate yards, struck Master Workman Sweeney a ferocious blow, knocking him down.

Blood flowed in a stream from Sweeney's nose.

Quinn got his leader's head against a telegraph pole and punched and pounded him until relieved by Excitement prevails.

The 600 Convicts Returned.

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 25, (Special.)—The 600 convicts recently sent back here from Oliver Springs, Tracy City and Inman by rioters were yesterday formally returned to their prisons. They will be protected by numerous guards.

Fifteen Men Drowned.

Calcutta, Aug. 25. (Special.)—The Anchor Line Steamship Anglia, bound hence for England, capsized in the Hoogly river. Thirty-two of her crew were saved, but fifteen are missing.

The Chautauqua Salute.

The crowning beauty of a Chautauqua girl is her pocket-handkerchief. She has dozens of handkerchiefs, and they are all just too sweet for anything. She has embroidered them herself, and they match her dress and her eyes. She has a beautiful little legend which starts you talking upon what soon becomes a very alarming conference. The Chautauqua salute, she will tell you, "is the waving of a pocket-handkerchief. When we come together our leader silently lifts his handkerchief, and everyone in the big assembly waves a handkerchief at the same time. The effect is ever so impressive; it is our national salute, and we feel very proud in having pretty pocket-handkerchiefs ready for it. It is one of mine I marked 'Milpah,' which means 'The Lord watch between me and thee while we are absent from one another.'"—Detroit Free Press.

Bicycle Notes.

The Business Men's Cycling Club of Newark, it is said, are arranging for a relay race between Philadelphia and Newark. The scheme is said to contemplate the covering of the distance in one hundred miles, four men from as many clubs, and each man to ride a distance of one mile. The honors will be delivered to representatives of each of the ten clubs who will start from the City of Brotherly Love, and will be delivered in turn by starters to riders of their own club at the end of the relay, and so on. The club whose messenger first delivers his message in Newark will receive a handsome prize. There will be several chances for Union county wheelmen to win further honors.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

At least one millionaire's daughter earns her living. It is said that Miss Pullman gets a thousand dollars a year from her pays for naming sleeping cars.

It is pleasant to know that the Chilians are not only recovering from the effects of their civil war, but are also rapidly recovering their good will toward the United States. Consul McCreery, of Valparaiso, says the people are working hard to develop the marvelous resources of their country. A few months ago a gold dollar was worth three dollars in Chilian paper money. Now the paper money has so appreciated that a dollar and a half of it is equivalent to one gold dollar.

Another horrid outrage has been perpetrated on the American flag. Some campers from Youngstown, O., over near Fort Stanley, Ont., had the stars and stripes hoisted over their tents in the wild wilderness up there, and some of the untutored natives of the region snatched it down and tore it to pieces. Those campers did not know how to conciliate the savage tribes who inhabit Canada. If they had only opened a beer saloon they might have flung to the breezes above it the flags of all nations at once, that of the United States included. Then the ignorant and barbarous Canucks would have come in peacefully beneath its starry folds and taken a drink. Any flag may be unfurled anywhere so long as it waves over a whisky shop.

More Stories.

An ably conducted newspaper some time since sent out circulars to its subscribers asking them to make suggestions which, in their judgment, would enable the editors to make the paper more useful and interesting. It is mentioned rather as a reproach to these excellent subscribers that three-fourths of them wanted more stories.

But is it a reproach? Not so. The fact is the race has been preached at from all points of approach till it is mortally tired of it. We do want more stories of the best sort; those which will appeal to the imagination and the finer sympathies and wake us up and give us "thrills" all over. We do want "thrills," that is what we want, for we are flagged and life seems a wooden, leaden stretch of up hill. The ancients used to incite warriors to desperate deeds in battle by recounting the marvelous feats of their heroes and ancestors. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" perhaps did more than anything else to break the chains of the slave, and the novels of Charles Reade and Dickens aroused public sentiment in England to the outrages perpetrated on working children and insane patients as nothing else had done.

There are stories enough written, in all conscience, but there is nothing in them. Not more than one in a hundred of those sent to newspaper and magazine offices can be used. They are not worth printing. But we do want more good stories; the more the better. Where are the real magicians who shall inspire our tired, stupid souls?

Old Indian Names.

If the red man had given us nothing else than cornbread and hominy he would have bestowed on the American white man an incalculable boon. But he has given us also an inexhaustible supply of names, mostly musical and always different from those in any other part of the world. On this supply of names we should draw on all occasions possible when a new town or mountain is to be christened. The Indian names have a poetic or legendary signification. They should be faithfully preserved, if for no other reason than that they constitute a source of information as to the history of a fast vanishing people.

Yet, with all these noble Indian names at hand, there is a tendency to drop them altogether and give to American towns borrowed English names, already duplicated dozens of times, and which are absolutely meaningless in United States history. The outrage is even perpetrated of rebaptizing a town and changing its beautiful old Indian name to a British one. Maine has been especially guilty in this respect. Portland itself, the largest city in the state, was originally an Indian village called Casco. The name was a musical and striking one. Then for some reason the name of the place was changed to Machigonne, pronounced Mashigon, also an Indian name, not so musical as the first one, but still an original appellation.

Machigonne it should have been left, but not a British word had to be tacked to the beautiful town by somebody who had exceedingly bad taste, and it was baptized once more, this time to be called Falmouth. But the people of the place had become nervous in their minds on the subject of names by this time, and once more renamed the city, this time calling it Portland. It may be remarked that there are at present thirty Portlands in the United States. Worse still, a few miles out of Portland was a village called Saccarappa, where is a fine water power. The same mania for meaningless British names has changed Saccarappa into Westbrook.

Such changes are outrages on the artistic sense. Keep the fine old Indian names. They have a history and mean something.

THE BIG STRIKE ENDED.

It Is Officially Declared Off by Grand Master Sweeney.

THE CONFERENCE DUG ITS GRAVE.

None of the Other Railroad Organization Chiefs Would Agree to Call the Men Out and That Settled It—Governor Flower Issues a Proclamation.

BUFFALO, Aug. 25.—The switchmen's strike was declared off at midnight. After a fruitless conference with the leaders of the trainmen's, conductors' and firemen's orders Grand Master Sweeney has decided to give up the battle.

Chief Sweeney failed utterly to secure an ally at the conference. Chief Sargent, of the firemen; Chief Clark, of the conductors, and Chief Wilkinson, of the trainmen, listened to his arguments, which lasted for three hours, and at the end of that time told Mr. Sweeney as politely and kindly as they could that he had failed to demonstrate that the firemen, conductors or trainmen had any interest in the battle and that they would not take part in it.

Chief Arthur, of the locomotive engineers, refused to be present, and that had much to do with the result. Messrs. Sargent, Clark and Wilkinson have the greatest respect for Mr. Arthur's judgment, and they were ready to believe with him that the time has not yet come for a fight on the part of organized labor against the corporations.

Admitted They Were Beaten.

At the end of the conference Mr. Sweeney retired from Room 18, Brezzel House, which is occupied by Mr. Sargent and where the chiefs met, greatly chagrined. He had, it is said, offered almost any terms for the support of the firemen, conductors or trainmen.

He was ready, he said, to enlist the switchmen in the cause of their organizations at any point in the country if they would only support him now.

Chief Sargent was very conservative. He said that what was wanted was a grand federation of railroad employees and that until it was formed the switchmen had better go back to work.

Grand Master Clark, of the conductors, gave as his opinion that the railroads were moving freight, and that the switchmen had shown their ability to make a fight alone, and they had failed to demonstrate that they had deserved any help at this stage from the other orders. They went in for a single handed fight and lost it. It was too late to bring in other orders on the question of principle.

After the result of the conference Mr. Sweeney had nothing to do but declare the strike off. He called a meeting of the officials of the order here at the Genesee House to hear his report on the opinions of the other grand masters. Master Morarity, of Lodge 39, the local organization of the switchmen, was in attendance with three of the officers of the lodge. They talked the situation over and had to admit that they were beaten.

The Strike Declared Off.

The statement of the end of the strike made verbally by Grand Master Sweeney was in substance as follows: "The duly authorized committee declared the strike off at midnight and I have sanctioned that decision. Five hundred and fifteen switchmen cannot cope with twelve big railway corporations and 8,000 militia and succeed. We have made a brave fight and lost."

Asked if he had anything to say in regard to the failure of the other organizations to come to the aid of the switchmen, Sweeney replied: "Let them speak for themselves. I have nothing further to say."

As other questions were about to be asked Mr. Sweeney, a member of the committee with whom the grand master had been consulting created a small sized sensation by saying: "I want to say right here that the brakemen, firemen and trainmen refused to give us any help. My name is Barrett and you can say I said so."

During this brief but emphatic speech Mr. Sweeney and others present tried to keep the indignant brother quiet, but he had his say.

When asked to give his views on the possibility that the present strike may lead to a renewal of the Federation of Railway Employes, Mr. Sweeney declined to say anything further, and the reporters

BOMB, PANIC AND RIOT.

A Car Laden with Carnegie Steel Blown Up at Pittsburg.

PANDEMONIUM INSIDE THE MILLS.

The Nonunion Men Got Scared, Some One Turned the Lights Out and a Free Fight Ensued, in Which Ugly Injuries Were Inflicted—Perpetrators Escape.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 23.—A car loaded with steel ingots, consigned to the Carnegie firm at the Thirty-third street works, was blown up with dynamite or some other high explosive on a side track of the Allegheny Valley railway at Thirty-fourth street. It was the first attempt at destruction of property around the Carnegie City mills and caused great excitement inside and outside of the works. The body of the car was badly shattered and the contents scattered in all directions. A reserve force of police was summoned and quickly surrounded the place, but no one was captured.

There was a loud report in the yard, which was heard blocks away. The patrolman nearest the yard had seen a cloud of white smoke rise from one of the cars when the explosion occurred, and he quickly reported to the officer in charge of the guard. In a few minutes policemen had surrounded the yard, and word had been telephoned to the Twelfth ward to send more men to the scene.

Reaching the car from which the guard had seen the smoke rise, the police found that the side and end had been blown out and the contents scattered about. Between the cars a fuse eight feet long was found. The fact that the car was bound for the Carnegie mill led to the belief that either the strikers or their sympathizers were responsible for the work of destruction.

A Free-for-All Fight.

When the explosion occurred the nonunion men, many of whom had retired and were sleeping in their bunks, became panic stricken and made a rush for the gates. Superintendent Wrigley, who was seated at the main gate and talking with the watchman, quickly closed the gate and locked it. At the same instant some one turned off the electric light current and the entire mill and yards were in darkness.

The nonunion men engaged in a free-for-all fight, which lasted nearly half an hour, during which a great many of the men were badly and in some cases seriously injured.

One of them had a hand smashed so badly as to require amputation; others received injuries so serious as to require their removal to a hospital. In the morning the workmen discovered the man who turned off the lights, and threw him out of the millyard bodily and his clothing after him.

George McCluboy, a workman, who is said to be responsible for the stampede, was promptly discharged by the management. Subsequently he tried to join the strikers, but they refused to receive him in their ranks.

Among the rumors which quickly spread immediately after the explosion was one that a bold and daring attempt had been made by the strikers to blow up the Twenty-third street mill.

Another had it that a cannon had been placed at a high elevation opposite the mill by the strikers, who had determined to bombard the Carnegie plant and drive out all the nonunion men at work and wreck the great works. Then there was still another that a battery of boilers inside the mill had been got and caused great destruction of life and property.

Thrown from Inside the Mill.

For fully two hours these reports were being bandied about the Penn avenue district. At no time since the great strike was first inaugurated in this city has excitement been so intense in the vicinity of the mill as it was last night.

Detective Jerry Gumbert and several police officials are of the opinion that it was done either by the strikers or by sympathizers, not to do very great damage, but simply to create excitement and sway public sympathy.

The leaders of the press committee, after making an investigation, believe that the dynamite was thrown from the inside of the mill, substantiating this view by saying that the car was carried past the slow sign set the mill. They say they will use every effort to ferret out the matter.

The nonunion men blame the strikers and the latter go further and state that it is a scheme on the part of somebody directly interested to ruin their cause by turning the good will of the public against them.

To Change Their Halls.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—The old standard 80-pound steel rail which has been in use by the Pennsylvania Railroad company is to be gradually done away with, and in the future on the main lines the standard track will be 100 pounds.

Postoffice Burglars Caught.

TOLEDO, Aug. 23. — The burglars, who robbed the postoffice at Geneseo, N. Y., recently, and who assaulted Postmaster Olmstead, were arrested here.

The Reading Troops Paid.

READING, Pa., Aug. 23.—The Reading artillerists (Company A, Fourth regiment) have been paid for their service at Homestead last month.

Marine Hospital Inspection.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—United States Surgeon General Wyman arrived here on his annual inspection of marine hospitals.

Not Surprised That Way.

Lord Shadycove—Of course, I can never be very intimate with your father, he being in trade, but he will not be surprised to find me with some familiar prefixless, will he?

Miss Manhattan—Oh, no. Nothing feel ish or ill bred that you can do will surprise him.—Life.

LONG BRANCH OC

SOME OF THE MISTAKES MADE BY THE "EASY GOING" MOTHER.

Is the easy going the ideal mother? After a prolonged study of those who err in either ways and unconsciously, often with the purest motives, work great harm in the baby lives intrusted to their care, one is almost ready to believe that the ability to "let alone" is the most valuable trait in a mother. Yet on looking closely into her ways and noting the results of her course that belief is sadly shaken. Let us observe her a little.

The home of the easy going is overrun by babies, that being the easiest way to get along. Not one baby is sweeter than a wholesome baby; but who—besides its mother—wants it always in the foreground, its dressing the most important event of the family life, the details of its breakfast occupying the whole household and its nap throwing a spell of enforced silence on every one within the walls.

Out of the cradle the children become even more pervasive; nothing is forbidden them and no care is taken to teach them the difference between use and abuse. In consequence the family life, the details of its book on the premises, not a chair that is firm, not a table unmutilated. Boys ride the spring furniture and harness the chairs if they do not hack and destroy to the top of their bent. Girls bang the piano, "take tea" in the parlor, scatter tacks and doll rags as well.

They think they have a good time; so does their mother, who consoles herself for present discomfort and the alienation of her friends by the belief that they will outgrow all this lawlessness. "Boys will be boys" is one of the first articles in her creed. It is not a grievance should let the weeds grow up among the flowers in the belief that they can be more easily disposed of when of full size and well rooted, forgetting that the strong growing weeds will long before that time have crushed the life out of the flowers, and that even if by great labor they are pulled up and eradicated then they will leave a scarred and seamed surface.

Think of the martyrdom of a guest in the home of the easy going! Not only are the children always under foot, the chairs sticky and bread and butter on the sofa, but the small tyrants themselves, with their noise and unrestrained wildness, insist on seeing her, probably roll her gown with greasy fingers, handle her parasol and fan, run off with her umbrella and often go so far as to demand any little thing in her possession that pleases their fancy.

And how is the untrained child in other people's houses? In is not the terror of the hostess, who dreads his encroachments, his violence among the pretty things which her own children have been taught to respect? Is not such a child the true "infant terrible" for which America is famous?

The effect upon the children themselves is the greatest. Left to their own devices, with their wills untrained, the seeds of carelessness and selfishness rapidly grow into weeds which may take a lifetime to root out. A sad wrong is done to children who are befriended of the necessary discipline, who are not taught to respect the rights of others and to restrain their own lawlessness. Because of this neglect they are dreaded and feared by every one who knows them, when with a little control they might have been a credit to parents, a joy to friends and a welcome guest every where.—Olive Thorne Miller in Washington Star.

Keeping Up Appearances.

Keeping up appearances is always a disastrous mistake. It is often a wonder to the student of social life why middle class folks hasten with such joyous alacrity to pass the dividing line between themselves and the wealthy. What possible good can it do to have your neighbors think you are richer than you are?

Perhaps owing to church connection a couple living unostensibly on $6,000 a year receive an invitation to a reception from a family living in affluence on a large income. In reality this is not a matter for congratulation, for the misery resulting from such a common incident is often great. To accept it means perhaps a new evening gown, which, when finished, calls for long wrisied gloves and slippers. A carriage is another expense which was not thought of at first. Circumstances may be such that all this outlay just at this time, when an insurance premium or the bill for the winter coal is due, cripples the prosperity for some months. The effect may be felt in many ways, and all for what?

An hour's mingling with people out of one's sphere and the satisfaction of reading one's name in the social columns next day. But the trouble does not end here. The middle class wife, anxious to show her appreciation of the favor, calls soon after. If her call is never returned she feels bitter. If it is, very likely it happens on a Thursday, when her one domestic is out and when nothing is just as it should be. Tears of vexation are in her eyes as she throws herself into a chair after her wealthy caller has driven away, as she recalls the sound of the basement bell and other irritating disturbances of the day.

Sometimes such an invitation is only the beginning of many others, for our middle class couples are social and their company is agreeable. If this is followed up not only do they spend every cent of their income, but perhaps are led into debt. Money which should go for children and music lessons, for repairs on the house or for new literature is spent in the struggle to make as good an appearance in society as others with far more income.

What could be more idiotic?—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Bane of the Sympathetic Woman.

It is not the mendicant who comes to you to beg for money and for life's necessities. that eats into your very vitals. It is not the unfortunate victim of poverty and sickness whom you run across occasionally or take the trouble to hunt up that wears and tears your nervous system. It is not your heart achings with sympathy. It is your acquaintance and your friend who discovers your capacity for extending true sympathy. He is constantly finding demands upon your heartstrings. He takes everything from you and never sees that you are in trouble of any kind unless told of it in the plainest words, and then he will not listen until he is fully relieved of his own grievances. He is always in deep trouble, and will shift his burdens to you if he can, or otherwise if only continually offended because you do discover for yourself that he is in need of your sympathy.

The world is full of such people and they are the worst kinds of frauds. Men will come to women and tell them how much they need a true and sincere woman friend; that their lives might have been so different if they had had such a friend; that they are lonely and have so little to live for; that they have many acquaintances but none to whom they can go in confidence, and no one to take an interest in them; no one to save them from perdition, and a lot of other things, all the time with a pathetic look in the eyes that goes to the heart of any woman. The woman—never thinking that if a man has not the friends that he craves, and plenty of them, that it is his own fault, and his only—to satisfy her own conscience of right and wrong feels that she must do all that she can to keep that man from becoming a wreck.

She gives him her best sympathy, truest friendship—her love. Sometimes she marries him. Sometimes she does not. Whatever she does she gives honestly all that is best of herself. He gives her—nothing, but the satisfaction of thinking she is reforming him. Poor fool, she! How many women there are who go through life keeping a reform school. He tears her heartstrings out with anxiety for him, and his sympathy, his most agreeable, charming self goes to some one whom he cannot impose upon.—Teresa Dean in Chicago Inter Ocean.

Breakfast Appetites.

Some people are never hungry at breakfast time, and others make breakfast the heaviest meal of the day.

It often happens, however, especially with persons who have a light lunch at noon, that the late dinner is made an unduly hearty meal, resulting in lack of appetite for the morning repast.

This condition of things is not an unmixed evil. The number of people who rush out of bed and consume a hearty meal at once must always be limited to those of exceedingly robust digestion. Many must have breakfast at so early an hour that no opportunity is given for preliminary exercise sufficient to start the dormant secretions, and a hearty meal with the stomach full of the night's mucus results in serious indigestion. Consequently the average individual swallows a cup of coffee and a roll and sallies out.

Under the circumstances probably this is better than the hearty meal. But the trouble lies in the long interval between breakfast and dinner. If a cup of milk or a small sandwich could be supplied at the time when real hunger and subsequent faintness comes on, a thing which so often happens between 9 and 11 o'clock (for those who have had a 6 o'clock breakfast), one would hardly care if breakfast did consist chiefly of the traditional cup of coffee.

For those who can control their meal hours, and who are not obliged to retire so late as to make late rising imperative, attention to two or three apparently trifling things will make remarkably insure a good breakfast appetite.

Do not eat heartily very late in the evening. Rise half an hour or more before the breakfast hour and drink a glass of cold water. This helps to dissolve and wash away the mucus, and by distending the stomach prepares it to receive food imme diately upon your heartstrings. He takes everything from you and never sees that you are in trouble of any kind unless told of it in the plainest words, and then he will not listen until he is fully relieved of his own grievances. He is always in deep trouble, and will shift his burdens to you if he can, or otherwise if only continually offended because you do discover for yourself that he is in need of your sympathy.

BREVITIES

—Rahway has three Democratic Clubs and this city has two.

—The oyster—the choice bivalve of the season—will make his advent two weeks hence.

—A new G. A. R. Post has been organized at German Valley. It is known as Star Post, No. 71.

—Yesterday was the closing day of the second Summer meeting of the Monmouth Park Racing Association at Little Silver.

—John Goel, of Elizabeth, was shot at three times last night by Wm. Leuch. Two bullets missed and the third entered Goel's thigh. Leutch was arrested.

—The Relay Columbia which was lost by Captain Frank L. C. Martin a few days ago, was returned to him yesterday afternoon, during the progress of the race.

—Mrs. J. C. Fernald will lead the missionary meeting of the Young People's League of the First Baptist church to-night at eight o'clock. Strangers welcome.

—Five young men assaulted Max Brooks in Elizabeth yesterday and he now lies in a critical condition. They were all arrested and are held in $750 bail each.

—On Saturday, August 27th, an excursion on the Central railroad to that wonderland of nature, Mauch Chunk, will leave the Plainfield station as advertised elsewhere.

—The East Orange Cyclers will hold an eighteen mile handicap road race on Saturday afternoon, September 3. The course will be from this city to East Orange, by way of Springfield.

—The Arlingtons of Plainfield played a match game of ball with the Giants of North Plainfield yesterday. The game closed at the seventh inning on account of rain. The score was 6—9 in favor of the Arlington's.

—Resignations have been demanded and received from a number of the men in charge of the various departments of the Singer Sewing Machine Works at Elizabethport. The cause of the discharges is not made public.

—Apple-growers can take a profitable step forward this year by abandoning the time-honored barrel and packing their finest fruit in small boxes or crates. The market is quite ready for this departure and such packages would undoubtedly prove popular.

—Jersey mosquitoes must now take second place. A Massachusetts mosquito has occasioned considerable trouble to a young woman who was bitten by it a month ago. She is now at a Boston hospital awaiting the amputation of her right arm, as a result of the blood poisoning that set in.

—A meeting of colored men was held in Trenton on Wednesday to arrange for a large convention to be held at Trenton on September 15. The object of the convention is to take steps looking to the political advancement and recognition of New Jersey colored men. Charles N. Robinson, of Camden is chairman, and Jesse Lawson of this city is secretary of the called committees. Mr. Lawson is employed in the Pension office at Washington, D. C.

Rain Prevents the Farmers' Picnic.

The farmers of Essex, Morris and Union counties were to have their annual basket picnic or harvest home at Swinefield Bridge, on the Passaic River, northwest of Caldwell, yesterday afternoon. On account of the rain it was postponed.

These yearly gatherings of farmers and their wives and children were begun many years ago. They were the copied after the "harvest homes" of England, where from time immemorial the farmers have celebrated the harvesting of the hay and grain by a grand social reunion in a forest or open field.

DuMont—Morgan.

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth DuMont, daughter of Wm. H. DuMont, to Duncan Morgan, of Plainfield, took place at six o'clock Tuesday evening at the residence of the bride's father. The house was prettily decorated with golden rod and sea flowers. The bride looked charmingly pretty in her gown of white silk. Rev. Mr. Simpson, of the Church of Our Saviour, Netherwood, officiated. Dr. Cornell, of Plainfield, was best man, and Miss DuMont, sister of the bride, acted as maid of honor.—Unionist-Gazette.

Mr. Morgan is a very popular member of the Plainfield Bicycle Club.

In Darkest North Plainfield.

Last evening through the burning out of a wire in the machine room of the Electric light works, North Plainfield was left in darkness so deep that it was impossible to see the length of a cane, excepting when the vivid lightning flashes of the coming storm lighted up the surroundings. At about ten o'clock the damaged wire was discovered and the lights started again. Somebody, during the day, had been tampering with the switches, and steps have been taken to prevent a recurrence of the mishap.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. R. H. Bedford of Park avenue is at Bradley Beach, N. J.

Mr. Cyrus Smith of Harlingen, is enjoying a visit to this city.

Mr. Edward D. Ryder of Central avenue starts to-morrow for Thousand Islands.

City Judge W. E. Codington is away from duty for a few days. He has gone to Lake Hopatcong.

Mrs. Edward Sebring and child are home again after having a delightful visit to the mountains.

Mr. John I. Collins, of the Union County Standard, Westfield, is stopping at the Albion, for his Summer vacation.

Secretary Harry Manning of the Y. M. C. A., and Mrs. Manning, returned last night from a two weeks' stay at Bradley Beach.

Mr. Percy Stewart, Yale '89, and brother, Wesley Stewart, Yale '94, of West Eighth street, were visitors in Asbury Park yesterday.

Rev. J. P. Searle of Somerville is spending a month on and around Lake Ontario. He is accompanied by Rev. Mr. Raymond, formerly of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Voehl, their children and grand children, who have been whiling Time Summer away at Sunset Cottage near Mt. Horeb, have returned to their homes.

Mr. and Mrs. John Chandler of East Third street are home from their trip to Colorado. Mr. Chandler was one of the representatives of the Knights of Pythias from this city.

Ex-Councilman Wm. McD. Coriell, with his daughter-in-law and Mrs. Meader returned home yesterday from Asbury Park. Mr. Coriell gained ten pounds while there, and says he disliked leaving the beach very much.

J. Madison Drake, Jr., of Elizabeth, youngest son of Gen. J. Madison Drake of the Veteran Zouaves, editor and publisher of the Daily Leader, and Miss May Schooley, daughter of Edward Schooley, a Custom House Inspector at New York, who also lives in Elizabeth were married by the Rev. Nelson Hollifield of the Third Presbyterian church of Newark, N. J., at the parsonage Tuesday night.

Echoes of Yesterday's Race.

The circular course over which the riders in yesterday's 25 mile handicap bicycle race went four times is five and three eighths miles in extent. The first laps were made by Wills in 17 minutes and 23 seconds, the second lap in 17 minutes and 35 seconds, the third lap in 18 minutes and 14 seconds, the fourth lap in 15 minutes and 28 seconds, and the three and half miles of home stretch in seven minutes and 11½ seconds.

During the first lap, J. S. Pike of Plainfield dropped out.

In the second lap a boy was knocked down by Greenwood of East Orange Cyclers, and J. Cockburn, R. A. C. disappeared.

When the riders were nearing the "tape" at the end of the third lap a funeral was passing, which, together with several wagons going in the opposite direction, the crowd that blocked the street and the sharp corner the racers had to turn, made it look as if an accident would be inevitable, though none occurred. In this lap, C. Maltby, E. Martin, and G. Coffin dropped out, and in the fourth and last lap all but the eight men who finished left the race.

There were 12 Columbias, 4 Humbers, 2 Libertys, 1 Victor, 1 King of Scorchers and 1 Keating, ridden in the event.

Hazleton the winner, rode a 32 lb. "Bogie man" Liberty.

Warren A. Clapp set a very hot pace for the seven minute men at the start and would have undoubtedly made a good showing but for an accident. He was thrown from the track on the latter fell, and Clapp ran over his fallen competitor and machine. He himself had a bad fall and cut his knee.

G. Coffin, of Newark, who made such a reputation by running the 100-mile handicap race from Philadelphia to Newark a few months ago, discarded his 32 seconds handicap and started from scratch, but owing to a recent illness was unable to continue and gave up after the second lap.

The first prize, a Victor pneumatic safety, was awarded to J. Willis, Westfield; second prize, gold medal, George Mahon, Plainfield. Third prize, silver, medal, Cobb Coffin, Newark. Time prize, gold medal with ruby, J. B. Hazelton, Rockaway, N. J.

Local Election Officers.

As published in Wednesday's News there were no changes made by the Union County Board of Registration in the list of election officers for this city and Fanwood. The list is as follows:

Second District—Franklin B. Milling-ton, R.; James B. Martin, R.; Jacob Kriney, D.; Timothy A. McCarthy, D.

FANWOOD.

Edward Miller, R.; Joseph Clark, R.; William C. Stansbury, D.; Wm. E. Ferris, D.

—Messrs. Hallock & Davis have opened a department for boys clothing. They advertise particulars.

—The United Tea and Coffee Growers' Association advertisement to-day will inform their patrons of a few of the bargains they are offering.

END OF THE IRON HALL.

THE PLAINFIELD ASSOCIATION DISBANDED LAST NIGHT.

Clever Work on the Part of the Local Officers Saved $6000 of the Association's Money and Released the Bondsmen—History of the Order.

Last night wound up the affairs of the Iron Hall Association of this city.

The branch was organized here over two years ago. It numbered about 60 in membership.

Among its members were men of every standing, business men, laborers, clerks, mechanics and other professional men. The association started out with great prospects. Eleven years of unprecedented success in fraternal insurance had placed the prestige of the order on a high pinnacle. The apprehension of insurance statistics was bewildering, and the decisive morsel of quick gained wealth held the adherents of the cause enthralled.

One thousand dollars for $250 in seven years, payable in monthly or semi-monthly instalments was the bait. The order elected as its first chief justice Mr. S. E. Flower.

The business was conducted upright, and without default on the part of any of its local members.

Two weeks ago when the affairs of the supreme sitting reached a crisis and seemed to be in a critical condition, the branch here called its members together and resolved to do something to save the reserve fund which was allowed to remain in the hands of the local branch and which would net a rebate of about 20 per cent of all that had been paid in by each member. The arrangement effected was due to the sagacity of the officers and the legal advisement. Several of the officers resigned and new ones were elected without bond. All monies and other property were turned over, and the old bondsmen released. This placed the money in the hands of certain persons whose honesty was above question.

Then the Order awaited developments of the supreme sitting at Indianapolis. When it was found that nothing further could be done to prevent a receivership, the branch 1199 decided to dispose of the funds by an equitable disbursement to each member.

A large number of members were present last night to assist at the obsequies, and from the speeches it could be ascertained that formerly had been a financial Mohammed, and that the light which had guided them through many years of expectancy and the delights of anticipation of future wealth had failed.

After much debate a resolution was adopted finally disbanding the branch.

A committee was appointed to hold the property in custody and see that all bills standing against the branch were immediately paid.

The branch had accumulated over $800 in reserve. Only a few members have been recipients of sick benefits and the branch was considered to be one of the best.

Several members who had been sick recently will lose their portion. The members went to their homes last night with the feeling that Indianapolis was no longer the Mecca of those who enlisted under the banner of the Iron Hall.

Safeguards Against Cholera.

The practical question which concerns us in this country is the danger to which we are exposed. That is not very great. In the first place the fact of the presence of the disease is known, and in such matters to be forewarned is emphatically to be forearmed. Second, the period of incubation of cholera is very short. Persons are with Cholera on board without the quarantine physicians finding us bearing of cases. The outbreak at Hamburg occurred in this city some months ago was produced by people who, owing to the long incubation of typhus, came to Hamburg while seemingly well. Of course, the germs might come here in rags, but the cleansing days have of passing without disinfection are extraordinarily small nowadays. As water and food are the carriers of the germs, it follows that these must be carefully watched should the disease find a hideous grave here. It is most fortunate that the cholera bacillus can neither stand heat nor cold. A few days of sharp frost will kill it, as will a little of the disease out. Food must be eaten while hot and fresh from the fire, and water, in cholera times, must be boiled.—Cyrus Edson, M. D., in North American Review for September.

HAMBURG RAGS LANDED IN BROOKLYN.

Although it is now officially known that Asiatic cholera is raging at Hamburg, rescals from that port are permitted to land cargoes of rags at Brooklyn piers.

The steamship Marsala brought 200 bales from that port a few days ago, and they are now stored on the North Pier. Benjamin Barth, New York, eighteen bales, brought over by the steamship Brunania from Tripoli and Naples, all these bales in accordance with the understanding that they should be at once transshipped, but this condition has not complied with. The steamship Sorrente, from Hamburg was due to-day, with nearly 100 bales of rags aboard.

Shipping Commissioner Sherry's attention was called to this state of affairs yesterday, and he sent officers down to the pier to see that the rags were disinfected.

"No rags from these ports should be allowed to get into the city," he said. "It is flying in the face of Providence."—N. Y. Herald.

The Hoboken and Jersey City docks are regarded as a point of danger from the fact that Hamburg and Antwerp steamers land there.

ANOTHER LEGAL HOLIDAY.

Gov. Abbett Issues a Proclamation to Observe October 21 as Columbus' Landing Day.

The following proclamation, signed by the Governor, has just been issued:

Whereas, By a joint resolution, approved June 26, 1890, it was resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled:

That the President of the United States be authorized and directed to issue a proclamation recommending to the people the observance in all their localities of the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America on October 21, 1892, by public demonstration and by suitable exercises in the schools and other places of assembly; and,

Whereas, The President of the United States, in pursuance of said authority, did on July 21, 1892, issue his proclamation; and

Whereas, The Executive Committee of the National Columbian Public School Celebration has urged the issuing of proclamations by the Governors of the several States, recommending the people to observe said day for the purposes set forth in said joint resolution of Congress.

Now, therefore, I, Leon Abbett, Governor of the State of New Jersey, in order to carry out the purposes of said resolution, do hereby recommend that October 21, 1892, be observed by the people of this State as a general holiday; that our citizens cease from toil and devote themselves on that day as far as possible to such exercises in their schools and other places of assembly as will properly celebrate the day and carry out the purposes of said resolution.

PROGRESSIVE SUMMIT.

Modern Improvements Adding Greatly to the Place.

The Summit sewerage system is about completed. The house connections are now being made and the sewer mains, which led to the disposal grounds, have been thrown open. From present indications the system will be a success.

Summit now ranks second to no other town in the State as regards modern improvements. A bountiful water supply, together with gas, electric lights and sewers, is among the latest improvements which have been added. The Township Committee is directing its attention to the township roads. Within the past year over fifteen miles of roads have been macadamized, and the work continues. A new township building is in course of erection, as is likewise an engine-house for the volunteer fire company.

Odds and Ends.

THOUGHT A CHICKEN PICKED THEIR FINGERS.

A Madison Co., Ga., farmer named Wilson went to the mill yesterday, leaving his wife and four children contented and happy. Two hours later he returned to find his wife lying on the floor insensible, with the four dead children about her.

When restored to consciousness the mother said she had taken the baby to the spring, leaving the other children in the house. Reaching the spring she put the baby down and hurried back to the house, where she found two dead, the others gone.

The living one said they had been poking their fingers through a crack in the floor and a hen had been picking at them.

The mother went back to the spring after her baby and found it had fallen in the spring and been drowned. The child which died when she got back to the house and the mother swooned away. Investigation showed that the supposed hen was a rattlesnake.

A MONSTER SHARK IN NEWARK BAY.

Excitement prevails among Newark Bay fishermen over a monster shark which has appeared in the bay the last few days. Those who have seen the shark say it is at least fifteen feet long and that its jaws are four feet apart. "Billy" Dixon, a veteran fisherman, accompanied by C. E. Smith, a merchant, sighted the shark at the Central Railroad draw-bridge and tried to bait him with three pounds of fresh meat, but without success. He swam around for a few minutes in close proximity to the bait and then disappeared.

The shark made his first appearance last Tuesday, when he badly frightened George Carmon, an oysterman, by making a rush at his skiff. Carmon struck at the fish with an oar and the shark vanished. Half a dozen other fishermen have seen him since then and they are talking to-night of getting up a big hunt to-morrow to capture the monster.

A Tough Citizen Arrested at Last.

Yesterday's Courier says:

"One unfortunate man was arrested in North Plainfield, last evening, for being drunk. He was committed to the Somerville jail for thirty days."

The "unfortunate" man is Frank Consher, who has been annoying the people of his neighborhood for a long time past and who claims to have an influence with the newspapers so that they withhold his name every time he is arrested. He is also reported as claiming that he has influence with Marshal Pangborn, therefore, regardless of the complaints of the people of the neighborhood, the marshal will not arrest him. A News reporter interviewed Marshal Pangborn on the subject, a few days ago, when it seemed as if this fellow's thirty days' arrest and severe punishment for his offensive conduct. The marshal said the story was not true. Wednesday night, Consher was arrested by Constable Coddington, and the people in his neighborhood claiming they had no faith in Marshal Pangborn, although the marshal assures us that they do him an injustice in making him appear to be shielding such a offender, Justice Crossley intends to teach Consher that he cannot violate the law with impunity, and will next time probably receive sixty days. According to the complaints of the people in the neighborhood, Consher's conduct has been simply outrageous, and it is, to say the least, strange that he should have been allowed to act so long as he has without punishment. He is by occupation a bartender and has worked in the various saloons about town.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

MINERS ENTOMBED.

A Tremendous Explosion and Volumes of Coal Dust—Families Terror-Stricken.

LONDON, August 26—(Special.)—An explosion, which it is feared may be attended by enormous loss of life, has occurred at Aberkenig, near Bridgend, in the county of Glamorgan, Wales.

One hundred and forty-one miners are entrapped in a coal pit, owing to an explosion which shattered the galleries by which they could have made exit.

When the explosion took place a volume of coal dust arose from the mouth of the pit and this, along with the rumbling noise, have notice to the inhabitants that something serious had occurred.

Cholera in England.

LONDON, Aug. 26. (Special.)—There is now no doubt that cholera has at last entered England. The disease was brought here by the steamer Gemma, which arrived at Gravesend yesterday from Hamburgh.

Two aliens who arrived on the Gemma were taken sick and were removed to the hospital at Gravesend, where the doctors pronounced their malady cholera. They died shortly after they were admitted.

Morton Hanged.

CAMDEN, N. J., Aug. 26, (Special.)—James R. Morton, the colored murder, was hanged at 10.35 this morning in the Camden County Jail, at this place, in the presence of about thirty witnesses, including the Sheriff's Jury, newspaper reporters, priests and physicians.

Will Teutonic Break the Record.

The White Star steamship Teutonic sailed from Queenstown at two o'clock yesterday afternoon. Great interest centres on this trip of the Teutonic. It is probable the last time this season she will get an opportunity to try and regain the transatlantic record from the City of Paris. Capt. Irving meets with good weather it is expected the pride of the White Star line will make a very fast run. The record now is 5 days, 15 hours and 58 minutes. If the Teutonic wants to equal this she must be off the Sandy Hook lightship before one o'clock next Wednesday morning.

Dr. T. S. Davis and Mulford Estil are passengers on the Teutonic.

High Coal in Elizabeth.

Coal dealers at Elizabeth say that the wholesale price is to be raised 50 cents a ton on all domestic sizes after September 1. In consequence the retailer will advance the price 50 cents a ton to the consumers, which will make the September price $5.75, or $1 more than it was a year ago and $1.50 more than it was prior to the formation of the local combination. The decision of Chancellor McGill yesterday, however, may change all this.

Killed by a Train at Westfield.

Frank Lisoski of Bound Brook, one of the workmen employed on the Central's new block-signal system at Westfield, was struck by the Flemington express yesterday morning and instantly killed. The accident happened close to the station and in full view of passengers who were waiting for the local train. Several called out to the man, and the engineer of the express whistled sharply, but to no purpose. The remains were taken to Bound Brook on the noon train.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Can Come from the Same State.

Hon. George S. Boutwell writes in the Boston Globe to show that there is nothing in the United States constitution to prevent a president and vice president from being residents of the same state. This document declares only that the electors in their respective states shall vote for a president and vice president, one of whom shall not be a resident of the same state with themselves. Even if the country wanted a president and vice president from the same state, the difficulty could be got around by the electors from that state simply omitting to vote, and leaving "those from the other states to vote for the nominees.

But the provision in the constitution imposes no limitation whatever on congress as to whom it shall vote for in case of failure to choose by the electoral college. The house is simply directed to choose for president one of the three persons having the highest number of votes for president, while the senate is directed to select a vice president from the two candidates having the highest number of votes for vice president. Thus there is absolutely nothing to prevent the Democratic house from electing Mr. Cleveland president and the Republican senate from choosing Mr. Reid as vice president. It would be something new to have a president and vice president of different political parties, but it would not be unconstitutional, and the lack of time and government would still roll on.

Mr. Boutwell calls attention to the fact that the country has drifted quite away from the political intentions of those who adopted the constitution. They had not the faintest notion of the cut and dried primary election and nominating convention of our time. Under our modern system of nominating candidates the electoral college has become practically obsolete.

Mr. Boutwell says:

With the experience of a century in mind we are forced to look upon the electoral college scheme as it was then understood, as an available definition, but still a delusion.

In theory the colleges of the several states were to be composed of persons not pledged to party or to candidates, and who, with a clearness of vision undimmed by venal or low considerations, were to survey the whole field and call to the high places of state the truly great and eminently worthy of the land.

If that scheme had life at the beginning its existence ended with the second term of President Washington.

Gladstone.

Once more that fine old Tory, Queen Victoria, has had opportunity to display her high spirited temper by snubbing Mr. Gladstone and the Liberal party, just as she did in 1880, when Gladstone succeeded Disraeli to the premiership. Gladstone was prime minister from 1868 till 1874, and again from 1880 till 1885. The term on which he is about to enter will therefore be his fourth one in this great office.

Should he survive in good health and with undiminished intellectual power the disturbances and excitement incident to the changes of the next few months, there is no reason why he should not go on peacefully until he sees the actual accomplishment of that which he declared in his first speech to the new parliament had been his "primary and absorbing interest" for seven years—home rule in Ireland. He stood the almost unparalleled fatigue and excitement of the late political campaign fairly well, and his opponents were doubtless grievously disappointed to hear him speak in the new house of commons for one hour and a quarter without a break or quaver in his voice.

Often an absorbing purpose keeps a person alive for years, when otherwise he would die. The prospect of at last giving home rule for Ireland will be an inspiration of health and vigor to the aged statesman. There seems no occasion to apprehend that he will faint before he reaches the goal.

The transportation of $20,000,000 worth of gold in a railway train from San Francisco to the Atlantic coast is one of the events in human life which are calculated to turn a man's hair gray. The engineer who brought the train said, "I would rather carry a ton of dynamite than have the responsibility of this run." It brings to mind the scenes described by Dumas in his novels, away back in the days of the Louises in France, when the nobility transported their gold and silver money in barrels, accompanied by a regiment of guards. There was no paper money to speak of then, and drafts and bank checks were unknown.

Not only does this great country supply Europe with bread, but it is now going to supply it with fruit. The flying steamer Majestic took the first load of California fruit across the ocean to England recently. The luscious pears and peaches were shipped in refrigerator cars across the continent from California to New York, thence to refrigerators in the great steamer's hold and on to England. When the packages were opened they were in good condition and the fruit was sold at auction in London. It does not seem as if the fruit raising business would be overdone in California yet awhile.

In London there are very few periodicals printed in foreign tongues. An English writer says he knows only of two German papers and one Spanish paper printed in that great city.

THE COAL DEAL ILLEGAL

Reading's Combine Is in Defiance of the Constitution.

CHANCELLOR McGILL SO DECIDES.

He Grants a Preliminary Injunction and Under Its Provisions the New Jersey Central Road Must Resume Control of All Its Properties and Franchises.

TRENTON, Aug. 26.—Chancellor McGill's decision in the case of the state against the railroads forming the Reading coal combine has been filed.

The state's contentions that the lease of the Central to the Port Reading is illegal that the tripartite agreement is in violation of law, and the combine is against the policy of the state, because it tends to the monopoly of a public necessity, are all upheld and the preliminary injunction prayed for is granted.

In the course of his decision the chancellor says corporate bodies that engage in public occupations are created by the state upon the hypothesis that they will be a public benefit. They enjoy privileges that individuals cannot have. While the state confers special privileges upon the favorites, it at the same time exacts from them duties which also tend to the public welfare. Such corporations hold their powers in trust for the public weal.

When, therefore, it appears that such corporation is unmindful of its plain duty and acts prejudicially to the public in order to make undue gains and profits for its stock holders, it uses its power in a manner not contemplated by the law which confers them. The lease to the Port Reading was made not only without legal sanction, but in defiance of an expressly prohibitory statute.

Disguise and Evasion.

The chancellor says the attorney general, on behalf of the people, has the election in a case of this kind to proceed at law to forfeit the charter or in equity for a restraint of the evil. There are peculiar features in the transaction that evince a public danger much more serious than appears in the mere transfer of corporate duties to performance by a foreign corporation. The parties interested constitute two of the six great anthracite coal carriers of the country. Through the leasing of the Ohio Valley three of these are enabled by the combination. The proof shows that there are localities in the state which formerly had the advantage of competition between those allied roads, but now are subject to the monopoly which this lease affords.

It is true that the co-operation of the other two roads has not been secured. By this lease only one competition is silenced, and only a little more than one-half of the entire coal region is controlled. It is only the second step in the direction of monopoly, the first being the lease of the Lehigh Valley railroad. It is to be remembered, however, that the attorney general may have his injunction when the ultra vires act tends or is of nature to produce public injury. He is not required to wait until all the monopoly possible is created or until all the injury possible is in process of the injunction.

The answers deny that either the Philadelphia and Reading or the Central owns any coal lands or engages in the coal trade. That is true; but at the same time it is admitted that the Reading owns a majority of the capital stock of the Reading Coal and Iron company, and that the Central owns a majority of the capital stock of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal company. What is this but disguise and evasion? Whatever may be the nominal ownership or the legal title for the substantial purposes of the injury apprehended and the attorney general's complaint, the railroad companies stand as the owners of the coal land in this case.

Disastrous Monopoly.

The chancellor says that while the denials of this may be literally true, such allegations without explanation and in the face of the facts adverted to, savor of an evasion which dissentitles them to that force which is usually accorded to the denials of responsive answers.

Upon preliminary hearings here, the chancellor continues, we have great coal dealers complaining that they are not sufficiently paid for the product of their mines, combining so that already they control more than one-half of the coal fields upon which this state depends for fuel, and looking to the co-operation of the remaining anthracite coal producers to effect a change in the price of their output so that they may have more satisfactory returns from their investments.

To say that these conditions do not tend to a disastrous monopoly in coal would be to insult logic. Further, it is possible that such a monopoly may be used as the defendants suggest, to introduce economies and cheaper coal, but it does violence to our knowledge of human nature to expect such a result.

In conclusion the chancellor says: "The commodity in which these companies deal is a necessary of life in this state. It is the principal fuel of its homes and factories. The slightest increase in its price is felt by a population of hundreds of thousands of persons, for their necessity compels them to pay that increase. If once a complete monopoly be established by the destruction of competition, whether that be through lease or co-operation, the promoters and sharers in it may have whatever price their cupidity suggests, and the danger which will follow cannot be measured. It will permeate the entire community—furnaces, forges, factories and homes—leaving in its trail murmurs of discontent with a government which will tolerate it, and all the other evil effects of oppression."

The Scope of the Injunction.

The chancellor defines the bounds of the injunction which he grants, saying, "I will continue the present injunction to final hearing, adding to it, however, the further direction that the defendants, their officers and agents do desist from further performing and carrying into effect the lease and tripartite agreement; and that the Port Reading and the Philadelphia and Reading companies do desist and refrain from continuing to control the property and franchises of the Central, and from otherwise intermeddling therewith; and that the Central do refrain from permitting the Port Reading and the Philadelphia and Reading to use, control or operate its roads and franchises; and that the Central do again resume control of all its property and franchises and performance of all its corporate franchises."

Coal Advanced Again.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—The east-bound western sales agents of the anthracite coal companies have made a further increase of twenty-five cents a ton in the price of stove and chestnut coal.

LIZZIE BORDEN'S ORDEAL.

The First Day's Hearing Develops Official Slipshod Methods.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 26.—The first day's hearing of the Borden case was brought to a close while Dr. Dolan, who was first called to testify, was still on the stand. The principal thing developed by Attorney Adams' long examination was the exposure of the slipshod methods of the police force and medical examiner, one of the results of which is the imprisonment of Miss Lizzie A. Borden. The principal government witness made a confession to this fact, saying that his final search was delayed and that only a partial autopsy was held shortly after the bodies were discovered.

The witness, after describing the condition of the bodies when found, said that in his opinion the wounds were made by the same instrument. The edge would not necessarily be dulled by the repeated blows.

Continuing his testimony, the medical examiner told of examining the clothing of the Borden girls and described the stains he had found on the hatchet. He thought Mr. Borden's assailant stood between the head of Mr. Borden and the dining room door. From the position of the assailant and Mr. Borden, he thought the former would have received more blood above the waist than below.

He thought the deed could have been done and the person doing it not have more than ten spots on his clothing.

Miss Lizzie Borden did not betray any noticeable feeling during the whole day, except possibly in three or four instances. One was when Dr. Dolan described the ghastly wounds on her father. Then she flushed and tears came into her eyes. She closed her eyes and hid her face behind a palmleaf fan and leaned toward her sister, who also remained with closed eyes until the dreadful tale was ended.

Miss Lizzie and her attorneys are well pleased with the result of the first day's proceedings. There is nothing which attaches the crime to the home, but see a great deal to show careless and even shiftless methods on the part of the prosecution.

Lawyer Jennings, counsel for the defense, gave out a letter purporting to be from Samuel Robinsky, a Jew peddler, who said that on the day of the murder a man whose clothing was covered with blood bought from him four handkerchiefs, a looking glass, collar, necktie and some shoe blacking. The peddler did not then know of the murder and helped the man to "fix up." The defense claim to know that there was a peddler named Robinsky about Fall River on the day of the murder and are making a search for him.

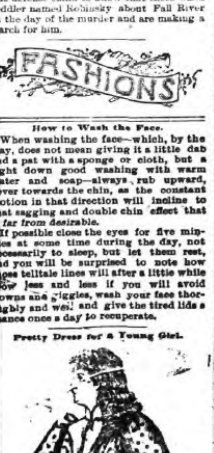
FASHIONS

How to Wash the Face.

When washing the face—which, by the way, does not mean giving it a little dab and a pat with a sponge or cloth, but a rub down and washing with warm water and soap—always rub upward, never towards the chin, as the constant motion in that direction will incline to make the double chin effect that is far from desirable.

If possible close the eyes for five minutes at some time during the day, and nearly be sleep, but let them rest, and you will be surprised to note how those telltale lines will after a little while grow less and less if you will avoid frowns and giggles, wash your face thoroughly and well and give the tired lids a chance once a day to recuperate.

Pretty Dress for a Young Girl.



Here is a very simple but pretty dress for a girl of six to twelve years. This style makes up nicely in two kinds of washing materials, also in plain and fancy pongee silk, cashmere, beige or soft woolen and silk. Bodice has a yoke back and front of plain goods. Sash and ruffle of the plain material, also skirt, pleated.

CHOLERA PRECAUTIONS.

Immigration Here from Infected Ports to Be Suspended.

ADDITIONAL SAFEGUARDS ORDERED

The Treasury Department Extends Its Previous Orders Relative to Fumigation and Disinfection of Baggage—The Disease Brought to England's Doors.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—The treasury department has issued a circular letter to collectors of customs and medical officers of the marine hospital service stating that the department circular dated Aug. 17, 1892, relative to the disinfection of the personal effects and baggage of immigrants prior to embarkation, is extended to include the baggage and personal effects of immigrants from all European and Asiatic ports, and it is further ordered that the provisions of the circular thus amended shall become operative on and after this date, except for articles of baggage, etc., afloat prior to the promulgation of this order, which must be disinfected on arrival.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Spaulding sent the following message to the secretary of state: "Answering the inquiry of the consul at Hamburg as to the length of quarantine, I have to state that ten days is considered long enough, but long enough to disinfect vessels if necessary and give reasonable assurance against the admission of cholera."

The state department also received a cablegram from the consul at Hamburg stating that other countries were absolutely prohibiting the importation of rags from Hamburg, and asking what steps the United States had taken in the premises. The department in reply cabled the regulations set forth in the treasury department circular regarding rags.

Immigration to Be Suspended.

It is said that from on and after this date the embarkation of immigrants for the United States from Germany and Russia will be practically suspended until from by mutual understanding between the steamship lines and the treasury officials of the United States.

The importance of this prohibition is seen when the figures of immigration from ports in the countries infected are given. During the late fiscal year there were 117,419 arrivals at United States ports from Russia and Poland, and 45,797 from Bohemia and Hungary. Immigration from these countries has more than trebled within ten years. The immigration from Germany during the year amounted 130,622 persons and from Austria 34,368 persons.

The Russian immigrants are chiefly by way of England, where the cholera is now raging so virulently. It is estimated that one-third of an average month's supply—that is to say between 6,000 and 7,000 immigrants—pass on their way across the ocean from these infected or inspected ports destined for the ports of New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Boston.

The new regulations in these unwelcome arrivals and disinfecting their baggage will be no light undertaking. All precedents of previous cholera epidemics point to greater danger to the United States the year following an outbreak in Europe than in the same year, but the sanitary officials of the United States here express the opinion that the additions made in sanitation and methods of disinfection, and the increased knowledge acquired of the germs of malignant diseases since the last serious cholera visitation, will enable them to meet the precedents and ward off an epidemic altogether.

HAMBURG, Aug. 26.—The attempt of the authorities to hold back the facts as regards the spread of the cholera has entirely exploded so much indignation that it has been practically abandoned. Today 172 new cases and sixty-nine deaths have been reported.

Most schools have been closed and fairs, balls, public meetings and gatherings of associations have been prohibited. The city is as if in a state of siege. So great is the terror caused by the cholera that it is difficult to get men for the work of burying the dead. Many assistants of undertakers have deserted their places of employment. Business is prostrated and shipping is going to other ports.

Professor Koch, together with his assistants, is working here valiantly day and night, advising with the sanitary authorities.

At England's Doors.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—The steamship Gemma, from Hamburg, arrived at Gravesend to-day with sixty aliens, some of whom are Russian Hebrews. Three of them were reported ill, and upon examination by health officers were found to have symptoms of the cholera. The steamship was quarantined. The health committee of the municipality held a meeting to consider precautions against the cholera. It was announced that all the steamship lines proposed to suspend their emigration traffic until the danger from cholera should be over.

Baltimore Warned.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 26.—Collector of the Port Marine has received a communication from Secretary Foster in regard to the steps that should be taken to prevent cholera from gaining a foothold here. Health Commissioner McShane held a conference with representatives of the different steamship companies plying between Baltimore and European ports. Dr. McShane's suggestion that the baggage of persons coming from cholera infected districts be placed in a separate compartment and fumigated by steam on the way across the Atlantic was favorably received.

Excitement at Antwerp.

ANTWERP, Aug. 26.—The excitement in this city over the outbreak of cholera is increasing. There is little doubt that the disease was brought here by the vessels from eastern Europe. About one-fourth of all the cholera patients removed to the hospitals have died. The quarantine regulations are strictly enforced. Every vessel from German, French and Russian ports to be detained for examination and is thoroughly inspected.

Berlin May Be Infected.

BERLIN, Aug. 26.—There are serious fears that the cholera has broken out in this city. The wife of a merchant of the name of Landrock died with symptoms of Asiatic cholera. It is reported that the assistant of a well known physician said to-day that there had been sixty-five deaths from Asiatic cholera in the city lately, but in all cases the true cause of death had been kept secret.

Savannah Acts Promptly.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 26.—The Savannah health authorities decided to quarantine against all continental European ports as well as Asiatic ports.

THE STRIKERS DEFIANT

Sweeney's Authority Ignored by the Switchmen.

THEY DECIDE TO RENEW THE FIGHT.

Their Chief Assaulted, Accused and Deposed, and Some of the Men Who Returned to Work Come Out Again—Some Troops Leave, but the Rest Must Stay.

BUFFALO, Aug. 26.—The switchmen's strike is on again. Sweeney has been deserted as leader, and the men now defy his authority and threaten his life. John Quinn, chairman of the grievance committee on the Nickel Plate railroad, assaulted Sweeney and almost broke his nose when the grand master had finished his testimony before the board of mediation and arbitration.

Two of Superintendent Morgenstern's detectives have acted as a body guard to Sweeney ever since, and the ex-strike leader has changed the location of his room at the Genesee because of the threats freely made by switchmen that if they can reach him they will kill him.

Quinn attended a meeting of the switchmen at Kaiser's hall after the assault on Sweeney and received a warm reception and was treated as a hero. Miles Barrett, a Chicago switchman, was chosen leader, and over 400 of the switchmen decided to declare the strike on. Barrett and a committee of 12 went to hunt Sweeney, but could not find him. The Lackawanna men, after gleefully embracing their old situations, struck again, and the Nickel Plate men also struck. If there had been any union switchmen on the other roads they would have struck too.

Sweeney Had a Plan.

The sentiment of the men seems to be that most of them can never recover their places anyway, and they might as well fight into the last ditch. Adjutant General Porter sent 125 more troops here and announced that he would dispatch the New York regiments. When he learned that the strike was on again he was much disturbed.

"I have just heard of this movement to renew the struggle," said Sweeney, "but in defiance of my orders. The news of the strike being declared off by myself and the duly authorized committee reached many of the men through the newspapers. They at once came to the conclusion that I had sold them out and skipped me before I could explain. The statement made by me was part of a plan which was working nicely until I was assaulted."

"Do you mean that you called the strike off simply to get the troops away and with the intention of renewing if after they had departed?"

Sweeney winced a bit at this question and hesitated before replying.

"I said," he finally responded, "that there was no use in 125 men fighting 8,000 troops, didn't I?"

Can the switchmen strike without authority from the grand master?

"They take a vote out and hang him, but they violate the law against lynching."

Porter Will Hold the Troops.

An intensely ugly feeling against Grand Master Sweeney has developed among all the late strikers. They consider that they have been duped and betrayed by him.

One of them stated that Sweeney had given the men no chance to get their places back again. If he had given them an intimation yesterday that he intended to declare the strike off or held it a day, the men say they would have had a chance to see their former employers and make terms with them. But declaring the strike off at midnight gave them no chance.

"Sweeney knew how to get out of town and get out quick," was the remark of one of the bitterly disappointed men.

In view of the new developments General Porter said no more troops would be sent away until those in command are sure they will not be needed. "We will have enough troops," said he, "but will send no more away until we are sure that they will not be needed. We have received communications from some of the railroad companies complaining of trouble and danger to their property in case we attempt to speedily withdraw all troops. Our military reports bear out the statements of the railroad companies. We are going to stay here until the rioting is suppressed, if it takes all summer," concluded General Porter.

The Cost of the Strike.

What complications may arise from this new strike no one can tell. It is not too early to conjecture. The New York Central, the Erie and the West Shore will not be affected, unless there is a recurrence of violence, for the reason that these roads have already filled their yards with nonunion men and are working along almost as smoothly as they did when the original strike was declared, nearly a fortnight ago.

At the Erie yards there was a disposition to keep up a guerrilla warfare on the nonunion men, though it lacked sufficient strength to be anything more than merely an annoyance.

Michael Broderick was one of a gang of ruffians who had been among a part of the Twenty-second New York regiment, under Major Bartlett. Finally the "toughs" made a dash for a line of guards stationed in front of the Erie elevator. Corporal Frederick Meek gave the word to fire at them, and when the smoke cleared away Broderick was found lying on the ground with three ugly bullet holes in his abdomen. He was taken to the Fitch hospital. Three fellow rioters were arrested.

Local experts have been making computations as to the final cost of the strike here. He said: "It is my opinion that it will not cost more than an average of fifty cents a day for every member of the militia we have had here." He figures the grand total at $114,750. Conservative men place the outside figures at $150,000.

The idle switchmen are busily circulating stories to the effect that the reason Mr. Webb, of the Central, and other railroad chiefs went home so confidently was because Sweeney had been bought off with a little present of $30,000.

IRON HALL COMPLICATIONS.

The Order in New York State Moves to Protect Its Members.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Sherman R. Mosher, accountant for one of the local branches of the Order of the Iron Hall, has issued an action against the supreme sitting of the order asking for the appointment of a receiver for the benefit of the order in this state. The motion will be argued here on Sept. 6.

Judge Parker, of Owego, granted an injunction restraining the receiver appointed at Indianapolis or any agents of the order from removing any funds in the possession of the order in this state, pending the argument for the appointment of a receiver.

Philadelphia Moves.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 26.—The affairs of the Order of the Iron Hall reached a crisis by the filing of a bill in equity by Samuel Evans Maires, counsel for John W. Keene and Lucas S. Gemeinhauser, against the officers of the supreme sitting, asking that a receiver be appointed and that the supreme officers be restrained from any interference with the funds of the order in this city.

To Protect Hartford Members.

HARTFORD, Aug. 26.—Pending application for the members of Hartford branch of the Iron Hall, Attorney Clark secured an injunction restraining the cashier from transmitting to headquarters any moneys in his possession. A similar injunction was obtained for branch No. 1,226. In each case application is made for the appointment of a receiver.

Somerby's Whereabouts.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 26.—Supreme Justice Freeman D. Somerby, of the Order of the Iron Hall, sent us a telegram which would be sent away until those in command are sure they will not be needed. "We will have enough troops," said he, "but will send no more away until we are sure that they will not be needed. We have received communications from some of the railroad companies complaining of trouble and danger to their property in case we attempt to speedily withdraw all troops. Our military reports bear out the statements of the railroad companies. We are going to stay here until the rioting is suppressed, if it takes all summer," concluded General Porter.

A meeting of the Common Council will be held in the Council Chambers, Park avenue, on Tuesday evening, September 6th, 1892, at 8 o'clock for the purpose of considering the matter, at which time petitions and remonstrances may be filed and parties heard thereon.

By order of the Common Council.

F. W. RUNYON, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., August 16, 1892.

CORPORATION NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same at a meeting to be held at the Council Chamber, No. 7 Park avenue, Plainfield, N. J., on Tuesday, September 6th, 1892, at 8 o'clock P. M., at which time and place prior to the adoption of said ordinance, said ordinance will be considered by the Common Council and all persons interested may be heard before the Common Council.

F. W. RUNYON, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., August 16, 1892.

AN ORDINANCE

To lay out and open Sycamore street from the northerly line of said street to the southerly line of said Fourth street.

The inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That Sycamore street in the city of Plainfield, from the northerly side of East Fifth street to the southerly side of East Fourth street be and the same is opened to the width thereof as laid down upon a map entitled "Map to accompany ordinance to lay out and open Sycamore street from the Northerly line of East Fifth street to the Southerly line of East Fourth street, City of Plainfield, N. J., April, 1892."

CORPORATION NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

F. W. RUNYON, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., August 15, 1892.

AN ORDINANCE

Authorizing the Plainfield Street Railway Company to extend the location of its track.

The inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the Plainfield Street Railway Company be and it is hereby authorized to extend the location of its tracks as follows: From the southwest side line of Park avenue on West Front street, through said Front street to Peace street, thence through Peace street to North avenue, thence through North avenue to a point two hundred feet southeasterly from Peace street; the track to be a single track to be laid in the centre of said streets (with necessary switches and turnouts on North avenue at the east of the route) under the same restrictions as are applicable with respect to the original location of the track of the ordinance, provided that said company, upon the final adoption of this ordinance, before exercising any of the rights or privileges granted thereby, shall file with the City Clerk a written assent to the terms and conditions of this ordinance, and file with the City Clerk a Contract and a Bond to be duly approved by the Corporation Counsel, which Contract and Bond shall be of like tenor and effect as specified in sections seventeen and eighteen of the original ordinance locating the tracks of said company, except that said Contract and Bond shall apply and relate to the extension hereby granted.

A HOUSEWIFE UNION.

AN ORGANIZATION FOR IMPROVING DOMESTIC SERVICE.

Berlin Women Have Done Much to Solve a Vexatious Question—Their Interesting System of Giving Prizes—German Servants Who Are Veterans.

A meeting was held not long ago in the magnificent city hall by the Housewife Union of Berlin for the purpose of publicly rewarding servants of the members for years of faithful service. The rewards were a handsome silver pin, with the initials of the union and the words, "Reward for faithful service," an engraved certificate, a copy of the union's cookbook and a sum of money, determined by the time of service.

The Housewife union is one of the most energetic women's organizations in Germany. In Berlin its influence stretches out over every branch of household work, and every industry pertaining thereto. It was founded by Frau Lina Morgenstern. The plan of awarding faithful domestic service is a public reward is also an emancipation for her brain. In the first years of its existence the committee on prizes had hard work to make both ends meet. But public interest in the experiment grew each year, and now, thanks to gifts and legacies, this branch of the union is self supporting and almost out of debt.

To be entitled to a prize, a woman must serve at least five years in the same household, after which time she receives the pin and the certificate. She receives after ten years in the same family the cookbook and ten marks in gold; after twenty years she gets twenty marks, and after thirty years in the same household thirty marks is the sum given. She may receive a certain prize every five years if she wishes, the only necessary condition being that her employer, if not a member of the union, must pay two years' membership fee and a small sum toward the prize.

The council hall used for the annual meeting was filled to overflowing with an interested crowd of women, a man here and there looking and probably feeling very much out of place. In the front row sat from twenty to thirty servants of all ages dressed in their best and fully appreciative of the importance of the occasion. The meeting was opened by the president of the union, Frau Morgenstern, a short, stout woman, with white hair and a bright, kindly face. After a brief resume of the minutes of the last meeting the president spoke of the purpose of prize giving, the hope of improving the class of domestic servants by encouraging long and faithful attention to duty and the attempt to restore something of the patriarchal relations of servant and employer in former days, when the servant was one of the family, taking a personal pride and interest in the welfare of the household.

She then spoke to the servants, emphasizing the good their example must do to many of their class, and contrasting the security of their position with the lot of the factory hand and the shopgirl. The employer came in for a little of the praise as well, Frau Morgenstern rightly giving the housewife her due share of importance in making and the keeping of good servants. Then the list of those to be rewarded was read, and the women came forward one by one to receive the prizes.

The first name announced was that of a working housekeeper, who had served fifty years in the same place, outliving two generations, and now in her old age cared for as one of the family. The announcement evoked a storm of applause, and the audience was much disappointed when told that this faithful creature was too old to make the journey from her distant country home, and that her prize had been forwarded to her.

Next on the list came another housekeeper, whose term of service had lasted 48 years; then a maid of 30 years' service in the same household, another of 28, and another of 26. All lived in country towns, not far distant, and from some of them the applause let in moment a letter of thanks was read aloud. Then came six women, all of whom had served 25 years in families in Berlin; then one who had served for 24 years, another for 23, another for 22, several for 20, four from 15 to 20 years, and seven whose term of service lasted from 5 to 15 years. Twenty-eight in all were rewarded, the majority having served for more than 30 years in the same family. Several had received prizes five years before, and several were from families where fellow servants had been rewarded within the last few years.

At the previous meeting forty-five women were rewarded, and the number of prizes given has seldom been below twenty.

Touching stories of fidelity in misfortune, of honest attachment born of pride and interest in the employer's family were told, and it was hard to believe, in listening, that we were in the latter half of the Nineteenth century and in the heart of a great city. They recalled other quarters of the globe where two or three women cannot meet for a social chat without harrowing tales to narrate of incompetent "help," of the hardships of housekeeping and sighing for the time when modern ingenuity will invent a mechanical substitute for that necessary evil—the domestic servant.

The Housewife's union was organized about eighteen or twenty years ago by the housewives of Berlin for concerted effort against the unnecessarily high prices demanded by the purveyors of the various means of existence. The high prices of family supplies had attracted the attention of Frau Morgenstern, and her public lectures on the subject occasioned considerable excitement and aroused women to action. The union was formed, and a regularly organized boycott had the desired effect of lowering prices on the necessities of life. The union then turned its attention to charity. During the distress occasioned by the unprecedented growth of the city's population after the war, more than 3,000 poor received assistance each winter.

Then came a time when the adulteration of food was carried to such an excess that it was impossible for any except the rich to obtain proper nourishment. Here again the union stepped to the front and called the attention of the government to the frauds perpetrated on a helpless public, and obtained legal protection for its laboratories established for the purpose of detecting adulterated food.—Berlin Cor. New York Sun.

A Trying Experience.

Perhaps the most trying experience in the career of a maiden who has passed the first bloom of youth is when she is about she braces herself to meet the shock of a proposal of marriage from some man and the shock doesn't come.—London Tit-Bits.

The annoying blackleaf dust that arises when polishing a stove or ordinary stove with blacking may be prevented by adding a pinch of powdered gum tragacanth to the blacking.—New York Journal.

Can Saleswomen Be Truthful?

"How can a girl be truthful and become a clever saleswoman?" This is the actual remark of a girl employed in one of our large stores, and an hour spent in her special department revealed that finest fibbing was an essential element in her line of business at least. The first customer was an elderly lady with a penchant for gay colors altogether unsuited to her years. A black bonnet being produced she sniffed audibly and remarked:

"That! Oh, my, you don't suppose I want to look like my own grandmother?"

"Certainly not, madam. That was an order for a customer. I have not looked for yours yet." Ah, the ready little fibber.

"Is moire ribbon fashionable?" goes on the aged customer.

"Yes, indeed; quite the newest thing." The hat is sold and buyer No. 2 comes in.

"I want a bonnet trimmed with satin ribbon—no moire mind, that is altogether too much behind the times."

"Quite right, madam. We do not use moire at all on our newest hats."

"Do you think this is becoming?" with an anxious glance in the mirror opposite that reflects the most outrageously inharmonious getup imaginable.

"Yes, indeed; it is just your color, and those tips are awfully stylish; don't you think so?" appealing to the writer, who is put to utter confusion by this sudden question, and, like the man of the story, has no lie ready.

"I am sure you will like it; if it doesn't suit bring it right back, for it is one of our large evening styles, and we will have no trouble to get rid of it."

That settles it; if others are anxious for it it must be desirable, and away she goes with a handbox perfectly satisfied, whereat the salesgirl gives a sigh of relief. "We have tried for weeks to sell that fright, and now, thank heaven, it is gone!"

In the next twenty minutes she told just as many fibs as there were minutes, yet she is one of the best and most honest little saleswomen in the world, and away she goes in holy horror from a lie on any other subject, but considers in business everything fair and square, and flies glibly in the interest of her employer. It's only a bit of character, after all, and to be met with every day.—Philadelphia Times.

Kitchen Odors and Woolen Dresses.

It took me a long time to learn that woolen dresses were entirely unfit for domestic work, and although I rarely do much cooking or work about the kitchen, I always wear cotton dresses in the early part of the day. I got my lesson on that one day when I first went to housekeeping. I had a pretty dress calling it brown, with velvet trimmings, and I was very fond of wearing it. In was past its best use, and I thought it would make an admirable house dress, so I put on, and one day the servants left and I had to put the house in order and get luncheon. When my many duties were done I had an errand a little way over town, and though I wouldn't take the trouble to change my dress. So I put on my ulster and cap and started out. I got into a warm street car and sat down near the door, as I felt somewhat chilly. Five minutes later two ladies came into the car and sat down near me.

I paid very little attention to their conversation until one said to the other in an undertone, "Dear me, sombody has been frying crullers, for I can smell them." And her companion gave her a little push and whispered: "Hush! She'll hear you!" It hadn't occurred to me before, but I now noticed that I carried on that wool dress the odor of the kitchen and the identical smell of crullers of which my neighbor had spoken. I have frequently observed since that I could tell almost infallibly what many people had cooked for breakfast by the odors which clung to their garments as they came into the street car with a woolen dress on, and could readily tell if it had been worn during the performance of any culinary duty.

Indeed, I was quite a bit of a joke about it, and several of us used to amuse ourselves, when we went out in the morning, with trying to decide what our neighbors had cooked for lunch, and it isn't at all difficult to discover. Just take a little pains, cultivate the sense of smell, and it is easy to get a comfortably accurate idea of the bills of fare of persons with whom you come in contact.—Interview in New York Press.

Care of Pantry.

Neatness and order in your pantry will depend in great measure upon the way you clear your table. If you look upon your butler's pantry as a dumping ground, then dirt and disorder will be inevitable. But, on the contrary, if you consider it a workshop to be kept shipshape you will avoid these dangers. Shipshape means a place for everything and everything in its right place.

Make up your mind in the beginning where you want to lay your knives, where you want your silver, which is the best place for your soap, and the safest place for your delicate pieces. When these places are well chosen then stick to them.

You must be sure to have a bowl or pan large enough for the dish cloth and scalds and bones from any meal. A large yellow bowl or agate pan is suitable for this. Do not use a tin pail. It is not cleanly.

Do not throw your wood ashes in the food is put away. Next empty every glass, cup, bowl and pitcher. Rinse with cold water those which have been used for milk or cream. Scrape your plates and dishes carefully and put those of one sort together. This saves time. A crust of bread from the bottom of a bowl will easily wipe out a fine china bowl or silver ladle without scratching it as a knife or spoon might do.

Keep a pan and brush at hand, and if food is dropped on the pantry floor take it up at once. Then you will have one greasy spot instead of long streaks to scour out. Never leave soiled towels lying in your pantry. After each meal wash out those you have used and hang them to dry.

Your pantry shelves should be kept well dusted, every drawer clean and in order, the knife cleaner in proper place, the silver cleaning materials in their place. See that the clean hand towels are not mixed with the dishtowels.—Good Housekeeping.

Where Rosewood Gets Its Name.

Many people suppose that rosewood takes its name from its color, but this is a mistake. Rosewood is not red nor yellow, but almost black. Its name comes from the fact that when first cut it exhales a perfume similar to that of the rose, and although the dried rosewood of commerce retains no trace of this early perfume the name lingers as a relic of the early history of the wood.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

India and China Silks.

From time immemorial India and China have been great silk raising regions. Japan is now added to them. These countries more than three parts of the world's supply. India has not only the silkworm, but the mulberry tree, which supplies the strong, yellowish tussor silk, so much worn of late. There is also a hardy spinner that feeds on the leaves of the castor oil bean.—Chicago Tribune.

Seasonable Recipes—Practical Hints in Housekeeping—Food and Drink for Hot Weather—Some New Dishes Items for the Scrap Book.

Kumiss, which is so often recommended by physicians to patients recovering from a long and lingering illness, should be made of milk warm from the cow. To every pint of milk a tablespoonful of home-brewed yeast and a tablespoonful of sugar should be added. Put the milk in tight bottles with patent tops.

Let the milk stand in the bottles in a place where the temperature is about eighty degrees for six hours. Shake the bottles two or three times while their contents are rising. At the end of this time set the milk in a cold cellar or refrigerator and let it remain for three days, when it is ready for use.

LIME WATER.

A Valuable Addition to Milk in the Summer Season.

At the opening of summer, it is well to call attention to the value of lime-water. This is a simple remedy for many summer evils of the household, and is easily prepared.

A teaspoonful of lime-water added to a glass of milk corrects the tendency which milk has to coagulate in the stomach, forming a hard, indigestible mass. For this reason, it is frequently ordered by physicians to be added to the nursing bottle of children in summer. It is useful for rinsing out nursery bottles; and as a mild disinfectant, it is one of the safest we have.

To prepare it, place a layer of unslaked lime in a wide-mouthed jar, and fill it with pure, cold water. The druggist uses filtered water for this purpose. Lime makes what the chemist calls a saturated solution in water, and, therefore, there is no danger of putting too much lime in the water. The water will take up only so much lime.

When the water has stood a few hours it will have absorbed all the lime it is capable of receiving. It may then be drained off and more water added till the lime is absorbed. If you are inclined to acidity of the stomach in the summer, it is a good plan to add a little lime-water to the water that you drink.—N. Y. Tribune.

CHILDREN'S SUMMER SHOES.

The Best Kind for Growing Girls—How to Restore Russet Leather.

When brown leather looks very shabby a thin coat of brown shellac, diluted with alcohol, will prove to be a wonderful restorative. This should not, however, be applied too often, as it will tend to stiffen the leather. Afterward it may be kept looking very well by rubbing with vaseline.

Children have a way in the summer of ruining all leather, whether black or brown, and many a mother has sighed for some utterly indestructible material for foot-covering. Cowhide is really the best; but even that becomes woefully scratched by the briars, etc., and is, moreover, very heavy for summer.

The children themselves fairly revel in the comfortable and necessary-like tennis shoes; but girls, especially, should not be allowed to wear them except on the tennis ground, as they broaden the foot, and are apt to give a very awkward gait. Low shoes, too, are not desirable on this account. A light laced russet shoe is the thing, par excellence, for growing girls in the summer. Very good patens, of various kinds, come to keep them in order, and when they grow very shabby then use the shellac.

After a Mosquito Bite.

The best antidote for the bite of a mosquito is undoubtedly ammonia, weakened with a little water or salt and water. Some people go so far as to press the poison out of the bite with some small metal instrument like the point of a watch key before applying the antidote. This prevents the painful swelling that sometimes occurs. Some find camphor most efficacious and salt and water will not avail. Ammonia, however, seems to be generally successful as a neutralizer of the mosquito poison. Where there are large quantities of mosquitoes and no reason for their appearance is apparent, it is well to look about the premises for something which will bring them in hordes, and damp places and stagnant pools are spots where they delight to congregate.

Handy and Economic.

If there is any economical woman who has not yet bought a soap shaker—a little wire cage with a handle, into which scraps of soap too small for ordinary use may be kept, let her be about the purchase at once. The thin shavings of soap left over from the washboard and scrubbing brush can thus be saved and utilized. When the little wire ball is dipped into a pan of warm water ready for washing dishes—much in the same manner that a silver tea ball is dipped into its cup of hot water—a delightful state of sudsiness results, and who can compute how much soap is saved?

To Tell Good Milk.

Good milk should have the following properties: It must be of a slightly yellowish color, not bluish, and a greasy film should adhere to the glass containing it. It must be absolutely sweet. On boiling, no disagreeable odor must be given off with the steam, and no separation or thickening take place. On standing for some time in a glass or bottle, no sediment or particles of foreign matter must settle out.

The Test Clothes Line.

Ordinary telegraph wire makes a better line to hang the clothes on to dry than the hempen ones generally used. The wire does not sag, rot, nor break, as the rope does. It is easily wiped off and made clean.

Farina Pudding.

Boil, in a farina kettle, one pint of milk thickened with about three tablespoonfuls of farina. Add two well-beaten eggs, and a little salt. Serve with sugar and cream.

Rag Carpet Rugs.

Rugs of rag carpeting are very pretty, and one for in front of the bed, made of white and light-colored scraps, is particularly dainty.

Castor oil externally is said to be a cure for bee stings.

His Name.

A correspondent of The Christian Union tells an anecdote concerning the late Rev Dr. Samuel A. Clark of Elizabeth, N. J., a well known clerical wit, who yet knew perfectly well the proper limits of levity and never wounded a friend's feelings or marred a sacred place or moment with the irrepressible fun. At the First Church congress held in New York in the year 1874, a friend leaned forward and whispered: "What's Brother Clark's name, are you going to read an essay today?"

"Certainly," was the immediate reply. "I am known to the church as S. A. Clark."—New York Tribune.

Wheeling Notes.

Fifty wheelmen from Newark will take a century run from Newark to Princeton and return on September 18.

James Blake of the U. C. B. is entered in several races at the meet of the Manhattan Athletic Club, which will take place Saturday on Manhattan Field.

Captain J. D. Racey, of the Orange Wheelmen, has been suspended from the L. A. W. for making a false entry in a class race and for competing in unsanctioned races. This action of the racing board practically shuts Racey out for the balance of the season.

Mr. Racey was formerly a member of the Plainfield Bicycle Club and has many friends here.

The Saltonstall cup for the team track championship of the county at the Labor Day carnival in Elizabeth is said to be the handsomest trophy ever offered wheelmen in New Jersey. It will have to be ridden for annually until won three times. The U. C. B., E. A. C. and E. W. teams are sure to race for it, and their meeting alone will draw an immense throng.

Some of our promising Plainfield riders should also enter. Judging by Thursday's race they can hold their own when there's riding going on.

The Peach Crop.

Reports come from some sections of Hunterdon county that the peach crop this season is far in advance of what was expected. White House is the centre of the largest yield, 2,000 baskets are shipped daily from there, and heavy shipments are also being made from the Rockaway Valley Railroad, Lebanon and Annandale. The district reached by the High Bridge Branch of the C. R. R., which hitherto has made no shipments, this year is scarcely any. The fruit up to the present has been ripened prematurely, but have brought high prices. The best peaches will not be in market until two weeks from now, and will probably be very high.

Locomotives Collide at Elizabeth.

There was a collision on the Long Branch division of the Central railroad at Elizabeth before daylight yesterday morning between a peach train and a drilling locomotive. The locomotive of the peach train was considerably damaged and derailed together with several cars. The "bob tail" drilling engine was badly wrecked. The men escaped Engineer Frederick W. De Groff of the peach train escaped injury by jumping. He remained at his post and received an ugly scalp wound and many painful bruises. It was very dear and raining hard when the collision occurred.

Six Men to Wash His Face.

A colored man, working in a Somerset street hardware store, having a quantity of unbecoming soot on his face, this morning, went out to a horse-trough in front of the store to wash it off. His gingerly washing evidently did not suit half-a-dozen men present, for, amid wild yells from the victim and shouts of laughter from the men, they turned the colored man heels up and soused him in the tank.

Base Ball Points.

The league game on the Third street diamond will attract a good crowd of baseball enthusiasts as it is expected that the Y. M. C. I. A. will have a good twirler in the box and then hope to defeat the West Ends. They have failed to work hard for second honors in the league.

The League games to-morrow will afford no small amount of sport for the many backers of the four teams. If Plainfield should lose and Elizabeth win, there would be a good chance for the Y. M. C. I. A. to climb into second place, and the Somerville boys would have a better chance as first place.

Andy Riley will pitch for the Y. M. C. I. A. to-morrow against the West Ends. Riley "struck out" the strong Paterson team for eight innings. The club was composed of several players from the Central N. J. League. He is a promising young player, and with him in the box the Young Men should win.

From the above paragraphs taken from the Elizabeth Journal of yesterday, it is evident they have not yet given up the ghost, and die hard. Now if they could only have had "handy Andy" earlier in the season perhaps there might not have been such a tremendous fall in the way.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR MEETING.

The Fall Conference of the Union Co. Societies to be Held in Rahway.

The Executive Committee of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union met in the lecture room of the Third Presbyterian church at Elizabeth on Thursday evening. Delegates were in attendance from several of the local societies and from Plainfield, Rahway, Union and Roselle.

Mr. A. White, Jr., of Rahway, the newly elected president, presided, and Miss Ella Benedict, of this city, was the secretary.

It was decided to hold the conference in Rahway in the latter part of September. It is probable the meetings will take place in the First Baptist church. The Rahway local union will have in charge the arrangements, for place of meeting, music, speakers, etc. A committee of five will be appointed by President White to engage the speakers and prepare the programme.

QUADRUPLETS AT CAMDEN.

Mrs. Edward Gowens Gives Birth to Four Babies in one Day.

Edward Gowens of Camden is employed by Messrs. Shivers & Moffott, lumber dealers. He was called to his home suddenly Thursday afternoon. He returned and informed his employer that he found a babe had been admitted to his family.

Shortly afterward the telephone summoned him to his home, and when he returned he found two more children had been added to his family. He waited around home and another, the fourth child made an appearance. He then returned to work and asked his employers, as a favor, not to answer the telephone again, as he was satisfied. The family five at Seventh and Sycamore streets, and Mrs. Gowens and the four babes were reported last night to be doing nicely.

Prizes to Jersey Farmers.

A circular has been issued by the State Board of Agriculture, giving a schedule of prizes offered for the farm products to be exhibited at the World's Fair. The premiums offered will be paid by the State Board of Agriculture; the medals receiving awards to be the property of the State Board and included in the State exhibit at the Columbian Exposition. Where but one sample of a variety is offered merit must be the guide in making awards. All exhibits must be from the State.

Exhibits of cereals and other farm products must be accompanied with the following date and information:

a. name of object, b. name of producer, c. post office where grown, d. character of soil, e. date of planting, f. quantity of seed planted per acre, g. method of cultivation, h. date of harvesting, i. yield per acre, j. weight, k price of product at nearest home market, l. average temperature by month for the time intervening between planting and harvesting, m. average rain or snowfall by months for the time intervening between planting and harvesting, n. was exhibit produced by irrigation? All of which can be obtained from bulletins and reports of the State Weather Bureau at New Brunswick.

The prizes offered are: For best bushel of ears of field corn, each standard variety, $2.50; for best bushel of ears of sugar corn, each standard variety, $2.50; for the best three stalks of field corn, each standard variety, on the roots, $1; for three stalks sugar corn on roots, each variety, $1; for best four stalks pop corn, each variety, on the roots, $1. Two dollars each are offered for the following: Peck of chestnuts, peck acorns and variety correctly named; peck chestnuts, common, one-half peck chestnuts, Spanish, one-half peck chestnuts, any other variety; one-half peck hazlenuts, one-half peck pecans, one-half peck peanuts, one-half peck beechnuts, one-half peck any other variety correctly named.

Wholesale Scalding at Milburn.

Mrs. Charles Conkling and Mrs. John Fisher, residents of Church street, Milburn, were badly scalded about the lower limbs Thursday while attempting to take a washboiler full of hot water from a stove in Mrs. Conkling's home. Mrs. Fisher's four-year-old child, James, who was playing near, was also severely burned by the accidental flood of boiling water from the vessel.

Their cries attracted the attention of the employes of Fouratt's hat factory and several neighbors, who ran to the assistance of the suffering women. Nothing remains of the house of Mrs. Fisher was removed to her home. Her son, who was standing near, and who was also burned, was able to walk away. Mrs. Conkling and Mrs. Fisher will be confined to their homes for several days.

North Plainfield Democrats to Meet Next Thursday.

The Democrats of North Plainfield will soon open the campaign. A meeting of the Democratic committee is called for next day evening, at which will be discussed the regular business of the association. Politics will be unusually lively in the Borough this year. In addition to the national and State tickets, all the county offices are to be filled. Somerset county will present names for the nomination of candidates for Congress. Among those aspiring for congressional honors are Judge Bartine and J. W. Ballantine, both residents of Somerville, Somerset. Both are of Somerville. Judge Bartine was in town last evening looking after his interests.

TERRIFIC LIGHTNING ELSEWHERE.

A Church Struck and Burned.

During a heavy thunder storm at Cherry Hill, Thursday night, lightning struck the Reformed church and set it on fire. It was burned to the ground.

THIRTY-FIVE CATTLE PERISH.

A large barn on the premises of John C. Zabriskie at Cherry Hill was struck by lightning about the same time. Thirty-five head of cattle perished. A large quantity of hay and grain, farming utensils, etc., were consumed.

ONE HOUSE STRUCK TWICE.

A terrible thunder-storm raged at Millville, N. J., about midnight Thursday. Several houses were struck by lightning, and persons were stunned. The residence of Mrs. Townsend was struck, the bolt passing under a bed in which the children were sleeping but not injuring them. A few minutes later another bolt struck the same house, passing out and ripping the palings from the fence. A house occupied by the Gaskill family on the outskirts of the town was struck and the inmates stunned. The rainfall was great, flooding the streets and washing out sidewalks and culverts.

MERCER COUNTY LOSES $5,000.

A report from Bordentown, N. J., says the conflagration, together with the crops stored therein, of the Mercer county alms house, a short distance from here, were struck by lightning during a storm Thursday night, and burned to the ground. The loss will reach $5,000.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN NEW YORK.

Brooklyn Called Upon for Help—The Fire Still Raging.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27, (Special.)—The Metropolitan Opera House was discovered to be on fire at ten o'clock this morning.

The fire, in spite of the prompt work of the New York firemen, spread rapidly and at noon was still raging, and beyond control. Brooklyn was called upon for help.

The Metropolitan Opera House was built at an expense of about $2,100,000 by seventy stockholders, each of whom subscribed $30,000, and each of whom became the owner of one of the seventy boxes, choice of which was decided by lot.

The loss is over $1,000,000.

A $5 Dog Under $101,000 Bail.

The dog for whose appearance in the Second District Court at Newark bonds in the amount of $101,000 had been given honorably walked into court as soon as Judge Berry took his seat on the bench Thursday. The dog was wagging his tail in contempt of all ball jumpers, and soon curled himself up in a corner while the lawyers argued over the question of ownership.

The case all came into Edward Martha's possession two months ago, a few days before Julius Hammerschlag put an advertisement in the papers offering a reward for the return of a setter dog of exactly his description. Martha recognized the dog as one that he had lost a year before. Hammerschlag learned of this and hired a lawyer to retrieve the dog. The dog, however, did not appear to recognize either of them.

Martha swore that he lost the dog a year ago and did not see him again until recently.

The jury decided that Martha owns the dog.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Strikers and Strikes.

The spectacle of the national guard being called out at one and the same time in three different states of the Union to check violence, killing and rioting at the scenes of as many different strikes is not one that the friends of labor organizations like to contemplate. The brutal fighting, the murder, burning, destruction of property and attempted assassination in connection with the strikes of the summer have hurt the cause of labor more than the oppressions of capital have been able to do in ten years.

The strike leaders declare that they are not at all responsible for the bloodshed and destruction; that they do not countenance such measures. There is no reason to doubt their sincerity or truthfulness. At the same time it is absolutely certain that public sentiment will hold them responsible for it. They simply kindled a fire that got beyond their control. The conflagration that follows will inevitably be traced to them. Once they sanction, even indirectly, the resort to physical force, they open a Pandora's box of mob, murder and rapine. The human wild beasts that gather around a throng of strikers meditating physical violence do not make nice discriminations.

Arbitration, co-operation and good temper—above all good temper—will settle satisfactorily every strike in the universe except a strike of devils against Satan, and there is not apt to be one of that sort. For the sake of our republican civilization let us have no more mob strikes. In a country governed by law the mob is dead sure to get the worst of it in the long run. Let the real labor organizations publicly and officially disapprove and repudiate the resort to physical force.

A Duke's Obituary.

"One of the fastest men in England" was what they called the late Duke of Manchester at home. He has just died as the result of his fast life. He was a fellow who allowed in excuses of his wild ways that gloried in the fact that did not prevent a pure, high bred American girl from jumping at the chance to marry him and perpetuate the noble Manchester blood. He lapsed into his former wild life after marriage and even got so low down as to borrow money of a woman music hall singer, Bessie Bellwood, it was said.

A nobleman borrowing money of a woman, a music hall singer, to squander in extravagance is a fine spectacle to contemplate. The grand, blue blooded nobleman was only a viscount then, and there came an "estrangement" between his American wife and himself, but this estrangement was patched up again when he became Duke of Manchester. That title covered a great quantity of things not pleasant to speak of, may also be accepted in passing that when the late duke's father—another duke—died a couple of years ago he was so afraid his widow would marry his grace of Devonshire, which she has just done, that he made his will in such a way as to make her forfeit her income if she did that. How sorry we ought to be that we have no titled nobility in the United States!

Maud S, of Kentucky, a mile in 2:08¾; Sunol, of California, a mile in 2:08¼; Nancy Hanks, of Kentucky, a mile in 2:09¼ in the summer of 1892. So the world's trotting record stands up to date.

The eagle of victory flew across the continent from Kentucky to California, when he gave a screech, flapped his wings and shot back to Kentucky, perching himself on the banner of the mare named for the stepmother of Abraham Lincoln. It was thought that years must elapse before Sunol could be distanced, but the thing has been done in one year. Trotting has been brought up to the speed of the average railway train. What will the next record be? We need be surprised at nothing. So far as Nancy Hanks' brave victory is concerned, it was probably helped on by the new fangled bicycle sulky, with its ball bearings and pneumatic tire. The honor belongs to the mare, the driver, Budd Doble, and the bicycle sulky. Now let Robert Bonner try Sunol in a bicycle sulky.

The National Republican league has taken a hint from the British in the matter of election campaigning and invited the Woman's Republican association to hold meetings in connection with their league convention, beginning at Buffalo Sept. 13. The invitation has been accepted. We may therefore see something new in political campaigning this fall.

"Give it to 'em, William!" shouted the independent British crowd to Gladstone as he passed from London to Portsmouth to enter the royal yacht, which conveyed him to the presence of Queen Victoria at the Isle of Wight, for the fourth time in his life to receive her command to form a cabinet. It must have been the proudest day of William's life.

THE ILLINOIS CAMPAIGN.

Stevenson Starts the Democratic Ball Rolling There.

DAWES WILL LEAVE THE SENATE.

He Tells His Massachusetts Constituents That He Will Decline a Re-election.

Thomas C. Platt is in Conference with the Republican Leaders in New York.

BLOOMINGTON, Ills., Aug. 27.—The Democratic campaign in Illinois was opened here today with a grand rally, and an immense crowd gathered to hear Hon. Adlai E. Stevenson, who is a great favorite in this locality and who was the principal speaker. The candidate for vice president was received with volley after volley of cheers, and when the applause had subsided spoke in part as follows:

Mr. Stevenson's Speech.

In the pending struggle for political supremacy grave public questions are at issue. Upon the correct determination of these questions, through the peaceful methods prescribed by law, will depend the welfare of the people. The Democratic administration ending March 4, 1889, has given to history an economical and able administration of the government. Under it the bonded debt of the government was paid at maturity; trust funds were not used to avoid a treasury deficit, and the gold reserve was not menaced by threats of invasion to meet the current expenses of the government. At the close of President Cleveland's administration the surplus in the treasury, exclusive of the gold reserve, was in excess of $80,000,000. What is the condition that now confronts us at the end of three and a half years of Republican administration? On the basis of revenue to the government, as estimated by the secretary of the treasury for the present fiscal year, and of the liabilities of the government on account of the annual and permanent appropriations for the same period, there will be a deficit of $82,000,000. And this, too, notwithstanding the fact that the administration made default in providing the sinking fund to an amount exceeding $15,000,000 during the last fiscal year. The bankruptcy which now threatens the treasury is the result, first, of the enactment of the McKinley tariff law, and secondly, of the lavish appropriations of the first congress.

The tariff is the all important issue of the campaign upon we have now entered. Upon the one side are the advocates of a high protective or prohibitory policy—a policy that enriches the few at the expense of the many. On the other the advocates of such a modification of tariff duties as will give to our manufacturers the benefit of cheap raw material and lessen the cost to the consumer of the necessaries of life. The average tariff tax at the beginning of the civil war in 1861 was but 19 per cent. By subsequent increases it surmounted 47 per cent, and by the McKinley bill became the law. With the war closed, a Republican congress retained the manufacturers' protective taxation, and added to their profits and to the burdens of the people by increased duties. Upon the success of Republican principles in 1888 the sweeping of the exigencies of war no longer demanded their continuance. But why did not the Republican congress repeal the war taxes and tariffs which bore so heavily upon the farmer, upon the laborer, upon the consumer, upon the great mass of our people? Why was not the war tax reduced upon the necessaries of life? Why, while remove the tax upon occupations and allow it to remain upon the tools of the mechanic, the implements of the farmer, upon the food and clothing of the poor? Why removed from the manufacturer the tax of less than 5 per cent and leave him the power to tax the consumer 47, 50, 60 per cent. Upon hats, upon shoes, upon blankets, upon clothing?

Protection a Delusion and a Snare.

Has the mechanic's pay increased more than to the farmer, protection has proved a delusion and a snare. In no instance has it opened up to the farmer additional market for a pound of meat or a bushel of grain." Has it in a single instance given to the mechanic or laborer increased wages? The power of the trusts relies largely to the cost of articles necessary to the comfort of the wage earner. How has he been benefited? Has it increased his wages? Has it in any manner benefited his condition? Has it not on the contrary, increased the profits of protected establishments of this country sadly attest the fact that a high protective tariff affords no protection to those who earn their bread by daily toil. It was never intended to benefit them. Long enough has the wage earner been deluded that the high tariff means high wages. Tariffs have no effect upon wages, except to diminish their purchasing power. The higher the tariff the less the purchasing power of the wages. Wages are governed by the great law of supply and demand. If the claim of the protectionist is well founded, why have not wages increased as tariffs have increased? Why constant reduction of wages in the most highly protected establishment in the land? To the teller the McKinley bill has "kept the word of promise to the ear, but broken it to the hope."

My fellow citizens, to you the tariff is the all important question. The question is not how much of your earnings shall be given to the support of the government, but how much shall under the forms of law be seized by the favored—the "protected" classes. The contest upon which we have now entered is of deep significance to the American people. Shall high tariff, continually increasing with the demands of the protected classes, be the settled policy of our government, or shall there be relief to the people from the burdens of unjust taxation?

Another issue of great moment in the pending national contest is the election of 1890. The magnitude of this issue cannot be overstated. It may mean the control of the election of representatives in congress by the bayonet.

I firmly believe that the interests of all the people of these United States are bound up in the success of the party that came in with Jefferson at the very infancy of our republic; the party which in all periods of our history has been the bulwark of our constitution and the faithful guardian of the rights of all the people; the party which knows no privileged class, but demands equal and exact rights for all; the party which under Jefferson extended our domain to the gulf and to the ocean; the party which under Madison bore our flag to victory in our second struggle with Great Britain, and which under his immediate successor established firmly for all time the rights of the American nation by the declaration and maintenance of the Monroe doctrine; the party which gloried in the leadership of Jackson and Benton, who unhesitated, foes of special privileges and of unjust taxation.

Under the matchless leadership of the man who gave you the best administration of the government who wrested from the grasp of those who had robbed you of your heritage 80,000,000 acres and restored it to the public domain, whose principle in action is, "A public office is a public trust"—under his leadership the Democratic party confidently submits the momentous questions at issue, and will abide the determination of the final arbiters at the polls.

Mr. Stevenson's remarks were frequently applauded, and when he finished the cheering was renewed tenfold. Senator Palmer, Hon. William R. Morrison and Judge John P. Altgeld, the Democratic nominee for governor also spoke. The meeting was a decided success.

Republican Conferences.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—At Republican national headquarters Whitelaw Reid, Cornelius N. Bliss, General Clarkson, Samuel Fessenden, national committeeman from Connecticut, and Senator Frank Hiscock, of New York, held a lengthy conference with Chairman Carter. Afterward William Brookfield, chairman of the state committee; Colonel McAlpin, president of the New York State league; General Horace Porter, Jacob M. Patterson, chairman of the county committee, and ex-Senator Thomas C. Platt conferred with Chairman Carter.

After the conference Senator Platt had a private interview with Mr Carter in regard to the campaign in New York and matters which Senator Platt, representing the state committee, desired the active interest of Mr. Carter and the national committee in.

Whitelaw Reid, speaking of the campaign in New York, said: "I am agreeably surprised to find the vigor and life which has been infused into the canvass and to find that everybody is getting into line. I have no reason to doubt the correctness of the general belief that New York is in the battlefield. If we carry New York we carry the election."

DAWES TO LEAVE THE SENATE.

He Will Decline a Re-election When His Present Term Expires.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Aug. 27.—The Republican publishes today a letter from Senator Dawes, dated Pittsfield, Aug. 25, in which the senator announces that he will not be a candidate for re-election to the office of United States senator.

In his letter, which is addressed to his fellow citizens of the state, Senator Dawes says: "I cannot thus lay down the commission with which I have been so long intrusted without expressing my profound gratitude to my native state for the opportunity so ever in the most honorable position in her gift, and for that uninterrupted confidence and support which have enabled my every endeavor in the public service. I shall take with me into retirement an unabated interest and abiding faith in the political principles which have contributed so largely to the prosperity and good name of our commonwealth."

Dickinson Goes to Cleveland.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Hon. Don M. Dickinson left this city to spend today and Sunday at Buzzard's Bay, the guest of Mr. Cleveland. Mr. Dickinson, who is chairman of the Democratic campaign committee, goes to confer with the Democratic presidential nominee in regard to the conduct of the campaign in the west. It is said that he will also urge upon Mr. Cleveland the necessities of curbing the propensities of some of his friends in this state for writing injudicious letters.

On Monday Mr. Dickinson will go to Chicago to attend the conference of the western campaign committee. Tuesday will be held there next week. The western headquarters have already been established at the Palmer House and special work in the west begun. It is the intention of the committee to establish headquarters in seven states in the jurisdiction of the western committee, including Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, North and South Dakota, and will be present at the conference.

A Pretty Bonting Hat.

Here is a smart little yachting or boating hat from a late London design. It is of peasant hat becoming shape which, close-fitting at the back, forms a peak in front. The hat is of rough dark blue straw, trimmed at the left side with a high bow of dark blue ribbon. The peaked brim is lined with dark blue velvet, two tiny rolls of the same surrounding the base of the flat mortar-board crown.

Scalded to Death.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Thomas H. Rodman, formerly district attorney of Kings county, was scalded to death in his bathtub. Mr. Rodman, who was old and feeble, could not turn the hot water off when he started it, fainted from pain and lay in the tub till dead.

THE BORDEN TRAGEDIES

Lizzie Was in a Laughing Mood on That Fatal Morning.

GHASTLY EVIDENCE IS IN STORE.

The Prosecution Had the Aged Victims Beheaded and the Skulls Are in Possession of the State Attorneys—A Startling Announcement for the Accused Girl.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 27.—There was a new horror for Lizzie Borden to face on the second day of her ordeal in open court, the twenty-second in the ordeal of suspicion growing into accusation and arrest since she gave the alarm of murder to the servant, Bridget Sullivan. The horror was at the end of Medical Examiner Dolan's testimony, with which the hearing opened.

Dr. Dolan had told the oft repeated story of how the heads of Lizzie's father and stepmother were hacked, and how the spick and span woodwork of the "royal Borden" domicile had been covered with their blood. He had told how the killing must have been done with a hatchet, how Mr. Borden must have been struck from behind as he lay on the sofa, and that Mrs. Borden must have been smitten while she was standing up and mutilated after she fell. He had also testified that Mrs. Borden must have been killed at least two hours before her husband.

Then he said calmly: "I have the heads of both the deceased. I removed them from the bodies in the graves in Oak Grove cemetery on Aug. 11 by order of the attorney general, and they are now in my possession."

It was startling to Lizzie Borden, this fresh exhibit in the chamber of horrors through which she has been wandering now for more than three weeks. She hid her face behind the sinking fund to assure herself of the consciousness upon which the hideous announcement fell were not revealed to the curious eyes which were turned upon her at the moment it was made.

Lizzie Was Light Hearted.

When Bridget Sullivan came to the stand she testified unwittingly to what was a most curious frame of mind of the murderess, if the accused is a murderess.

She testified that the daughter went to the murder of her father with a light heart, and that when Andrew J. Borden came home on the morning of that fatal day Bridget let him into the house.

The door was hard to open. Bridget made use of some forcible national exclamation at the obduracy of the door, and after she had done so heard Miss Lizzie up stairs laugh outright at her mouth, so that, according to the witness' testimony, Lizzie Borden premeditated parricide and laughed at a servant's struggle with a sticky door in one and the same instant. Less than an hour passed between the time that Lizzie laughed at the servant's encounter with the door and the time she was which she announced her father's murder. The witness then detailed the events of the fatal morning.

Morse on the Stand.

The Bordens had a visitor on the day of their awful visitation. His name is John V. Morse. He is an uncle of the prisoner, being a brother of Mrs. Borden's first wife, and he told this story on the stand: He had spent twenty-eight years in Hastings, Ia., and had been in this state about three years, living part of the time with the Bordens and the remainder in Dartmouth. He arrived at the house Aug. 3 and spent the night in the guest chamber. He arose at 6 o'clock, ate breakfast and heard Mrs. Borden order Bridget Sullivan to wash the windows. He never saw Lizzie at all during his entire stay at the house until after the murder.

Mr. Borden bade him goodby at 8:20 that morning and asked him to come back to dinner, which he promised to do. He spent the morning with relatives in Flint village and returned to the house at 11:45, when the servant told him that Mr. and Mrs. Borden had been murdered. The house was full of policemen. On Saturday he saw Emma take a towel and wash the blood off the parlor door. It was literally covered.

Other witnesses were examined, the servant Bridget was recalled and the examination adjourned.

The most extraordinary event since the Borden tragedies three weeks ago occurred just after the adjournment of the hearing. Several reporters crowded around the attorneys for the defense, who showed the following extract from the Fall River Globe:

Lizzie's Strange Remark.

"Wednesday afternoon a reporter of The Globe learned that Matron Reagan had heard Lizzie Borden quarreling with Emma, accusing the latter of giving the away. He went to Mrs. Reagan to have the story corroborated. The question was put to the matron, 'How is Miss Lizzie conducting herself now?'

"She replied: 'She is very much agitated and has been since her sister called today. She is wringing her hands and walking up and down like a crazy person.'"

This article stirred counsel for defense and its correctness is denied.

The Globe representatives, however, will made affidavit that Mrs. Reagan corroborated the account, and another newspaper correspondent will make oath that a person in a position to know overheard the speech told him the same facts and said they came directly from Mrs. Reagan. Attorney Jennings was much worked up over the matter, and drew up a form of affidavit denying that she made the statements attributed to her, to be submitted to Mrs. Reagan for her signature. Marshal Mr. Buck was delegated to take the document to the matron, but soon returned saying that she refused to sign it unless the marshal said so.

Mr. Buck went back to the matron, who positively refused to allow the matron to do anything of the kind unless she was placed on the witness stand. Mr. Jennings, who had followed Mr. Buck into the office, grew very indignant and told the marshal it was the meanest thing he had ever heard. The marshal then told him and her words passed between the two. Marshal Hilliard says he has been making an investigation of the case to determine the merits of the case and has yet to examine one witness.

As the matter now stands Mrs. Reagan has made at least four denials at different times. Two policemen and one reporter will make affidavit that what has been published is substantially true. Not one of the Misses Borden's friends, however, believe that the quarrel occurred.

ENGLAND HAS CHOLERA.

The Disease Carried from Hamburg Into Gravesend.

TWO CASES END IN DEATH THERE.

London in a State of Panic and Strict Quarantine Measures Will Be Enforced. Additional Precautionary Methods to Keep the Scourge from This Country.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—The Asiatic cholera has arrived in England. The steamer Gamma, from Hamburg, has entered at Gravesend, bringing several cases of the plague. Two women on the steamer have died from cholera, and another victim, a man, is improving. The news has caused great consternation at Gravesend and excitement in London.

The steamer Laura, which arrived at Lynn Regis from Hamburg, had two persons sick on board, suspected of having cholera. The health officers of Lynn refused to allow the steamer to enter port and compelled it to put back to sea. The officers and passengers protested against such summary treatment, but the health officers were obdurate and, positively refused to let a single person land from the steamer.

The North German Lloyd steamship line has given notice that no immigrants from Russia will be carried in the steerage.

The apprehensions lately entertained in England in regard to danger from cholera have suddenly developed into a genuine scare. The fact that two deaths have occurred among passengers landed from Hamburg has aroused alarm in every quarter. The newspapers are clamoring for an entire stoppage of traffic from the infected ports, especially Hamburg, and The St. James Gazette demands that immigration be suspended from any quarter. Some papers go further, and seize the opportunity to insert the thin edge of a wedge of a crusade against the admission of destitute aliens at all in the future.

At Grimsby, Hull and Lynn floating hospitals are in readiness to receive immigrants who are detained for medical examination or care. Orders to prepare similar accommodations have been sent to other ports.

THE CHOLERA'S MARCH.

Additional Precautions to Stop It from Reaching Our Shores.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—The state department is advised by the health officer at Quarantine, S. I., that all steamers will be inspected most carefully. If cholera is found all persons will be held at least seven days, sick removed and placed in hospitals, all baggage as well as the vessel treated with steam and all parts of the vessel not subjected to steam will be washed with a solution of chloride of mercury.

The secretary of state sent the following telegram to the United States consul at Hamburg embodying the recommendations of the health officer at New York:

I recommend that all immigrants will undergo a most thorough inspection abroad, with detention of those from infected or suspected districts for at least five days; that they be bathed and all clothing and baggage be disinfected by steam. That the certificate signed by the consul of such cleansing and disinfection be given the ship's surgeon for presentation to the health officer at the port of New York.

Montreal Uneasy.

MONTREAL, Aug. 27.—The outbreak of cholera at several European seaports has caused considerable uneasiness here, as the steamships of the Hamburg-American Packet company, arrive daily at this port from Hamburg and Antwerp. W. C. Manderich, manager of the Hamburg-American Packet company, states that every precaution will be taken on board the boats to prevent the disease, and he will afford the health authorities every assistance in his power.

Dr. Laberge, the city's health officer, says he will take every precaution against the landing of any immigrant or any member of the crew of a vessel from an infected port until the vessel has been thoroughly overhauled by the proper authorities.

SOMERBY IN PHILADELPHIA.

He Still Insists That Iron Hall Is a Solid Institution.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 27.—Supreme Justice F. D. Somerby, of the Order of Iron Hall, returned to his home, 2,402 Bering street, this city. He said he had arrived from Baltimore and was tired and sick. At first he declined to talk, but finally replied, when asked his opinion of the financial condition of the order: "You can say that Iron Hall, to my mind, is as solid as any institution in the country."

"The dispatches from Indianapolis quoted me as saying during the investigation that Secretary Hayes was responsible for the $88,000 of the reserve fund being in Mutual bank stock and that you knew nothing about it," said the reporter.

"That is absolutely false. While Secretary Hayes was the one who made the investment, still I knew that it had been done. I said nothing that reflected in any way upon J. Henry Hayes, for I believe him to be a thoroughly honest man."

"Do you believe that this $88,000 is lost?"

Mr. Somerby thought for a moment and then said, "Yes, I am obliged to admit that I think it is."

When told that the Mutual bank appraisers finished their work and that the result is favorable to the institution Mr. Somerby said: "I am glad of that. But I felt sure of it all along, and was convinced that the $170,000 of Iron Hall was all right. There would have been no need for an assignee for the bank if it had not been for Superintendent Krumbhaar's interference."

"What will your movements be in the future?"

"That I can't say. But I am always ready to do anything for the good of the order. My actions have always been straightforward and honest, and I can only say that I am very sorry for the whole affair. There was no occasion for a receiver for Iron Hall, and there was no occasion for a receiver for the Mutual bank, as both were perfectly solid."

Mr. Somerby was surprised when he learned that District Attorney Graham had been appointed receiver for Pennsylvania, but would talk no more.

A Receiver for Massachusetts.

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—Application has been made in the supreme judicial court for a receiver for the Iron Hall in the commonwealth of Massachusetts. There is in the hands of the officers of the Massachusetts branches probably from $200,000 to $300,000.

Glines Receiver for New York.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Justice O'Brien appointed George E. Glines temporary receiver of the property in this state of the Order of the Iron Hall on petition of Moses K. Glines.

THE LAST OF THE STRIKE.

The Men Vote to Return to Work—The Troops to Be Withdrawn.

BUFFALO, Aug. 27.—A large meeting of striking switchmen was held in Kaiser's hall and after it was over one of the strikers said: "The strike is over. We have voted to go back to work." Grand Master Sweeney left the Genesee House, and, accompanied by a couple of detectives as a body guard and Miss Mary J. Barrett, drove to the Central depot, where he took a Michigan Central train for the west.

A number of the Rochester and Pittsburg striking switchmen called upon Superintendent Bartlett and asked to be reinstated. They were told that there was no use of their applying, as not one of them should ever again be employed on the road.

The superintendent is quoted as saying that the company made every consideration possible to the men and had treated them fairly in every particular. They were determined to tie up the road; now the road would tie them up.

The Lackawana switchmen went on strike again. Several of the members of the crews at the foot of Main street were refused re-employment, and as the men had agreed not to go back unless all of their number were put at work the fourteen men who had already went back quit work. A settlement was quickly arrived at and it was announced that the men would resume their old places. The men then went to work.

General Doyle says that the Fourth brigade will be sent home Sunday morning, leaving the field in charge of the local militia.

HARRISON AT MALONE.

The President Meets with a Warm Reception and Makes a Speech.

LOON LAKE, N. Y., Aug. 27.—The citizens of Malone warmly received President Harrison, and an informal luncheon and reception in the park completed the programme. The president was introduced to the several thousand people there by Hon. F. B. Kilbourn and spoke as follows:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN, COMRADES OF THE GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC—I very sincerely appreciate the friendly invitation extended in your behalf, which has given me the privilege of standing for a few minutes among you and exchanging greetings as friend and as American citizens. These temporaneous assemblages in which we gather to express a common interest in the institutions of the civil government under which we live, a common respect for public authority and a common love for the flag, are full, I am sure, not only of interest but of benefit to all who participate in them.

We shall presently, in the political campaign which is opening, have our opinions and our opinion emphasized and our separate assemblages to advocate these principles. We are not today, however, as citizens, but as partisans, to give expression to those common interests which, fortunately for us as a nation, in every time of great exigency and stress and in every time of danger to the flag, obliterate all party division and make us one people in its defense. [Applause.]

We are a favored nation in that great isolation we enjoy. We are free from the dangers of close contact with any of the great military powers of the world. Our neighbor on the north, the Dominion of Canada neither threatens us nor we her. [Laughter and applause.] We desire for them the most abundant prosperity, the fullest development of which their resources are capable and constant peace.

I believe that we have seen the last serious outbreak against our laws that we shall ever see. [Applause.] The one cause that could divide our people—human slavery—has, under the favor of God and by the Union army, been abolished forever, and Lincoln's proclamation and the law assert it in the south itself. [Applause.]

No cause can be advanced in this country upon the lines of lawlessness. [Applause.] Intelligence and morality among our people, the church, the school and the home—these great rocks, upon which our institutions and our safety rest, we will cherish and preserve. [Applause.]

And now, comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic, surviving veterans of that gallant band that from those mountains and valleys went out to defend the flag, I give you a comrade's greeting today. God bless you, every one. [Great cheering.] Let me thank you again for your most cordial greeting and offer my apology for having been betrayed by your kindly face into a more extended speech than I had intended to make. [Applause.]

A PLEASURE YACHT SUNK.

Millionaire Sibley, His Family and Party and the Crew Drowned.

SAGINAW, Mich., Aug. 27.—The steam yacht Wapiti, having on board Hiram W. Sibley, Rochester; Mrs. Hiram W. Sibley; two children—Ruth, aged sixteen, and Harriet, twelve; Miss Frances Durbin, of New York, a cousin of Mrs. Sibley; Miss Mary Hall, Rochester, the family nurse, and Miss Marie Pond, of Rochester, daughter of Colonel N. P. Pond, and a crew of four men, was lost on Georgian bay. The cook and one other person, it is not yet known whom, were the only ones saved.

George Sherman, the cook employed on the yacht, telegraphs from Collingwood, Ont., that the yacht was wrecked and that but two of those on board were saved. The Wapiti, which was formerly known as the Strightaway, left here about two weeks ago on a pleasure trip around Lake Huron. She was owned by Mr. Sibley and his business partner, Mr. Barringer, of New York.

Mr. Sibley was the oldest son of the late Hiram Sibley, of Rochester, N. Y., the millionaire seed dealer, who endowed the College of Mechanic Arts at Cornell university.

THE DUEL.

A Many Headed Anachronism—Origin—Dating in Barbarian Lands.

The duel had attained a vigorous manhood among the tribes of northern Europe before their written history began. It reached its legal prime in the early feudal ages and enjoyed a new era of activity under the auspices of later chivalry. Its bodily constitution enabled it to set at naught the attacks of time, religion and civilization until it was a hoary headed anachronism long surviving its usefulness. Ordeals of various kinds, in their essence a positive appeal to the power of nature as the voice of God, once formed part of the judicial system of almost every nation, whether of the east or west. Trial by combat, on the contrary, in which the litigants were instruments in the appeal as well as subjects of it, had no such universality. Angry men have fought from the beginning and will fight until the end. But trial by combat, a deliberate staking of a plea upon the issue of a duel, is a different and far higher thing.

It was not known to the oriental races until after contact with the nascent chivalry of the west. It did not exist among the ancient Egyptians. We must reject as Pope Nicholas I did in the year 867, the argument that it was divinely instituted when David with his sling slew the mighty man of war of the Philistines. It was not practiced by the Greeks. It was a department of jurisprudence which found no place in the codes of Roman emperors or in the treatises of Roman jurists. It is true that it comes to the front in history at a time when the mistress of the world began to "droop and slowly die upon her throne," but it was not a growth likely to spring from the decaying tissues of a high civilization grown corrupt. Its roots must be sought in lands inhabited by a people not yet advanced beyond the barbarian stage.

Good Things Credited to Talleyrand.

In writing on the incredibility of history, W. H. Walsh says: Talleyrand was continually having credited to him the good things said of other people. He was often much astonished by these compliments to his genius, but if he liked the saying he assumed its responsibility without hesitation. His paternity of the famous "It is the beginning of the end" is doubted by Fournier. The still more famous "Speech was given to man to conceal his thoughts" was assigned to Talleyrand in the "Nain Jaune" by Harel, who says the case was not only a forger but a thief, because as the author of a colony on Voltaire he must have known that the latter wrote "Men employ speech only to conceal their thoughts," and that indeed the phrase can be traced as far back as Cato.

Talleyrand was even unfortunate as to be credited with the good things said at his expense. Thus, "Who would not adore him, he is so vicious?" was said by Montrond of him, not by him of Montrond. Again, it was not he who, to the sick man complaining that he suffered the tortures of the damned, cavilly exclaimed, "Déjà!" Louis Blanc says that when Talleyrand was on his deathbed Louis Philippe asked him if he suffered. "Yes, like the damned," Louis Philippe murmured. "Déjà!" a word that the dying man heard, and which he revenged forthwith by giving to one of the persons about him secret and terrible indications. But in fact the reporters may be found in one of Lebrun's "Epigrames," and has been attributed to a number of people.

What Is Home?

Here are a few of the definitions of home, selected from a collection made by an enterprising London exchange:

The golden setting in which the brightest jewel is "mother."

A world of strife shut out, a world of love shut in.

A grand old mirror through which both sides of us are seen.

The place for a married man after business hours.

The father's kingdom, the children's paradise, the mother's world.

A hive in which, like the industrious bee, youth garners the sweets and memories of life for age to meditate and feed upon.

The place where the great are sometimes small and the small often great.

The only spot on earth where the faults and failings of fallen humanity are hidden under the mantle of charity.

The source of comfort which youth does not fully appreciate, which young men and maidens lovingly desire; which the middle aged generally possess, which the old rightly value.

An arbor which shades when the sunshine of prosperity becomes too dazzling; a harbor where the human bark finds shelter in the time of adversity.

Home is a person's estate obtained without injustice, kept without disquietude; a place where time is spent without repentance, and which is ruled by justice, mercy and love.

Indian Names and Their Meaning.

Chicopee—Birch bark place.
Skowhegan—Spearing.
Chautauqua—Foggy place.
Adirondack—Iroquois name of the Algonquins, signifying "He eats bark."

Needlework in the Reign of Henry VIII.

Henry VIII's foreign wives exercised a marked influence upon the needlework of the age. Catherine of Aragon introduced the Spanish style of black and white silk and gold embroidery on fine linen, and her daughter, Queen Mary, who was also Spanish in her taste, practiced the same kind of lace stitchery, chiefly in black and gold. She is reputed to have finished the beautiful and elaborate lace begun by her mother in her days of loneliness and seclusion. A counterpane worked by her at this time is still in existence.

Daudet's Counsel to Literary Aspirants.

M. Alphonse Daudet, the French novelist, has apparently no great belief in the advantages of literature as a profession. His advice to young people who come to him for his opinion as to the advisability of giving themselves up altogether to letters invariably is: "Stick to your profession, and if you have it in you to write anything really good, you will always find time to do it." Would that every literary aspirant laid this golden counsel to heart.

EGG BALANCING.

One of the Favorite Feats Practiced by the Japanese Conjurers.

Place a hard boiled egg on the under side of a smooth, but dull—not polished—tray. Move the tray around and around horizontally, gradually increasing in speed. The egg, resting in the middle of the tray, is carried around and around by the movement, and gradually begins to revolve on its own axis, faster and faster, till at last it is seen to rise on end and spin away exactly as a top would do.

In all experiments involving egg balancing you will find it a material aid to success to keep the egg upright in the saucepan while it is being boiled. The air chamber will in such case be kept central with the longer axis of the egg, which will in consequence be much more easily balanced.

To set the egg spinning as described demands practice, not to mention some strength, and, still more, address. For the benefit of those who are ambitious to succeed at the first attempt we indicate a simpler plan of procedure. Place the tray on the table, letting it project so far over the edge as to be readily and rapidly grasped by the hand. Place the egg in the middle, and with the thumb of the left and the first finger of the right hand placed at opposite ends set it vigorously spinning. It will immediately rise on end, still spinning. Quickly seize the tray, and you will then have nothing to do but to keep the egg still rotating, which is a very easy matter. This is done by moving the tray in horizontal circles, but in the reverse direction to that in which the egg revolves.

The Kaki.

The kaki, or Japanese persimmon, of which there are many varieties, has proved of value for the cotton growing belt of the southern states. In the southern states, however, the kaki thrives better on seedlings of the wild persimmon than upon the Japanese roots. While as yet comparatively little known in the markets, the kaki is considered of sufficient importance by the national department of agriculture to justify assistance and encouragement for its permanent establishment in this country.

The range of cultivation in the gulf states is now defined for the varieties positively identified, extending from Key West, Fla., to Augusta, Ga., and into the Carolinas near the coast. As far south as Manatee, Fla., it succeeds admirably on native stock, and is cultivated as a special fruit all through central Florida; but in the northern belt of counties, beginning with the extreme limits of orange culture, it is most at home, although trees have been injured by frost where an early season has lasted too free growth. The fruit of most varieties described is of a bright orange red or light vermilion color, in shape and general appearance resembling a smooth tomato, and begins to color when half grown. If gathered before a frost there is a slight astringency next to the skin, but this disappears after being kept in the house a few days or weeks. If allowed to be slightly touched by frost the flavor is much improved, but the fruit will then not keep many days. Some varieties will remain sound until January or February. The flesh is soft, rich and sweet, with a slight aperient quality. The coloring matter of the persimmon raised in Japan; some are eaten in a fresh state, others are used for drying. Samples of dried persimmons have been sent from Japan, and they are equal to the best Smyrna figs, but with a peculiar and pleasant aroma.

The yamatsubu, here illustrated, differs in shape from some of the other varieties of kaki in being decidedly pointed. In size it varies from 1½ by 2 to 2 by 3 inches in diameter. The name means mountain or wild crane—yama meaning mountain, or, literally interpreted, wild, and tsuru the stork or crane. Japanese pomologists say it is perhaps the wild progenitor of the large and more improved variety called tsuru.

Scientific Brevities.

It has been decided in the English board of trade that the commercial unit of electricity formerly known as the "board of trade unit" is hereafter to be called a "kelvin," in honor of the well known Sir William Thomson, whose present title is Lord Kelvin.

A new method of utilizing the waste heat of slag is the invention of an Australian mining company. The idea is to run the molten slag into iron chambers capable of withstanding pressure, and to raise steam by sprayting the red hot slag with water.

To restore faded manuscripts, so that they may be more easily photographed, Herr Liesegang recommends passing them through a weak bath of ammonium sulphide.

It is said that polished metal surfaces can be effectively protected by dipping them, after chemically cleaning, into a cold bath composed of 1 grain of isinglass dissolved (with boiling) in an ounce of water.

According to a German scientific journal, the elasticity of india rubber articles may be restored by steeping them for a few minutes, or at most half an hour, in a mixture of two parts of water and one part of ammonia.

The Household

HOUSE DECORATION.

Hints for Country Homes—The Moorish Style—A Rose Room.

Those who are about to reupholster their furniture are advised by The Decorator and Furnisher to try the effect of golden brown corduroy velveteen, which on the coverings of seats wears extremely well. From the same authority are also gleaned the following suggestions:

One of the beauties of the frieze is the delicate, cloudy background into which the flowers merge, giving an idea of place as well as atmosphere.

A pretty rose room has the wall covered with plain cartridge paper in a pale rose tint, with a deep frieze of wild roses on a pale cream ground, a picture molding dividing the two. The window hangings are of pink sateen, with a full ruffle of the same at the edge. Two curtains of white dotted swiss are placed next the window. A comfortable couch is covered with the same sateen and piled high with pillows also in the same delicate coloring; while the bedstead, which is painted white, has a spread and a round bolster in the same material. The floor has a white matting of fine weave, and Japanese cotton rugs in dull tones are used wherever necessary. A simple screen painted white is filled with panels of rose colored silk, and down pillows covered with old red corduroy fill the wicker chairs.

A delightful hall decoration consists in covering the walls with chintzes in tints of pale green and pinky terra cotta. There can be a dado of cream matting. A Moorish arch over a little drapery is a great improvement to the hallway. All the woodwork can be painted a pale green, and the doors and walls an ivory tint. The stairs should have a terra cotta brussels carpet, and the hall could be covered with dark red linoleum, with a good rug over the center.

A fancy paper is a good idea, which should be painted either a warm ivory or brown to give the effect of carved woodwork. A wall filling of paper, bearing a large medallion scroll in imitation of Lincrusta, and the scroll frieze in amaglypta wiped down to old ivory, would make a charming decoration. The woodwork should be painted a cream color.

Moorish influence is charming in the country house. One conjures up at the name cool, flashing fountains in the midst of the salons, airy galleries and arcades and lattices cut with interlacing figures that entice the eye in a dreamy wandering in and out in lines leading nowhere.

Rattan furniture has the advantage of lightness, allowing of chairs and tables being easily moved in warm weather from apartments to verandas and lawns.

Berry Pudding with Cinnamon Sauce.

Use one pint of unsifted flour, half a pint of milk, one gill of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, half a teaspoonful of salt, two heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one egg, one pint of huckleberries and one-fourth of a grated nutmeg.

Mix all the dry ingredients together and rub in the butter first, then the butter into the flour. Beat the egg and add the milk to it (having the measurement of the milk rather scant); then stir into the dry mixture. Beat the batter thoroughly, and then add the berries stirring them in gently. Turn the pudding into a well buttered mold and cover. Cook for two hours in a steamer. Be sure that the water is boiling under the steamer all the time. Turn out on a warm dish and serve with cinnamon or wine sauce. Good Housekeeping, in which the foregoing is found, adds the following recipe for a nice sauce: Mix together in a saucepan half a pint of sugar and a level tablespoonful of flour. Pour on this three gills of boiling water. Add a piece of stick cinnamon about three inches long and simmer for twenty minutes; then add one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one tablespoonful of lemon juice or a teaspoonful of vinegar. Boil up once and use after straining.

Lamps and Shades.

Some of the most beautiful among the many artistic floor lamps to be seen are those in beaten iron and copper, with green shades of Venetian design.

A DAINTY LAMPSHADE.

Some of the newest telescope lamps are attached to small tables, which may be decked out with plants or used for afternoons.

Shades are made in many fantastic shapes and all colors, though yellow and pink are perhaps the favorites. They are of delicate silk and lace, with ribbon trimmings. One of the loveliest of French shades is of yellow gauze and lace strewn all over with tiny little sprays of mimosa. Another beautiful one is in pink, powdered all over with little black velvet crescents and adorned with pink and black bows. Our own shows a fashionable shade in silk, lace and ribbon.

Cleaning Silver.

The following recipe, says Jewelers' Circular, is good enough for retail jewelers to recommend to lady customers who ask what to do with their silverware. The operation requires a small sponge or piece of flannel, a soft chamois skin, a clean, dry duster and a silver brush. If she has no chamois keep on hand some mild gloves for the purpose. Rub all articles that are badly stained, such as eggspoons, etc., with salt; it will remove stains more easily than anything else. Then simply in any and one of the best is to mix a little whiting in a saucer, with water enough to make a thick paste; to this add a few drops of household ammonia. Instead of ammonia and water she may moisten the whiting with alcohol, or simply with water, but never way is adopted the process is the same.

Watermelon Ice.

Select a very ripe and very red watermelon. Save all the water, scrape the red pulp fine and add a little water, being careful to have sufficient melon to produce a strong flavor. Allow a pound of sugar to a gallon of this liquid and freeze. When the ice half frozen add the well beaten whites of three eggs and stir the mass frequently from the bottom with a long handled wooden spoon.

His Match.

In the class of Mr. Webb, the famous Cambridge "coach," there happened to be a man of the name of Coyle, and it used to be the delight of Mr. Webb to make puns on his name. One morning he came in to lecture with a special twinkle in his eye, and walking straight over to the blackboard drew a circle upon it. In that circle he drew a smaller one, and again a smaller circle in that, and so on, finally finishing up with a dot in the center of the smallest of all. Then, as once became apparent to all that this was intended for a coil of rope, and amused eyes were turned upon Mr. Coyle when the question was put.

"Can you tell me what I have drawn, Mr. Coyle?" But the amusement was immediately turned upon the lecturer when the unexpected reply was given:

"I think, sir, it is a spider's web."

Mr. Webb heartily joined in the laugh which followed.—Tit-Bits.

Time to Be Serious.

A physician was called at night to see a sick man. He found the patient in a room with several other men. Hearing one of the men address another as "doc," the visitor said, "If I had known there was another physician in attendance I should not have intruded on the case." "That's all right, doc," replied the patient. "We're all street corner doctors—fakirs, you know. But when we get sick ourselves we call in der regular purfesh."—Buffalo Express.

—George Bilyeu was arrested this morning for being disorderly and fined $3 by Judge Codington.

—The trial of George R. Nolan and Gustav Sutterlin, Jr., for fighting, was postponed this morning until next week.

—The Harvard Academy base-ball nine defeated Howard Martin's on Saturday morning in a game of base ball on the Park avenue grounds, by a score of 14-13.

—Last evening a stage collided, on Somerset street, with a large empty box wagon used for carting stone, upsetting it. The stage driver continued on his way without stopping. No one was injured.

—Several women living in the big woods back of Westfield had a drunken argument on Saturday night which ended in a free fight. One of the women was struck on the forehead with a teapot and badly cut.

—The Newark, N. J., Health Inspectors were all set to work this morning examining the sanitary condition of those parts of the city in which Asiatic cholera would be likely to secure a foothold. The Italian and Irish quarters of the city are being given particular attention.

—The work of raising the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks at Elizabeth was commenced this morning. Side tracks have already been built and the first consignment of lumber for the trestle work has been received from the South. The trains are to run on the elevated tracks by January.

—An accident happened to the machinery at the North Plainfield electric light station Saturday evening about 9.30 o'clock, which caused a portion of the lights to go out. For a night it was only possible to use half the number of lights, but everything is in order to-day for full lighting hereafter.

—The Plainfield Knights of Labor called off all the masons and laborers employed on the new beef company's building on East Third street this morning, not permitting them to do any work until the five non-union men also employed on the building had been discharged. The union then resumed work.

—A game of base ball will be played by the Arlingtons and Grocers of this city on Saturday next at Boynton Beach. The players are: Arlingtons—S. Perrin, s.s.; T. Smith, p.; C. Sutphen, c., E. A Surprised Tramp.

A peach grower, residing within a few miles of Plainfield, left home recently for the day on a business trip. A hired man was at work in a field near-by, and the farmer had not the slightest misgivings about the safety of his wife.

The hired man, in the course of his work, had got out of sight of the house when a particularly disagreeable-looking specimen of animated dirt, rags and lazy impudence, a tramp, entered the yard and coolly commenced appropriating merchandise lying about.

An elderly woman, a companion of the lady, told him to go away or she would call the hired man. The fellow looked around, smiled, and continued gathering. Just as his hand was outstretched, however, to take a coat from the fence, a very determined command, "Drop that!" came from the house.

Looking over his shoulder the tramp found himself gazing into the business end of a seven-shot revolver in the hands of a handsome young woman. His jaw dropped as quickly as the coat and with that weapon pointed with fear he slunk off. He actually tottered he was so scared.

When the husband heard of the wife's plucky action, he commended her, but she replied with a laugh: "I don't believe I could have hit a barn, and, anyhow, the pistol wasn't cocked."

Wheeling Notes.

Ad" Clark and John Dorvall of Westfield, will take a trip to Montreal, Canada, on their bicycles. They will start Sept. 5th. The distance is about 600 miles.

Dr. Lyman Clark of the Union County Wheelmen of Railway has been elected treasurer of the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey, also a member of the Board of Trustees.

There are some things bicyclists learn by experience. One of these is that vaseline is an excellent thing to rub on the frame work of a wheel, as it prevents rust from gathering and is easily rubbed off—Westfield Standard.

Experienced bicyclers know better than to do that, the vaseline may prevent the rust from sticking but it takes up a terrible quantity of dust, forms a heavy paste, and is almost impossible to get off, especially where the spokes join the hub. The above wrinkle was probably given by a novice who had been unable sometime ago said vaseline was good to use on the face instead of soap-lather when shaving. Those who tried it say it was similar to running a scraping machine through a field of tree stumps.

A Reunion of 30th.

At the re-union of the 30th N. J. Volunteers, next Thursday, Sept. 1st, to be held at Reform Hall, beginning at ten o'clock, invited soldiers are invited to participate. The management requests that all persons having flags will display them Thursday in honor of the visit of the veterans, and to make them feel more welcome. A deputation will meet the visitors at the depot at ten o'clock with Guttman's full band.

PERSONAL.

Miss McAuley of Paterson is the guest of Miss Rafferty of Park avenue.

Mr. E. Gavin, of North Plainfield, is at the Mansion House, Asbury Park.

Dr. Comegys Paul of this city is registered at The Strand, Asbury Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Marsh returned this morning from a six weeks stay at Belmar.

Miss E. E. Niles of First place is visiting friends at Port Preble in Portland Harbor, Maine.

Mr. John McCann, formerly of this city but now of Brooklyn, spent Sunday with friends here.

Miss Kitty Dunn of Brooklyn is visiting her cousins, the Misses Maddens of West Fifth street.

Mr. Wilson P. Fulper of No. 43 North avenue returned Saturday from a short visit at Asbury Park.

The Rev. Father McKernan of St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield, is stopping at Sunset Hall, Asbury Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Putnam of Orchard place have returned home from a pleasant visit of two weeks in Portchester, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy F. Phillips of No. 125 Madison avenue returned this morning from a month's stay at the Highlands of Navesink.

Mr and Mrs. Coard and the Misses Coard of No. 46 Putnam avenue returned this morning from a six weeks stay at Asbury Park.

Miss Helen M. Eaton of this city died at Jamestown, R. I., very suddenly last Saturday. The interment will be made at Oakhill, New York.

Mr. Charles Spith of West Front street is convalescent from a severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism, with which he has suffered several weeks.

Mr. Fred Obitz of Somerset street and Mr. George Demeza of West Second street have returned from Texas, whither they went nearly two months ago.

Mr. F. W. Heller of West Front street, formerly president of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein, has removed to Newark. He has accepted a fine situation in that city.

Dr. Dudley S. Miller, of East Fifth street, with his wife and child, started to-day for a two weeks' carriage drive about the State. Upon their return they will spend a week in Brooklyn.

Farmers on a Rampage.

Albert Peer, who resides on the second mountain, was drunk and disorderly in the borough Saturday afternoon, brutally beating his horse and using profane language, when he was arrested by Marshal Pangborn and put in the lock-up. After being there for four hours, his employer, Mr. Smith of New York, who is stopping over the mountain for the Summer, appeared and paid a fine of $3 and costs imposed by Justice Crossley, and secured Peer's release.

A drunken man named William Dalton of Sterling, who interfered with the marshal by endeavoring to incite the prisoner to resist a revolver, was taken before the Justice, after having been kept in the lock-up for several hours. He pleaded hard for mercy, telling the judge he had a good job on a farm at Sterling which he would lose if locked up. The judge told him he could send him to the Somerville jail for thirty days. Dalton said "I will stay out of the borough if that long if you will let me go." The judge took him at his word, and on promise of future good behavior suspended sentence.

A Big Giant and a Little Giant Race.

Eugene Laine, who is well known to most Plainfielders, and who is about six feet in height, has a grip like a vise and is heavy enough to make a pair of scales feel nervous, as Ed. Brown met to his sorrow this morning to gain ten dollars by winning a race. His competitor was the Crescents' giant Captain, "Chic" Hofford, who looks a small four feet nothing on the street and somewhere around three times that in the eyes of his admirers, on the base ball field.

These two jovial characters decided to have a safety bicycle race to Fanwood and return, barring accidents, for a wager of $10.

They rode over the same course as that taken by the riders in the Crescent League handicap race last week except they only made one lap. Captain Hofford won easily in twenty-three minutes, leaving Mr. Laine by three minutes.

Sagroad friends say that when "Chic" got so far ahead that they couldn't see him, he put his wheel on a wagon and was driven by a short cut, through to Front street. They do not say how he managed to get so far ahead, however, and the "hitching" part of the story hasn't the true ring to it.

Don't ask Eugene if he wants to race.

Singing Societies on the Mountain.

The Saengerbund entertained three German singing societies, the Aurora Society from New Brunswick and the Fronsin and Muennerchor Societies of Perth Amboy, on the mountain yesterday, where the day was spent in true German fashion, with their wives and children. There was a large gathering. Their singing on the mountain could be heard half a mile away near the centre of North Plainfield. People stopped in the streets to hear it, and remarked that they never heard such a grand song service.

Addresses were made by Mr. Martin Bauhuser of Plainfield, and by President Wittich of the New Brunswick Aurora.

They went early in the day in three large wagons and about fifteen carriages, and returned about sunset.

LEAGUE BALL GAMES.

THE CRESCENTS BEATEN BY THE WESTFIELDS SATURDAY.

And the West Ends Won from Elizabeth, Making Plainfield and Somerville Tie for First Place.—Score: Westfield, 8; Crescents, 3.

The Crescents were beaten Saturday by the Westfields, and the West Ends won from Elizabeth, making Plainfield and Somerville tie for first place and Westfield and Elizabeth even for third place.

The race in the Central New Jersey League for the championship now lies between Plainfield and Somerville. The other two clubs—Westfield and Elizabeth—are too far behind now to get near the leaders. All their fighting will be to get third place.

Sneeden, for two innings, in the game Saturday, pitched in fine form, but in the third inning he let up, and four singles, coupled with a base on balls, gave Westfield three runs, and the lead.

The Crescents were unable to do much with Sharrott's pitching, and just when a little hit would bring in runs, it was not forthcoming, as the batter would be struck out.

The home team went out in one, two, three order, in the first two innings, but in the third they scored one run, and in the fifth two more Crescent players crossed the plate, tieing the score. This settled their run getting.

Westfield took the lead again in the sixth inning. The bases were full when Sneeden gave McIndoe his base on balls, forcing in a run. In the next inning Kluzie secured a hit, but was caught at the plate, in trying to reach home on Gillis' single.

The eighth began for Westfield with Cougan at the bat. He made a hit to centre field, but Leidy was on hand, and Coogan was out. Sharrott followed with a two-bagger. McIndoe went out at first. O'Neil smashed the sphere for two bases, and Sharrott scored. Lever made a single, and stole second, but he was left there as Howe went out Bonner to Jones.

Murphy was substituted for Sneeden in the next inning, but the change was not very profitable as he was batted more frequently than Sneeden. Two singles, a double and a three bagger were made off his delivery, netting the Westfields three runs, making them winners by the score of eight to three.

"Gentle Willie" Murphy made two splendid running catches during the game, and further distinguished himself at the bat by making a two-bagger.

The Crescents only once had a chance to secure three hits off Sharrott. "Freddy" hit the ball every time he went to the bat, while three bases, made two of the three runs, and played an errorless game at first.

Street Railway Trouble in Orange.

The New Jersey Traction Company, that was in conflict with the township of East Orange over the quality of Belgian blocks which were being used to pave their tracks, and abandoned the work there and began in Orange this week, is now in similar trouble in the latter. Saturday at noon the street committee inspected the road that had been laid and ordered that the work be stopped, there being several points made against the company. The company has not received permission to open the street for the relaying of its tracks, the space between the tracks has been widened a foot within the permission of the Council, the clause in the contract that eighteen inches of Belgian blocks shall be laid outside of the tracks has been regarded, and a large number of inferior blocks of small size are being used. Friday evening a special meeting of the Common Council was held, at which it was decided to hold the company to a rigid compliance with the contract, and that it should pay an inspector, to be appointed by the city, to watch the work as it progresses. It is thought that the road will yield to the demands of the Council, and that the delay will not be great in the matter. This company is said to be composed of several of the same persons as operate the Plainfield Street Railway.

Mr. Thomas Nevins of Orange, who is reputed to be a leading spirit in the Orange Railway Co., is president of the Plainfield Street Railway Co. He is regarded a very shrewd business man and many so-called smart transactions are attributed to him, whether justly or not we cannot say. In one of them he is represented as having profitably hoodwinked the Plainfield Railway Company. Besides being its president Mr. Nevins is also a contractor, and in the latter capacity, he, it is said, undertook, to lay the Plainfield road. In giving his estimate for the work, he represented, so the story goes, that the road was composed of Telford pavement and as such made his price fifty cents per running foot. The Telford road, however, extends only over two blocks in the business portion of the city, the rest of the road being ordinary macadam only a few inches in thickness which any contractor would gladly have undertaken at twenty cents per foot, according to our informant, experienced in such matters. He evidently did this of course if in the company's not the city's loss. He also had the making of the county road, or at least a portion of it, and another story has it that the overseer employed by the county surveyor, Engineer F. A. Dunham that the workmen were "filling in with clay," in such a manner that when the crushed stone should be put on top of it, the clay would not be seen. Mr. Dunham and the freeholders then visited the work and reported it further work until the clay was entirely removed and gave orders that the work should be properly done. Mr. Nevins was reported present and to have acquiesced in a most obliging manner. In fact it is said he could not do too much for the gentlemen, and called out to the workmen to "rouse nice of every bit of that clay, do you understand, and if necessary rouse swape it off wid a broom." After seeing the specials of the Board, instead of the Port Reading, I am satisfied Mr. Maxwell will conduct these operations just as economically as the specials would, if they could be under the lease, and as Mr. Nevins and his associates on the board own in their own right an absolute majority of the stock of the Central, the control of the Port Reading property and these properties is permanently assured. Mr. Maxwell and his associates have been and will continue to be in hearty sympathy with the plans for uniting the joint properties in one great harmonious line and in securing under the lease to the Port Reading shall be ultimately sustained or not in the further progress of the case seems to be an inappreciable difference in our plans.

"The order entered is that of an interlocutory character, and therefore is not appealable. It was done on a preliminary hearing and ex parte affidavits in a case involving great public works and such other interests of stockholders who might be affected. In such cases, I am informed, the invariable rule in every State, including New Jersey, has been not to issue such a writ until after a full and final hearing upon the law and evidence, affording an opportunity for full view before the courts of last resort.

"If the decision in any way was influenced by the clamor over the price of coal in New Jersey, the Chancellor could very readily have ascertained from the affidavits on file that neither his decree nor the issue itself could have any effect on the consumers. The Port Reading General company nor the Port Reading are miners or shippers of coal.

"It will not affect the coal trade either. No part of it is in the hands of either the Central, the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company or the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company. Each of these companies controls the output of the coal companies, and of most of the individual operators in the anthracite coal fields of Pennsylvania, which is authorized by law and its charter to make, and will continue to make, its own rates and fix the price at which it will sell its coal, without putting its coal on the markets at as fair prices as it is able to secure.

"I see no reason why the obligation under its charter, which was granted by the State of Pennsylvania, which obligates the company to sell coal to any one who may offer to buy or to sell coal in New Jersey at any price, will not be enforced against the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company to ship all its coal to the through the State of Pennsylvania without getting to the State of New Jersey the benefit of any of this business.

"I do not believe that either the State of Pennsylvania or even the State of Camden and Amboy are of yet ready to surrender the chance of obtaining substantial railroad competition, which can at the present time only be given by the Reading system, as now constituted."

A Decided Fact.

Said a prominent Republican to a dyed-in-the-wool Democrat this morning:

"Well, my Democratic friend, Cleveland will never see Washington in '93."

"I'll bet he will. Why not?"

"He's dead."

"What! Cleveland dead?"

"Naw," replied the witty John, "Washington."

PRESIDENT M'LEOD'S STATEMENT.

McGill's Decision Will Not Affect Traffic Nor the Coal Trade.

President McLeod of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company has given out the following statement in reference to the opinion filed by Chancellor McGill of New Jersey last week:

"The decision will not in any way have the effect of changing or disarranging our traffic arrangements in any way. Such arrangements have been found to be advantageous to both parties that neither could afford to interrupt or change them. I see no difference that will be that the business will be conducted under the immediate direction of Mr. Maxwell as Special Master in Chancery, instead of the Port Reading. EDITORIAL NOTES

A learned editor gives considerable time to discussing the reason for the decay of nations. The reason probably is that nations decay when their time comes, like everything else.

American tests of armor for warships excel in thoroughness those of any other nation. In the latter part of July two additional tests of American made ship armor were made, one at Indian Head, Md., the other at South Bethlehem, Pa. The armor plate was 10½ inches thick, and was made of steel alloyed with nickel and hardened by the Harvey carbonizing process. The tests showed that this kind of armor on a war vessel can withstand the shock of a shell weighing 800 pounds and traveling 1,700 feet a second. This makes American naval armor plating beyond doubt the best in the world.

The School Year.

The young ones who have been counting on their fingers just how many weeks and days would pass before they were caught and flung into the school routine again have come to the end of their tether. School begins. For the country children the vacation has been one of pleasure and profit. They have had opportunity to live outdoors in the pure air and sunshine and study with wide eyes and receptive souls the grand secrets nature opens to all her students. Those fortunate enough to be farm children have had a chance to work some, and so give a reason why they should live. Oh, yes, the country children have the best of it every time, and it is from the country that the young men and women who grow famous mostly all come. They go to the city after they have had their grand country bringing up.

Whether the long vacation is helpful to city children is doubtful. The boys run the streets, and the streets are not a good school. The girls must be dressed in abominable fine clothes whenever they step outside the house. They get no chance to run or shout or exercise the fine strong muscles that nature gave them. On the whole, it is not strange that the ordinary city girl is a pale wisp of a thing, with little independence of character and little strength to endure strains of either mind or body. She has now a fair chance. Part of the education of all city children should be to spend at least the months of July and August in the country, not running wild in idleness, but having systematic instruction in plant lore and knowledge of live stock, with object lessons to hand, gaining royal health and strength meanwhile. Undoubtedly in the more advanced civilization which the Twentieth century will usher in this will be done.

But for good or ill, vacation is ended. The grind begin. From time to time the course of study ought to change to keep up with the needs of the age. At present there is crying need for two modifications. One is for more thorough and emphatic instruction, not in grammar books—heaven forbid!—but in the correct, practical everyday use of the English language. It is a fact that with all our boasted progress in education the average twelve-year-old child does not speak anything like as good English as the pupil of that age did thirty years ago. Why? Because of the tremendous influx of foreigners into America. The average young workman or mechanic of today in the large cities who does not say "yous" for you or "wid" for with is the exception. This is fact, and our school teachers ought to be ashamed of themselves.

The young mechanic is the son of foreign parents, and the mixture of languages has resulted in a patois in all our large cities which will be as difficult to break up as to make the negro break away from the old plantation dialect. In the very face of the public schools this corruption and deterioration of the English language has been going on for a generation, and we have yet to hear of the first energetic effort the teachers have made to stem the tide. Practical exercise in English speaking, not wretched rules of grammar, are the only thing that will do the work.

Then there is one more branch of instruction particularly to be commended to the public school teachers at the beginning of this new year. With all the emphasis we can employ we remind them of the fact that the percentage of paupers and criminals in this country is increasing much faster than the percentage of population. Here is another black tide that must be stemmed, and nobody can stem it like the teacher. Once more, it is not dry rules and printed words that can cope with this emergency. It is living precept and example—the story drawn from real life, the practical daily illustration of the golden rule; its actual application to the life of teacher and school child alike.

It is not sectarian teaching or theology that we want. Leave that to the church. There is a morality taught alike in the New Testament and in the writings of Plato, Socrates, Solomon, Buddha, Confucius and Zoroaster. On the common ground of this sweet, world-old morality teachers and pupils of all nations may unite in the public schools and the nobler, better natures of both be aroused and made permanent. For as the teacher is, so is the pupil he

TO BLOCKADE HAMBURG

Emperor William May Isolate the Cholera Stricken City.

PARIS INVADED BY THE DISEASE.

Two Cases Terminate Fatally in the Gay Capital—Many New Cases in Havre. An Infected Vessel Quarantined by the English Authorities.

BERLIN, Aug. 29.—At a conference of the ministry of the interior it was decided to publish daily the number of cases of cholera reported throughout Germany. The ministry of the interior took this action at the suggestion of the emperor, who believes that the plague can be fought most advantageously if the people understand the exact nature of the peril to which they are exposed. In Berlin especially such a course is regarded as advisable, because a panic can be averted by the publication of all the facts. The city was never cleaner or healthier and with proper preventive measures it probably can be kept comparatively free from the infection. For the last thirty-six hours no fresh cases have been discovered. A general order will be given out to replace all general orders to railway officials in the matter of disinfection.

Reports from Hamburg show that the uneasiness in that city is increasing and the people are rushing from the city. The former policy of the Hamburg authorities in suppressing news concerning the disease is to a large extent, it is said, responsible for this action. The people place little confidence in the reports now given out, believing that the number of victims is purposely misrepresented and that the mortality is increasing rapidly. In the absence of a record which the people trust, exaggerated reports have been circulated since last evening, and many who had resolved to stay at home have suddenly moved out with their families. The persons arriving here say there is also general suspicion that the sanitary authorities are indifferent, although such an authority as Professor Koch, who was in Hamburg several days, approved of the measures taken by them to stay the progress of the disease.

From other parts of Germany reports of isolated cases of cholera or choleine have been received, but there is apparently no indication of a general spreading of the disease. A regiment at Metz is suffering from choleine. The principal cause of apprehension now it that a panic may develop in Hamburg, and the partial scattering of the city's population to other parts of Germany may produce infection in districts hitherto untouched.

Dispatches from William will hold a conference with Professor Koch and Dr. Raths, whom he sent to Hamburg to study the situation. If their disclosures are serious enough to warrant such a step the emperor will in all probability advise the blockading of the Hamburg port. The blockade is to be as complete as in time of war.

It is said that a decree will be decided upon the commerce of Hamburg will receive a terrible blow and some 50,000 workmen will necessarily be thrown out of employment. The harbor workmen of Hamburg are generally underpaid and their mode of living is poor and inadequate. If their daily wages should be stopped they will be compelled to be even less careful in the selection of their nourishment than now, and as an ill nourished body offers the greatest temptation for cholera and the disease are that the projected blockade would not change matters for the better, but might have a tendency to increase the cases of sickness.

In Hamburg and Altona.

HAMBURG, Aug. 29.—There are 360 fresh cases of cholera here. The number of deaths has not been ascertained. The mortality from cholera has raised the number of funerals daily from an average of eighty-five to one of 320.

The funerals, which take place constantly, are conducted without the usual ostentation. Not more than two or three carriages follow a hearse, and in many cases the body is taken to the grave without a friend or relation to accompany it. The services are limited to a prayer and hymn. This simplicity of ceremony is the result of the repeated warnings of the sanitary authorities and private physicians.

The Hamburg senate has requested an extra credit of 3,000,000 marks for medical purposes.

In Altona, just below here, there have been forty-seven fresh cases and nineteen deaths.

Gay Paris Stricken.

PARIS, Aug. 29.—Two deaths from cholera are reported from St. Louis hospital. A woman named Say, who lived alone, was found last night with a disease which she thought was Asiatic cholera. Today she tried to walk to her son's house to get proper care. She fell in the street and died while being conveyed to the hospital.

It is said that if the cholera continues to spread in Havre and other French cities through which there is much travel to the United States, the steamships of the French line will cease running to Havre and will touch instead at some English port, probably Southampton.

Barred Out by England.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—A sailor died of cholera on the steamship Geroona at Middlesborough today. The steamship has been quarantined, as other cases are said to be developing aboard her.

New Cases in Havre.

HAVRE, Aug. 29.—There were seventy-one fresh cases of cholera in this city yesterday and twenty-five deaths.

Luttbeg is Champion.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 29.—MAX Luttbeg defeated Barnie McFadden in a wrestling match at the Grand Opera house last night for the American welter weight championship and a purse of $1,000.

He Was Despondent.

WICHITA, Kan., Aug. 29.—Tom Drew, a young business man, deliberately placed his neck across the railroad track. His head was cut off. Despondency from prolonged sickness was the cause.

Gertie Carne Cremated.

DETROIT, Aug. 29.—Gertie Carne, who fell from a balloon and was killed here Thursday, desired to be cremated and her body was burned.

DR. HOLMES IS EIGHTY-THREE.

The Venerable Poet Enjoying Good Health for a Man of His Years.

BOSTON, Aug. 29.—The birthday anniversary of Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes is being celebrated today. He is eighty-three years of age. Congratulations are poured in upon the aged poet. The doctor was seen at his summer residence at Beverly Farms and asked regarding his health. "There is only one more mark to my life story, and my health is well enough for a man of my age. It is pretty well, but, as usual, I have a touch of asthma at this season of the year, and during the dog days I find myself poorly, for I am getting to be a pretty old man now, you know; a pretty old man.

"I have the honor of having been born the same year with the four most widely known men of the age," he said, "Gladstone, Darwin, Tennyson and Lincoln."

And Dr. Holmes does not look his years. Still less does he appear aged when in conversation. His eye is bright, his mind clear as in his youthful days evidently, and he stands as straight as a lad of twenty-one.

John G. Whittier, the poet, who is at Hampton Falls, N. Y., seeking absolute rest and quiet, needed for his recovery from last winter's illness, penned the following verse in honor of his friend:

Beloved physician of an age of ail,
When grave prescriptions fail:
Thy songs have cheer and healing for us all
As David's had for Saul.

FASHIONS

NEW STYLES IN SLEEVES.

Four Designs Which Will Be Seen in New Autumn Gowns.

The accompanying cuts show four sleeve patterns which will be very popular in fall gowns.

LATE STYLES IN SLEEVES.

The first sleeve shown is a leg-o'-mutton style in tweed, cheviot or serge, skilfully produced in waves and folds from shoulder to elbow. From the elbow it is plain, and finished at the wrist with cord and loops and gimp buttons.

No. 2 is a creamed-colored surah silk, spotted with coral pink, and trimmed with circular and straight frillings, together with treble folds of plain silk.

The "afternoon sleeve "shown in the fourth cut is made of Vicuna crepon cloth or bengaline, striped diagonally in the upper part with narrow, velvet ribbon, matching in color the bone buttons, secured with buttonholes.

The Grangers in Session.

CARLISLE, Pa., Aug. 29.—The nineteenth annual exhibition of the Grangers of the United States was formally opened today. The opening address was delivered by Hon. Leonard Rhone, who is at the head of the Grangers in this state. Letters from ex-President Cleveland and President Harrison were received saying they would be unable to attend. General James B. Weaver, candidate of the People's party, has written Manager Thomas that he will address the farmers on Friday. The other speakers will be Attorney General Hensel, Adjutant General Greenland, Lieutenant Governor Watres, General Gobin, Colonel Thomas Stewart, General Hastings and hosts of congressmen and members of the legislature. Over 200,000 people will be present during the week.

Bullets at Homestead.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 29.—A crowd of nonunion men employed in the Carnegie works at Homestead visited Pittsburg, and on returning got off at City Farm station, opposite Homestead. Just as they alighted from the train pulled out two shots were fired from the rear car of the train into the crowd on the platform. No one was injured. An investigation will be made.

A Fatal Blunder.

WASHINGTON, Mo., Aug. 29.—Two freight trains collided here this morning as a confounding of the orders by the train dispatcher. John Siebold, fireman, was instantly killed and Engineer Joe Condon, Brakeman William Roper and James W. Goodwin, of Atlanta, Ga., were seriously injured. Fifty-six cars were wrecked.

Captain Miller May Die.

MIDDLEFIELD, Conn., Aug. 29.—Captain Harvey Miller, the eccentric hermit, who disappeared a few weeks ago and had the whole town looking for him for three days, is in a very critical condition as a result of his exposure. Softening of the brain has set in and it is feared that he will die.

Chinamen Will Not Register.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 29.—The indications are that the local Chinese residents will refuse to register under the new law, at least until the Detroit test case is settled. Some will return to China before they will register.

Cattle and Crops Burned.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 29.—The large barn owned by James Boyd, situated at Boyd's Station, was burned. Three mules, one horse, one steer, one cow and all the crops were burned.

LIZZIE BORDEN'S FATE.

It May Depend on the Testimony of Bridget Sullivan.

SIX IMPORTANT QUERIES UNASKED.

One of Them Might Connect the Accused with a Hatchet on the Day When the Crime Was Committed—The Servant Thought to Know More Than She Told.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 29.—Bridget Sullivan did not tell all she knew about the actions of Lizzie Borden on the day of the murder when she was on the witness stand. In her cross examination by Lawyer Adams Bridget said that District Attorney Knowlton had read her in Marshal Hilliard's room and read over some of the testimony she had given at the inquest. This testimony, Bridget said, was in printing on a sheet of paper.

"Do you remember what that was?" asked Mr. Adams.

"I can only remember that it was part of my evidence given at the inquest," said the witness.

"Did District Attorney Knowlton say anything after he had read the words to you?"

"He did not," said Bridget.

"How many words did he read?" asked Mr. Adams.

"Six," said Bridget.

The true answer is six questions and answers, and not six words. The portion of her evidence that the district attorney read to Bridget Sullivan is sufficient, says the prosecution, to throw on Lizzie Borden the murder of her father. Lawyer Adams knew that the servant girl knew more than she told and he struggled to find out what it was. The same questions he questioned her about Lizzie's actions and conversation. Again and again he fired questions at Bridget that seemed about to bring out the desired information. But he worked without result. Bridget Sullivan left the stand without making known the most important evidence against Lizzie Borden.

Those Six Questions.

At the inquest Bridget Sullivan broke down. This occurred when she was forced to answer the six questions which District Attorney Knowlton did not ask her yesterday and which Mr. Adams strove in vain to have her tell.

"Where was Lizzie Borden standing when you came down stairs after hearing her scream?" asked Mr. Adams.

"In the doorway of the dining room," said Bridget.

Lawyer Adams might have followed that question by another asking whether or not at any time, and especially at that time, Bridget Sullivan was provided with an instrument capable of inflicting the wounds on Mr. and Mrs. Borden in her hand. And he might have asked her if she saw Lizzie try to conceal such an instrument in the folds of her dress or under a sofa or any other piece of furniture in either the dining room or sitting room or any place.

He might have asked also if she saw any blood on the hands of Lizzie Borden when she called to Mrs. Further, he might have asked Bridget Sullivan whether Lizzie Borden brought any instrument down stairs with her when she came down the back stairs after laughing to be servant when she tried to unlock the front door and let Mr. Borden in at 10:35 o'clock.

It is also noticeable that District Attorney Knowlton did not question Bridget Sullivan in regard to the family relations of the Bordens or in regard to any conversation alleged to have taken place between Bridget Sullivan and Lizzie Borden in reference to the reported difference between herself, her father and stepmother.

A Lawyer's Theory.

It might be argued that Lawyer Adams could not ask, under the laws of evidence, any of these questions. But the laws of evidence in this hearing are lax, and a reporter was told by a lawyer that even under a rigid observance of the laws of evidence Mr. Adams could have asked these questions. The lawyer whom the reporter questioned said in part:

"Of course it is alleged that the cross examination should not bring out any new facts save in greater detail of those brought out in the direct examination. Granted that to be true. District Attorney Knowlton asked Bridget where Lizzie Borden was standing when the witness got down stairs, after the murder of Mr. Borden, in response to the prisoner's call. Bridget answered that she was standing in the doorway of the dining room. 'Was she crying?' asked District Attorney Knowlton. 'She was not,' answered Bridget.

"That question opened up the way for Lawyer Adams. With one glance at the appearance, manner and position of the prisoner after the murder brought out by direct examination Lawyer Adams was entitled to ask and be told all about the appearance of the accused at the time referred to. 'Had she anything in her hand?' would have been a question admissible under the laws of evidence.

"The defense was entitled to ask it and had a right to know all the facts that the questions would have brought out. It may not have occurred to Mr. Adams to ask these questions, but I doubt it. Mr. Adams is a shrewd lawyer, and there was a purpose in his seeming oversight."

Lizzie Borden Interested.

It was remarked by many that Lizzie Borden listened to no other witness with the attention she gave to Bridget Sullivan. When it was over she sank back as through relieved. With the commonwealth withholding many of the alleged valuable testimony and with the defense still unheard, both the prosecution and the defense profess to be satisfied with the progress of the examination and with the disclosures of the witnesses.

The state is confident that it is proceeding fairly. The defense is assured that it will prove the innocence of the accused. All of those connected with the prosecution, whether in an official capacity or otherwise, say that the case is strong enough not only to hold, but to secure a conviction of the prisoner. They admit that it is largely circumstantial.

The hearing was resumed today. It is said that Professor Wood will go on the stand. If the web which the state says has been woven around Lizzie Borden is strengthened by evidence of poison, Professor Wood's story will be important. If the poison theory is worthless, the chemist can do nothing save testify in the line of the evidence given by Dr. Dolan.

THE TARIFF AND WAGES

Statistician Peck's Investigations Given to the Public.

NEW YORK'S WHOLESALE BUSINESS.

The Labor Commissioner Confines His Analysis of the Question to That Branch of Trade and Says The Earnings and Production Have Increased.

ALBANY, Aug. 29.—Charles F. Peck, commissioner of labor for New York state, has issued his annual report. A large part is devoted to figures of interest in relation to the tariff. In order to prove whether "protection," as advocated by one political party, or tariff for revenue only" would prove of advantage statistics have been gathered to show in every industry in the state the increase or decrease of production and consequently increase or decrease in wages. Mr. Peck says:

"The period covered by investigation includes the year immediately prior to the enactment of what is termed the 'McKinley bill' and the year immediately following its becoming law. That is, the data upon which the report has been made was for the year commencing Sept. 1, 1889, up to and including Aug. 31, 1890, and the year commencing Sept. 1, 1890, up to and including Aug. 31, 1891.

"The methods employed to secure the necessary data were almost entirely those of the blank system. It was not the original purpose nor is it now pretended that the data and statistics presented present any but purely wholesale manufacturing establishments. To have undertaken to cover the retail and custom manufacturing establishments of the state would have been a physical and financial impossibility. Some 8,000 blanks were addressed and mailed to as many separate establishments throughout the state, and of this number 6,000, or 75 per cent., were returned—fully and correctly answered.

The Increase in Wages.

"From the tables it appears that there was a net increase in wages of $6,377,925.09 in the year 1891, as compared with the amount paid in 1890, and a net increase of the sum of $31,315,130.68 in the year 1891 over that of 1890.

"A simple analysis of this table further demonstrates the interesting fact that of the sixty-seven industries covered 77 per cent. of them show an increase either of the wages or product, or both, and that there were no less than 89,717 instances of individual increases of wages during the same year.

"While the 'industries' are but sixty-seven in number the total 'trades' represented amount to 1,121, and give employment to 285,000 workingmen and women. Of the sixty-seven industries 76 per cent. of them show an increased average yearly earning in the year 1891, while the total average increase of yearly earnings of the 285,000 employes was $111.71. The average increase of yearly earnings of the employees in the fifty-one trades showing an increase was $43.96 in 1891 as compared with 1890.

"In addition to the investigation of this special subject the bureau has continued its annual investigation of all labor disturbances occurring in the state during the past year. The total number of strikes reported for the year 1891 was 4,519 as against 6,258 occurring in the year 1890, a decrease of 1,739. Of the total number 4,319, 3,375, or 80 per cent. of them, were in the building trades, a fact that seems to follow in natural sequence the results obtained in the special investigation of the 'effect of the tariff act laws of Congress.'"

A Statistician's Ambition.

The report closed as follows: "It has been my experience, as I doubt not it has been that of every statistician more or less, that one often finds himself tempted, unconsciously perhaps, to pursue an investigation with a view to establish a preconceived theory.

"How often failure and positive discomfiture follow I can safely leave to those who are engaged in the fascinating study of statistics.

"To the true statistician, however, uninfluenced by social or political considerations, the work is ever an inviting one, and carries with it duties and responsibilities of the highest order. To him theories are as nothing; without facts to support them they become misleading and therefore worthless. Facts and truth are what he seeks, and having possessed himself of them he places them, hard and cold as they often appear, before the public, satisfied that he has done but his duty, and thereby attained his highest ambition."

Can't Drink Behind an Umbrella.

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 29.—Judge Williamson has charged the grand jury in Leflore county that it is an indictable offense for a man to screen himself by holding an open umbrella across his shoulder while taking a drink in a saloon. The annotated code abolished bar screens since which time the umbrella has been used as a substitute.

Hiram Sibley and Party Safe.

MONTREAL, Aug. 29.—The report that Hiram W. Sibley and a party of friends had been lost with his yacht on Georgian bay is false. The cook, Sherman, who had been discharged, telegraphed the report out of sheer malice.

A Boiler Valve Exploded.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 29.—The steamboat Messenger exploded a boiler valve just after landing a crowd of passengers at Morris Cove, and the engineer was badly scalded.

TO REORGANIZE IRON HALL.

A Convention Called for Sept. 13 to Straighten Matters Out.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 29.—The determination of the visiting members of the Iron Hall to call a meeting of representatives of all the branches throughout the country for Sept. 13 and endeavor to resurrect the order is causing great activity among the local members, and they generally agree that something in the way of order may be brought out of the chaos of affairs. There are 1,300 local branches of the order, and these have reserve funds aggregating SUPREME CASHIER DAVIS. $1,200,000. If this sum can be utilized by the new order it is believed that it will be maintained.

C. B. Feibelman, who is at the head of the movement in this city, said that he expected all the branches to be represented either by credited delegates or by proxy in the meeting, and the first steps will be in the direction of making radical reforms in the constitution.

If the meeting agrees to continue the order the supreme officers will be formally deposed and new officers elected. The meeting will then ask the court to rescind the several orders recently made and restore the property to the new order.

It is the purpose of local members to present all the facts relating to Somerby's methods to the grand jury, which meets one week from today, and ask that he be indicted. One thousand two hundred circular letters going to the secretaries of the local branches were sent out last night and today, and the projectors of the meeting believe that nearly all will be represented. There is a bitter feeling against Supreme Cashier Davis, who, it is said, swore he would wreck the order.

THE POLITICAL STRUGGLE.

Seth Milliken Discusses Blaine and the Pending Campaign.

BELFAST, Me., Aug. 29.—Congressman Seth L. Milliken, of Maine, who is a very close and warm friend of ex-Secretary Blaine, is positive that the secretary will give Harrison his hearty and loyal support at the coming election. In speaking of the situation he said:

"Maine will be safe for Harrison in November by a large majority. Mr. Blaine will give President Harrison his hearty and efficient support. I am sure of this. I know that he earnestly desires the success of the Republican national ticket in the present campaign. I cannot positively state whether or not Mr. Blaine will make any speeches in the campaign, but I think he will be heard from, and I know if he shall he that his voice will be for the Republican party in no uncertain tones. Mr. Blaine's followers are loyal Republicans from conviction. They never sulk in their tents, and they will loyally support Mr. Harrison both because they are true Republicans and because they know that Mr. Harrison is giving the country a clean, patriotic and remarkably able administration."

Another Presidential Ticket.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—At the national convention of the Socialist-Labor party representatives were present from New Jersey, New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Connecticut. Simon Wing, of Boston, a tailor, was unanimously nominated for president of the United States and Charles H. Matchett, a carpenter, of Brooklyn, for vice president. The Socialist-Labor party will make a big effort to elect its nominees. Leaders say they expect to poll 100,000 votes this year and elect their own president fifty years hence.

The Second Failure.

WATERTOWN, Mass., Aug. 29.—A second unsuccessful attempt was made at the arsenal here to cast the big 16-ton gun carriage for the government, and a dozen men narrowly escaped death or serious injury. When the furnace was tapped the big mass of molten iron shot in a stream twenty feet into the air. The men ran for their lives and luckily escaped. The failure of this attempt is attributed to the dampness of the sand which lined the reservoir.

Nancy Hanks Will Try Again.

INDEPENDENCE, Ia., Aug. 29.—Among the many good things billed for Rush park this week will be the effort of Nancy Hanks to lower her record of 2:07¾ on Wednesday. The next day Martha Wilkes (2:09½) will start to lower the world's trotting record. An effort is being made to arrange a match race between Nancy Hanks and Martha Wilkes for one day later. Dobie will pilot Nancy and Starr will drive Martha Wilkes in case the race is arranged.

The Boiler Exploded.

BRANDON, Vt., Aug. 29.—The boiler in the electric light station exploded, and Adolphus Germond, fifty years old, was instantly killed and his son Joseph, the engineer, and Charles Hoyles, the assistant engineer, were badly injured.

Caught in a Whirlpool.

JENNINGS, Fla., Aug. 29.—A. F. Fields, a local railroad agent, was caught in a whirlpool in the Alapaha river and drowned. He was in bathing with a party of friends at the time.

A Noted Scotch-American Dead.

JEFFERSON, Wis., Aug. 29.—Alexander Kirkland, a prominent resident of Chicago and well known throughout the country as a leader among Scotch-Americans, died here.

General Busted Better.

ST PETERSBURG, N. Y., Aug. 29.—A change for the better is noticed in General Rurkell's condition.

Captured by the Cruopists.

PARAMA, Aug. 29.—Pravia Cabello has been captured by the Cruopists.

Following Their Advice.

There was not long since a venerable and benevolent judge in Paris who, at the moment of passing sentence on a prisoner, consulted his associates on each side of him as to the proper penalty to be inflicted.

"What ought we to give this rascal, brother?" he said, bending over to the one upon his right.

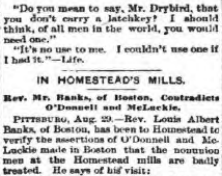
"I should say three years."

"What is your opinion, brother?"

"I should give him about four years."

The judge, with benevolence: "Prisoner, not desiring to give you a long and severe term of imprisonment, as I should have done if left to myself, I have consulted my learned brothers, and I shall take their advice. Seven years!"—Tit-Bits.

Beyond It.



"Do you mean to say, Mr. Drybird, that you don't carry a latchkey? I should think, of all men in the world, you would need one."

IN HOMESTEAD'S MILLS.

Rev. Mr. Banks, of Boston, Contradicts O'Donnell and McLuckie.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 29.—Rev. Louis Albert Banks, of Boston, has been to Homestead to verify the assertions of O'Donnell and McLuckie made in Boston that the nonunion men at the Homestead mills are badly treated. He says of his visit:

"It was just noon when I got there, and at my own request I was shown through the dining rooms, and I examined the food as it was being placed upon the tables. The food would have been good enough for me. It was substantial enough for the workmen and it appeared to me to be tasty. I examined the kitchens and they appeared to me like the kitchens of a first class hotel. I made a careful examination of the sleeping apartments. I had the bunks opened for my inspection, and I can say cheerfully that the bunks were clean and comfortable.

"Another matter, and one in which I was thoroughly interested, was investigated by me," said Mr. Banks. "We were told in the east that the company was running a 'speak easy' in the mill for the benefit of the workingmen. We know but little of 'speak easies' in the east and I was anxious to see one. I asked to be shown to the place, but was told by authorities that they did not have a 'speak easy' on the premises. I was slow to believe what they told me, in the face of the other stories told us in the east, and I decided to investigate the matter on my own account.

"I took Mr. Catel into my confidence, and I had him go to Mr. Potter and if possible secure for me a small drink of liquor. Mr. Potter was anxious to send up town and get the liquor for me, but he assured my manager that there was none in the works. That convinced me that the 'speak easy' story was not well founded. However," Mr. Banks concluded, "the mills at Homestead are working, and I am glad I went there and saw the conditions for myself."

Killed His Brother-in-Law.

VANDALIA, Mo., Aug. 29.—John D. Frailey was stabbed to death by Charles Chandler, his brother-in-law; both are well to do farmers. Frailey was a Republican and Chandler a Democrat. Both men had been drinking and they quarreled along the road over politics.

DO WOMEN OF THE CITIES LACK IMPORTANT ESSENTIALS!

One Thing Is Granted, Namely, That Young Women of the Metropolis Do Not Entertain Their Friends with Music of Their Own—An Experiment.

Some time ago a western man made the popular remark to a New York acquaintance that the women of Gotham, though they were very charming, had no accomplishments. He complained that they had neglected some of those attractive branches of decorative education, such as music, painting or ornamental needlework. They could talk more wittily than any other women in the country, dressed better, were more accomplished hostesses, seemed to have read an enormous amount, but there were not one of them who could sit down and play a sonata on the piano or sing a ballad sweetly or paint a bunch of roses on a fringed napkin to please. They possessed none of the "accomplishments" which were thought of such high value in our mothers' and grandmothers' day.

Putting painting out of the way—for it did tell charmingly as an art, it is of no moment—the westerner's criticism on music is unfortunately true. There is no music in the drawing rooms of rich or poor in New York, unless the whole of the greatest professionals that is paid for at $500 the song. A piano might as well be left out in the furnishings of the parlor of today for no one touches it. The pianos of Fifth avenue are mute, unless charmed into melody by Paderewski or De Pachmann, whom a well bred audience forcibly holds silence, and girls at being so requested.

But the more graceful and charming art of singing—an art so peculiarly a woman's—also fallen into desuetude. The fogs and the frosts of a New York winter may have ruined the voices of the New Yorkers, but whatever is the cause, voices they have none. Nobody sings here except a few obliging young Englishmen and Irish and there a girl who is looked upon as a cross between a wonder and a bore. Their talents all run in other directions. They can talk on all subjects as well as college professors; they can read in several languages; they can ride like their brothers and discuss religion like Mrs. Humphry Ward. But to sit down at the piano and sing "Jock o' Hazeldean" is as far beyond them as it would be to square a circle.

The western man said this was not the case with the charmers in his section of the country, and to prove the truth of his assertion took two New York friends to call on a girl from the far west and a ruffle who, with her mother and sister, was spending the winter in one of the fashionable up town hotels. The young lady was found to be an agreeable if somewhat indigenous person, very generously dressed, quite pretty, not bright, but fairly talkative and leaving upon the mind of the outsider the impression that she was a female of the most undoubted respectability and corresponding dullness. There was nothing about her which suggested that she possessed the musical temperament—the most inspirational, romantic, dreamy and exalted of all forms of the artistic temperament.

When she produced a guitar and proceeded to touch its strings in the first preliminary warning tones, the effect on most foreigners is that she looked as unlike the sort of girl whom one would expect to charm harmonies from that most picturesque instrument. A second look at her, however, revealed the fact that her hand, picking at the strings, was the artistic hand, with long, supple fingers, inclined to taper, and round, flexible wrist—the only hand which combines an appearance of refinement with a look of strength.

Then came the triumph of the westerner. She not only played well, but she played with the skill and the feeling of a successful professional. Then she sang. Her voice was not particularly good, but she knew how to make the most of it, and she had had good musical training and better musical insight. Then she played on the piano—finely this time, and never like an amateur showing off. When she finished with this she realized that her talents were being exhibited for some purpose—the New Yorkers had always suspected that the westerner had told her beforehand—and after a few moments' talk and laughter produced a mandolin from an embroidered silk case and snapped away at that with a little shell instrument, warbling plaintive Spanish ditties of the sweetest and most tender kind.

By this time the guests would not have been surprised to see her draw back a curtain and reveal a pipe organ upon which she would dash off a Bach fugue. She did tell them that she had tried the mandolin and found it inferior to the mandolin, and so had given it up. An Italian friend of hers had given her a few lessons on the harp, but the instrument was too cumbersome to be convenient, and, besides, it spoiled the ends of her fingers. Since she has been in New York a German teacher, with whom she had been making a study of Wagner, had wanted her to take lessons on the zither, but she had thought it a mistake to study too many instruments, it would only result in not reaching proficiency in any. She intended to devote herself seriously to the piano, the guitar and mandolin were merely pastimes that she took up as a momentary fancy.

The New Yorkers went away greatly awed. They did not think they had ever before met a girl like that, unless she was one of those women who were going to support themselves by singing or playing. Still, with the peculiarity of the Gothamite, they would not admit the charm of anything outside the four walls of their dear city. They confessed that it was very agreeable to listen to the music, but after all "a woman like that was just like a professional musician. You might just as well marry the girl who comes every Monday and Friday to teach Barney O'Flynn's daughter's to play the scales."—New York Cor. San Francisco Argonaut

Lace Cloaks for Summer.

A lovely summer cloak to wear over a silk dress is made entirely of black lace with edge left on the sides and a ruffle of lace at the neck. It falls in loose and graceful folds back and front, and having no lining, shows the shade of the dress beneath. You can imagine how a pink beauty would look in such a garment. Another lovely lace cloak has a jet zouave and trailing ends of jet ornaments are arranged at the back in the same way as the ribbons that are now so fashionable. The sleeves are enormous and made of black brocade. Both cloaks reach to the feet.

New Orleans has two woman photographers making a handsome living as proprietors. Many girls are comfortable salaries retouching and coloring photocrayons.

Rapid Mending.

I wonder how many women know of the value of rubber tissue for mending. To a busy housewife whose time seems more than full it is invaluable. It is to be had at the rubber stores, and is usually sold by the ounce. It is just what its name would indicate, a very thin piece of transparent rubber. It is sold at fifteen cents an ounce, which amounts to a piece perhaps six or eight inches wide and twenty inches long. That, I think, is a small estimate for an ounce. The tissue will not cover a large object—that is, not satisfactorily—but it will strengthen thin or weak places, mend tears or cuts, in fact, repair any goods that has not actually lost a piece of itself, and it is very nice for darning.

We will suppose there is a three-cornered tear in a garment: First, cut away the frayed threads, draw the edges together with invisible stitches on the wrong side, for threads put in cannot be pulled out afterward, or by holding it with the fingers. Place a piece of the tissue, the right size, over the tear and a piece of cambric or any other fabric desired over that, and press with a warm iron—quite warm, but not hot. Press firmly and then remove the iron and the mending is done. There must always be a surface between the rubber and the iron or the former will melt and stick to the iron.

For hemming, if the material is a goods that will not ravel, turn it up once, slip a strip of the tissue right under the edge and press. If the goods must be turned twice, baste the narrow turn with long stitches on what will be the inner side, then turn again, slip in the tissue as before and press it. This of course does not apply to wash goods, unless you wish to renew the patch. It is very useful in mending umbrellas; in repairing sleeves that are almost worn through; in strengthening broken places in made over goods, and in applying patches to the seat of the small boy's pants.—J. D. Cowles in Springfield Homestead.

Britain's Female Doctor of Music.

Dr. Annie Wilson Patterson, who has come rather prominently before the Dublin public lately as a musical composer and conductor, is the only female doctor of music in the kingdom, with the exception of her royal highness the Princess of Wales. The Patterson family hails from Largan, county Armagh, of Huguenot ancestry, and, having at an early age shown exceptional talent, was educated for an artistic career, first at the Alexandra school and second at the Alexandra college, Dublin. She studied Greek, Latin, French, Italian and Celtic before the age of fifteen, and, having decided upon music as her profession, entered the Royal Irish Academy of Music, where she was taught by Sir Robert Stewart and Dr. Jones, and subsequently became conductor and musical director of the Dublin Choral union, with which an orchestra is now associated.

Dr. Patterson's list of successes is a brilliant one, and includes a full certificate from South Kensington for freehand and model drawing; three exhibitions of twenty pounds, thirty pounds and fifty pounds respectively, and silver medal for natural science, gained at the Irish intermediate examinations in 1891; the Ledwell, Dr. Patterson was graduated as Mus. Bac. and B. A. (modern literature) at the Royal Irish university in 1887, and obtained a scholarship and gold medal for organ playing at the Royal Irish Academy of Music in 1888, and was graduated as Mus. Doc. in 1889. Dr. Patterson has written poems, essays and a cantata dedicated by special permission to the Princess of Wales.—London Letter.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

UPSIDE DOWN.

A State of Affairs Very Upsetting and Not to Be Desired.

If the whole of the town were upside down
And you, dear, were outside in;
If you dined with a cork instead of a fork,
And breakfasted with a pin;

If the meadows were blue, the truth not true,
And the blackbirds all were white;
If you learned to say at the whole summer day,
And lay awake all the night;

If the works of a watch were outside out,
And the face were inside in;
If you came of a race who possessed a face
With a nose below the chin;

IF THE DUCKS AND GEESE BECAME POLICE.

If the ducks and geese became policies,
And boys were as good as gold;
If they grew penny rolls on telegraph poles,
And shoes in the shops were to be soled;

If your brother were you and you were he,
And somebody else were we;
If you put down a "one," and carrying "none,"

The answer was twenty-three;

If the dolls came out, and played about,
When you were gone to bed;
If nurse in mittens were minding the kittens,
And puss was nurse instead—

If I think we must say that such a new way
For you, dear, is never would do,
For if all the town were upside down,
'Twould very much upset you.

Vegetable Flytraps.

It is a well known fact that several plants keep themselves free from insects by catching them. Darwin tells us that it is through their roots that the bulk of plants derive a large portion of their food. Therefore those plants that have few roots, and cannot get much of one kind of diet (nitrogenous) from the soil, must obtain it in some other way. Consequently the leaves must assist them by forming themselves into cunningly contrived traps, and by giving off in some cases a sticky fluid that acts partly as a flycatcher. Bees, wasps, moths, beetles, midges, flies, daddy long legs, gnats and other insects all form the food of such plants as the Drobera or sundew, the Nepenthes or pitcher plant, the Darlingtonia or cobra plant.

The Hippopotamus.

The hippopotamus takes its name from two Greek words that mean river horse, though it is not at all like a horse, but a great deal more like a strange cow. It lives in the streams of Africa, where it feeds on grass, leaves, grain, shrubs, weeds and all kinds of green meat. It can stay in the bed of the stream and walk there to seek its food and not come up to breathe more than five or six times in an hour. It can swim and dive and float, though it is of such great size and has a huge head and short legs. It delights to live on the banks of wide lakes, where it can lie in the mud and sleep or wade in the stream and puff and grunt and spirt water from its great mouth and take its ease all day long.

A HIPPOPOTAMUS.

It is not a fierce beast to look at, but he is a foe to be feared, for his great teeth can crunch and tear a man in half or split the side of a boat, and he will turn on those who hurt and wound him. When full grown she male beast is twelve feet long and as much around the trunk. His legs are so short that they scarce keep him off the ground, and when he stands up he looks like a great butt stuck on four short stumps. The mouth is enormous and its capacity increased by the odd manner in which the jaw is set in the head. He can close up the slits in his nose so that he can dive down in the streams, and his eyes are so formed that he can stick them out or draw them in, that he may see where he goes on land or when he is down on the bed of a lake can look for grass and weeds.

The Chipmunk and the Hornet.

This entertaining story in rhyme is from Gleanings in Bee Culture:

Two boys, young and gay, left school one day
To rove in the woods for awhile;
And they jumped with delight, for the very first sight
Was a munk on the old wood pile.

They thought not of books, nor of still running brooks,
As the sport of the day had begun:
For all of you know, who were boys long ago,
That, in puggling munks, there is fun.

But the chipmunk so bright soon skipped out of sight,
In the end of an old hollow rail;
And the boys, full of tricks, tried with split sticks
To pull the munk out by the tail.

So they puggled and twisted, and long they persisted,
And rubbed up the ears of their dog;
But the chipmunk so red had a scheme in his head,
So he out and ran under a log.

Now an old hornet she, of her young in the tree
Had sought to raise up a good bath:
And all of you know, that four years ago
Was a good one for hornets to hatch.

But the boys' eyes were full of Australian wattle,
And they looked out for nothing but game;
So they puggled the log and sicked on their dog,
And this is just where they were lame:

For each hornet within, rushed out with a pin
To tickle the boys, young and bold;
While they jumped over hummocks, rolled heels over stomachs,
And the rest of my story is told.

The Beauties of a Good Memory.

A woman to be clever at conversation must have a good memory. She must keep in mind so much as she knows of the tastes and prejudices of those present. If Sir Reginald's brother fought on the Confederate side, if such a one has Scotch ancestry, if such another had a dear friend or an aunt or something who went on the stage, if such speaker has written a poem on "Morality," and has opinions about immortality, and so on of each and all she must remember. And "as you said the other day," is a good way to introduce a pungent remark; or, "as your favorite author hasit," which shows a flattering regard for one's preferences. All these tricks, if you will pardon me, must be studied.

Don't try to make a man think how clever you are. Make him think how clever he is. Brighten him up. Lead him on to say witty things. You may even coax him up to a joke, be he as gluma as Pharaoh's ghost. Remind him of clever things he said "the other day." Never mind if they are inventions of your own. Never mind if he knows they are; so long as he does not imagine that you know they are you are all right. The bright things about him. You won't take long to make him feel, especially if he is really a dull fellow, that he is a lot smarter than even he thought himself, and he will correspondingly adore you. A man is apt to frizzle under the fire of your own humor and wit and brightness, and of course a man is ever comfortable when he frizzles.—Exchange.

The Begum of Bhopal.

Her highness Shah Jehan Begum is the daughter of the late Sikandar Begum, the last ruler of Bhopal, a remarkable woman in every sense of the word. She reigned during the mutiny, and gave valuable help to the British government, especially in assisting Sir Henry Durand and his party of fugitives in escaping from the Indore residency. She was also a fierce, strong and relentless woman, and kept her daughter, the present begum, in a state of abject submission. Once, when her daughter met at the house of, a relative a young man of the royal house of Delhi, who was a suitor for her hand, she imprisoned her for months in her own room and beat her with her own hand, while the unfortunate lover was confined in an iron cage hung at the gate of the fort, and was only released after several months on the persistent remonstrances of the British political officials.

The present begum is now over fifty years of age, very small in person, but rather than ordinarily dark ten years of age; but she has inherited many of the qualities and much of the ability, as well as the strong will, of her mother, and her attempts at ruling her daughter with the severity with which she was ruled has created a breach between them, which has been widened by interested mischief makers. Her subjects are Hindoo, but her highness is a Mohammedan, as are also most of the officials.—J. J. Pool.

Bargain Counters in Paris.

The bargain counter flourishes in Paris as in the retail stores of New York. "Occasion" is the sign by which it is known, and the Parisian housewife is not a whit behind the housewife of Gotham in knowing how to take advantage of it.—New York Sun.

Professor Huxley's daughter, who is now the wife of a civil engineer, is among the many interesting people who form the English colony in the City of Mexico.

BREVITIES.

—The tower of the M. E. church is being treated to a coat of paint.

—Three persons professed convertion at last Sunday evening's services at the Third street mission.

—The Fourth District Democratic Congressional Convention will be held at Masterstown, on Friday, September 6.

—All bills against the city must be in the hands of the clerk by Thursday, to be acted upon at the September meeting.

—The Prohibitionists of Cranford will raise a banner on Thursday. Among the speakers will be W. W. Winans of this city.

—The trial of Sigmund Pruchs was held in city court this morning. Judge Cochnower reserved his decision for one week.

—There are now three bowling alleys in the home of the Park Club, in North Plainfield, a new one having just been built.

—There will be a meeting of the Wheelmen's Division of the Republican Association at their rooms on East Front street this evening.

—Work was commenced yesterday macadamizing Farragut avenue from Front street to the brook, the property owners paying half the cost.

—Charles Matthews was arrested in the borough, last evening, by Marshal Pangborn, for boxing cards. Justice Crossley the morning fined the man $3.

—The New Jersey State Medical Society will hold its annual State Convention at the Breslin, Lake Hopatcong, on September 20. The session will last about one week.

—The Convention of State Democratic Clubs will be held at Camden on September 27. It will be preceded by a parade of Democratic clubs on the evening of the 26th.

—In passing the store of Dickinson, the jeweler, just take a good look at the Eclipse high grade pneumatic bicycle, elsewhere advertised, and also note the price of the same.

—The body of the late John Riley, of Elizabeth, who died recently in England, arrived in New York Sunday night on the steamer Servia. He was a man of prominence in this country.

—There is again grumbling at the condition of the Plainfield portion of Westerveilt avenue by residents of the neighborhood. The reason is that the street has only one sidewalk and is not properly laid out.

—The Grocers' Excursion promises to be the biggest affair of the kind they have ever given. The train is to start at Dunellen and stop at Grant avenue on the way. 5,000 clams have been ordered for the clam bake.

—George Brown of Cranford refused to fulfill his contract to furnish sand for building purposes, to Charles Burnett of this city, because it was to be used in building a hotel at Cranford. Such a prohibitionist is Mr. Brown.

—A cigarette stump carelessly thrown into a waste basket of paper started a fire that wiped out the town of Delmore, Del., recently. One fireman lost his life, and several persons were injured. Three hundred people are homeless and destitute.

—John A. Briant of West Fifth street, while picking crab apples from a tree on his premises yesterday morning, fell from the ladder on which he was standing to the ground, a distance of about twelve feet. The shock rendered him unconscious, but though considerably bruised, no bones were broken. Mr. Briant is eighty years of age.

—Mr. John Voorhees of Elizabeth, and members of his family, had a very narrow escape from injury at the North Broad street crossing of the Central railroad Sunday afternoon. They were in the family carriage and the vehicle was struck by an incoming passenger train, but they were saved by the presence of mind of Mr. Voorhees, who finding the great peril they were in, by an immense superhuman effort, turned his horses about preventing a direct collision.

—Much interest is being shown by patriotic people in the reunion of the 30th N. J. Vols., to be held at Reform Hall on Thursday, and a good attendance is expected at the morning services, as many of the veterans live in this city and suburbs. When the war broke out, Capt. Frank Hubbard of West Seventh street, mustered in a company of one hundred men and joined the 30th Reg't., N. J. Vols. as Co. H. Besides Capt. Hubbard the following nineteen men from this city were members of that company and elected officers of the regiment: Lieut. Frank Hubbard, ex-Chief T. J. Carey, C. H. Randolph, Charles Rittenhouse, R. C. Maddock, F. Van Emburgh, C. L. Weaver, Thomas A. Todd, Nelson Runyon, James Lloyd, C. L. Weaver, George Eick, Theodore J. Runyon, C. H. Stiles, Milton Fraser, Benjamin Wright, R. Thorne, James Maudsley, J. L. Bilyeu and Jacob Jennings.

—As Stillman Music Hall, next Friday evening, a new comedy written by Charles T. Vincent and John T. Kelly entitled "McFee of Dublin," will be given its first production, with Mr. John T. Kelly, the popular Irish comedian, in the title role. It is said he will be supported by one of the strongest comedy companies ever organized. Mr. Kelly is known to Plainfield theatre-goers. He played in "Si K." on his last visit here. The cast of characters are: Florrie Wood and Mattie Vickers, who have been here before; Mr. West will take the part of a lady's maid and will introduce several of the latest London songs secured by her during her recent engagement at the Alhambra Theatre in Hull city. Miss Vickers will have a part written to suit her peculiar style of acting and to allow her to introduce her German specialties. The management says that the piece will be magnificently staged and costumed and the production the best that money can procure.

PERSONAL.

Runaway this Morning.

A gray horse attached to a light colored dog cart, belonging to Mr. John V. Beekman of La Grande avenue, while being driven under the railroad bridge on Washington street about eight o'clock this morning, was frightened by a passing train and ran away. A colored driver and a little boy were in the carriage until it reached Second street. There an obstacle was struck and the carrage and occupants left behind. The horse was stopped on East Front street near Pease street by Israel Compton. The vehicle was badly wrecked.

—Chief of Police Grant went to Rahway and arrested Thomas Garrity, on complaint of his wife for non-support. Garrity is a plumber and lives on Arlington avenue. Upon his promise to do right hereafter he was let go on his own recognizance.

—A driver of a Newark tea wagon was arrested in the borough this morning for peddling without a license. He gave $50 bonds to Justice Crossley to-day at noon for his appearance and intends to make a test case of the matter. The case will come up for hearing on Sept. 29. The man's name is John I. Meeker.

—Messrs. Nief, Agar and Charles Smith of this city will compete with New Jersey's team of ten men in the Interstate trap shooting contest at the four days' tournament of the New London, (Conn.) Gun Club. Their opponents will be ten picked representatives of Connecticut. The match comes off on Friday.

TROLLEY MATTERS.

ANOTHER FRANCHISE TO BE GRANTED.

Two Applicants—Each Confident—A Good Thue to See that the City and Borough are Properly Protected.—A Petition Objecting to a Double Track.

The street railway matter for North Plainfield will probably be decided at the meeting of the Borough Council Friday evening.

There are two applicants for the franchise. One is composed of borough citizens, including ex-Mayor Cooley, who own the North Plainfield Electric Light plant, and the other is the Plainfield Railway Company, of which Mr. Thomas Nevins of Orange is the president.

The borough party feel that they ought to be favored because with them the railroad would be a home enterprise and they claim large prospective returns to the borough, would be unlikely to run the railway so as to give offense, or to show the indifference that is observable in a foreign company.

The Plainfield Railway Company, however, claims to have three Democratic members, and one Republican member secured for them, and, if so, will have a majority.

The North Plainfielders, after getting a franchise in North Plainfield would ask one of the Plainfield Council to run to the depot, and have no doubt that they would get it, as it is understood that the Plainfield Council does not favor allowing a monopoly, believing the other policy to be for the best interests of the city.

It is hoped, however, that in no case will privileges be granted in either city or borough without adequate compensation—that is, five per cent. of the gross receipts, which seems in other cities to be considered a fair return for the use of the streets.

In view of the great success of the Plainfield Railway, of course the Plainfield Common Council will not, in the interest of the taxpayers, allow any further extension until as one of the conditions, the company consents to pay five per cent. as it can well afford to do, assuming to be true the stories in the newspaper which acts as its mouthpiece.

The borough could better demand five per cent. from the borough company, as it would be difficult for the Plainfield company to tell what its gross receipts in North Plainfield would be.

OBJECTIONS TO DOUBLE TRACES.

The following petition to the Plainfield Common Council is being circulated among and signed by the local merchants:

To the honorable the Common Council of the city of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN—The four petitioners, citizens and tax payers of the city of Plainfield, respectfully represent that the location of two tracks of the new line of street railway upon West Front street, from Somerset to Grant avenue, while the single track is located on East Front from Somerset to Pease, is unsatisfactory and unfair.

Unsatisfactory, because a single track track from Somerset street to the station will be used by cars backed up from there thereon impeded, an east bound car being obliged to wait at Somerset street while a west bound car is coming from the station, and the patrons of the line using it to reach the station being liable thereby to be much inconvenienced and delayed.

Unfair, because many if not all of those persons who signed petitions for the laying of tracks on West Front street did so upon the distinct understanding that a single track was to be laid and used and operated from Pease street to Grant avenue, and to have that distinct understanding disregarded and the property burdened by a double track road while the property East of Somerset street is burdened with but a single track and no serious discrimination against the property West of Somerset street and is virtually a fraud upon them because they would not have given consent to any such proposition.

Why should the business portion of the street west of Somerset street be charged with the burden of a double track road, greatly inconveniencing the owners of such property in the use thereof, while the business portion of the street east of Somerset street is allowed to escape with but a single track.

What is the reason for a double track road from Somerset street to Grant avenue, if one track is to be used practically as a siding? Would not a short turn out answer every purpose of such use?

We do not wish to be understood as unreasonably opposing a double track road, provided it is located between such points as to best facilitate public travel, but we claim that it must be apparent to all that a double track from Grant avenue to Somerset street, and a single track from that point to Pease street, is of no more service to the public than would be a single track, with occasional turnouts, over that whole distance; and equally apparent that the injury to property from the laying of an unnecessary double track is great, and should not be sanctioned.

Believing that this matter has not been presented to your honorable body in its true light, and that we may confidently rely upon your honorable body to take such action as will be satisfactory, by causing the double track to be confined from Somerset street eastward, or the second track of Somerset street to be reduced to single tracks, as shall best serve our citizens at large and at the same time cause the least possible injury, consistent with the public benefits, to all property owners along the line of said road without discrimination or favor, we remain

Very respectfully,

Dated August 29th, 1892.

The petition but confirms what we have maintained all along that Plainfield's business streets are not wide enough for a double track street railway, and that a double track means surrender of the streets to the railway company and injury to the merchants.

—Martin Holmes was arrested last night by Policemen Cooney and Kiely for being drunk. This morning he was fined $5.

A CONTINUOUS TRACK OF STEEL TO BOSTON.

The Reading's Poughkeepsie Bridge Route.

No longer do travelers between this section of the country and New England have to undergo the discomforts of street transfer through the city of New York. This has all been obviated, and the Reading Railroad with its continuous line of steel rail now carries its passengers in trains, vestibuled from end to end, from Philadelphia to Boston without a single change of cars. This new route, which is via the great Poughkeepsie Bridge, has many attractions, and is rapidly becoming very popular. The accommodations are first-class in every respect; the trains are vestibuled from end to end and are scheduled on fast express time; the roadway is perfect, making the ride pleasant and comfortable; the country traversed abound in grand and picturesque scenery and the coaches are very models of the car builder's art. There are both day and night trains run in each direction, the day trains being vestibuled and having Pullman Buffet Parlor cars attached, and the night trains have Pullman Buffet Sleeping cars. The eastbound trains are the New England day express, which leaves Philadelphia Ninth and Green streets on weekdays only at 10 a. m., and the New England Night Express which leaves Ninth and Green streets at 6.45 p. m., and 24th and Chestnut streets at 6.30 p. m. daily, Sundays included. The west-bound trains are the Quaker City Day Express which leaves Boston, (N. Y. & N. E. R. R. Summer street depot), on weekdays only, at 9.30 a. m., and the Quacker City night express, which leaves Boston, (B. & M. R. R. Causeway street depot) at 5.45 p. m. daily, Sundays included.

HIGH PRICED STONES.

Disappointed Buyers at a Sale of Unclaimed Baggage.

An auction sale of the unclaimed goods which have in many years accumulated in the baggage room of the Central Railroad station, at Elizabeth, began yesterday, and will continue for three or four days, as there is a large quantity to be disposed of. A large and eager crowd of buyers gathered and the bidding was very spirited.

Some purchasers got badly sold on their investments. Joseph Cook bought a trunk filled with stones, for which he paid $4.65. When his wife saw how he had been duped he was about crying and soundly berated him for bidding on it.

Another man paid a high price for a case in which he supposed was a rifle, but it only contained two base ball bats. Dan Carroll, a coachman, did 75 cents for a package carefully wrapped up, containing a lower of rye bread about two years old. Another bidder offered $2 for a case, supposing it to contain a Remington typewriter. It wasempty. A satchel filled with old rags brought an exorbitant price. Umbrellas and canes brought good prices.

The speculative craze of the bidders, however, was for valises and trunks, which proved, in most cases, poor bargains.

THIS FISH STORY MAY BE TRUE.

At Any Rate, the Rain Has Removed Possibility of Proving It Untrue.

William Henry Thorne, the thirteen-year old son of G. Thorne, of East Second street, and a lad named Smith, who lives on Richmond street, started to go swimming Friday in Green Brook back of Scotch Plains. While the boys were walking along the road, which runs parallel with the brook, they heard a great splash in the brook a short distance off. Upon investigation they found a pool about 20 feet long by 10 feet wide, possibly two feet deep, full of black bass.

Young Thorne, who inherits a love of sport from his father, ran back for it and immediately a lively skirmish ensued. The bass, frantic to escape, leaped high in the air, and not a few were caught on the fly by the boy. Disdaining small fry they threw back all under large fish, and threw them to his companion on the bank. Then the boys traded home with their load. The largest fish they weighed less than a pound and a half. The Thorne and Smith families had bass for supper and bass for breakfast, and several neighbors were called upon to do justice to the boys' novel catch.

The boys say that to get off from the course on the brook near by. During the dry weather the brook had become lower and lower, and at last had ceased to flow through the pool, thus imprisoning the fish. They say the bass seemed to be running.

The rain last evening raised the brook and liberated the fish.—New York World.

Bicycle Thieves Around Again.

During the ball game in North Plainfield Saturday afternoon a man attempted to steal a safety bicycle, but was frightened off by some boys.

Mr. Alphonse Stein, of Grandview avenue, only a twelve nearly had his bicycle stolen. One evening last week upon his return from a ride he placed his wheel on the porch with the lantern lighted, while he went to the woodshed for some kindling wood. His going, hearing a noise on the outside, quietly called him. He says there were four young men carrying his wheel away. They heard him coming and ran away. Mr. Stein gave chase, but lost them in the darkness.

The last thief who stole a wheel in the borough got two years. That ought to be warning enough, but it seems not. In Plainfield several bicycles have been stolen and no arrests made.

—Mr. W. T. Woerner, of Plainfieldtown, while plowing on his farm, a few days ago, turned up an English two shilling silver piece bearing the date 1708, which was in the reign of Queen Anne. The coin is almost as distinct as the day it was minted, nearly 200 years ago.

The law prohibits net lines, nets, fikes, the hunting of game fish, or the use of any device whatever, except hook and line, or any device whatever that will interfere or deter said fish from ascending the streams, in any river or stream above tide-water, between the 1st day of May, for game fish, under a penalty of $25 or imprisonment.

The penalty for putting medicated bait, drug, or any substance whatever that will kill or destroy fish in any of the rivers of this State, is imprisonment for two years and $2,000 fine.

Bass less than seven and trout less than six inches in length must not be destroyed, taken by hook or line in any way whatever. Penalty $25 or imprisonment. If found in the possession of any one, that alone is sufficient evidence of guilt.

The penalty for killing any song or insectivorous bird, or taking or destroying eggs of such birds, is $50 for each offence.

The penalty for trapping or snaring any game bird at any time or place, either on one's own property or that of another, is $20 for each and every offence.

Hunting or fishing on Sunday in any manner is prohibited.

—The Firemen's Herald says: "We would like to know why it is that prize fighters can get a better rate of fare over the railroads than can the firefighters. Secretary Bills of the National Association of Fire Chiefs has been trying to get a low rate of fare to the next annual convention at Louisville, but cannot get a better rate than one and one-third fare. The rate to the big prize fight at New Orleans next month is one fare for the round trip. And yet the railroads are under obligations to the firemen for services rendered in the time of need and danger, and the prize fight is unlike to the firemen, and if there is any discrimination it should be in their favor."

EDITORIAL NOTES

Antippe and Cain to this humanitarian age each has a defender. The large the fault the more loyal the defender.

It is announced that the great power canal which is to utilize the water of Niagara Falls will be finished by Oct 1. Some running factories all along its line at Niagara, the intention is, by means of the tunnel, to transmit power electrically to Buffalo.

A new use has been found for bicycles. A lumber thief lately rode up to the door of a Chicago house upon one, rang the bell, held a revolver to the servant girl's head, and robbed the mansion of $1,300 worth of diamonds. Then he mounted his bicycle and off he rode away, though the Chicago police chased him a mile in a patrol wagon.

Pennsylvania has a nice trio of fellows in Moyamensing prison. One threw a lighted kerosene lamp at his wife and burned her to death. Another kicked his wife almost to death, while the third jumped upon his wife with his feet and stamped the life out of her. All claim in extenuation of their devilish deeds that they were drunk, but in the [illegible] them ought to be punishment meted out to them. Are there really any allowance to be made for the fact that they were drunk? This kicking and stamping wives to death will have a tendency to discourage young ladies from matrimony. Worse than drunken brutes were as gallant lovers as any in the courtship days.

Dependable People.

As fine a compliment as can be bestowed on anybody is when you can say, "When I want him I can put my hand upon him, knowing I can find him exactly where I need him." The dependable person is a pillar of strength. When he makes you a promise you know he will keep it. He does not make promises often, but when he does you know they stand like iron.

The shallow, frothy brained liar will promise anything you ask him to do—things he could not perform if he would. That is the last you will hear of him. The strong, calm person of real power will help a friend as he would himself, because he makes no "bluff" about it. You know he is not; you could stake your life on the exact truth of one of his statements; that you can trust him with the saddest, deepest secrets of your life, if need be, and he will be silent as the grave.

The man or woman who always tells the exact truth, who always keeps a promise, who maintains a sacred silence with regard to a friend's private affairs is one of the rarest, finest types of the human race. The respect, the worshipful admiration of friends and acquaintances go out to such a character, for it is so rare, so very rare in this foolish, weak headed world. Yet it ought not to be rare, for it is a character any human being can attain.

Is Man an Electrical Battery?

He is, says Du Bois-Raymond, the learned professor of physiology in Berlin, who has been experimenting along this line of investigation, as only a German can, ever since 1841. Other men almost equally learned and scientific have come to the same conclusion, so there is no doubt about it. The inestimable value that the frog has been to modern physiological science is demonstrated anew here. What in fact would modern physiological science have been without the frog? His eye, his heart, his foot, and finally the muscles of his flesh of a thigh have all been utilized to discover what kind of processes are going on in the inwards of the human being, where science cannot direct its fingers and microscope, at least while the person is alive.

So experiments on frogs' legs and eyes showed that electrical currents passed through their muscles. There are two exceedingly delicate instruments—one a "sensitive galvanometer," the other a "capillary electrometer"—which showed the variations of electrical currents in a frog's heart and muscles when they had been thrilled. The next step was to apply the instruments to the human body. All muscles in health contain what are called static electricity or "resting currents." If the muscle is injured or if it contracts more or less violently these changes are duly registered by corresponding changes in the galvanometer or the capillary electrometer.

It has not indeed been proved in black and white, but there is reason to infer from what has been proved that every thought, every emotion that flits with lightning-like rapidity across the consciousness marks itself by electrical changes and flashes of light in the brain and along the nerves. It has been found that there are different electrical currents in the transverse and cross sections of the muscles. Scientists have mapped the living telegraph wires" and discovered that electrical currents flow along the motor strands of the spinal cord when the motor centers in the brain have been excited.

The uses to be made of these discoveries in disease in the future are among the prophecies that are sure to be fulfilled. It is plain that in perfect health impulses and nerves will be in a certain electrical state. In disease they will be disturbed and the disturbance can be ascertained and located.

SULLIVAN AND CORBETT.

The Pugilistic Giants Spar in Public with Their Trainers.

BOTH MEN SEEM IN FIT CONDITION.

While John L. Looks to Be Somewhat Fat, He Is as Agile as a Cat—"Pompadour" Jim Shows His Muscular Development by Tossing Heavy Iron Balls.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—John L. Sullivan left Canoe Place Inn, L. I., where he has been in training ever since July 5, for Phil Casey's place on DeGraw street, Brooklyn, where Sullivan remains the guest of Mr. Casey until Thursday, when he will leave for New Orleans in the Wagner palace car Traveler.

Last evening the big fellow was driven in a cab to the Clermont Avenue rink and there showed himself. There was a tremendous hallco when Sullivan appeared upon the stage. The noise that greeted his appearance lasted at least half a minute. When Sullivan finally got a chance to speak he said:

John L. Does Some Talking.

I am much obliged to you all for your reception. I know that you all think I am going to defeat Corbett, but I am afraid that Corbett is very clever man. If you haven't absolute faith in me don't bet on me; Corbett may be a slugger.

Then came cheers for John L. Sullivan, and cries of "No, no; there's only one John L." Sullivan smiled at this and answered in his gruff voice that he was still John L. then and always, and the man who whipped him [illegible] to do so on his merits. There were [illegible] cheers at this and Sullivan was called upon very decidedly for a speech. John L. replied by saying:

"I am not in talking business just now, but may be later. A loser always has a lot to say," and the crowd yelled back, "Then, John, you'll be a deaf and dumb man." Sullivan was evidently pleased at this sally, for he smiled—a thing the champion rarely does—but he raised his hand, quieted the crowd, who were still with him, and said: "Let it all go until the 7th of September. After that date we will know what's what," and the crowd cheered him.

Sullivan's Appearance.

There appeared to be a good deal of flesh on Sullivan as he sat in his corner. His eyes, however, were bright and flashing and his face was hardened and tanned. His shoulders are in splendid condition and his muscles show excellently. There appeared, however, to be lots of fat over his stomach and back. It is very strange if he does not weigh in the vicinity of 220 pounds. He perspires very freely.

Jack Ashton met him in three rounds. Sullivan displayed the agility of a cat. He wore a confident, hardened air, and went at Ashton very hard, tapping him at short intervals twice with his left and once with his right, and although he only touched his companion on the neck and shoulders, he had him very tired at the end of each round.

It was remarked that Sullivan puffed a good deal after the conclusion of the rounds. The wrinkles of fat over his waistband heaved in and out to no small degree and the perspiration came freely. Those who admirers feel that he is in prime condition. His flesh is well colored and his striking force is as marvelous as ever. His legs are the best feature and the effect of his training is very evident, and he has the appearance of a man fit to win.

The ring, which holds about 5,000 persons, was packed to the doors, while a crowd fully as large blocked the streets in the neighborhood, being unable to gain admission. Sullivan was very much pleased with his reception and bowed his acknowledgement frequently.

Corbett's Exhibition.

Madison Square garden held 6,000 people when Jim Corbett presented himself to give a public exhibition of the methods of training he has pursued for his encounter at New Orleans with Champion John L. Sullivan. Mrs. Corbett and quite a number of ladies were in the audience.

Corbett lost no time in getting to work, and displayed his supple advantage with the lifting machine, the rowing machine and the wrist machine, for all of which he was loudly applauded. A handball court had been erected at the east end of the hall, and Corbett entered the lists with John Lawlor, the champion of Ireland. The contest excited much interest and terminated in favor of Lawlor, the score being announced as 21 to 14.

A three cornered game of pitch and toss with Dodger Dan with a 7½-pound ball, Corbett receiving the ball in turn from. Billy Delaney, his trainer, and Jim Daly, his sparring partner. In this game Corbett's shoulder blades stood out like hard, corded knots. Corbett had a wrestling match with John McVey, of Philadelphia, in which he displayed much skill, his strength and dexterity drawing forth loud and continuous cheering. He also ran a mile in good style on a track which had been laid out around the hall.

When Corbett came out for the sparring contests everybody was enthusiastic over his appearance, and the shout, "He's all right!" went up from many throats. The old timers, however, shook their heads ominously, and mutterings could be heard to the effect that "Jem" would not look so spry after big John had had him in hand for a short time.

A Spirited Bout.

Corbett, when he stepped into the ring, was received with tumultuous cheering, and it was evident that he was surrounded by a multitude of admirers. He sparred a bout of three rounds with James McVey and three rounds with Jim Daly, his sparring partner and assistant trainer.

His work was clever, very spirited, and the dexterity with which he administered his blows and his agility in avoiding punishment received hearty applause.

Corbett will return to Loch Arror this afternoon. There he will take light daily exercise until Saturday, when he will start for New Orleans. He will make the trip in a special train, which will leave Jersey City at 4 o'clock. His train is expected to arrive in New Orleans on Monday.

He will be the guest in that city of the Southern Athletic club, where he fought and whipped Kilrain. He will take exercise and train while there in the club rooms, which have been placed at his disposal.

Both Sullivan and Corbett will have gymnasiums fitted up in their trains, so that they can daily take their exercise on the trip down.

MORE ARRESTS AT HOMESTEAD.

Lovejoy Pushing the Cases Against the Strikers—Both Sides Claim Victory.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 30.—Architects have begun preparations of plans for two hotels of about 100 rooms each to be erected just inside of the millyard at Munhall station for the use of single employees of the Carnegie Steel company. The buildings will be fitted with all possible conveniences. An official of the company said: "Our idea is to give our men a nice room, good food and all conveniences possible for a small sum per week. They will be as comfortable as if they were at their homes."

A surprising number of Pinkerton men are in Homestead and there is much suppressed excitement over the proposed search for the guns of the captured Pinkertons. For several weeks Pinkerton's best detectives have been endeavoring to locate the weapons, and now with the authority of search warrants they propose to compel the possessors of the Winchesters to surrender them.

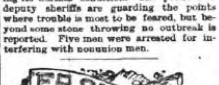
Two months ago the great steel works shut down, and so far as the men are concerned there is no perceptible weakening, nor do the majority express any doubt of victory. The firm insists that so far as they are concerned the strike is over and point to the mills as their evidence.

Secretary Lovejoy, of the Carnegie Steel company, has resumed his prosecutions against the Homestead strikers. Burgess John McCluskie and George Ryland, charged with conspiracy; Thomas J. Crawford, chairman of the advisory committee, and William Catchet, charged with riot and conspiracy, and William Goffner and John Edwards, charged with riot, were arrested. The man all gave bail for a hearing and were released.

Quiet at Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Aug. 30.—Everything has been gratifyingly peaceful in the railroad yards since the troops were withdrawn, but the nonunion men who took the strikers' places continue to fear violence and many of them are reluctant to remain at work. This is particularly the case in the yards of the Buffalo Creek railroad, where little or nothing is being done. This road is the copper trust railroad, the elevators, lumber yards and coal chutes across the creek and the railroads on the city side, and when traffic on the Buffalo Creek railroad is stopped there is quite a congestion of business on what is known as the island. This congested condition is said to be worse now than at any time since the strike began.

In the city yards freight shipments is in fairly active progress and is gradually nearing its normal condition. The police and deputy sheriffs are guarding the points where trouble is most to be feared, but beyond some stone throwing no outbreak is reported. Five men were arrested for interfering with nonunion men.



Fashionable Millinery.

Close cut roses are used round the open crown of hats and bonnets and also bordering the brims of some bonnets. A new aigrette is formed of long sprays of white purple bloom, with grass for the base. Paris hats of pink straw date almost from the beginning of the season and have been eagerly sought. Leghorns are bent into every possible and impossible shape, and trimmed with roses so natural that you involuntarily try to smell them.

The large flat bows placed at the front of so many hats lend a special grace to their arrangement. These hats are just like those handed down in Watteau pictures, when pileries of silk tied in front, high heeled shoes and powdered hair were in style.

A fashionable maid's hat in black straw, which is, curiously enough, as much the mode

for such occasions as white, displays a bow of wired lace like the wings of a butterfly which appears to have alighted among the flowers. A pretty hat has lace plaited at the edge and just overlapping it, which is quite the latest idea. A green bow nestles amid white flowers, the crown sloping back.

The pretty garden party hat here illustrated is in beige straw, surrounded on the brim with an insertion of gold lace straw and ornamented in front with erect and drooping loops in moire satin ribbon, striped at one edge with pink and green corded silk. At the back nestle a large rose and a bunch of lilies of the valley.

Filigree jewelry is making its way for summer wear.

The pointed button for studs is a great institution, since buttonholes may give way.

Cairngorms are worn with summer gingham.

BAD FOR LIZZIE BORDEN

The Prosecution Makes Some Strong Points Against Her.

SHE TRIED TO BUY PRUSSIC ACID.

The Accused Denies This, Although the Drug Clerk Positively Is Strongly Corroborated—Mrs. Churchill's Evidence Also Proves Damaging to the Prisoner.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 30.—The new testimony brought out in the Lizzie Borden hearing has caused a change of opinion among many of her friends who have heretofore stoutly maintained her innocence. They come-der the strongest evidence given against her to be that of Mrs. Addie Churchill, the neighbor whom she has known and loved since childhood. Mrs. Churchill is a sister of City Auditor Buffington and daughter of the late Mayor Buffington, and owing to her standing in social circles her testimony has caused a profound sensation.

She stated positively that Mrs. Borden's room door was opened when she and Bridget Sullivan first discovered the body of the murdered woman. It has already been stated that Lizzie Borden was in the hall way near this open door when Bridget Sullivan was opening the front door at 10:35 o'clock. Again, Mrs. Churchill stated positively that Miss Lizzie told her Mrs. Borden had received a note to call on a sick friend. It has not yet been proven that any person in this city or elsewhere sent such a note or that Mrs. Borden left the house at any time during the day.

Like all the rest of the witnesses for the government she failed to find any traces of blood on Miss Lizzie's clothing or her person. Miss Lizzie was in distress and greatly agitated when her lifelong friend ran to her assistance, but was not observed to be unusually sorrowful nor did she show pain or emotion. When Mrs. Churchill asked her where her mother was she did not say she was out. Her answer was: "Do see if you can find her. I don't know but she is killed too." Bridget Sullivan was intuitively fearful of obeying Miss Lizzie, and refused outright to go up stairs unless Mrs. Churchill accompanied her.

Lizzie Bit Her Lips and Flushed.

During this testimony the prisoner bit her lips, flushed and bent toward Attorney Adams.

Following Mrs. Churchill's testimony came that of Miss Russell, the friend for whom Miss Lizzie sent at once. Unconsciously, perhaps, Miss Russell gave another insight into the unhappy domestic life of the Borden family. Mrs. Borden, the stepmother, was seldom seen in the guests' chamber, although witness was a frequent visitor.

Coupled with Miss Lizzie's own words that she always locked her room door when going out, it was apparent that the pleasantest relations did not exist. Miss Russell was a stubborn witness, in the opinion of a government official, while Mrs. Churchill, who was reluctant and fearful at first, told freely all she knew, without hinting at family relations.

The testimony also of E. H. Bence, the drug clerk; Frank Kilroy, the Harvard medical student, and Fred Hart, the assistant drug clerk, all of whom were in Smith's drug store when Lizzie was there, seems very damaging to the defendant.

Eli Bence, drug clerk, testified that he remembered the day of the tragedy and was acquainted with Lizzie Borden. Witness saw her in his store the day before and she asked him for ten cents' worth of prussic acid to put on a seal-skin sacque. When he told her he could not sell it without a physician's prescription. His attention was called to the fact that she was in the store on Thursday evening and came there again, or about 6 o'clock. His attention was called to the fact that she was the daughter of Andrew Borden.

The other witnesses who were present in the drug store at the time corroborated Bence's testimony.

Miss Lizzie Borden denies positively that she was in the Dr. Smith's drug store, where Eli Bence is clerk.

The Visit to the Barn.

The different stories as to Miss Lizzie's purpose in visiting the barn and the time she spent there are becoming great topics of gossip about town. If she went into the barn it has yet to be explained why she was not seen by Bridget Sullivan, who went there frequently to get water with which to wash windows.

Miss Lizzie and others smiled when Officer Doherty told of the ubiquitous reporter who was sitting alone on the balustrades, gazing through the screen door awaiting the open means by a member of the local police. All smiled again when Counsel Adams asked if the reporter represented the paper with the largest circulation or the most veracity. When Officer Doherty talked about calicoes and chailies that Miss Lizzie might have taken and compared them in color with some neckties, there were more smiles. Miss Lizzie was livelier than she has been during the trial, and frequently leaned toward Mr. Adams and conversed with him.

Miss Emma's painful exhibition of quiet sorrow made many persons feel deeply for her suffering.

The Daily News says: "New and important evidence for the defense, somewhat corroborative of Dr. Handy's story in locating a stranger in the Borden's at noon before the last tragedy, has been found. It is eminently reliable."

What it is no one at police headquarters seems to know.

POLITICAL HAPPENINGS.

Judge Maynard Declines the Tender of a Nomination.

HARRISON AND REID TO CONSULT.

After a Conference at Ophir Farm the President Will Make a Short Tour of New York State and Be the Guest of Warner Miller—South Carolina's Fight.

TROY, N. Y., Aug. 30.—Chairman Edward Murphy, Jr., of the Democratic state committee, has made public the following correspondence, which explains itself:

TROY, N. Y., Aug. 15, 1892.

HON. Y. H. MAYNARD:

DEAR SIR—The time is approaching when it will be necessary for the state committee, pursuant to the authority with which it has been invested, to take action for the nomination of a chief judge of the court of appeals, the only state officer to be elected at the coming election. Having in mind the means of knowing what the sentiment of the Democracy is upon this subject, I deem it but just to you to say that, in my judgment, it is not only in favor of your nomination for the place, and that such action by the party or its representatives would meet with very hearty approval, and would, I believe, be especially helpful at this juncture in securing Democratic success at the polls. I write this letter to you individual only for the purpose of obtaining an expression of your wishes in the premises, and of ascertaining whether you are willing to have your name considered in connection with the nomination. Very truly yours, EDWARD MURPHY, JR.

STAMFORD, DELAWARE COUNTY, N. Y., Aug. 23, 1892.

HON. Edward Murphy, Jr.:

DEAR SIR—On receipt of your favor of the 20th inst., and desire to thank you most cordially for the kind expressions and personal interest and regard which it contains. I am especially sensible of the great honor implied in your suggestion, which has also come to me from other quarters, of my name for the nomination by the Democratic party for chief judge of the court of appeals. As you are aware, the office is provisionally filled by Judge Earl, and I am now occupying the place of associate judge, made vacant by his temporary promotion, and by reason of service will necessarily terminate with the 30th day of December next.

Having thus had but a few months of judicial experience in the court, while all of my associates have spent years, and some of them almost a lifetime in diligent, laborious, acceptable and honorable service therein of it. If the selection of its presiding officer is to be made from the bench, it is to my mind neither fitting nor just that it should be given to one who has for so short a time been associated with its membership, but it should be awarded to some of my seniors in the court, by one great length of the law and long judicial training eminently qualify them for this high position. There is no branch of the government service where the public good more imperatively requires the prompt recognition of faithful devotion to the discharge of official duties than in the judiciary, and none where purely partisan or personal considerations should have less weight in determining the choice of candidates. I am so willing to place myself in the attitude of seeking any undue preferment, and I have therefore to request that my name shall not be considered by your committee in making a nomination for the place. Very sincerely yours, ISAAC H. MAYNARD.

Harrison to Visit Reid.

LOON LAKE, N. Y., Aug. 30.—The president will leave Loon Lake Tuesday evening, going to Ophir farm, the country home of Whitelaw Reid. There Mr. Harrison will spend a couple of days, visiting his companion on the ticket and talking over the prospects of the campaign.

On Thursday the president will start on his return to Loon Lake. The return journey will be interrupted, however, by several short stops for the purpose of making addresses. This arrangement is under the management of the Republican state committee, Chairman William Brookfield, of the state committee, will accompany the president.

The train will stop for several minutes at Poughkeepsie, Hudson, Albany, Schenectady and Amsterdam, at each of which Mr. Harrison is to speak from the platform. Herkimer will be reached by evening and Senator Warner Miller will entertain the president over night. The senator's fellow townsmen will be entertained by an address from the candidate.

The journey will be resumed on Friday, and stops and speeches will be made at Utica, Lowville, Carthage, Watertown and Ogdensburg, where Mr. Harrison will spend the night. On Saturday morning he will make but one speech on his way to Loon Lake, and that will be at Senator George Z. Erwin's home, Potsdam.

Western Democratic Headquarters.

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—The subcommittee of the national committee which is to conduct the western Democratic campaign has at last secured quarters. Today arrangements were completed with the Unity company to lease for the campaign committee the entire banking floor of the Unity building on Dearborn street from now until the end of the year. The lease also includes a number of private offices on the upper floors of the building, which will be arranged for consultation rooms.

It is the wish of Adlai Stevenson that his law partner, James S. Ewing, of Bloomington, should be appointed manager of the headquarters. It is understood that the vice presidential nominee does not appoint the manager, but in the interest of the work of the subcommittee is so great that it is almost certain that those who have been placed by the national committee to establish their branch will give his desire the greatest consideration.

South Carolina Primaries.

CHARLESTON, Aug. 30.—The election for state officers, congressmen and presidential electors virtually occurs in this state today, when the primary elections will be held. There are two tickets in the field—one headed by J. C. Shephard, conservative Democrat, for governor, and the other by B. R. Tillman, who represents the Alliance. The Tillmanites claim to be able to carry the state by 3,000 majority. The conservative claim to be sure of 180 out of the 330 delegates who will constitute the state convention. The campaign has been the most bitter that has been known in this state since 1876.

McAleer a Winner.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 30.—The state administration was knocked out at the Democratic primary elections. In the Third congressional district Congressman William McAleer received a majority of the delegates to the ward delegate conventions. It is conceded that he has carried five of the eight wards comprising the district, and his friends claim that he has secured seven. McAleer was opposed by Assistant District Attorney W. W. Ker, the latter's congressional canvass being espoused by the state administration, including National Chairman Harrity.

CHOLERA'S WESTWARD MARCH.

Government Officials Here Fully Alive to the Danger That Threatens.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Government officials are fully alive to the added danger of introducing cholera into this country from Europe arising out of the fact that it has appeared in England on its journey westward. Acting Secretary Spaulding said that all the necessary regulations prescribing precautions against its introduction had been sent to government officials along the Atlantic seaboard and along the border, and the only thing to do now was to see that they were strictly enforced. If more stringent or better methods than those now in force were suggested or occurred to him he would at once adopt them. Cities and individuals could do much in a sanitary sense in restraining the introduction of cholera by keeping their cities and premises free from garbage.

Bearing on this latter point was a report from a public hygiene committee of Paris, made to the French ministry and forwarded to the state department. This report says that the cholera in the department of the Seine was caused by the use of the polluted waters of the river Seine. Figures are given showing that while there were from July 16 to Aug. 7 185 deaths from cholera in the suburbs of Paris, there were but 46 deaths from cholera in Paris. The people in the suburbs used Seine water almost exclusively, while those in Paris did not use it. The French army have but few cases of cholera, the water the soldiers use being filtered or boiled, or spring water.

Our consul at Glasgow cables: "Cholera outbreak here among Russian immigrants for America."

The Disease in England.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—A death occurred today at Bolton, Lancashire, twelve miles from Manchester. Ida Saniyan, a Russian Pole from Hamburg, was admitted into the London hospital dying with Asiatic cholera. Caroline Lane, an English girl, aged ten years, was also admitted to the London hospital, believed to be suffering from Asiatic cholera.

John Carne, a seaman on the infected steamer Gerona, from Hamburg to Middlesborough, died in Middlesborough of Asiatic cholera. Coffin and body were saturated with disinfectants. The hearse took the body directly to the graveyard and the coffin was lowered into the grave without prayer or hymn. Nobody except the undertaker and his assistants attended the funeral.

On account of the cholera the steamship service of Daniel Carrie & Co., to Hamburg, Finaking and South Africa, has been suspended. The chief steamship lines at Hull have telegraphed to their agents on the continent to refuse all applications for passage from intending emigrants.

Crushed by a Falling Boiler.

CHESTER, Pa., Aug. 30.—At the Chester oil works, by the falling of a boiler and engine, Bernard Mullen, foreman of the workmen, and four ribs broken and was hurt internally. A second man had a leg crushed into a shapeless mass, while the others were killed or less injured. Several of them were removed to the hospital.

Stevenson in the South.

RALEIGH, Aug. 30.—The appointments made for A. E. Stevenson, vice presidential nominee, and W. G. Ewing are as follows: Asheville, Sept. 14; Raleigh, 16th; Charlotte, 17th; Winston, 19th; Fayetteville, 21st; Wilmington, night of the 21st; Goldsborough, 22d, arriving at Richmond on the morning of Sept. 23.

For Mrs. Maybrick's Pardon.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—A petition from American ladies for the release of Mrs. Maybrick, who is imprisoned for life under conviction of having poisoned her husband, was forwarded to Queen Victoria. The petition is signed by Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. Blaine and other well known American ladies.

Connecticut Prohibitionists.

HARTFORD, Aug. 30.—The state Prohibition convention was called to order at Unity hall at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Allen B. Lincoln, editor of The Connecticut Home, was made temporary president and Rev. S. Forbes, of Hartford, permanent president.

De Mores' Trial Begun.

PARIS, Aug. 30.—The Marquis de Mores was put on trial on the charge of manslaughter in having killed Captain Meyer, of the French army, last June, by running him through the right lung with a sword in a duel fight by De Mores and Captain Meyer, owing to Meyer's resentment of De Mores' insults to Hebrews.

SOME ODD STORIES.

INTERESTING INCIDENTS RELATED BY MAJOR A. R. CALHOUN.

A Tyrolese Christening—Quaint Ceremonies on This Interesting Occasion—A Tale That Will Interest Fathers, Mothers and Lovers in All Lands.

Many years ago I spent one of the happiest months of my life among the handsome, simple minded, gentle hearted peasantry of the Tyrolean Alps.

Three weeks before my arrival a child had been born, a boy, in the village, but called cabin of the young shepherd with whom I was making my home. The event, the most natural in itself, was looked upon as something of a miracle in that beautiful valley, and the pretty young mother after the first week was besieged by visitors. Old women called at odd hours during the week, but on Sunday, and particularly in the afternoon, the shepherd lads and lasses, decked out in the most picturesque garments, came down "to take a look at the blessed baby."

I soon found that the interest of the young people in the child was not wholly disinterested. The christening of a child is an event of great importance in the Tyrol. The godfather and godmother are always single young people, and they are usually elected from the kinsfolk of the child's family, one from either side of the house, and usually lovers, who are looking forward to the near future when they will have herds of sheep and goats and a cabin, and perhaps a christening of their own.

Whenever a child is born the father goes to the door of his cabin and fires a shot off his rifle. As the echoes ring along the mountains the neighbors stop their work to listen for the other shots. Three tell of the birth of a girl and five of a boy.

But I was particularly interested in the godfather and godmother of this particular baby. The young soldier whispered to me to watch Lena Kellner and Franz Land. I did so and noted that he was a tall, handsome young fellow attired like a stage Tyrolean, and that Lena was a pretty, flaxen haired girl whose one purpose in life seemed to be to keep away from the stalwart musketeer.

In explanation of this Frau Schnee, my landlady, told me that the young people she had selected to be the godparents of her baby had been lovers a year before, but that a foolish jealousy came between and parted them.

This information gave me renewed interest in the young people, and it required but little watching to convince me that each was acting a part, and that their bidding aloof at the bidding of pride was the ecstasy of their tortured hearts.

At length the day came for the christening. It was Sunday, and like patches of snow the white fleeced flocks grazed along the emerald slopes of the Arlberg hills. The bell of the little white spired church rattling in a grove down by the stream had called its music and worship in its pronged echoes.

How pretty Lena Kellner was to be sure, and how the young popular lad no mountain maid seemed to envy her the honors of this day, when she was to become the spiritual mother of her cousin's child.

As Godfather Franz Land had to carry the baby before him on a pillow down to the church he looked very red, very handsome and very awkward. When the procession formed to march to the church there were beads of agony, or it may have been care, on the young man's face, for it was evident that at every step he feared the pillow might drop.

Lena marched ahead as if to show him the way, and the parents, with many winks and whispered comments, in which their neighbors joined, followed. Now and then, when a stream had to be crossed on step ping stones, Lena—she was enjoying it as Franz was not—would glance back archly and say in the softest and most musical of voices:

"Be careful here. Do not let the child fall in the water. Don't let its head get lower than its feet," and so on.

Poor Franz! he could not but hear this, and the pillow on his aching arms grew heavy as lead. He could have carried an ox with far more comfort to himself.

It was a great relief to the godfather when the church was reached and the clergyman took the child in his own arms and sprinkled it at the little font before the altar, while Franz and Lena promised separately and jointly to watch over its spiritual welfare till it grew to manhood.

It is customary for the godfather to carry the child back to its father's house after the christening, but on this occasion Her Schnee had pity on his cousin Franz, or it may be that he feared for the safety of his first born; but be that as it may he carried the baby back himself.

As a change, though a welcome one, I kept at the rear of the procession going and coming. On the way back I had an excellent chance to watch the lovers.

They walked on for some distance in silence. Then Lena looked up with a quick sidelong glance, in which there was a fascinating blending of innocence and coquetry, and said:

"God has given us a beautiful day."

"All things are beautiful today," stammered Franz.

"And you carried the baby well," she said, with an increasing confidence in herself.

"Did I? Well, it must have weighed a ton. I never saw such a heavy baby in all my life."

"Ah, Franz," she laughed, "but you are so tall and strong!"

"You think so, Lena?" and now he took her hand, and she did not resist.

"I do."

"Well, I always did think you the most sensible girl in all the Tyrol."

"Have you always thought so, Franz?"

"Yes, always."

"Even when you doubted me?"

"I never doubted you."

"Then why treat me coldly?"

"Because I am a fool. But Lena, do you know what I am now thinking?"

"Something good, I hope."

"Yes, it is that you would make me the best of wives."

"You think so?"

"I am sure of it."

Their faces came closer, and I blushed to think I was forced to see the kiss that followed.

When we reached the cottage a beautiful dinner awaited all, and after that followed singing and dancing, and Lena and Franz led the first set.

Before breaking up that night Franz had the courage to say as he stood holding Lena's hand:

"We were but two today as we went down into the valley to a christening. Lena will tell you when we shall all soon go down to a wedding."

Remarkable Fortitude.

Because the Chinese are not skilled in modern methods of scientific warfare we are apt to underestimate their courage and fortitude. Mr. Hayward, in his account of the recent rebellion against the Chinese in Turkestan, relates a remarkable instance of the latter.

The Turki, as the natives of Turkestan are called, besieged the Chinese in the fort of Yarkand. The siege had continued for two months and the garrison was in sore straits.

The rebel leader knew that sooner or later Yarkand must surrender, but claiming to be influenced by a feeling of humanity he sent in word that he would save the lives of the old amban or viceroy on condition that he and all his followers should embrace Islam.

It is not necessary for a creed to be divine in order to induce its adherents to die for it. The viceroy was a disciple of Confucius, and although this belief required no strain on the credulity or daily acts of self abnegation, he did not care to be coerced into giving it up.

When the last ration had been issued to the garrison the old amban summoned all his officers to his headquarters.

The meeting was held in the second story of a house, the lower floor there were fifty barrels of gunpowder, with a train, unseen by the visitors, extending from the powder and up under the chair on which the old man received his subordinates.

The officers urged upon the viceroy to accept the terms of the enemy, or to offer him a ransom which they were sure his cupidity would not refuse.

While they were wrangling about this the viceroy's sons and daughters offered their guests tea and the few remaining sweetmeats, while he himself sat calmly smoking on his elevated chair, as calm as if this were an ordinary reception.

Suddenly the discussion of ransom was interrupted by cannon shots, the war of musketry and the wild cheers of the rebels as they poured in over the undefended walls.

A few minutes and the ring of the hoofs of the Moslem horse and the clang of bridle chains and swords went up in the fort of Yarkand with the exultant shouts:

"Allah Akhbar! Allah Akhbar!"

The frightened officers ran to the windows to see the swarming foe below in the narrow streets.

The old viceroy, now joined by his wife, motioned to his children. They gathered about him and knelt at his feet.

He took a long pull at his pipe and shouted "Farewell to earth!"

He beat calmly with the pipe in his hand, turned the bowl down and shook the embers on the train.

A flash, the hiss of a serpent as the fire ran down the train to the lower floor, and the next instant the viceroy and his family had vanished with the fort of Yarkand.

A Cure for Rheumatism.

Hutchins, of the New York Press club, is a practical joker, and a man who loves a practical joke of the most order, for, like a true artist, our friend is neither boisterious nor horsey in his methods.

Recently Hutch, as he is called and was called before the famous Chicago wheat dealer was heard of outside the Windy City, met a comrade who walks lame, and who in reply to an inquiry said:

"Oh, great Scott! I'm broken all to pieces with rheumatix."

"What have you tried for it?" asked Hutch consolingly.

"Tried! Why, I've tried everything," was the reply.

"Ever try a horse chestnut?"

"Horse chestnut? Fudge!"

"Well, my friend," replied Hutch, "you may say 'Fudge' if you will, but look at this." He drew a shining horse chestnut from his pocket and added, as he held it out for inspection, "I've carried that nut or one like it for three years, and I am willing to swear that during all that time I never felt the slightest twinge of rheumatism."

"Oh, don't tell me!" exclaimed the man as he seized the nut.

"But I do tell you, and it's the whole truth."

The invalid, declaring that he was not superstitious, pushed the nut into his pocket and was limping away when Hutch called out:

"Oh, by the way, there is one thing I forgot to tell you. Now, before I took to carrying horse chestnuts"——

"You is the rheumatism purty bad, eh?" interrupted the invalid.

"No," replied Hutch as he hurried off. "I never had it in all my life!"

Curiosities of English.

It is possible for people to be too precise in their language, though usually the tendency is the other way.

Recently the following dialogue took place in a hardware store near the Brooklyn bridge:

Customer (to clerk)—Show me a small, low priced shears.

Clerk (fractionally)—Perhaps you mean a pair of shears?

Customer (severely)—I mean precisely what I said.

Clerk (defiantly opening a specimen article)—Are these not two blades here? And doesn't two make a pair?

Customer (triumphantly)—You have two legs; does that make you a pair of man?

The clerk scratched his head and did up the shears. ALFRED R. CALHOUN.

America's Deepest Lake.

It is claimed that the deepest lake in America is in the Cascade mountains, about seventy-five miles northeast of Jacksonville, Or. It is called the Great Sunk lake, and averages 2,000 feet down to the water on all sides. It is about 15 miles long and 4½ wide.—Philadelphia Ledger.

SOME WORTHY WIVES

WOMEN WHO HAVE SEEN OF HELP TO THEIR HUSBANDS.

Marriage Sometimes Pays as an Investment—The Requirements of Wifehood. Woman as an Adviser and Counselor as Well as a Companion.

There has been hysterical and protracted discussion of marriage as a failure, pessimistic agitation of marriage as a luxury and poetic description of marriage as an ideal state of esoteric blessedness, but has any one considered marriage in the light of an investment to the young man ambitious for place in the literary, social or political world?

Under the old regime the perfect helpmeet was the careful housewife—she who "looked well to the ways of her household" and was wise in the science of clear starching linen, in compounding pastry and seasoning soups. Under the new dispensation the literary man whose composition cannot enter intelligently into the deeper interests of his life, the politician whose consort is not diplomatic in the treatment of his political allies and enemies, the financier whose wife cannot dispense with elegant grace his bounty, are handicapped in the race and rarely win the prize from the men whose choice of wives has been wiser.

It was a man of most astute intelligence, according to the woman's side, who said: "As a rule is safe to say every public man of prominence owes his position largely, perhaps chiefly, to his wife. There are exceptions, of course, which will occur to every one, but nevertheless this is the rule. Bright, studious, well informed, they not only perform all their own duties, but they supervise correspondence, collect authorities and information, draft and revise speeches, and even when their ministry is of a purely domestic character its influence is simply incalculable." And this man, whom may the gods reward with a wife as fair as Aphrodite, as wise as Athene, as faithful as Penelope, is generous enough to believe and gallant enough to say that Martha Washington is as worthy of a monument as the immortal George or his mother.

Would a beginning to realize that there is no gift or grace of mind or manner, no logic in the realm of philosophy, no language dead or living, no data known to the age, which may not be of service to her in the fulfillment of her simple wifely duty to the man of her choice. For what man may be called upon to stand and deliver is difficult to determine when the wedding ring is fitted. Of Josephine, the obscure and unpolished soldier lover with neither rank nor title demanded as a wife the rare graciousness to wear right royally an empress's crown. Of the talented Jane Welch, Carlyle, the great scholar, demanded devotion absolute to his nerves and to his dyspepsia, and how much of the brilliancy of his work is due to her vigilance in keeping at undisturbing distance the annoying small bore of the highway, or to preparing the food least irritating to his stomach, the world will never know.

To the influence, the wealth and the never failing interest of his wife the great premier who made the queen of England empress of India acknowledged that his political success was largely due, and an impertinent questioner who asked him "what feeling could bind him to a wife older than himself" was answered by Mr. Disraeli with, "A feeling unknown to young misery—that of gratitude." Very easily disturbed was the great orator by any differing judgment—opinions he never offered a speech in the house, and it is said that his wife, who always accompanied him when his health, during the years of his premiership, brought home to the house of parliament with her fingers caught beneath the carriage window rather than put to flight his carefully prepared periods by telling him of the crushed and aching members.

Very pleasant it is to read Gladstone's tribute to the wife who is the closest friend, the best adviser and the severest critic of the Grand Old Man, where he says: "No words that I could use would ever suffice to express the debt I owe her in relation to all the offices she has discharged on my behalf and on the behalf of those who are nearest and dearest to me; but only is she the dearest of companions, but the most devoted of helpmates, but for whose self consecration to the service of her husband and her children my own public work must have been seriously fettered and hindered."

Over all the domestic comfort of the household she exercises untiring watchfulness, feeling herself responsible to the nation as well as to her own happiness, to preserve the health and prolong the life of the famous statesman. A bright, entertaining conversationist, it is in her cheery companionship that he seeks rest and forgetfulness from the cares of state. Whenever he makes a great speech she is present to share his triumph, and when the speech is over she it is who wraps him in warm garments and brings him hot tea, in loving, wifely ministration, which has never failed since the then beautiful Catherine Glynne, more than fifty years ago, joined hands with him at the altar.

And Mme. Cannot, wife of the French president, who acts as secretary to her husband, has the care of his private correspondence, and during his absence takes his place and transacts all current affairs with a perfect knowledge of business routine. In addition to this she deputes to no one the care of overlooking the menus for her household, designating the apartments to be occupied by her guests and the general supervision of all domestic details. She frequently expresses her regret at not being able to explore the beautiful neighborhood of Fontainebleau because she has no time for walks and excursions.

And every good man who rejoices in the possession of a good wife will take pleasure in acknowledging the truth known of a thousand ways in which his wife has been instrumental to his success and one of the best investments he ever made, even if she has little ways of her own; if she makes him wait half an hour after he is all ready while she pins her veil and puts the last little dab of powder on her nose; even if she does get her dear little feelings hurt over things he doesn't understand, and when she gets over it thinks on forgiving him for something he knows he hasn't done; even if she does think that the Declaration of Independence and the book of discipline of the church to which she belongs put her in possession of all the top drawer and more than all the closet hooks, and give her the privilege of reading his letters and being jealous and unhappy for a week afterward, and the right to make him wheel the baby cart and carry knobby bundles that she has done up herself and fastened with a pin.—New York Sun.

Didn't Want It Read.

Norman McLeod was once preaching in a district in Ayrshire, where the reading of a sermon was regarded as the greatest fault of which the minister could be guilty. When the congregation dispersed, an old woman, overflowing with enthusiasm, addressed her neighbor: "Did ye ever hear anything see grun'? Wasna that a sermon?"

"Oh, aye," replied her friend sulkily, "but he read it."

"Read it!" said the other, with indignant emphasis, "I wadna hae cared if he had whustled it."—Exchange.

THE IRON HALL SCHEME.

FULLY EXPLAINED BY ONE WHO LEARNED IT TO HIS COST.

How Good Men are Deluded by the "Soft Chin" of Persuasive Strangers, who Tempt Them with Glib Assurances which Never Pan Out.

We are enabled to-day to give our readers a lesson in fraternal insurance as an investment of money. It will prove that it is an uncertain and unreliable method of securing an endowment, on the basis of $1,000 in seven years for $250 or thereabouts, payable in installments. The system has been endorsed by many financiers of high standing, and it has received the approval of several of the legislatures throughout the United States. Governor Ames of Massachusetts stakes over his own signature that he considered the method a legitimate one, "after a careful examination of the system." The denouement made in the case of our own citizens, who were members of the Iron Hall, shows that an enormous sum of money has been lost by unfortunate people, who were induced, many against their better judgment, to join the association, and that the approval given in the cases above referred to, were given through ignorance, or were influenced by the funds of the fast flying order.

In most every member over $7 to enter the charmed circle. The dues of the general fund amounted to $4 a year, and the maintenance of the organization meant a loss of time. The officers were under bonds, and the duties of each were of an exacting character. The work of the order was secret and for "the good of the order" part of the meetings was taken up with appeals from the more energetic members for an increase of membership, without which, as everyone knew, the scheme must fail. It was necessary for every member to "get in" three new members and for others to "lapse" and forfeit what they had paid in, to pay the matured certificates. They had a paper called "The Problem Solved." The problem which they claimed to have solved was not solved—and could not be—without "working upon friends" by getting them to join, then letting them into the "secret" which seems to have been to get those members to join, to pay you off, and trust to the misfortunes of your co-interests that they may "lapse" and their lost money revert to the general good. Such is the basis of the method upon which this and other orders have existed that have short term endowment feature. The propositions are chimerical, and the principles unjust. But the perfect confidence placed in the managers of the Iron Hall by the members was something astounding to behold, they knowing nothing of the attempts to corrupt legislatures, and the subsequent extravagant use of money for jollifications and other irrelevant purposes, which were a series of rotten transactions. It is rumored that an effort to resurrect the order will be made.

Below are the names of 47 persons with the amount paid to the reserve fund of the Iron Hall, and the amount they received when a distribution was made, that they retained in the treasury takes place:

Statement showing total amount of assessments paid by members of Local Branch Iron Order Iron Hall, Plainfield, N. J. Also division of reserve fund as on hand, August 25, 1892, figured on a pro rata basis of 30.485 per cent.

It will be seen that the members named above paid in $6,382.50 in a little over two years. But this figure does not represent all. Many members lapsed by default of payment of assessments, and the amount paid by them is not included, neither does it represent the amount paid into the general fund on account of deaths which fund is used for running expenses and examinations. The total amount would probably reach $8,500.

TO-MORROW'S REUNION.

Arrangements for a Cordial Welcome to Surviving Comrades.

The Thirtieth Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, will hold its annual reunion in this city to morrow, and will be entertained by Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., and Garfield League, No. 129, L. L. L.

The regiment will be met at the depot at 10 a. m. by the Post and march under their escort to Reform Hall where the reunion will be held. The business of the regiment will be held in the morning, this meeting being intended for members of the 30th only. At one o'clock a collation will be served to the regiment and its invited guests by Garfield League; at three p. m. a public meeting will be held in the hall to which all soldiers and citizens are most cordially invited.

The Thirtieth New Jersey Volunteer Regiment was mustered into the United States service at Flemington, N. J., September 17, 1862, and born on its muster roll the names of 1,011 men. After nine months' faithful service the regiment returned to Flemington, where it was mustered out June 27, 1863 The 30th was assigned to the Army of the Potomac and took part in the battle of Chancellorsville, Va., May, 2 and 3, 1863.

Company H was commanded by Comrade J. Frank Hubbard of this city and many men from this vicinity were in its ranks.

The committee in charge of the entertainment of the regiment is composed of seven members, as follows, viz.: J. Frank Hubbard, Charles H. Randolph and Edward J. Olssen from Major Anderson Post, and Miss Susan E. Wilson, Mrs. Julia H. Mackey, Miss Laura L. Brady and Mrs. Mary Olssen from Garfield League.

The committee of arrangements on reunion of the Thirtieth New Jersey hereby requests the citizens to display their flags to-morrow in honor of New Jersey's volunteers.

CORRESPONDENCE.

About that Same Old Free Trade Speech that is Now Discovered.—A Free Trade Colony and a Protection Colony Compared.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—The Press of August 30th contained an article by Mayor Saunders, directed against me and noticeable especially by reason of its lengthiness and its glaring headlines.

Endeavoring to escape my arraignment of his misstatements, Mr. Saunders places me in a false position, making me to say of New South Wales:

"This highly protected country is in a state of great distress and misery because there is no work and low wages."

For a complete refutation of this absurd misstatement of my position, I refer to my letter in THE NEWS of August 11, which made it perfectly clear that this depression of trade and suffering among the laboring class, existed in New South Wales during the tariff-for-revenue-only period; and that the government, in 1891, adopted a protective tariff because in its opinion it would extend manufactures and give employment to the people at a better rate of pay.

Mr. Saunders reasserts that New South Wales is a "Free Trade colony and cites as his authorities, "all well informed economists." By this he probably means Hutchinson, as he never refers to any other authority.

He admits that the party now in power, who framed the present tariff law, are protectionists, and that many of them, including Treasurer John See, are McKinley protectionists. The present tariff of the colony suits Treasurer See, and embodies his ideas of a protective tariff. He has said of it that it is designed "so that it will have the effect of extending agriculture and manufactures and giving employment to the people at a better rate of pay." Treasurer See is a McKinley protectionist; and the tariff suits him. Do Mr. Saunders and his little ex-mayor mean that the treasurer of the colony of New South Wales is not capable of making a protective tariff when he sees it? The very lowest ad valorem duty levied by the New South Wales tariff is 10 per cent. Most of the duties are specific, and are much higher than the ad valorem duties.

But, as I have before said in the columns of THE NEWS, New South Wales had, prior to the tariff act of 1891, a tariff for revenue only; and any comparison between her condition during that period, and the condition of the protected colonies constitutes a fair comparison. I am glad that Mr. Saunders refers to Victoria, because a protective and a non-protective tariff have for many years been tested side by side in the two colonies.

He himself admits that "New South Wales is the mother colony or State, but was overtaken in population and wealth by Victoria some years ago." A very instructive comparison is to be found in the following table of manufactories, work etc., in both two colonies for the years 1889 and 1890:

Colony	No. of Establish. for Year,	No. of Hands employed	Value of Products
Victoria	1889	3,154 56,971	£5,565,325
	1890	3,308 59,181	5,999,979
	Increase	154 2,210	£374,645
New S. Wales	1889	3,170 46,714	£5,805,594
	1890	2,999 45,906	5,468,281
	Decrease	171 808	£343,313

That eminent English authority, the Fortnightly Review, comparing the condition of the protected and unprotected colonies in 1890, said:

"With her enormous area, well nigh four times as large as that of Victoria; with her vast mineral wealth in gold, silver, coal, iron, copper and tin; her corn fields and immense tracts of pastoral land and timber; with a finer climate, a larger seaboard and the grandest harbor in the world, the natural resources of New South Wales are almost immeasurably greater than those of Victoria, and yet the progress of the little protectionist colony is ahead of the gigantic Free Trade colony in nearly every respect—a striking confirmation of the evidence of a hundred chambers of commerce in favor of protection. At the present Englishmen alone a Free Trader in a ring of empires and republics protected by stringent tariffs; but her Australian colonies are now compelled to fall in with the fashion by fencing themselves round with fiscal defences. South Australia, which had previously suffered from great depression of trade and financial embarrassment, has recently followed the example of Victoria, her sister colony, and since her adoption of a protection policy there has been such a marked revival in trade activity and increased prosperity that she has now a surplus of £30,000.

"To sum up, the protective colony is ahead in agriculture, ahead in viticulture, ahead in growth of population, ahead in railroad development, ahead in large manufactories and in the number of workmen employed, ahead in enterprise and capital, ahead in general prosperity and progress, and finally, although behind in mineral and pastoral wealth, is richer in men and peasantry, in a word, its entire proletariat—the bone and sinew of a country, are immeasurably wealthier and happier than persons in the world."

In view of the above facts, how much confidence can my place in Mr. Saunders' unsupported statement that "We have in New South Wales the evidence of prosperity under Free Trade."? Would it not be well for Mr. Saunders to ponder Josh Billings' epigrammic "It is better not to know so much, than to know so many things that are not so."?

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

GEO. WILLIAM CURTIS DEAD.

The Eminent Writer Passed Away Painlessly Early this Morning.

WEST NEW BRIGHTON, S. I., Aug. 31. (Special.)—George William Curtis, the well-known novelist, editor of Harper's Weekly and advocate of civil-service reform, who has been lying sick at his home, corner of Bard and Henderson avenues, since the latter part of June, died at 2.40 o'clock this morning. Death was painless.

Lots of Girls Wanted to Marry Him.

WATERLOO, August 31. (Special.)—James L. Babcock, of Ann Arbor, Mich., and Miss Ella Stanley Butler, of this place, will be married in September.

James Lane, who died in 1889, made a provision in his will that if before the end of the five years his nephew, James L. Babcock, had married he was to receive several hundred thousand dollars. Otherwise it was to be divided among all of the heirs.

As a result Mr. Babcock has received hundreds of letters from maidens willing to share the fortune with him.

The Friesland to be Released.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31, (Special.)—The steamship Friesland, which has been detained at Quarantine since Monday evening, will move to her dock to-day. Dr. Jenkins has reached the conclusion that further detention is unnecessary, inasmuch as every precaution in the way of fumigation and disinfection has been taken.

They Had Sixteen Days to Spare.

CHICAGO, Aug. 31, (Special.)—John Howard and wife of San Francisco, who started from Seattle on March 10 last on a trip to Chicago for a purse of $5,000, have arrived, having sixteen days to spare.

Howard lost forty pounds and his wife twenty-two and a half pounds. They say they are ready to try it again.

The Moravia Detained in Quarantine.

QUARANTINE, S. I. Aug. 31. (Special.)—The steamship Moravia, from Hamburg, Aug. 17, is the fourth transatlantic liner to be detained at Quarantine. She arrived at 9.42 last night but was not boarded by the health authorities until 9.30 this morning.

Transferred to the Flour Trust.

The property of the King's County, Jewell, Hecker, and Jones Milling Companies, situated in New York, Brooklyn, Port Richmond, L. I., was formally transferred Monday by Thomas A. McIntyre to the new Hecker, Jones, Jewell Milling Company, the recently-formed Flour Trust. The aggregate value of the property is $6,678,000. The record of the transfer was filed in the County Clerk's office in Kings county yesterday.

The property consists of the Jewell Mills, at the foot of Fulton street, Brooklyn; the Kings County Mills, Broadway and Dikuham Place, Eastern District; the Hecker Mills and the Jones Mills of this city, and the Staten Island Flour Mills of Port Richmond.

Mr. Charles McCutchen of Rockview avenue is one of the incorporators of the trust.

EDITORIAL NOTES

How to Get the Best of It.

The above is the heading of a paper in The Christian Union, by Dr. Edward Everett Hale, explaining the methods by which he is able to get the most and the best work out of himself. As Dr. Hale is not only one of the most versatile writers and speakers of his time, but also among those who accomplish the greatest amount of work in both kind and quantity, what he has to say will be eminently helpful. As the same time his particular methods would not suit everybody, but the main point of his paper is that, adopting Dr. Hale's principles in general, each may work out the routine best adapted to his own case.

There you are to begin—soul, mind and body. Make it clear to yourself that the mind and body are "two slaves destined to obey the imperial soul." The brilliant doctor agrees with mind cure people so far as to declare that the human soul is one with the infinite soul, and therefore should be the "boss" of mind and body, controlling them perfectly and breaking them in to do its will. He believes this can be done effectually.

As to his own particular regimen, first the body must have plenty of sleep. He himself requires ten hours, and he never attempts less. He sleeps from half past 9 to half past 6 in the morning, then takes an hour's nap after the midday meal. He does this because he long ag found out it was good for him. "If you mean to sleep you should not drink tea or coffee after 2 in the afternoon or go into any hard brain work after 3 or 4." For food, find out quickly what you can digest and what you cannot, and stick to that. "The less you think about it the better."

You must get the open air and plenty of it every day. Severe and fatiguing physical exercise is not necessary, he thinks, though a man in good health ought to walk six miles without feeling tired. But if you must get dead tired, lie down ten minutes and take a drink of something nourishing before you eat. Do your severe brain work in three hours—in his opinion about two hours and a half. This proves that Mrs. Borden died between 9 and 10 o'clock, probably about 9:30.

The government has already established that Lizzie was in the hallway leading into Mrs. Borden's room at 10:35 o'clock, and she has not been able to prove that she was not in the house between 9:15 and 11:17 o'clock, when both murders occurred. The strength of the case against Lizzie, pleasure at the positive statements about time made by Professor Wood, which were unshaken when his cross examination was concluded, and the finding of the hatchet in Lizzie's pocket. The same matter was referred to in Dr. Dolan's cross examination. The purpose of it has not yet appeared.

John Dinnie's testimony regarding the impossibility of a man going over the back fence after having committed the murders without being seen drives another contradictory nail into the defendant's theory that some one had escaped undetected in that way.

Officer Philip Harrington's description of Miss Borden's cool and collected manner was strangely at variance with the agitation spoken of by others. He also emphasized a well recognized fact when he said that Miss Lizzie heard her father say he would not let his property for any such purpose, meaning the keeping of a liquor store.

The most interesting testimony of the day to the general public was that given by District Attorney Knowlton when he read Miss Borden's testimony at the inquest.

Lizzie's Evidence at the Inquest.

Lizzie stated substantially that she was thirty-two years old; that her father had been married to her stepmother about twenty-seven years; she had no fear that what her father was worth and only knew about part of her father's real estate. Miss Borden said that more than a year ago she bought the house on Ferry street and a few weeks ago he bought it back again, paying Emma and her separately. Lizzie had heard Mr. Morse say several years ago that her father had made a will; her father never said anything about a will.

Parthenia—about two weeks ago—had trouble with a man whom I did not know. They had some talk and I heard the man say, 'I thought a man with a reputation for getting mixed like you would keep my office.' My father said he had stayed long enough and requested him to get out, and he went away saying he would consult his lawyer.

Lizzie had had some trouble with her stepmother about five years ago, but it was trivial. In some ways her relations with her stepmother were not as between mother and daughter; changed from calling her mother to "Mrs. Borden" when there was trouble between her stepsister, now Mrs. George Whitehead. Emma had stood as a mother to Lizzie; witness had stated that she went and bought more clothes than to her stepmother; her father and stepmother were on good terms always.

Lizzie stated she had worn a navy blue dress on the morning of the murder. Then Lizzie went on to relate the old story of how the family lived, where Emma was at the time of the murder (Fairhaven), what Bridget was doing on the morning of the murder and the movements of Morse.

She made two statements about her whereabouts on the day of the murder, when her father came home. At first she said she was up stairs; then she said she was in the kitchen, and to this last story she stuck. Lizzie said she saw her stepmother down stairs and that the latter said she had the guest chamber all ready except to put on some sheets, for she expected company on Monday and wanted every thing all right.

What Kept Her in the Barn?

Lizzie could not state whether her mother came down stairs again after she went up stairs with the sheets. She might have come down when Lizzie was in the cellar for a few moments, but she could not have come down without Lizzie seeing her and she had no recollection of it. After her father went out Lizzie never went up stairs, and so far as she knew she was also in the lower part of the house for a large portion of the time when her father was away. The front door was locked and nobody could have got in there. When her father came in she was in the kitchen eating a pear. There was a little fire in the stove, but not much, and she put in a small piece of wood to start it up; didn't see Maggie after her father came in.

Lizzie said she went to the barn to get lead for a sinker. She got it from a box on a work bench; had not been in the barn for three months before; unhooked the screen door to go to the barn after she had left her father on the lounge. Lizzie said she did not know whether Maggie had washed the windows of the dining room or kitchen, but Maggie said her she had been told to do so.

Several pages of the stenographer's copy were devoted to a tilt between the district attorney and Lizzie, caused by his trying to get her to tell what she was doing in the barn to occupy twenty minutes. She ate three pears and looked out of the window and overhauled a box for the lead. When she got back she found that the kitchen fire, instead of burning up brightly, had about gone out and she gave up ironing. Then she discovered the condition of her father—that is, that he was bleeding—but she could tell nothing about the nature of the wound.

Lizzie could not remember whether she had on an apron that morning or not; knew nothing about any ax but one which was down on the chopping block; knew of no hatchet; knew no blood on a hatchet, nor did she know why there should be any axes in the cellarway. When she found her father she ran for a neighbor. She told her father—that is, that he was bleeding—but she could tell nothing about the nature of the wound.

The Blood on Her Skirt.

Lizzie said she did not think her father went up stairs after he came in; never fixed his head when he laid down, nor touched the pillow on the lounge. Lizzie said after that Mrs. Borden's homestead was for sale and it was bought in by Mr. Borden for her. Lizzie stated that she said that what he did for her he ought to do for them, meaning herself and Emma. Then or about that time she commenced to feel sorely toward her stepmother.

Lizzie could not tell how the blood came to be on her skirt unless it came from a flea bite. If the blood came from the outside popular opinion was in three chunks. It is well to remember that the government officials did not depend especially upon the poison theory.

It was given out semiofficially some days ago that the district attorney hoped to prove by Professor Woods' testimony that Mrs. Borden was killed some time before her husband. This fact was well established He said the materials in her stomach showed that they had been undergoing the process of digestion for about two and three hours—in his opinion about two hours and a half. This proves that Mrs. Borden died between 9 and 10 o'clock, probably about 9:30.

A TINY SPECK OF BLOOD

Only as Big as a Pin's Head and on Lizzie Borden's Skirt.

NO BLOOD FOUND ON THE HATCHET.

The Poison Theory Disproved by Professor Woods' Testimony—The Strong Point Against the Accused Woman Now Is Her Own Conflicting Testimony.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 31.—The testimony of Professor E. S. Woods in the Borden inquiry was a combination of surprises. Two things have been demonstrated by the evidence—one, that Lizzie was in her stepmother's room at 9:30, and that was about the time of the murder, and that she was in her father's room about the time of his death. It was the popular belief that Professor Woods would show some traces of poison in the stomachs of the murdered people and would produce a murderous looking ax, having a blade from five to seven inches in length. On the contrary, he pulled out an innocent looking hatchet from a medium sized traveling valise, and quietly but firmly told the court he could not find the slightest trace of blood on it, nor was it believed that such an instrument in the hands of a woman could inflict ghastly wounds.

The professor also testified that he had examined the clothing worn by Lizzie Borden on the day of the murder. Every spot which looked like blood was examined, but no traces of blood were seen. A big smirch on the blue skirt looked like blood, but was found not to be blood. The white skirt had one spot which looked like blood and was found to be blood, and it was was directly in front, about six inches from the bottom. The size of the spot was about the size of a pin head. He could not swear that it was human blood, as he had not examined it sufficiently.

The Poison Theory Demolished.

Professor Woods also demolished the prussic acid and other poison theories. He looked for traces of all kinds of common poisons in the stomachs of the victims. His failure to find them added much weight to Miss Lizzie's strong denials that she was ever in Smith's drug store. But although popular opinion was in these channels, it is well to remember that the government officials did not depend especially upon the poison theory.

It was given out semiofficially some days ago that the district attorney hoped to prove by Professor Woods' testimony that Mrs. Borden was killed some time before her husband. This fact was well established He said the materials in her stomach showed that they had been undergoing the process of digestion for about two and three hours—in his opinion about two hours and a half. THE CAMPAIGN BOOMING

McKinley Talks Tariff to a Big Audience in Vermont.

STEVENSON ON HIS SOUTHERN TOUR

He Takes the Federal Elections Bill as His Text for a Discourse in Missouri. Henry Cabot Lodge Wants to Succeed Dawes—Tillman Ahead in Carolina.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Aug. 31.—The rally here under the auspices of the Republican league was an unqualified success. From 12,000 to 15,000 people heard or tried to hear the speakers. Republican clubs were present from all parts of the state. Governor McKinley, of Ohio, and Secretary of State J. L. Griffith, of Indiana, were the speakers. Congressman H. Powers was the presiding officer. Governor McKinley discussed the tariff, answering General Stevenson's Bloomington (Ills.) speech, and referred to the report of State Labor Commissioner Peck, of New York, as a vindication of the policy of protection.

Governor McKinley was warmly received as he came to the front of the platform, and for fully an hour and a half he spoke on the tariff issue. He said in opening:

McKinley on the Tariff.

I am glad to be able to participate even in the smallest degree in this campaign, which closes one week from today, in this state. The candidate on the Democratic ticket is the fine presidency needs a second. It was made two or three days ago in the city of Bloomington, the home of Illinois, and is presumably the keynote of the campaign upon the part of the Democratic party. I have read it this morning with the greatest care, and I was glad to know that the distinguished gentleman declares that the tariff question is the all important issue in the national contest of 1892.

Governor McKinley then proceeded to discuss the different tariff systems which had been in operation in this country. "There are two kinds of tariff in the United States," he said; "one is the British tariff, which is advocated by the Democratic party, and the other is the American tariff, advocated by the Republican party." He concisely stated the difference between the two systems and showed the great benefits growing out of a protective policy. Referring to the Democratic demand for a foreign market, he said:

It is a foreign market they want. Well, why do they not get it? (Laughter and applause.) Why, General Stevenson says that what they propose is to give the people of this country cheap raw materials, free raw materials, and if they only had free raw materials they could go out and capture the foreign market. Why, they have got the raw materials for the foreign market and they don't know it. (Laughter and applause.)

Under this new tariff law of 1890 any citizen of this country can go to any country of the world and buy any raw material or product he wants, bring it into the United States, pay the tariff fixed by law, take the product out into his workshop and make it up into the finished product, take it back to the custom house and enter it for foreign trade and the government refunds him 99 per cent of the tariff he paid upon his raw material within 1 per cent. of free trade. The Democratic leader can capture the world's market, for he has got free raw material at his door.

Ask the Canadian Farmer.

But they say, my fellow citizens, that this new tariff law has made it impossible to send anything out. It has made it impossible to send anything to come in, and made it impossible for anything to go out, and they made that statement in the light of the treasury official report, that shows that in the last year we have sent more goods to other lands than we have bought in any twelve months of our history, and we sold more American products to Europe in the same time than we ever sold in any year since the beginning of the federal government.

Then as to agricultural product in the United States that is not defended by the tariff law of 1890. If anybody wants to know who pays the tariff on hides and wool, let him ask the side of the Canadian line and ask the Canadian farmer. If anybody wants to know whether this tariff is burdensome, let him ask the American farmer, let him ask a farmer of Vermont that lives on the south side of the Canadian line.

There is no man who has not been benefited by this law, and you know it. [A voice: "Not one. Every one of us."] You feel it in your pocketbooks, in your property in your investments; and it is purely a business question, and I want Vermont people just to ponder it by, and elect a legislature that would unanimously send back to the senate of the United States Redfield Proctor. Then you will do both, for you are capable of doing both.

Stevenson in Missouri.

SEDALIA, Aug. 31.—Adlai E. Stevenson, Democratic candidate for vice president, addressed a mass meeting here. Twelve excursion trains poured crowds into the city and a parade preceded the speaking. Mr. Stevenson discussed the federal election bill and the tariff. He said the latter his line of argument being that of his Bloomington speech. Senator Vest and several local speakers also addressed the meeting.

Mr. Stevenson on the South.

Speaking on the federal elections bill, Mr. Stevenson said:

If you desire the enactment of the elections bill, cast your vote for the Republican candidate; but if you desire the peace that comes from good government, you would scorn to you that your only place is among the ranks of the Democratic party. Sometimes when we have talked evils we are apt to forget the remedy. I have no hesitation in saying that possibly at no period of history has our English speaking race been subjected to greater humiliations and grosser outrages than were the people of Missouri under the Drake constitution when it was in operation from 1865 to 1872. [Voices: "That's so."]

The reconstruction period was to the people of the south a dark night of injustice, of wrong and of outrage. In many instances illiterate and corrupt men were given the ministers of the law. The administration of justice was the merest mockery.

Not content with robbing people of their substance in many of the states, every attempt was made by those in power to foment discord between the two races. It is needless to say that during the eight years of carpet bag domination emigration avoided the southern states as it would the valley of death.

Carpet Bag Rule.

From the hour of its redemption from the curse of carpet bag rule, which was but another name for Republican misrule, the south has entered a career of prosperity under Democratic rule.

The rights of property and of the people were alike enforced during the four years of Democratic administration of the national government. Northern immigration and capital have followed their wake to the south.

The question is, shall this continue? Let not the people of the south be unmindful of the danger with which they are menaced by the passage of the force bill.

The evils the force bill would bring upon you would find their counterpart only in those through which you have already passed. As you all know, the force bill is aimed especially at the people of the south.

Its purpose is by intimidation to control the election of Republicans to congress. This is to be accomplished by substituting federal officers for the election of officers provided for by your state laws.

In other words, the officers you have elected are to be displaced and their places taken by agents of the party in power.

You need not be told that such legislation as this unmistakably a lack of confidence in the people, and where that confidence is lost by they are not in favor of the bill, remember that the bill passed the Republican house of representatives.

Lodge Wants Dawes' Place.

BOSTON, Aug. 31.—Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, on being asked by a Journal reporter if he was a candidate for the senatorship left vacant by the retirement of Hon. Henry L. Dawes, replied: "I will say frankly that I am a candidate, for I always thought it the best and most honest way for a man to announce his candidacy for any position he really seeks and which is an honorable ambition to desire. I mean to make the best and most open canvass I can, for I believe that the more open such a canvass is the better it will be for all concerned."

Tillman Probably Wins.

CHARLESTON, Aug. 31.—Returns received here indicate the election of Tillman by about 10,000 majority on popular vote. The conservatives got a majority of congressmen, electing Brawley in the First, Johnstone in the Third and Hemphill in the Fifth district. Shell in the Fourth is the only Alliance congressman so far elected.

Hill Declined to Discuss It.

ALBANY, Aug. 31.—Senator Hill declined to discuss the subject of Commissioner Peck's report on the wages question and the tariff.

Paterson Renominated.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 31.—Josiah Paterson has been renominated for congress by the Democrats of the Tenth district.

HOW TO AVOID CHOLERA

New York's Health Board Promulgates a Warning.

HAMBURG IS IN A STATE OF PANIC.

The People Are Fleeing from the City to Escape the Dangers of the Plague—Over 1000 Persons Have Died in Russia from the Relentless Disease.

HAMBURG, Aug. 31.—The sultriness of the atmosphere has caused the cholera to spread with increased rapidity and hopes of the near abatement of the disease have received a shock. For twenty-four hours 810 new cases and 319 deaths are reported. The number of interments yesterday was 260, almost three times the average in healthful times. Many of the burials now take place at night, as then there is not only less danger of infection, but also fewer persons abroad to be panic-stricken by the appalling frequency of the funerals. Most bodies are unaccompanied by friends or relatives. Persons of the poorer class dying in hospitals are buried without any attempt at ceremony and without having been even seen by friends or family.

The long expected panic seems to have come. The exodus of families of property is continuous and increasing. The railway stations are full night and day, and there is difficulty in finding porters enough to transport the baggage. Business is dead. Most of the shops not dealing in the daily necessities are closed. Those that remain open do hardly a tenth of their usual trade. The cafes are deserted and the restaurants are without patrons except at meal times.

The hotels are virtually empty. The loss of trade in the last three days is estimated to be in the millions. The celebration of Sedan day, anniversary of the surrender of Napoleon III, has been forbidden.

Fresh Cases in Altona.

Six cases of cholera are reported from the military camp at Lockstedt, in Holstein. Many of the soldiers are ailing, and a temporary hospital for handling victims of the plague has been established.

In Berlin in the last twenty-four hours nineteen fresh cases of cholera have been discovered. The patients have been taken to the cholera hospital in Moabit. The course of the disease is watched with the most minute care by the authorities and by the official physicians, who have been engaged by the score and placed on duty at the police stations, the railway stations and public institutions. All persons arriving from cities suspected of infection are carefully examined and their baggage is fumigated. So far the progress of the plague has been too small to affect very noticeably the city's daily life.

Reports from forty towns in north Germany, exclusive of Hamburg and Altona, show that in each case of cholera have been discovered. In none of them, however, has it become epidemic, and in all the victims have been isolated. The Berlin health officials profess confidence that the country has seen the worst of the plague.

Brussels Invaded.

Two persons were stricken with cholera at Brussels and were taken to the St. Pierre hospital, where one case has already proved fatal.

A man who arrived at The Hague recently from Hamburg was attacked with cholera and was removed to a hospital. The house where he was staying has been disinfected.

Frightful Mortality in Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 31.—The official statement of deaths from cholera in Russia gives the total up to Aug. 22 as 107,647. These figures are undoubtedly too conservative. In many stricken districts no returns at all have been made, and in others the returns have been incomplete. Complete returns would have shown the number of deaths to have been 125,000 or perhaps more.

Another Case in London.

LONDON, Aug. 31.—Another of the crew of the steamer Geroma from Hamburg has been attacked with cholera at Shields. The port authorities are asking the government to empower them to impose a quarantine of four days on European vessels.

TO PREVENT THE DREAD DISEASE.

Cleanliness and Well Cooked Food Are the First Essentials.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—The board of health of this city, continuing its efforts to prevent cholera from entering the city or of holding it in check in case it should reach here, have decided to retain the services of the summer corps of physicians during September. All police captains have been ordered to have the men of their command act each as a sanitary officer and look to the perfect condition of his post.

The board has issued a circular describing the precautionary measures in detail and hints for the prevention of the dread disease. People are cautioned against the eating of uncooked articles of any kind, and are urged to regard cleanliness above all else. All are cautioned to send for a doctor at the first sign of the disease, and under no circumstances to become frightened.

Gotham's Warning.

The circular is as follows:

HEALTH DEPARTMENT,
NEW YORK, Aug. 30.

PREVENTION OF CHOLERA EASIER THAN CURE—HOW CAUGHT.

Healthy persons "catch" cholera by taking into their systems through the mouth as in food, liquid or drink, or from their hands, knives, forks, plates, tumblers, clothing, etc., the germs of the disease, which are always present in the discharges from the stomach and bowels of those sick with cholera.

Thorough cooking destroys the cholera germs; therefore,

Don't eat raw, uncooked articles of any kind, not even milk.

Don't eat or drink to excess. Use plain, wholesome, digestible food, as indigestion and diarrhœa favor an attack of cholera.

Don't drink unboiled water.

Don't eat or drink articles unless they have been thoroughly and recently cooked or boiled, and the more recent and hotter they are the safer.

Don't employ utensils in eating or drinking unless they have been recently put in boiling water; the more recent the safer.

Don't eat or handle food or drink with unwashed hands, or receive it from the unwashed hands of others.

Don't use the hands for any purpose when soiled with cholera discharges; thoroughly cleanse them at once.

Personal cleanliness and cleanliness of the living and sleeping rooms and their contents, and thorough ventilation, should be rigidly enforced. Foul water closets, sinks, rotten faucet collars, etc., should be avoided, and when present should be referred to the health board at once and remedied.

Precautionary Measures.

The successful treatment and the prevention of the spread of this disease demand that its earliest manifestations be promptly recognized and treated; therefore

Don't allow yourself for bowel complaint, but go to bed and send for the nearest physician at once. Send for your family physician; send to a dispensary or hospital; send to the health department; send to the nearest police station for medical aid.

Don't wait, but send at once. If taken ill in the street seek the nearest drug store, dispensary, hospital or police station and demand prompt medical attention.

Don't permit vomit or diarrhœal discharges to come in contact with food, drink or clothing. These discharges should be received in proper vessels and kept covered until removed under competent directions. Pour boiling water on them, put a strong solution of carbolic acid in them (not less than one part of acid to twenty of hot soap suds or water).

Don't wear, handle or use any articles of clothing or furniture that are soiled with cholera discharges. Pour boiling water on them or put them into it, and scrub them with the carbolic acid solution mentioned above, and promptly request the board of health to remove them.

Don't be frightened, but do be cautious, and avoid excesses and unnecessary exposure of every kind.

By order of the board of health.

CHARLES G. WILSON, President.
EMMONS CLARK, Secretary.

Beginning with today all vessels from infected ports are quarantined and thoroughly disinfected. The Friesland, Circassia, Vendome and Italia have been detained. Although every precaution is being taken by the health officials, prominent physicians say that the only safety lies in the stoppage of all immigration from infected countries.

New Jersey Fortified.

TRENTON, Aug. 31.—The state board of health has been active during the past week preparing to fight the cholera at the several ports of entry in this state. Dr. Hunt has visited the health inspectors at Hoboken, Jersey City, Camden and Perth Amboy, and has given them full instructions regarding examinations. Arrangement has been made with the New York health authorities to receive a list of all passengers arriving at that port, together with their destinations and condition. A circular has been sent to all health boards in the state calling attention to the necessary precautions and giving directions for emergencies. Dr. Hunt says that the only safety lies in the stoppage of all immigration from infected countries.

PANAMA, Aug. 31.—It is reported here that Asiatic cholera exists in Venezuela.

O'DONNELL PUT UNDER BAIL.

Eight Hundred Homestead Strikers to Be Arrested by the Carnegies.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 31.—Hugh O'Donnell, the Homestead leader, was put under bail to answer to charges of conspiracy and aggravated riot. He waived a hearing on the charge of riot and gave bail for a hearing. The information was sworn out by the Carnegie Steel company. Mr. O'Donnell was the only striker who was placed under bonds. The hearing will take place on Thursday. Mr. O'Donnell said there were no new developments in the strike.

Wholesale arrests are expected for the remainder of the week. One of the spies employed to watch the Homestead strikers says that forty-four informations have been made. He asserts that the papers in 108 other cases have been prepared.

Secretary Lovejoy, of the Carnegie company, did not deny the above as a statement of facts, but he made the figures larger. He said, "Our attorneys have a list of 800 to chose from and we have evidence against all." Thus far there have been considerably more than 100 warrants issued.

A Fireman Instantly Killed.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 31.—A steam feed pipe in the power house of the Newark railway burst, and Joseph Dazinger, a fireman, was instantly killed.

Goelet Succeeds Dillon.

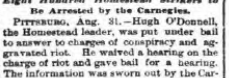
NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—Robert Goelet was elected a director of the New York and New England railroad in place of Sidney Dillon, deceased.

Three Train Hands Killed.

BURLINGTON, N. J., Aug. 31.—Conductor Lewis, Engineer Rule and Baggage Master Shinn were killed in a railroad accident at Whitehall.

Hovey Beat Larned.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 31.—Hovey won the all comer prize in the tennis tournament, beating Larned 6—0, 6—2, 7—5.



SEASIDE GOWNS.

Two Stylish Models Illustrated and Described.

Fashions for the seashore are greatly varied, as shown by the two models of our sketch. One of these is of white yachting linen, the full bodice opening over a narrow vest of red linen braided in white. The collar, cuffs and sash are arranged in the same manner, and the foot of the skirt is finished at the edge by several narrow tucks. The costume, though simple, is elegant.

The second costume is of fine navy blue serge. The bodice is of open sailor shape, with very short in front, is lined and faced with biscuit color and shows a close fitting waistcoat of biscuit cloth. The long buttoned pockets in front of the skirt are edged with biscuit color and the buttons are of engraved gilt.

Fine twilled cream serge is a favorite material for the seashore. A costume of this may be made very prettily with a full bodice, showing vest embroidered in fine blue and white silk cord. Sleeves, puffed at the shoulder, and foot of the skirt in this same embroidery make it very becoming to a blond of slight figure.

Nature's Nobleman.

Miss Petrolia Bullion-Hogge (from the west)—Of course you know, baron, that my father is not in the remotest degree a nobleman?

He—Say no more, beautiful one. A man who will give his daughter a million dollar dowry is noble enough for me.—Life.

Texas Fever Spreading.

EMPORIA, KAN., Aug. 31.—Texas fever has spread to Greenwood county, where 900 head of cattle have succumbed to it.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

PARROTS.

Interesting Facts About These Peculiar and Entertaining Birds.

The artist has drawn a beautiful group of parrots upon the branches of a tree, but I think every reader will understand that you could only see such a group in an aviary or birdhouse. Those shown in the picture are all different, and are not to be found in the same country. We have several kinds that are climbers, as the woodpeckers, and if you look at the feet of any of these birds you will see that two of the four toes are turned to the front and two toward the back. This gives them great power for grasping anything.

PARROTS AND COCKATOOS.

Give a parrot a plum, a nut or a small apple and you may see him take hold of it with his claws and so convey it to his mouth. Their beaks are very strong, and formed that the short lower jaw fits into the upper, and the action of the two is something like that of a pair of scissors. This beak serves them as a third foot in climbing, and with it they are able to crack nuts. Unlike the beaks of most birds, the upper half of this organ is jointed to the skull, and is therefore movable. In place of the thin tongue so general in birds, the parrots possess one that is thick and fleshy, and which enables them to suck and taste. It is probable that this kind of tongue also helps them in their wonderful imitations of the human voice. The colors of their feathers, though so varied, are always brilliant and clear, and range through every tint, from pure white to black. In proportion to the size and weight of their bodies the wings are not well adapted for flight.

Length of Animals' Lives.

A butterfly lives only a few weeks, a dove may live more than a century, and swans are said to live sometimes over 300 years. An eminent naturalist tells of a falcon that was 162 years old, a white headed vulture caught in 1706 died in 1826 in the aviary of the palace of Schonbrunn, near Vienna, where it had been in captivity for 118 years.

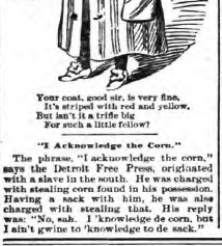
Again, parrots and ravens think nothing of doubling about the world for a hundred years and more, and some of the sea birds beat water fowl outlive several generations of human beings. To come down to some of the birds with which we are all well acquainted, the ordinary cock—unless he has his head cut off by cook or her confederates—may live from twenty to twenty-five years, and a pigeon, save when it vanishes into a pie dish, lives for about ten years. A nightingale in captivity may live ten years and a thrush fifteen, but when they are free they live much longer.

Of quadrupeds, the elephant lives longer than any of his friends and brethren, he may reach the age of 400 years, and you will think he looks as if he was made to last a good while. A camel is old at forty, a horse or a bull at twenty-five, a lion and a bear at twenty. As for the whale, it disports itself in the sea for some 300 years, and no tortoise is considered to have attained a ripe old age before it is at least ninety years old.

A Story About the Pansy.

A pretty fable about the pansy is current among French and German children. The flower has five petals and five sepals. In most pansies, especially of the earlier and less highly developed varieties, two of the petals are plain in color and three are gay. The two plain petals have a single sepal, two of gay petals have a sepal each, and the third, which is the largest of all, has two sepals. The fable is that the pansy represents a family, consisting of husband, wife and four daughters, two of the latter being stepchildren of the wife. The plain petals are the stepchildren, with only one chair; the two small gay petals are the daughters with a chair each, and the large gay petal is the wife, with two chairs. To find the father one must strip away the petals until the stamens and pistils are bare. They have a fanciful resemblance to an old man with a flannel wrap about his neck, his shoulders upraised and his feet in a bathtub. The story is probably of French origin, because the French call the pansy the stepmother.

A Trifle Big.



Your coat, good sir, is very fine,
It's striped with red and yellow,
But isn't it a trifle big
For such a little fellow?

"I Acknowledge the Corn."

The phrase, "I acknowledge the corn," says the Detroit Free Press, originated with a slave in the south. He was charged with stealing corn found in his possession. Having a sack with him, he was also charged with stealing that. His reply was: "No, sah. I 'knowledge de corn, but I ain't gwine to 'knowledge to de sack."

GOOD HEALTH

TOOTH CULTURE.

The Husk of Wheat Supplies an Important Element of Enamel.

Sir James Crichton-Browne, in an address delivered before a British dental association, referred to a change which has taken place in bread as one of the causes of the increase of dental caries. So far as England is concerned this is essentially an age of white bread and fine flour, and it is an age therefore in which we are no longer partaking, to anything like the same amount that our ancestors did, of the bran or husky parts of wheat, and so are deprived to a large degree of a chemical element which they contain, namely, fluorine. The late Dr. George Wilson showed that fluorine is more widely distributed in nature than was before his time supposed, but still, as he pointed out, it is but sparingly present where it does occur, and the only channels by which it can apparently find its way into the animal economy are through the siliceous stems of grasses and the outer husks of grain, in which it exists in comparative abundance.

Analysis has proved that the enamel of the teeth contains more fluorine, in the form of fluoride of calcium, than any other part of the body, and fluorine might indeed be regarded as the characteristic chemical constituent of this structure, the hardest of all animal tissues, and containing 95.5 per cent. of salt, against 72 per cent. in the dentine. As this is so, it is clear that a supply of fluorine, while the development of the teeth is proceeding, is essential to the proper formation of the enamel, and that any deficiency in this respect must result in this and inferior enamel. Sir James Crichton-Browne thinks it well worthy of consideration whether the reintroduction into our diet of a supply of fluorine in some suitable natural form—and white flour, as we make it, is far more suitable than that in which it exists in the pellicles of our grain stuffs—might not do something to fortify the teeth of the next generation.

Purifying Water.

Dr. Willis G. Tucker tells that for household use on a small scale water can be easily clarified and purified by placing a layer of clean cotton two or three inches deep at the bottom of a glass percolator, such as is used by druggists, and pouring the water to be filtered, to which a solution of alum has been added, into the percolator and allowing it to drip through into a clean vessel placed to receive it. The alum solution is conveniently made by dissolving half an ounce of alum in a quart of water, and of this solution a scant teaspoonful should be added to each gallon of water to be filtered. Alum is now used in a number of filtering and purifying systems which have of late years been brought prominently before the public by their inventors or the companies controlling them.

Man's Relative Height and Weight.

According to The Journal of Health, a man 5 feet 1 inch should be 120 pounds; 5 feet 2 inches should be 126; 5 feet 3 inches should be 133; 5 feet 4 inches should be 136; 5 feet 5 inches should be 142; 5 feet 6 inches should be 145; 5 feet 7 inches should be 148, 5 feet 8 inches should be 155; 5 feet 9 inches should be 160; 5 feet 10 inches should be 166; 5 feet 11 inches should be 174; 6 feet high should weigh 178.

ETIQUETTE

BEING ENTERTAINED.

A New Side to an Old Story—From the Standpoint of the Hostess—Not at Views.

There is a faculty in being entertained, as well as for entertaining, and the one is even more rare than the other, according to Good Housekeeping, which further remarks:

Some persons can enter a strange house, sit at once into the place made ready for them, and the household wheels move on without a jar; while others, from the very moment of their arrival, necessitate the taking apart and readjusting of every piece of the household machinery. The housekeeper, in anticipation of her visitor, has a room in readiness. Everything is in the neatest and most perfect order and she waits in pleasant expectation. Few women have not known the pleasant sensation with which a guest is shown to a room made ready for her. But how often the cup of joy is rudely dashed from her lips. In a few days, in the room to which she has given so much time and labor, chaos reigned. Clothing, shoes, hats, gloves lie scattered everywhere. Shoe polish and ink bottles stand side by side with her cherished toilet accessories. Towels are used for dusters and floor cloths; crockery is broken, cracked or lost.

She is a woman of wonderfully philosophic temperament if she does not turn away from room and guest with a feeling of pain, and with the mental resolution to next time strip her beautiful room of everything save the barest necessary to the comfort of her guest. But if it was only in the room assigned to the guest that discomfort made itself felt, one might not complain. Every person and thing in the house feels the presence of this disorderly element. Breakfast is delayed, dinner must wait and supper is served as an hour of hours. If there are servants the matter is still worse, for there are just so many more to suffer. Their regular hours are all unsettled and they find themselves "at sea." Nothing disturbs a good servant like being called upon to do unexpected errands or work.

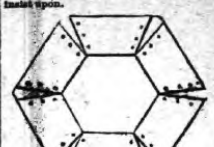
Every one in the home of another should seek to fit into his place with just as little disturbance of the rules of the house as possible. He should do his best to see that everything coming under his immediate care is kept as neat as when he found it, and certainly should see to it that nothing is broken, lost or needlessly soiled. He should be punctual at all meals and all other engagements. If there are servants, all orders or requests to them should be given through the hands of the hostess.

One would hardly expect friends to visit her without an invitation, special, if informal; and on the other hand, no one has the right to take her welcome for granted. It is a good plan to always give notice of an intended visit, even if it extend through but a single meal. This, not that extra preparations may be made, but that should it not be convenient both the visitor and the hostess may escape the embarrassment of an ill timed visit, than which few things are more annoying.

PRETTY LINEN WORK.

A Card Receiver or Work Basket That can be Easily Made.

Linen is, undoubtedly, the favorite stuff with fancy workers to-day. Its various colors running from snow white to browns and grays; its many textures, from sheer and filmy to coarse and heavy weights; and its numberless weaves and patterns make it especially adapted to endless uses. While its durability and washing qualities render it the most desirable material for that elaborate embroidery which our art needle workers insist upon.



PATTERN FOR LINEN COVER.

Baskets for trinkets, or work boxes for a limited number of light articles such as thread, needles and small scissors, for a guest chamber, may be made by joining the corners with ribbon laces.

Draw a hexagon on heavy linen, large or medium, according to the size of basket desired. Mark a few inches inside, where the bottom of the basket is to be, a similar but smaller design. Then at each corner draw an angle, the size to be regulated according to the flare desired in the sides. The wider the flare the smaller the angle is to be drawn.

Cut a hexagon the size of the bottom wished for the basket, of card-board. Cut six pieces for the sides, the bottoms of which shall be equal to the sides of the hexagon. Cover each piece on both sides with linen and bind with narrow ribbon or silk braid.

Button-hole the edges, work the eyelets, and embroider any desired design, as in the other trays. Wash, iron and cut as before, and draw sides together with the ribbon loops.

PATTERN FOR CARD BOARD.

When all are finished, sew together over and over. On the inside of two of the wider sew pockets of silk or fine flannel for spools of thread and of silk. On a third, fasten a few leaves of the same material for needles; on a fourth, a pincushion; on a fifth, an emery bag; and on the sixth, sew a scant loop of ribbon at each end, through which to run scissors.

In making these articles, little money and no great amount of time need be expended. But one thing is absolutely necessary—neatness. Without that results an article made of cloth of gold is of no value.—Good Housekeeping.

Coffee Fritters.

Cut some stale bread into neat and rather thick slices, and soak these in very strong, freshly made coffee. Beat up the yolks of one or two eggs (according to the amount of fritters you wish to make), flavoring them with a little sugar and a few drops of strong coffee; brush the slices of bread with this, and fry as soon as hot oil or butter; when just crisp and a light golden-brown tint, lift them out, drain them well, and serve at once, sprinkled with sugar. Of course, all grease should be removed from the bread, and the coffee should be both freshly roasted and freshly ground and of very good quality if the fritters are to be a success. The outside should be just crisp enough to eat short, though the inside should be soft and very strong of the coffee.—American Grocer.

Southern Sweet Potato Bread.

Bake three large sweet potatoes; peel and mash them through a colander with a potato masher, adding to them a teaspoonful of salt and a tablespoonful of butter; after they have been mashed, mix with them a cupful and a half of scalded cream; a scant cupful of milk, and one egg (beaten smooth); pour this batter into a buttered baking dish, and bake in a moderate oven for twenty minutes. Use the breast hot, with plenty of butter.—Good Housekeeping.

Strawberry Jelly.

Mash the fruit thoroughly and strain the juice through a muslin bag; to every pint add one pound of sugar, and to every five pounds of sugar add one-quarter ounce of isinglass dissolved in a little water. When the sugar is dissolved in the juice, put it over the fire and boil it until it is a jelly. Can same as other fruits.—Good Housekeeping.

Fried Sweet Potatoes.

Bake for half an hour, then pare and put in slices, and season with pepper and salt. Heat in a pan some pork, ham, or chicken fat. Cover the pan with the sliced potato; brown on one side, then turn and brown on the other. Serve hot.

Soup Without Meat for Friday.

One quart of tomatoes, one quart of water; cook and strain. Add one teaspoonful of soda; allow it to effervesce. Add one quart of boiling milk, salt, butter and pepper to taste, with a little rolled cracker. Boil a few minutes, and serve.

Strawberry Jam.

Take equal weights of the fruit and granulated sugar, mash them well together, put it into a preserving kettle and boil it rather more than half an hour; while it is warm put it in jars, and when cold seal down.

For Cooking String Beans.

Break the beans, wash carefully, put into boiling water with a little salt. Boil for three hours. Just before they are done, throw in a pinch of saleratus. Serve with butter and cream.

Raspberry Jelly.

For this jelly use equal proportions of raspberries and currants, proceeding in the usual manner for jelly of this kind.

This Date in History—Aug. 31.

JOHN BRYAN.

Augustus Caesar added this day to August in order that the month named for him should have as many days as that named for his uncle Julius Cæsar, namely, July.

12—Caius Caesar Caligula, history says, murdered by Chaerias Cherea in 41.
1422—Henry V of England died.
1595—John Bunyan died, born 1628.
1630—Charles Northoff, journalist and author, born in Erwitte, Westphalia, Germany.
1803—Battle of Richmond, Ky., and defeat of the Federals by General Kirby Smith.
1864—McClellan and Pendleton were nominated for the Democratic Chicago.
1880—President Harrison appointed Chief Justice Wheelock G. Veazey of Vermont, interstate commerce commissioner, vice Aldace F. Walker, retired.
1892—Moses G. Richardson, veteran journalist, of Lockport, N. Y., died, aged 79. San Domingo served an ultimatum on Hayti, demanding return of the lands seized as a fine on the Dominicans for helping Hippolyte against Legitime.

Not That Long.

In the recent general election in Great Britain there has been a good deal of denunciation and counter little wit, and there has been a conspicuous absence of good nature. The hard fitting that distinguished political life of old was tempered by epigram and repartee. All this seems to have disappeared; neither the Primrose dames nor their fair antagonists are the cause of any pretty speeches. Nobody offers to kiss a gentleman for your good intentions, but I do not wish to be 'Miss Wilberforce forever!'" One would have voted for that young lady's brother whatever were his politics.—Argonaut.

His Maiden Speech.

Wife (at night to husband returning home late)—Why, Penn, it is 3 o'clock!

Husband—I could not get away any sooner, wifey dear. I have been making a speech and that kept us rather late.

Wife—You—you made a speech! That must have been a nice performance!

Husband—Well, it was universally applauded. I said, "Gentlemen, let us remain here a bit longer."—Hinkender Boke.
